Time-Life's Pro-Civil Rights Spots Getting Brush From TV Networks, Stations, But Radio Response Good

The Time - Life broadcasting group is striking a blow for civil rights with the production of a series of spots urging public support of President Kennedy's recent plea to the nation to establish equality for all people on a local level. Time-Life execs felt that this project would be "a dramatic demonstration of the ability of broadcast licensees to act boldly and swiftly, in the matter of the highest public interest."

At this stage, however, it appears as if only the Time-Life stations will be acting "boldly and swiftly" in carrying the spots which will be available for airing starting Friday (19). Time-Life has offered the spots to the television networks and thus far has been turned down by NBC for policy reasons. As expected both ABC and ABC have followed the NBC cue. The Advertising Council, which distributes public service announcements but not on controversial issues, is "considering" a campaign of its own on this issue and has not associated itself with the Time-Life effort even though consulted.

Non-network tv stations have not moved to pick up the civil rights spots because of a technicality which requires an on-the-air identification of their origin, i.e., Time-Life. Time-Life set up a three-faith committee to sponsor the spots, but legalisms still demand the Time-Life tag on the spots. "If that's the only reason a station is not carrying the spots, it's a pretty weak rationalization," a Time-Life exec said. "What difference can the Time-Life identification make in a non-competitive market."

Time-Life, which received a bright green light for the project from the White House staff, also has been supported by LeRoy Collins, NAB prexy. Collins, in fact, agreed to cut one of the spots for the campaign. This was particularly significant since Collins, as former Governor of Florida, was onetime chairman of the Conference of Southern Governors. Collins also volunteered to introduce the proposal for such a campaign before the recent NAB convention and was booed from the floor by half the delegates, presumably the operators of southern stations.

While tv at this stage is brushing the Time-Life spots, radio stations are demonstrating a readiness to use them. Radio Press International, which feeds a network of radio indies with news, will help distribute the spots to its affils. So will Radio Pulse-Beat News Mutual Radio has agreed to feed the spots.

2 Bobs On an O&O Hop

NBC board chairman Bob Sarnoff and prexy Bob Kintner leave next Monday (21) on a swing of the network's o&o stations in Philadelphia, Washington, Chicago and L. A.

It's an annual "Two Bob Hop" in which they spend a week huddling with their top lieutenants at the stations on policy-operational matters and incepting the push for the new season.

Merits of Radio: Arthur Godfrey Tunes Up a Tuna

Philadelphia, July 16.

Arthur Godfrey is one of the staunchest proponents of radio—a medium that pays him some $400,000 annually. "Anytime you think radio is an ineffectual thing, let me tell you about the tuna fish scare," he said.

A banker friend in San Diego allied with a big cannery called on the broadcaster for aid. "The tuna industry had dropped to 30%. In less than 45 days of radio selling we had them back to within 14% of capacity. In three months plugging of Morton House Oven-Baked Beans, the product showed a 59% sales increase," he added.

Godfrey and his horse "Goldie" (Catoctin Gold) were brought in by WCAU-Radio for a personal appearance at the Station's County Fair Day in suburban Devon. Asked if he had volunteered to appear because of the station's CBS affiliation, Godfrey replied "What makes you think I like CBS? The fact that I've worked for them 18 years?"

The star explained that his personal appearances at horse show's and nitery dates account for a sizable $200,000 a year." I generally don't take an out-of-town date for one day. My agents are instructed to insist on a minimum three-day engagement (at $5,000 per diem).

"Perhaps you think radio can't afford me at that price? CBS is so rich and busy they have no room for me on tv. I have to work for NBC," he continued and then went into his spiel on the merits of radio bdoadcasting.

It was explained to Godfrey that he had appeared at the Devon Country Day Show several times—for free. "That was different—that was for charity," he said. Told the WCAU promotion was for the same charity—the Bryn Mawr Hospital—the star seemed genuinely surprised.

"Get me Jack Downey," he asked an aide to bring WCAU's general manager. "He just saved himself 5G."

CBS-TV 'CINDERELLA' REMAKE AGAIN HOT

Revival of the Rogers & Hammerstein "Cinderella" musical special as a project for either next season or the following '64-'65 season again is on the CBS-TV agenda.

Richard Rogers has agreed to act as exec producer of the special, done years back with Julie Andrews in the lead role, prior to the introduction of vidtaping. It marked the first musical tv original for the Rogers & Hammerstein team.

Miss Andrews, initially slated to repeat her Cinderella role, is out of the projected revival. Leading contender in the new version, to be somewhat rewritten, is Anna Maria Alberghetti.

'Hootenanny' As ABC's '63 Sleeper

"Hootenanny," the half-hour Saturday night folksinging bash which bowed on the ABC-TV web in April, is rolling as the web's surprise rating hit of the current season. Show has been running very close to the CBS-TV competition, "The Defenders," in the multi-market Nielsens and has pulled way ahead of the "Joey Bishop Show" on NBC-TV. Latest multi-market survey showed "Defenders" at 30.2, "Hootenanny" at 27.6 and "Joey Bishop" at 22.0.

The folksing has also developed as a solid lead-in to the Lawrence Welk Show," whose share of audience has climbed since "Hootenanny" bowed. The show is being expanded into an hour format during the upcoming season when it will be shifted to an earlier slot at 7:30 p.m. on Saturdays.

NBC, CBS Accused of Biased, Slanted News at D.C. Hearings

Washington, July 16.

Charges of biased and slanted news coverage were levelled against NBC and CBS Monday (15) as a House Subcommittee opened its investigation of broadcast editorials.

Rep. Durward Hall (R-Mo.) told the communications subcommittee that "liberal oriented" network pubaffairs programs merited more Congressional worry than local station editorials. He criticized CBS documentaries on foreign trade and migrant workers and an NBC special on the Newburgh, N. Y. welfare imbroglio.

Hall was joined in his stroll off the beaten path by subcommittee member Rep. Glen Cunningham (R.-Neb.) who charged the webs with editorializing during news broadcasts.

Neither could offer any specific solution to the problem they saw and Hall averred he didn't think Congress needed to go as far as regulating the networks.

As for the matter at hand, the subcommittee heard a variety of opinions from four Congressional witnesses and Sherwood Gordon, prexy and general manager of KSDO, San Diego, and KBUZ, Phoenix.

Reps. Lionel Van Deerlin (D-Calif.) and William Jennings Bryan Dorn (D-S. C.) favored station editorials. Van Deerlin, a former San Diego tv news commentator, warned that legislative curbs on editorials would result in vacating radio and tv "still further to cowboys and Indians, rock and roll and programming tailored to exclude thought and discussion from the American living room."

Van Deerlin and Gordon said the hearings alone would inhibit broadcast editorials. Both pointed to the preponderance of one-newspaper towns as a pressing reason to encourage radio and tv to discuss issues and candidates.

Dorn called on the subcommittee to protect the right of local broadcasters to air opinions. He joined Van Deerlin in pointing to the maturity of the industry.

Another South Carolinian, Rep. Robert Hemphill (D) proposed outright abolition of editorials, calling them a burden on broadcasters and FCC. He said this was the only approach to clear a growing area of abuse.

Under questioning from Reps. Oren Harris (D-Ark.) and James Broyhill (R-N. C.), Hemphill said he wouldn't know where to draw the line between political and community service editorials. He said he wasn't trying to discourage broadcasters from engaging in community affairs but wanted to "get at the headaches" caused by station editorializing.

Rep. Hall warned of the potential danger of an administration granting licences to its editorial friends while rejecting applications of its enemies.

He said Congress shouldn't create a new maze of rules and regulations as long as stations show a diversity of opinion.

Elaine May TV Series on Tap

Figuring importantly in the "designed-for-N.Y.-shooting" pilot plans for the '64-65 season at CBS-TV is a half-hour situation comedy series starring Elaine May. However, her longtime partner, Mike Nichols, doesn't figure in the deal.

Script, which Miss May is doing herself, is currently in preparation. It deals with a couple of old ladies who run a boarding house for parolees. Show is out of the Goodson-Todman shop, which appears to be moving more and more away from the game show genre. (G-T is also responsible for the hourlong "Richard Boone Repertory" series going on NBC-TV next season.)

Henry's Appeal

Washington, July 16.

FCC chairman E. William Henry today (Tues.) asked Congress to refrain from putting on any legislative restriction on broadcast editorials. Henry did, however, endorse the principles of a bill introduced by Rep. John Moss (D.-Cal), that would require stations to give time to candidates they attacked and to prohibit editorials two days before elections.

Henry said that "fairness" and other editorial problems can be better handled through the FCC rules and primers. He said the FCC was considering the issuance of a primer and the invocation of rules that would put teeth into the "fairness doctrine." He hoped these would be ready in time for the 1964 elections.

No NBC Future For Schoenbrun

Dave Schoenbrun, who recently exited CBS, has had some talks with NBC on the possibility of joining that network. Apparently, however, Schoenbrun wouldn't fit into the scheme of things around NBC and nothing came of the talks.

Schoenbrun, from all accounts, wanted to operate both out of Washington and Europe doing special assignments on news shows. Network feeling, it's understood, was that this might create "bad blood" among the regular staffers in the areas covered by Schoenbrun. At any rate, NBC says there is no Schoenbrun in its future.

Some reports have it that the ex-CBS longtime Paris correspondent who did a year's hitch in Washington shortly before his resignation, may open his own public relations-consultancy shop, operating out of D.C.

CBS-TV's 5-Year Pact On 'Lincoln Center Day'; Robt. Saudek To Produce

Robert Saudek Associates will produce the annual CBS-TV broadcasts commemorating the opening night anni of New York's Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts. Deal set between CBS-TV and Lincoln Center covers a five-year span.

Robert Saudek Associates acts as tv consultant for the Lincoln Center of Performing Arts, and it's understood Lincoln Center has named Robert Saudek producer.

Each of the broadcasts will be presented on the Sunday evening preceding the anni date of "Opening Night at Lincoln Center," when CBS-TV carried the first concert from Philharmonic Hall in a special two-hour broadcast on Sept. 23, 1962. All of the programs will be presented in prime evening time.

Initial broadcast will take place Sunday, Sept. 22, '63 from 8 to 9 p.m., preempting Ed Sullivan that night. Title of each of the five broadcasts will be "Lincoln Center Day." Each program in the series will comprise a full hour broadcast with notable artists participating. The programs will be broadcast from various units of Lincoln Center as the complex develops.

NBC Press Ups Baker

Alan Baker has been named director, program publicity, for the NBC press department, replacing Merryle S. Rukeyser Jr., who has been upped to director of press and publicity.

Baker, formerly trade press manager, joined the department in July, 1961, as a staff writer with the Enterprises division. Baker's assistant Gene Walsh is expected to take over as trade editor.

A half-century of changing styles in screen love-making by masculine stars is the theme of one of the episodes in "Hollywood and the Stars," to be telecast next season on NBC-TV.

Titled "The Great Lovers," show will document the techniques of John Gilbert, Charles Ray, Francis X. Another episode in the series will be devoted to Humphrey Bogart. Scenes chosen will be from "Casablanca," "Petrified Forest," "Treasure of Sierra Madre," "Maltese Falcon," "Barefoot Contessa," "African Queen" and "Caine Mutiny."

All-Europe Tint System Hinges On British Decision

By ROGER WATKINS

London, July 16.

What system of color television Britain and the rest of Europe will eventually adopt is still a mystery, but, in the past week, the European Broadcasting Union has organized and conducted a major demonstration of "absolutely everything" the informed viewer should know about tint video, which is considered to be a crucial step towards the final choice.

Attended by more than 100 delegates from the dozen or so member countries of the EBU, the London demonstrations are, in fact, calculated by experts in the field to represent the "deciding factor" in the choice of systems. Demonstrations have included the full lowdown on such systems as the American NYSC methods, the French Secam formula and the German modification of NYSC, called PAL, have been staged here. All that remains now is for the technical delegates to report back to their various networks and Governments recommending one or other of these major contenders for the role of the all-Europe color video system. Final decision is expected to be taken at the next EBU meeting in December.

Meantime, the current 10 days of exhibitions and discussions on

Tennessee Ernie Sets Yule Special

Hollywood, July 16.

Tennessee Ernie Ford's Betford Corp. has sold to General Mills an hourlong tv spec "The Story Of Christmas." Ford, now in Honolulu vacationing, has been working on project some time; has almost completed it.

Deal gives General Mills exclusive rights, in all forms, to show for five years. Yule web airing coming holidays will find sponsor using an institutional pitch.

Show is part live, part cartoon. The 18-minute animated sequences already have been completed by Eyvind Earle. Charles Tazewell scripted.

Primarily, it is a musical. Ford will narrate as well as solo most of the carols, backed by Roger Wagner Chorale and orch (total of 90). Bill Birch is producer-director.

Prior to hopping to Hawaii, Ford completed an album in stereo for Capitol which will bear the spec's title. It will be marketed just prior to show's airing.

CBS' Television City Hoopla

Hollywood, July 16.

In the works strictly as a hush-hush project for the moment is a beginning-of-the-tv-season bash to be underwritten by CBS-TV to mark Television City's return to peak production. They're talking in terms of a $100,000 (or thereabouts) party with all the attendant fancy trimmings and hoopla more reminiscent of an earlier Hollywood era, now that CBS is back in business in a big way with the Judy Garland-Danny Kaye-Red Skelton originations out of TV City. (There hasn't been that kind of activity around since the days when "Climax" and "Playhouse 90" were getting the TV City live treatment).

Nothing's been finalized as yet, but should CBS go through with it, it'll be one of those all-star shindigs with everybody dressed to the nines.

CBS Get Sports Show For 'College Bowl' Period

Half-hour late Sunday afternoons left vacant on the CBS-TV schedule next season by the departing "G. E. College Bowl" will be filled by a sports show.

Time slot for the new sports show has tentatively been set at 5 p.m. Prudential Insurance, sponsors of "Twentieth Century" at 6 p.m., however, has requested the sports show be slotted at 5:30, with "Amateur Hour" going at 5 p.m. instead of 5:30. For a while there was talk of "Amateur Hour" expanding to full hour.

However, the resolution of a year-round slot of 5:30 for "Amateur Hour" came as CBS-TV picked up "Alumni Fun" from ABC-TV. "Alumni Fun" quizzer will be sponsored by American Cyanamid and is due to start Jan. 5 in the 5 tr 5:30 slot. January is the period of the season when the web's 90-minute weekly sports specials resume. These sports specials will absorb the half-hour sports programs during the winter period.

Pasternak's Two MGM-TV Specs

Hollywood, July 16.

Joe Pasternak will enter television for the first time with deal set to make two musical spectaculars as part of his already bulging slate at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Pasternak disclosed he is prepping "America Dances" and "America Sings," to be musical cavalcade of their respective fields. Projects wil be for MGM-TV and will be made within the next two years.

Pasternak, with six films on his current Metro slate, has the busiest schedule at the studio. Producer in September will start "Looking For Love," Connie Francis starrer scripted by Ruth Brooks Flippen. Picture will follow his pattern of films "for pure entertainment value."

Also in preparation is "Made in Paris," comedy about femme fashion, which Stanley Roberts is writing. Shooting will begin in January in Hollywood, with second unit backgrounds to be done in New York and Paris. Others on tap include "Company Girls," which George Wells is writing; "Daybreak," E. J. Slaughter book which E. Jack Neumann is scripting; "The Only Way to Love," to star Elvis Presley in story about Easter vacation in Ft. Lauderdale. Ray

ABC-TV's 3 Sponsors On 'Pro Bowlers Town'

ABC-TV will be riding with the "Professional Bowlers Tour" for the third straight year starting Jan. 11, 1964. Web will cover the pro bowlers tournament in half-hour stanzas over a 13-week period. The series has been bought by American Machine & Foundry, Goodyear Tire & Rubber, and the Mentholatum Co.

On another sports front, the web has set live tv coverage of the third annual American Golf Classic at the Firestone Country Club in Akron Aug. 24-25. ABC will telecast the finishing holes of the rounds on each day.

ETV Plays Increasingly Important Role on British Com'l TV Outlets

London, July 16.

The diverse campaign for the establishment of more adult educational programs on the existing airwaves gained impetus last week when it was revealed that Anglia Television, an independent station serving part of South East England, is to introduce early morning tv programs in October.

By way of an experiment, the indie has linked with Cambridge University to mount a series of 50-minute University lectures which will run Monday to Saturday, from 7:15 a.m. Associated Tele-Vision has already agreed to plug in for the lectures which will be delivered by such eminents as Professor Frederick Hoyle and Dr. John Kendrew. Anglia expects that, before October, the rest of the commercial network will have given clearance to this University of the ayem air trial.

Meantime, most of the indie channel stations are feeding the Independent Television Authority any audience reaction or other results they have from the seven-month old Sunday morning etv hour. These are at present being considered alongside the ITA's own research into the subject.

One of the more obvious results to come out of the experiment so far is that in a latenight slot, the etv production gets, on average, an audience rating five times higher than in the 10-11 a.m. berth on Sunday mornings.

Among other current experiments in adult etv on the commercial web is another "Inquiring Mind" series from Ulster Television. Comprising widely varied University lectures, the hourlong, midnight series is a followup to the successful skein that UTV pioneered about a year ago.

Not for the general public, but nevertheless of educational value, is the series of serious medical productions mounted by Scottish Television. Projects, which emerge on an occassional basis, are designed by doctors for doctors and have received warm praise from the profession.

Next link in the overall etv chain will be BBC-TV's contribution, scheduled to begin in the fall. Corporation is planning eight programs a week which will go out on Saturday and Sunday mornings and on three weekday evenings.

Plan is to tee off with three major series—on Italian, human biology and modern scientific ideas—and several shorter skeins ranging from everyday practical economics and dressmaking to landmarks in European art and the development of young children.

Canada B'casting: The Trend Is Up

Ottawa, July 16.

An upward trend is taking place in Canada's broadcasting industry, according to the annual report of the Board of Broadcast Governors. BBG's report, tabled in the House of Commons, covers the fiscal year ending March 31, 1963. It found the industry's period of adjustment, for both AM and television, most severe during 1961, with general upping after that.

"The time has not yet arrived," the report said, "when the board could recommend that color tv begin in Canada." BBG could not fix a time when it could happen. It will come, the report said, but not now, because of the great costs involved and lack of public demand. United States color video reaches more than 1,000,000 homes in Canada but there are only 4,500 color receivers in this country according to the report.

Oren Harris Miffed Over FCC's Plan To Duplicate 13 Clean Channels

Washington, July 16.

FCC sees the "definite possibility" of higher power on a "number" of the 13 clear channel stations to be duplicated.

The number was not given in a Commission letter to House Commerce Committee Chairman Oren Harris (D-Ark.), but FCC went on to say:

"For example, the addition of a new unlimited-time station on 750 kilocycles in Alaska clearly leaves open the possibility of higher power operation by the Class I-A station on that channel at Atlanta (WSB). In most cases, the I-A station would have to directionalize its higher power operation to protect the duplicating assignment. The obstacles which this requirement would create are difficult to evaluate . . . However, there is reason to believe they would be surmountable in a number of cases."

Harris is miffed that FCC is going ahead with plans to duplicate 13 of the clear channels. The letter from FCC, which was not made public for almost two weeks, was designed to give the Commission's reasoning in going contrary to Harris' wishes.

It was learned from reliable sources that Harris tried a compromise with FCC, suggesting that all the channels involved be duplicated, except for WGN, Chicago, and WSM, Nashville. FCC, however, turned that down. All presumably will be duplicated now.

Harris got a resolution through the House last year, calling on FCC not to duplicate any of the channels for a year (the period expired on July 2) and to study

$6,000,000 Surge In NBC-TV Sales

NBC-TV reports that a late-season surge of buying saw $6,000,000 racked up for nighttime last week, with Helene Curtis accounting for $3,000,000 of the total with a scatter plan covering a number of shows.

Kemper Insurance pacted for "Sing Along with Mitch" with a $1,000,000 outlay, says the web, and others in the week's bundle of loot were Colgate, Haggar Slacks, General Mills, Chanel and Sherwin-Williams.

Daytime till was loaded again after a big first week of July with the network reporting an added $2,000,000 from Miles labs, another $1,000,000 from International Latex and other sunshine bankrollers, including Beechnut, Frito-Lay and Ocean Spray Cranberries for a $5,000,000 total.

Sametime, the new "Sunday" news hour, schedule for 4 to 5 p.m. Sundays, is now two-thirds sold as Celotex joins earlier bankroller Aetna Insurance.

CBS-TV Projects Carol, Goulet Specs for '64-'65

CBS-TV is moving ahead on lining up two musical specials for '64-'65, one starring Carol Burnett in "Once Upon A Mattress" and the other Robert Goulet in "Brigadoon."

Marc Merson, director of live programming, N. Y., said both specials grew out of CBS-TV's contracts with Burnett and Goulet. Miss Burnett plummeted to fame soon after starring in the off-Broadway "Once Upon A Mattress" legit engagement. Music of "Mattress" was composed by Richard Rodgers' daughter, Mary Rodgers.

JEAN KERR SERIES ALSO GEO. SIDNEY

As Mort Werner, the NBC-TV programming chieftain, forsees the shape of things, it might well be that the day is not too distant when a network will have to think in terms of a tandem program operation—one program v.p. to mastermind the season coming up; another program v.p. to ride herd on projecting for the year ahead.

The kind of "concurrent thinking" that's required in today's frantic this year-plus-next-year plotting, planning & nursing has assumed such migraine proportions that, in the words of Werner, "you not only have to think and worry about a 'Mr. Novak' or a 'Grindl' making the grade, but at the same time worry about what could replace them the following season if they don't."

For all the fact that Werner's ankle deep (the same goes for Mike Dann at CBS; Ed Scherick at ABC) in getting squared away on the imminent '63-64 sked, the year-ahead plotting and negotiating has advanced to such a degree that NBC alone now has 39 programming projects in the works.

These are some of the highlights:

The first definite commitment for '64-'65 (possibly the first among all three webs) is the "Profiles In Courage" series, based on President Kennedy's book.

All the others are either in negotiation or represent deals for pilots, as witness:

A half-hour situation comedy series based on Jean Kerr's "Please Don't Eat the Daisies." This one's out of the MGM shop, which did the filmization of the book.

Another M-G half-hour comedy series based on the recently-released Metro "Flipper" feature about a boy, his family and a dolphin. Ivan Tors is helming this one.

A remake of the "Kentucky's Kid" pilot which was originally intended for the late Jack Carson. Now it will have Dennis Weaver in the lead (he's exiting "Gunsmoke"). Pilot rolls Aug. 2. This is an NBC property, the first of the Felix Jackson projects being undertaken for '64-'65.

There are, in fact, three other Felix Jackson-produced series in the works. One is a romantic adventure hour series called "Magic Touch" in which George Sidney, the vet film producer (he did "Bye Bye Birdie" for Columbia) will assume his first tv directorial job.

Also two Jackson dramatic series enlisting the services of David Dortort, who's had a little item called "Bonanza" going for him at NBC.

Werner is particularly hot about a Four Star hour entry called "The Arena" (representing the building housing 100 or so D.A.'s or assistant D.A.'s). This one was researched for 18 months by Howard Julian Fink, creator of the "11th Hour." Four Star's Tom McDermott and subsequently Werner flipped over the resultant script.

The Leland Hayward (in association with GAC) satirical series, either for half-hour or full hour, based on the BBC's successful "That Was the Week That Was."

The deal with Hubbell Robinson for a half-hour situation comedy series.

The "Phineas Fogg" hour entry (based on "Eighty Days Around the World") out of the Warners shop. Ditto the WB "Temple Houston" series starring Jeffrey Hunter.

A Jimmy Saphier package, "Let's Make A Deal," designed as a daytime audience participation cross-the-board show.

Werner is not forgetful of the fact that both the Kraft and Chrysler anthology series offer high spinoff potentials.

P&G's 'Miss Teenage'

Procter & Gamble has picked up full sponsorship of CBS-TV's "Miss Teenage America" telecast.

Broadcast, slated for Friday night, Nov. 11, from 10 to 11, emanates from Dallas, where the contest is held.

Practically All Show Biz Unions At Tense-Up Stage as Deadline Nears on TV Network Contracts

A swarm of show biz unions and the three television networks will be squaring off during the next few months in an intensive and successive series of new pact negotiations. The bargaining will cover all phases of tv personnel, from the grips through the musicians to the engineers and the performers. In the latter case, the matter of global telecasting, via communications satellites and other devices, is expected to generate new issues in the labor-management arena.

The American Federation of Radio-Television Artists, whose network pact expires Nov. 16, will spell out its demands on foreign use, whether via Telstar or via tape, when talks open with the networks at the end of September. The AFTRA-web negotiations are likely to be the thorniest of all since the talent union is also talking about the possibility of switching its scale formula, pegged to the length of a show, to that of the Screen Actors Guild formula, based on the so-called day rate. The webs, on the other hand, are expected to make counter-demands against AFTRA's present scale of 75% for the first replay of a tv show. The SAG formula calls for a 35% first re-use fee.

The web pacts with the IATSE stagehands union expire Dec. 31. A month later, the NBC and ABC pacts with National Assn. of Broadcast Engineers & Technicians (NABET) run out. CBS' deal with the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, covering the same personnel, expires at the end of this month. In this sector, both the stagehands and the technicians are expected to stress job security against network efforts to introduce more automated processes or streamline operations.

The web pact with the American Federation of Musicians expires Feb. 29. At that time, the recurring hassle over quotas for staff musicians, a triennial beef of the webs, is slated to begin. The webs, of course, want to reduce or eliminate the quotas. The AFM, on the other hand, will be fighting not only for the quotas but for more live music on dramatic shows. The networks currently are committed to using live musicians, rather than canned music, on one out of every three dramatic shows which they produce. The AFM is also thinking of re-use payments for shows telecast overseas.

The web contract with the Directors Guild runs out at the end of 1964, which is too far away for any skull practice on either side.

At the present time, the webs have just about wrapped up a deal with the Writers Guild of America in which a royalty formula for overseas use has been worked out.

When Is a Vet?

Indicative of the revolving door policy at the three television networks on programming execs:

Mort Werner, NBC-TV's programming chieftain, is the veteran among all three. He's in his third year.

Mike Dann, the CBS-TV v.p. over programming, is in his fourth month. Ed Scherick, the ABC-TV program boss, is in his second month.

Vicki Vola New AFTRA Prexy; Set Pay Pattern

Hollywood, July 16.

Vicki Vola, Gotham actress, was unanimously elected prexy of AFTRA Saturday night (13) at guild's 26th annual convention which wound Sunday morning after all-night session. Motion was carried after Art Gilmore, present chief exec, declined to run for third term. Vola is second femme to hold office since guild's inception in 1937, Virginia Payne previously.

All-night conclave saw formulation of wage and working conditions demands to be made in August when contract negotiations get underway. Exact nature of demands couldn't be divulged, although AFTRA's midwestern regional chieftain Ray Jones affirmed wage hikes would definitely be asked and exec secretary Don Conaway reported stipulations concerning use of AFTRA talent for Telstar broadcasts would be included.

Jones also noted that paramount consideration of convention was given radio and tv commercial transcripting. It also was learned proposal had been made to require union membership for performers after their seventh day of non-union employment, which now doesn't hold until 30th day of work.

Other officers tapped included Tyler McVey, L.A., first veepee; Arwin Schweig, Chicago, second; Dave Schnabel, Kansas City, third; Bill Deal, Philly, fourth; Evelyn Freeman, Washington, fifth; Larry Ward, St. Louis, sixth; John Milton Kennedy, L.A., seventh; Jud Conlon, L.A., recording secretary; Ray Heatherton, N.Y., treasurer. Eleanor Engle, Chicago, was voted George Heller award.

Enough Puppets in Soviet Without Bil, Cora Baird

CBS News relations with the Soviet Union remains at the low level. Most recent incident was the denial of permission to film performances of Bil & Cora Baird puppets in Russia. Baird is in the Soviet Union as part of the cultural exchange program.

CBS News also has pending a number of filming requests for its "20th Century." More immediate, CBS News, along with other news agencies, feels blocked in covering the nuclear test ban talks in Moscow.

ABC-TV's 'Crucial Summer'

ABC-TV is tackling the civil rights question with an in-depth report spreading over five half hours weekly starting Aug. 11 in the Sunday at 10:30 p.m. slot.

Titled "Crucial Summer of 1963—The Civil Rights Crisis," Ron Cochran will be anchor man with reporters John Rolfson and Roger Sharpe handling the major assignments.

Sullivan-Precht's 'Lovable Louie'

Sylvan Productions, helmed by Ed Sullivan and Robert Precht, plans fall production of a situation comedy pilot for a proposed tv series, "Lovable Louie," featuring a chimpanzee slated to be the first moon explorer.

Charles Andrews will produce and the pilot script has been written by Art Baer and Ben Joelson, who recently scripted the Sullivan anni show.

Other Sylvan projects on the blueprint stage include a dramatic series about a senator, "The Whip," and a comedy about a volunteer fire department, "The 20th Volunteers."

Pontiac Freezeout on Specs Cues New Pattern on 'Today'-'Tonight' —On Other Madison Ave. Fronts

By BILL GREELEY

Pontiac, which became used to the big-splash technique on tv when agency MacManus, John & Adams was switching the car's image from "old dependable" to "new exciting," can't place the kind of specials it would like in the tight network situation coming up this season.

As an alternate, the agency has bought out NBC-TV's "Today" and "Tonight" shows of Oct. 3 for announcement of the new models. MacManus, John & Adams tv program chief Henry Fownes says the "Today" show will be thematic, possibly a salute to the music of Rogers & Hammerstein. "Tonight" will be in something similar to its regular casual format, but possibly with extra special guests, including some one to do the special Pontiac commercials in the works for the spread. Network has already preempted the two shows re regular participants, and a number of local Pontiac dealers around the country will no doubt be picking up a share of the local spots the shows provide.

Blurbs, incidentally, will be in the Pontiac "new image" tradition, which featured such talents as Phil Silvers (introing a "Potniak"); Victor Borge (displaying the car in a snow drift that covered it to the roof) and other kidding bits by Emmett Kelley, Cedric Hardwick and May & Nichols.

With a budget of between $3,500,000 and $4,000,000 in broadcast, Pontiac also has participations in several nighttime NBC and ABC shows and a half (with Lever Bros.) of the first Bing Crosby special set for CBS. There also will probably be another Victor Borge special, and Fownes says the agency is still looking in the special line.

Pickings are slim, however, says Fownes, and in these days of tight network program control, there are two basic criteria for a web's going to the trouble of preempting for a special from the outside. First, is it something that might go to somebody else if we don't take it; and second, how much money does the sponsor swing otherwise.

Anyhow, the "Tonight" and "Today" announcement shows will cost about a third of a "primetime" special which will make the CPM mighty low and satisfactory.

Lean & Hungry C&W

Cunningham & Walsh, which, two years ago was shaky from account defections, held a press party last week to celebrate the accomplishments of the new management team that took over in the hard times.

President Carl W. Nichols told the ad scribes that "we're lean and hungry," but C&W has $42,000,000 in billings, turns a profit considerably above the 4A's-calculated average for its size, has no debts and a solid triple A credit rating.

Agency is looking for new business, says Nichols, and is lean and hungry enough to even take on a cig account right now, cancer or no.

Agency Helpers

Ralph S. Butler Jr. and Robert Weenolsen, vet agency execs, have opened New York Services for Advertising Inc. at 475 Fifth Ave., New York.

New firm will provide branch office facilities to out-of-town and foreign agencies with assistance and supervisory services in tv, radio and other media, marketing, research and other phases of advertising.

Prexy Weenolsen says the company will operate strictly on a fee basis, with costs well below the expense of maintaining an adequately staffed branch office in Manhattan.

Weenolsen was until recently a broadcast supervisor at Foote, Cone & Belding and before that Young & Rubicam. Exec veepee Butler was manager of Benton & Bowles Toronto office and before that in the New York office of the agency. He was with B&B for 14 years and before that spent nine years at Young & Rubicam.

Colodzin's Prexy Status

Robert S. Colodzin has been named president of SIB Productions of New York. He was formerly tv production supervisor at Benton & Bowles where his responsibilities included Crest Toothpaste.

RCA Profits at Peak $12,000,000 For 2d Quarter

RCA's second-quarter earnings and sales for 1963 set alltime highs for the corporation, with profits after taxes reaching $12,000,000 and sales $441,300,000.

Profits were up 27% over the second quarter of 1962's $9,500,000, while sales were up 3% from last year's $428,900,000 for the same period. It was the ninth consecutive quarter RCA's earnings have been up.

Earnings a share of common totaled 65c, compared with 51c in the second quarter last year on a larger number of shares outstanding this year.

In the first half of '63, profits after taxes hit a new peak of $29,400,000, a 23% increase over the first six months of 1962.

Sales were up 3% in the first half of '63 for a new first half high of $877,300,000, and earnings per share were $1.60 for the first half of '63 compared with $1.32 last year.

In a joint statement, chairman David Sarnoff and president Elmer W. Engstrom said, "RCA's present performance is a result of both longterm and shortterm developments. The research and planning begun more than a decade ago for products such as color television are now being translated into rising sales and profits and a leading position in the industry . . . No single product or service can account for the continuing improvement in the company's fortunes. From broadcasting to space satellites, from worldwide electronic servicing operations to computer sales and rentals the impact of progress was registered on our first half earnings statement."

Statement pointed to color tv sales for June, a slow month, which produced 48% more RCA color set sales than the previous peak month of September '62.

With no breakdown, the statement said that NBC "sustained its vigorous rate of progress" with both sales and profits for the first half and second quarter '63 surpassing previous records for the periods.

Future 'Town Meetings' Will Depend on Telstar's Mutual Visibility Factor

Electronic journalism, which took a leap forward with "Town Meeting of the World," now has problems peculiar to communications satellites, as they rotate around the earth like messenger birds.

The selection of sites for participants of future inter-continental meetings is dictated by the particular orbit Telstar 11 may be in, when the next "Town Meeting of the World" happens to be telecast. CBS News prexy Dick Salant, happy about the outcome of the preem inter-continental forum, says CBS-TV plans other "Town Meetings of the World" on a ragular quarterly basis starting next fall.

The date and the particular time of day determines the factor and length of mutual visibility. One forum planned encompasses Japan, for example, but, according to Salant, the period of mutual visibility via Telstar II is small. There's nothing to prevent a Japanese leader to fly to a more acceptable site for the occasion, though. Salant feels that the problems remain more "human than technical."

It was a human decision that prevented European participants and viewers to see the meeting at the same time as it was viewed in the U.S. DeGaulle's lieutenants pulled the no-go switch on the French ground station.

IKE AT NORMANDY FOR 'CBS REPORTS'

Personal reminiscence of former President Dwight D. Eisenhower on the Allied invasion of Normandy during World War II will be the subject of an upcoming "CBS Reports."

Eisenhower, who was Supreme Commander of Allied Forces, will return to Normandy next month for filming. The hourlong film, titled "D-Day Plus 20 Years," will be telecast by CBS-TV on or about June 6, 1964, the anniversary of D-Day. General Eisenhower also will be seen visiting his former headquarters in Portsmouth, Eng., which was the embarkation point for the large part of the invasion fleet.

Walter Cronkite will be in the "D-Day" show. According to the planned format, it will be a tribute to all Allied dead who fell on D-Day or subsequent European battles, as well as Eisenhower's reflections on the meaning of the wartime events on today's world.

WNEW's Unique, Pace-Setting Status As Radio's Windup-Toy-That-Makes-Money

By HERM SCHOENFELD

The sound of WNEW is the sound of independent radio walking on velvet. It has been envied, emulated and imitated, and despite the fact that it has never quite been duplicated, WNEW's sound of success has been one of the major forces controlling the shape and direction of the sightless kilocycles.

A pat formulation of what constituted the "WNEW Sound" is not easy to come by. Unfortunately, it hasn't as yet made it as an entry in Webster's and even veteran staff members at the stations find a precise definition somewhat elusive. Ask a handful of WNEW executives to put their sound into words and you'll get standby phrases like: "It swings—it's smooth—it's sophisticated—it's the personalities and the sense of the humor—it's the news, etc." But underlying everything else, the unanimous opinion is that the station keeps rolling from one fiscal peak to another because of its precision—its consistency and its savvy.

When Franklin Delano Roosevelt took time out, on Feb. 13, 1934, from his efforts to lift the nation out of the economic ditch to press the button which lit up the WNEW transmitter, there was no indication that this station would assume the same leadership in radio broadcasting as F.D.R. did in politics. At that time, when it was put into business by watchmaker Arde Bulova and adman Milton Biow, WNEW was a squeaking infant trying to make its way in an industry dominated by the network giants who were just approaching the crest of their power.

Industry Pace-Setter

Thirty years later, through a brutal depression, World War II and the advent of a new medium, television, which revolutionized show business and advertising, WNEW has emerged as the pace-setting operation of the radio industry. When, indeed, a local station can gross substantially over $7,000,000 yearly and generate offers to buy at $25,000,000 plus in the open market, it's more than an operation—it's an institution.

WNEW is so much of an institution which its present owners, Metromedia, will not sell under any circumstances—this side of a bid from Fort Knox itself. John W. Kluge, chairman of Metromedia, has seen WNEW break the hearts of its successive owners who thought they were selling at a peak price only to find new ridges soaring ahead in a dizzying pyramid of values from one decade to another.

The history of WNEW could be graphically told in the ascending curve of its cash value. When Biow and Bulova decided to cash in their chips in 1950, they sold the station for somewhat over $2,000,000 to a syndicate headed by William S. Cherry, a Rhode Island department store magnate and owner of WPRO of Providence. Four years later, when the Cherry group sold out to a group headed by Dick Buckley, president of the John Blair station rep company, the selling price inched up to $2,500,000. This decision by the Cherry group to sell at a pittance of a profit was undoubtedly cued by the tremendous surge of television during this period and the uncertain future of radio .

But all fears about radio's capacity to hold on and make gains in the teeth of tv competition was displayed in the subsequent years when WNEW gross revenues began climbing at an accelerated clip. By 1957, when the Buckley group, which had subsequently merged into the DuMont Broadcasting setup, sold the station to its present owners, Metromedia, WNEW's price had climbed to $7,500,000, the highest price ever paid up to that time for a radio station. In January, 1959, after an inter-corporate shuffle in which Buckley was ousted from the station's management, Kluge took over the helm of Metromedia and put John V. B. (Jack) Sullivan, longtime sales exec with the station, in charge of the station.

The door to Sullivan's office is literally open at all times to any of the station's 116 employes for spot decisions on queries ranging from whether to use a specific disk or schedule a news special. He also occasionally uses his extensive repertory of client technique to close important deals with advertisers.

A Do-It-Yourselfer

Sullivan's do-it-yourself, if necessary, approach is perhaps his most significant departure from the tradition handed down by the station's first and now-legendary manager, Bernice Judis. Of her it is said that she couldn's write or deliver a line of copy, she couldn't program and she couldn't sell, but she had flawless instinct for the right way to do it. In short, Miss Judis knew what she wanted and was ready to pay the highest price to get it.

Miss Judis' personal friends, Biow and Bulova, reportedly handed her the station's management as a plaything to keep her occupied while she was getting over the break-up of her first marriage. So she turned it into a windup toy that makes money. Even if her conception of how a radio station should be run was a bit hazy at the outset, there was nothing vague about her determination to make WNEW into a solid commercial enterprise, adult in tone but uncluttered by cultural pretensions.

She found a peg on which to hang that determination when Martin Block came up with his "Make Believe Ballroom" idea in 1935. Brushed off when he first proposed it, he was given a half-hour chance during an interlude in the station's coverage of the trial of Bruno Hauptmann in Flemington, N.J., for the kidnapping of Charles Lindbergh's son.

A born pitchman with an ear for music and an eye for the main chance, Block came up with the twist of pretending that a disk show was actually a live performance. By the use of the talent on disks, Block pointed the way for indie stations to stay afloat against the heavyweight programming of the Bing Crosbys, Bob Hopes, Jack Bennys, et al, on the major networks. The illusion of live programming created by Block was a valuable, but not indispensable gimmick.

Block's show took off immediately, was quickly expanded to 90 minutes each morning and became the bellwether for WNEW over the years. It made a fortune for Block, who became one of the industry's highest priced performers at $200,000 per year and created a new profession—the disk jockey. Shortly after Block's breakthrough at WNEW, the station went on a 24-hour around-the-clock basis, expanding the disk concept with Stan Shaw's "Milkman's Matinee" for the early morning hours.

If some of the top show biz performers were originally amused by the station's spotlighting of their talent on disks, they quickly became disturbed by their cuffo exploitation. A year after Block launched his show, WNEW became the defendant in a legal action initiated by bandleaders Paul Whiteman, Fred Waring and Sammy Kaye. At stake was the right of a radio station to spin disks despite the "not-for-commercial-or-broadcast use" warning on the label. The courts, in failing to uphold the disk artists, opened the door to fullscale, uninhibited tapping of the disk catalogs for broadcast purposes. Ironically, the initial opposition of the disk artists was to turn in subsequent years into a desperate effort to get the stations to play their records.

If disks were an important ingredient of WNEW's recipe, even more paramount, as Block demonstrated, was the manner in which they were purveyed. Hence, Miss Judis' stress on disk jockey personalities at the highest going prices. Even today, while there's no one in the neighborhood of Block's $200,000 annual take-home pay, three of WNEW's personalities, William B. Williams, Gene Klaven and Dee Finch, gets a cool $2,000 weekly and the station's lowest salary on-the-air man makes do with only $30,000 a year.

WNEW not only turned the disk jockey into a performer, but converted performers into disk jockeys. Names like Benny Goodman, Dinah Shore, Maxine Sullivan, Eileen Farrell, Mitch Miller, Jose Ferrer, Milton Berle, and, currently, Buddy Hackett, have been used as staff members on regularly scheduled shows.

WNEW once allowed a couple of early morning jockeys, (Gene) Rayburn and Dee Finch, to kid the commercials. The reaction was so strong it started a trend. The success led to Rayburn's moveover to NBC. Finch subsequently teamed with Klavan and both have been tongue-in-cheek ever since.

On The Production End

Some of the high points in WNEW's history were furnished by Ted Cott, who became the station's program director in 1943 under a decision by Miss Judis to boost public service programming. Cott ranged far and wide and turned the WNEW concept into a doctrine for independent radio. Veteran staffers still with the station remember with awe the fact that Cott once introduced 29 new programs on the station in one week. Cott, however, did not tamper with the basic structure of the station's programming during his eight-year tenure, and neither did his successor, Dick Pack, who eventually went on to become programming chief for the Westinghouse Broadcasting chain.

WNEW met and passed one of its severest challenges about a dozen years ago when a new musical rage, rock 'n' roll, swept over the music scene. In short order, independent stations from coast to coast were scrambling to get aboard the Big Beat, leading to the development of a widely used tight formula of Top 40 hits and news.

WNEW, however, withstood the tidal wave like an anti-Rock of Gibralter. Born in the swing era of the 1930s when some of the greatest standards of Tin Pan Alley were written and played by the dance superlative bands of the swing era, WNEW has remained loyal to the "class" type of pop music, always searching out the top performance of the best songs. Varner Paulsen, WNEW's present program director, pointed out that the station is ready to experiment with new music if it meets the WNEW standard of good taste. While WNEW turned down the Chubby Checker versions of The Twist, it does play twist music in a more polished vein. Even bold on occasion, WNEW was first in the New York area with the Bossa Nova, a polite samba beat which temporarily engulfed the pop music biz. As a rule of thumb, WNEW infinitely prefers Frank Sinatra to Elvis Presley, but will on occasion even play the latter's quieter disks.

In the area of news, WNEW was among the first to schedule reports every hour on a clockwork basis. During the last war, the station broadcast hourly news wrapups prepared by the N.Y. Daily News, a tieup that also involved important promotional values for the station. WNEW subsequently decided to set up its own staff and it proceeded to organize the most elaborate news operation in independent network radio.

Under the news director, Lee Hanna, the news department comprises 32 staffers, including three straight news announcers, three commentators, three writer-reports, a couple of assistant directors and equipment to cover the globe, from Cape Canaveral to the Papal Coronation, on its own. It's a $400,000 yearly nod to the station's public responsibility to provide news and a wide variety of documentary stanzas.

Jack Sullivan's regime has made some striking innovations in the WNEW format. He has brought sporting events onto the station via the coverage of the N.Y. Giants Football games, one of the prestige items in the programming category. Sullivan and Paulsen have also been cultivating live programming via the regular "Music Spectaculars" with some of the leading music personalities such as Ella Fitzgerald, Robert Goulet, Tony Bennett and Ted Heath. As Paulsen put it, "the audience doesn't expect the extra effort and they're delighted when they get it."

The origins of the WNEW call letters are already lost in antiquity. Some say it refers to the station's coverage of both the New York and New Jersey area. Others say that it was Biow's suggestion to use the magic word of advertising, NEW. Still another explanation is based on an association that Ed Wynn had with one of the stations which were amalgamated on the kilocycle band to make room for WNEW's position at 1130 kc. Whatever the reason, WNEW sounds right for the station.

By LEE HANNA
(News Director, WNEW Radio)

There was a time (remember?) when everybody sat down at the radio to listen . . . to Jack Benny and to Fred Allen . . . . to H. V. Kaltenborn and to Edward R. Murrow. We made ourselves comfortable in our living rooms and we listened.

Then, television came along and there were many changes. We kept the radio on in the kitchen or in the car or wherever, a pleasant companion if you wanted music and/or news.

WNEW had been a leader in supplying both commodities for years. If you remember way back to early '42, this station was the first in the nation to present news show hourly around the clock.

Three weeks after Pearl Harbor, WNEW began using news prepared by the broadcast desk of The New York News. By 1958, the station knew that greater dimensions were needed in presenting news. It required positive character and individual personality.

So we assembled our own news operation at the end of that year.

We set out to compete not only with the best in radio, but with the best in the news business—and, along with newspapers, I include television, news magazines and all other forms that communicate contemporaneous facts, thoughts, and ideas to the public.

As we began we were aware that some broadcasters were giving more lip service than public service in the name of news. They pushed for "swinging" news, promotional gimmicks and catchphrases. But we felt the WNEW audience would recognize and appreciate the difference between "rip-'n-read" and the painstaking effort that goes into seeking and reporting the facts and their meaning.

We backed that theory with a large investment of time, energy and cash.

We felt then, four and a half years ago, that the times cried out for understanding, and Lord knows there were few enough of us around who could understand, let alone explain to others what the heck was going on in the world. Thus we faced our first formidable task: to bring together a staff of men and women who spoke thoughts (their own) not merely words (the wire services'); people who could not only function as personalities (there were plenty of those around in an infinite variety) but could also write, understandingly, for the ear, get out and cover a story, get an interview, ad-lib descriptively, edit tape and produce a documentary. In short, we were looking for people who could do the complete job.

WNEW News knew that the day had passed when "local," independent could get by with merely supplying local news. There was nothing local about fallout, the Pope, Castro, jet airplanes, or, for that matter Telstar or Relay. We assumed we would have to travel, although none of us guessed how far or how often. It followed, then, that when something happened—wherever it occurred—our man should be there; the familiar voice describing the event in radio's exciting personal terms.

No listner will quickly forget Reid Collins' moving description last month as he watched the St. Peters Square throng and caught the first glimpse of Pope Paul VI; or the electric excitement of

Hackett: Immodest Packet

That Buddy Hackett is a card. Even his business card gives you the business. The card, engraved on parchment, formally notes his association with WNEW/Metropolitan Broadcasting. Then, under his name, his title: Beautiful Person.

Hackett, on WNEW every Sunday from 6 to 7 p.m., refers to William B. as Hackett's weekday replacement.

Metromedia: All Things To All People, Both Indoors and Outdoors

Metromedia Inc. is a diversified communications complex comprised of five, soon to be six, radio stations; seven television stations, the world's largest outdoor advertising company; a stunningly successful show business spectacle; and a miscellany of marketing and sales organizations.

But Metromedia is more than anything else that rare combination of people and ideas that spell responsibility, success and growth.

The people in the broadcast media of MM are dedicated to the idea that listeners and viewers want entertainment, information, and intellectual stimulation. That idea branches out and becomes the operative principle that determines Metromedia's policy and accounts in large measure for the fantastic growth of a company which was unheard of a few short years ago.

Metromedia will shortly own six radio stations which serve some of the richest and most influential markets in the nation. When the FCC approves the sale to Metromedia of WCBM in Baltimore, the group will span America. The other stations include WNEW-AM/FM in New York; WIP-AM/FM in Philadelphia; WHK-AM/FM in Cleveland; KMBC-AM/FM in Kansas City, Missouri, and KLAC-AM/FM in Los Angeles, California.

Metromedia is seven progressive, increasingly important television stations spread, like their radio counterparts, across the broad span of America: WNEW-TV in New York; WTTG in Washington, D. C.; KTTV in Los Angeles; KMBC-TV in Kansas City; KOVR in Sacramento-Stockton, WTVH, Peoria, and WTVP in Decatur.

Metromedia is Foster and Kleiser, the country's largest and most scenically responsible outdoor advertising company with headquarters in San Francisco.

Metromedia is "Ice Capades," a dazzling new dimension in the corporate structure and a consistent show business winner for 23 consecutive years.

And last, but certainly not least, Metromedia is a hardworking, result-getting group of "solid pros" who are banded together under the banner of Metro Broadcast Radio sales and Metro Broadcast TV Sales with offices in New York, Los Angeles, Chicago, Philadelphia, Detroit, San Francisco and St. Louis.

These, then, are the component entities which make up the Metromedia complex. They are all successful, all growing, all serving multiple responsibilities to clients, listeners, viewers, the community, and stockholders. But their success and their growth rest squarely on the shoulders of the men and women, the very human beings who make up the line and staff of Metromedia's personnel.

Kluge's Credo

John W. Kluge, who is President and Chairman of the Board of Metromedia, has been quoted in the press as saying: "Give us the right people, the best people, and we'll give them the authority and the autonomy to do their jobs the way they should be done," and he practices what he preaches. Metro-

Life & Times of a 'Perky Little Indie' Which Evolved as 'Big W' And Set Kilocycle World on Its Ear

By JOHN V. B. SULLIVAN
(Vice President & General Manager, WNEW RADIO)

By this time I'm sure everyone realizes that WNEW's "Thank You" party at Madison Square Garden the night of July 24 marks only the start of our 30th Anniversary celebration. Actual birthday date is Feb. 13, 1964—but if our enthusiasm prompts a six-month head start on celebration that's WNEW!

Enthusiasm, elan, Begeisterung, animo, lelkesedes—refer to it as you will — is a key word and a basic attitude at the Big W and always has been; our sound on the air, the approach of our people to their jobs, the reactions of our listeners, even one of our Sande & Greene jingles: "There's always something happening at WNEW!"

The theme of our 30th bash is "The Best Is Yet To Come" (or "You Ain't Heard Nothin' Yet!"), and yet we're proud of what's gone before and of the wonderful people who made it all possible.

Wonderful people whose voices and talent have meant WNEW on the air.

Wonderful people who planned, trained, coached, cajoled, argued and worked hard—off the air.

Wonderful people with advertising dollars to spend who always afforded our salesmen a hearing —when WNEW was known as "a perky little indie" or "the best sound coming out of radio in America today" (both VARIETY quotes).

Wonderful people who have played the music and sung the songs that filled our air 24 hours a day.

Wonderful people who wrote about us, commented on us; who brought us new releases first and thanked us for "making" a hit by our air plays; who had ideas in many forms and for many uses —and thought of us first.

Lastly but certainly not leastly, the wonderful people who have listened and usually let us know what they thought — whether it involved brickbats or bouquets!

Let's talk about those listeners.

We're saying "Thank You" to them on July 24 in a manner we can't always do day to day on the air. And in view of our industry's concern over the accuracy of current ratings, and the government's over the use of same, let us talk not necessarily of how many listeners — but what kind of people they've shown themselves to be.

They took the "Make Believe Ballroom" to their hearts from the first notes of "Sugar Blues," in February 1935; Martin Block, the Crystal Studio, the Glenn Miller recording of the Ballroom theme—they loved 'em all.

They went for "Milkman's Matinee" in a big way, realizing the good sense of a 24-hour station in the big town; remember Stan Shaw, "Night Mayor of New York"?

They danced to our "Dance Parade" (hey there, Jimmy Rich), and stormed the barricades at our Randall's Island "Carnival of Swing."

They applauded "News Around the Clock," radio's first hourly news, when we initiated it three weeks after Pearl Harbor in conjunction with the New York Daily News.

They laughed at the Spike Jones recording of "Der Fuehrer's Face" and bought war bonds eagerly to get precious copies free from Martin Block.

Then There Was 'Jack & Gene'

They woke up in better humors when we introduced radio's first two-man morning team in 1946. "Jack & Gene" (Jack Lescoulie and Gene Rayburn) because "Gene and Dee" (Rayburn and Finch) after six months — and in 1952 "Klavan & Finch." To this day some people think that in 1952 we changed somebody's name to Gene Klavan so it would sound like Gene Rayburn. We didn't.

They appreciated us in more distant areas 11 years ago when "the perky little indie" went to 50,000 watts.

They were intrigued when suddenly we acquired a "sister station" among the magic lanterns and Channel 5 became WNEW-TV in 1957.

They learned about FM in 1958 (we're at 102.7), established Bob Landers securely noon to three, and were happy to hear William B. Williams' delightful personality, one-of-a-kind voice and "Chairman of the Board" in the "Make Believe Ballroom."

They wondered about "our own News Department" when on Jan. 1, 1959, "Your Favorite Station for Music & News" took on a new and more meaningful dimension.

They contributed more than $20,000 in December 1960 to the "WNEW-Brooklyn Fund" when that twin air crash reduced one of our town's neighborhoods to rubble.

They whooped when we became New York's "Giant" station in the Fall of '61, offering the hottest sports attraction in the business, the New York Football Giants, via three-hour sports spectaculars every Sunday from August through December. And Kyle Rote as Sports Director was a natural.

They welcomed Ted Brown and Billy Taylor to our talent roster in 1962 (as well as Marty O'Hara and Fred Robbins in 1963), endorsed our promotion of Wally King to his own show, began to recognize names that meant something in the news field: Reid Collins, Jim Gash, Chip Cipolla, Jim Van Sickle, Ike Pappas et al.

Early this year they put their dollars where their sentiments were for Ira Harkey, courageous Mississippi publisher, ordering nearly 800 subscriptions to his "Pascagoula Chronicle" after we highlighted his single-handed fight for reason and good judgment; and they shared our vicarious pride at his Pulitzer Prize!

Last month they produced the Mistaken Identity

President Kennedy's special projects secretary, Dorothy Davies, made a tactful inquiry to WNEW's front office. Why, she asked, had the station's switchboard failed to put a call from the White House operator through to William B. Williams?

WNEW's newest switchboard girl, a Hunter College co-ed, did remember a call that "might have been it."

"William B. was on the air," she explained, "and I didn't want to disturb him. As a matter of fact, I thought it was the Light House calling with one of those public service announcements."

The Things You Can Do With Humor

By KLAVAN & FINCH

"Once upon a time, children," we told our children once upon a time, "radio was full of funny people called Bob Hope, Ozzie and Harriet, Jack Benny and Red Skelton." Our children leapt upon us, calling us heretic and plastering us with old salami wrappers and pistachio shells.

It's difficult to convince the little demons that radio—as we knew it—was once a romantic world full of humor and drama, fraught with suspense and loaded with networks. Disenchantment with the medium as a place for humor came with tv; in order to subsist, most of radio felt forced to rely on 40 records, acne cures and frequent weather and time checks.

Some few stations—among them WNEW—kept radio grabbing at the audience, but too many broadcasters abandoned all Hope and Benny and other funnies. The recent return of comedy records, the success of stations that "stayed with it" and other worthy "talk" operations has begun to affect the thinking of the radio world, whatever that is.

Words are still moving on and saying things. More and more people in the radio business are daring to rely on saying things—interestingly and wittily. If the trend continues, perhaps radio will begin to experiment and do drama again.

A very real problem is that there are few places for the young wits and satirists to begin. The fermenting funny boy can hardly be expected to be left alone on WXWX, Quentin, Arizona. He's got to sell. Funny is for the living room, not for the radio. There are few nightclubs. It is cheaper to show "The Great Train Robbery" than heat up cameras on local television.

For those of us already doing the little humor around—and there are some pretty good people—we are just as happy because we don't want those young upstarts coming along and taking our cushy jobs. But the young upstart should have a place to start up.

But if people in radio will seriously consider the future consequences— the role that there's for radio to play—we might just begin to hear a bright new world emanating from courageous stations who create their new Bob Hopes, Bob Newharts and Klavan & Finches (we made those names up).

With the proper respect for the medium of radio, there are wonderful things that can be done with humor. There are characters to introduce, places to visit, people to insult, situations to cut to pieces. It could be a rosy future for any station that has viscera, for any performers who are young, eager and supported by their parents.

And if you really are interested in finding vibrant, alert, charming, witty fellows who know the game and who will work for merely controlling interest in the station, our number in New York is YUkon 6-7000 (out of town, don't forget Code 212).

Please don't call between 6-10 a.m. (8-12 Noon Saturdays); we're very busy doing all these things for WNEW-AM/FM.

What Makes a WNEW Personality Tick? (A Disk Jockey He Ain't)

By VARNER PAULSEN
(Program Director, WNEW Radio)

You've probably heard some of the lexicon. "This is Little Dave—your friend the platter popper—swinging on my broom from 9 till noon. The pin's in the grove, so let's turn on the juice—and wiggle loose . . ."

Make you feel you're not a member of the club? Or that you missed something in school the time you had the mumps?

No snobbery is intended, of course. Although WNEW personality William B. Williams was once fired from this station because he conducted a program with his shoes off, it wasn't the absence of shoes that did him in, it was the red socks he was wearing.

Years later, when Willy B. had learned the ways of WNEW, he was rehired. Now, he frequently conducts his "Make Believe Ballroom" in dinner clothes, sitting on a high stool under sparkling lights, basking in the diamond glow from a huge crystal chandelier, his long eyelashes casting shadows on a sterling silver microphone. And when he opens his mouth, and utters in a deep baritone voice — "Hello, World"—look out, Gertrude!

Then there is Buddy Hackett. A voice as soft as rose petals. Picture him reporting to the WNEW studios on Fifth Avenue to tape his weekly program nattily attired in Bermuda shorts, knee-high black socks, oyster-white sports jacket, a poodle on a leash. On the way, handing out his official calling card, modestly inscribed "WNEW's Buddy Hackett—Beautiful Person."

And so it goes—but not seriously.

There is something unique, however, about the WNEW personality, a chemistry that rubs off on the listener, that has made our air men the best-known, the most listened to, the highest paid professionals in broadcasting.

It's All In The Thinking

No morning comedy team is more imitated than Gene Klavan and Dee Finch. Many stations have the William B. sound-alikes. Or, the style-copiers of a Bob Landers, Ted Brown, Wally King, Billy Taylor, Marty O'Hara, or Fred Robbins. The difference is our men are not Disk Jockeys; they are not measured by how mellow they sound, how they introduce a record, how often they read a weather report, or how they lift a line from a paperback joke book.

The difference is how they think, and how they communicate their awareness. The difference between the successful WNEW personality and the also-ran is simply a difference of "desire" and how it is applied.

He is a vital broadcaster who enjoys doing his job. He is conscious of the changes going on in his field and studies them. He is alert to interesting information that is worthy of comment, things read about, seen or experienced. He must see the new hit show, major movie, tv special, sporting event—or any event the public is also talking about. He accepts a variety of invitations, exposing himself to activities, old friends and new faces. He is sincere in his market-place, selling his wares as if he owned every account. He proudly represents the station at agency/account meetings or luncheons. He considers his job as his personal corporation, and himself as his business investment, taking personal inventory, working for improvements, making changes when necessary. He invests in himself by buying books, magazines opening doors to the world of his mind. He is a showman who never sounds unimportant—a turntable laborer in shirt sleeves. He is a craftsman—but not so important to be out of reach of the man who can't afford his Jaguar. His judgment and good taste will build his stature.

This man must grow and prosper because he has equipped himself to handle the next important assignment to be developed by his management, and gain the greater rewards at the larger station in the larger market.

The Differentials

A disk jockey he ain't.

William B. doesn't have long eyelashes casting shadows in the studio—but he does have a crystal ballroom—and in it he has the freedom to damn segregation bigots.

Buddy Hackett doesn't have the voice of a Bob Landers, but with what he has got, he makes people laugh and expertly discusses nutrition or the European Common Market.

Klavan and Finch are funny, too,

Metro Radio Sales In 3d Year as WNEW Rep

As WNEW approaches its 31st year of broadcasting, Metro Radio Sales moves into its third year as the station's national sales representative outside New York City. In fact, WNEW was Metro Radio Sales' first client in June, 1961.

The relationship has been a rewarding one for both parties, for they share more than common ownership (both are divisions of Metropolitan Broadcasting).

Metro Radio Sales applies these principles to selling. Under the direction of Vice President H. D. "Bud" Neuwirth, MRS has as its goal a limited list of not more than 12 major properties in major markets and a sales force who feel personal responsibility for each station. This concentration on a controlled number of radio stations permits the rep firm to sell in depth.

At present, Metro Radio Sales' station list includes WNEW, New York; WIP, Philadelphia; WCBM, Baltimore; WHK, Cleveland; KMBC, Kansas City; and KLAC, Los Angeles.

This concentrated selling effort is already paying dividends. In the case of WNEW, for example, the year 1962 (which began just six months after MRS took over representation) was the highest billing year in the station's history—with all-time highs recorded by both MRS and WNEW's own sales staff.

WNEW's 30th Annual Bash Next Wed.; Entire $52,000 For Musicians Aid

The galaxy of show biz headliners who will turn out for WNEW Radio's 30th anniversary show at New York's Madison Square Garden next Wednesday (24) is a pot-pourri of platter-chatterers, recording artists, comedians and journalistic personalities. The diskers include chirpers, maestros and groups. The sum total proceeds of the July 24 bash, scaled at $2-$5.50 is tax free, all proceeds (figured to hit $52,000) to the Musicians Aid Society. Dominant blocks of seats is at the $2-$3 scale.

MAS, founded in 1959 by Gregory Brooks, Bruno Walter and Dimitri Metropoulos, besides affording economic assistance and professional services for music's senior citizens, also has a building fund in progress. Purpose is to finance MAS' first residence for needy, aged musicians.

The performers, in alphabetical sequence, who are friends of WNEW and supporters of the Musicians Aid Society, will include Martin Block, Dave Brubeck Quartet, Vic Damone, Bobby Darin, Dukes of Dixieland, the Tommy Dorsey Orchestra (starring Sam Donahue, Frank Sinatra Jr., Helen Forrest, The Pied Pipers and Ziggy Elman), Phil Foster, Buddy Greco, Rosey Grier, Kyle Rote and the N.Y. Football Giants.

Also, The J's With Jamie, Jack Jones (scion of Allan Jones), Steve Lawrence & Eydie Gorme, Jack E. Leonard, Robert Q. Lewis, George Maharis, Peter Nero, Sy Oliver and Orch, Gene Rayburn, Della Reese, Teri Thornton, Peppermint Lounge Twisters, Jerry Vale, Earl Wilson and Si Zentner orch.

Martin Block Frixample

Each has a saga and a history of his or her own, of which Martin Block's is typical. As WNEW lore goes, one afternoon in 1935 the station was airing sporadic bulletins from the Flemington (N.J.) courtroom where Bruno Hauptmann was on trial for the kidnap-murder of the Lindbergh baby. Block, on the air awaiting courtroom developments, decided to fill the time with recorded music. He played several platters and told his listeners to imagine the music coming from a beautiful crystal ballroom and thus "Make Believe Ballroom" was born. Block later originated the idea of dividing the 3½ hour show into 15-minute segments, each devoted to one particular band, and each sold to a different advertiser. Block hosted "Make Believe Ballroom" for 19 years. He went to ABC in 1954, spinning platters there until 1960. He ended a short retirement last October to join WOR. The WNEW historians have millions (well, dozens) like that.

Metromedia, Inc. salutes WNEW, its first radio offspring, on the start of its 30th Anniversary celebration. All members of the family—our seven television and four radio properties, Foster and Kleiser Outdoor Advertising, Metro Radio Sales, MetroTV Sales and Ice Capades, Inc.—join in wishing WNEW Radio many more years of continued growth and prosperity. May it always warrant Variety's accolade: "The best sound coming out of radio in America today."

METROPOLITAN BROADCASTING TELEVISION: WNEW-TV New York City; KTTV Los Angeles; WTTG Washington, D.C.; KMBC-TV Kansas City, Mo.; KOVR Sacramento-Stockton, Calif.; WTVH Peoria, Illinois; WTVP Decatur, Illinois... FOSTER AND KLEISER OUTDOOR ADVERTISING: Offices in California, Washington and Oregon... METRO RADIO SALES, METRO TV SALES: National Sales Representatives... ICE CAPADES, INC.

Anyone who thinks WNEW RADIO deserves this tribute should be hanged!

Honestly, we're choked up with pride over this happy event. WNEW was our very first client, so how could we possibly keep our trap shut? Incidentally, to those outside of New York who would like to do business with WNEW, we have a swinging presentation.

REVOLUTIONARY!...STAGES BY Macton TURNTABLES

WNEW MADE SURE its tremendous line-up of talent would be presented smoothly and most effectively by using two Macton revolving stages at its "Thank You" Party at the Garden.

MACTON STAGES have been proved safe and dependable in a variety of public presentations everywhere. Standard models, engineered to handle any load, at any speed, and at any program of controls desired, are available for every type of use. Macton models start at 12 inch diameters, and go on up in size, to 12, 16, 20 and 38-foot diameters. We also engineer any custom installation desired. We're building one now a full 108 feet in diameter for the New York World's Fair—and we'll be installing others not quite so large at this 1964 spectacular.

IF IT TURNS, chances are it's a Macton. The 76-foot revolving stage at Jones' Beach Marine Stadium? It's a Macton. As seen on CBS and NBC Television? Mactons. The Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, Dallas Theatre Center, New York Coliseum, the Moscow Ford Motor Company Exhibit, the Washington Inaugural Ball? Mactons, to be sure.

PORTABLE RENTAL UNITS, safe, sure and silent, are available in standard sizes. We engineer them. We install them. We guarantee them. Recommendations and specifications supplied at no cost or obligation.

Unger-Marvin 'Lawbreakers' Series Revitalizes Syndie Programming

Philadelphia, July 16.

With a total of 70 key markets already sold and purchasers requesting first refusal rights for the 1964-65 season (a phenomenal sale in the lagging syndicated field), producer Maurice "Babe" Unger and actor Lee Marvin are justifiably upbeat about their factual, on-the-spot crime series "Lawbreaker."

Marvin and Unger were in town for the 11th segment of the half-hour shows. Local program recounts a crime that took place in February, 1962, when thugs invaded the Rhawnhurst home of a fire lieutenant, pistol-whipped his wife and kidnapped their 16-year-old daughter.

"Cases from police files are used exclusively in 'Lawbreaker,'" Marvin said. "Whenever possible the story is related by the participants —the criminals, the victims, the arresting officers. Actors are employed only in the absence of the principals."

The producer expressed "wonder" about the plenitude of stories. "Nothing we have gotten so far has been even close to what we have done. If somebody ever pulls that line about there are no new plots, I'm going to ask 'Are you positive?'"

Tieup always is made with station in town where "Lawbreaker" segment is shot. Films, incidentally, are in color. In Philadelphia, Acting Police Commissioner Howard R. Leary acted as liaison for the tv company. Initial arrangements for their visit were made by Roger W. Clipp, general manager of the Triagle Stations, whose WFIL-TV and entire chain of four other stations have bought the syndie.

Unger, who created the idea, said the show was sold as early as Sept. 1962 and that sales are already being made for 1964. "This is most unusual for the syndicated market, where it is difficult to come up with a new show," he added "We're two-and-a-half months from our first air date and already 100 stations have bought 'Lawbreaker.'" They use no presentation gimmicks, just roundtable talks and a beatup shipping case to carry the film. The first sale was made so easily in Pittsburgh, "we've never changed the formula. For a long while we didn't even change the neckties we wore that day," he admitted.

Unger believes the answer lies in "something new and fresh." Stations on all three webs have purchased "Lawbreaker" to run in prime time. "If you come up not only with an idea but the product, stations everywhere will react to the overall project."

A veteran producer in the syndie field, Unger believes the "Lawbreaker" format—the excitement

Barry Gray's 'My 7 Wks. in Rome'

Rome, July 16.

Under a back-breaking schedule topped with customs problems, WMCA nighttime interviewer Barry Gray has been taping and filing his show from here for the last few weeks.

No. 1 problem has been lining up talent to appear for the 9 a.m. taping sessions in Rome's RAI Studios, and Gray suggests several weeks advance leg work to anyone else planning a similar venture. During the seven-week stint (Gray returns to New York in August), tapes are being recorded from 9 to 11 a.m., then rushed by special courier to the Rome airport in time to meet a plane and be on the air in New York the same night.

WMCA is reportedly protesting a U. S. Customs charge on the Gray Rome tapes as "entertainment." Gray says this was first slapped on shipments when he sent in a set of specials on the coronation of Pope Paul VI. Other Gray segments from here have featured pickups from a Via Veneto cafe table, one from atop a horse and buggy on a conducted Rome tour, and typical recent day saw Federico Fellini, Gloria Swanson, Gore Vidal and Carlo Levi being interviewed.

'Science Fiction Theatre' Sold To 140 Markets

"Science Fiction Theatre" has been sold to 140 stations, according to Economee Television Programs, the rerun division of United Artists Television.

The "Science Fiction Theatre" anthology series of 78 episodes contains episodes dealing with "Unguided Missile," "The Other Side of the Moon," "Missing Wave Band" and "The Last Barrier," titles which no longer seem monikers of fiction yarns.

During the past three weeks, station deals have been made with WTOC, Savannah; KMID, Midland, Tex.; XETV, San Diego; KORG, Cedar Rapids; KHVH, Honolulu; and WFAA, Dallas.

Harold Essex On Encroachment By Govt.: 'It's War'

Myrtle Beach, S.C., July 16.

A warning that the free enterprise system of broadcasting is threatened in the FCC's proposal on limitations of commercial time was issued here by Harold Essex, prexy and general manager of WSJS radio-tv, Winston-Salem.

In his keynote address to the annual South Carolina Assn. of Broadcasters, Essex declared that the time had come to fight the increasing encroachment of government regulation in the broadcasting industry. He cited developments such as FCC killing option time, the battle in Congress over Section 315, and danger of editorializing facing equal time law.

Essex detailed his opposition to the proposed FCC commercial time limitations on broadcasters. He explained his position this way: "If a Federal agency were given power to determine the advertising requirements of every community in America and then relate these data to income requirements needed to support a broadcasting operation in the public interest as the notice of proposed rule suggests, it would give the Federal government a stranglehold over private business in every city, town and hamlet in this country."

Essex warned the South Carolina Broadcasters on the continued "creeping government takeover" and blamed the situation on the broadcasters themselves "Once the government is allowed to limit your commercial time it is only a step to the point where it will concern itself with rates and then with your programming. Your days as a free broadcaster will be over and you'll be a regulated public utility," he stated.

His program of action against the commercial time limitation proposal was for broadcasters to clean house themselves, to abide by the NAB code, to seek support from local civic groups and to contact legislators.

DEAN MILLER SET FOR 90-MIN. WLW-C SHOW

Columbus, July 16.

Dean Miller has been signed by WLW-C television as the star of the morning 90-minute "Dean Miller Show," replacing the "AM Show," July 29. Miller will move to Columbus with his family. The deal does not preclude Miller's accepting occasional film and other offers. "AM Show" regulars Jeanne Cummins, Stan Robinson and the Al Waslon quintet will be part of the show. Nancy Dawn will be the new featured femme vocalist. Edith Johnson is producer and Jim DeBold is director.

Miller is a native of Hamilton, O.

WABC-FM Goes Stereo

WABC-FM, N. Y., is going stereo, making it the first network owned station to adopt the multiplex system of transmission. Move to stereo will also give the FM outlet a completely different programming structure from that of the sister AM outlet, an idea which the FCC is now mulling as a mandatory regulation for FM-AM operators.

It's expected that ABC radio o&o's in other cities will also be swinging over to stereo shortly.

Group W Digs Those Seminars

The Westinghouse Broadcasting has uncovered a whole new source of educational and public service programming for radio: the college university seminar. Typical of the use of such meetings is a new Group W series titled "Focus on the Soviet Challenge," recorded earlier this year at the Seventh Annual Institute on U.S. Foreign Policy at Wisconsin U. in Milwaukee. The series has been turned into six half-hour shows.

Another group of half-hour shows on Latin America is currently being prepared by Jack Williams of Group W's KDKA, Pittsburgh, in association wtih Chatham College. Seminars at this school bring together such names as Tad Szulc, N.Y. Times correspondent; Andrew Heiskell, board chairman of Time Inc.; and Edward D. Eddy Jr., president of the college.

As many as 16 half-hours sometimes are culled from such seminars. "Man and Science," an educational series to be done at Rensselaerville, N.Y., Institute, will be produced by Bert Cowlan, WINS director of community projects. It will feature such names as Paul G. Hoffman, Brook Hays, and Norman Thomas.

Now in the process of being aired on the Group W stations is "The Challenge for Democracy," 19 programs produced in cooperation with the Fund for The Republic's Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions. This series includes names like Robert F. Kennedy, Adlai Stevenson, Newton Minow, Dr. Robert M. Hutchins and Lewis Mumford.

Dick Pack, v.p. over Group W programming, said that this technique enables broadcasters "to take our audiences into the universities to share with them the excitement generated by the thoughtful teachers of our times." He pointed out that these seminars are painstakingly put together by the schools over a long period of time and involve more staff work than any single radio station could normally commit.

$350,000 Suit Charges ABC-TV Show Ridiculed Supermarket 'Jet Pricer'

Columbus, July 16.

Suit for $350,000 has been filed in Franklin County Common Pleas Court against the Taft Broadcasting Co., Columbia Pictures Corp., Screen Gems Inc. and the American Broadcasting Co. on behalf of Boyd Specialty Inc. in suburban Whitehall. Suit claims that a tv drama broadcast via WTVN-TV Dec. 13, 1961, and rebroadcast July 4, 1962, "ridiculed, damaged and injured" a product called "Jet Pricer." The product is identified as a "self-contained index of all prices in supermarkets to facilitate commodity pricing."

Drama named is "Ooftus Gooftus" in which Mickey Rooney is shown breaking into a supermart at night to change prices on the goods on shelves.

Dick Clark Sales

Two-hour Dick Clark radio show has been bought by two more stations, KINT, El Paso, and CJCA, Edmonton, reports syndicator and producer Mars Broadcasting, Stamford, Conn.

Total markets now, says Robert Whitney, exec veepee of Mars, is 32, with four in Canada. Show features tailored promos, talent interviews and pop disk spins in a "live" atmosphere.

Deejay Makes Hay With Clay

Chicago, July 16.

Bruce Brown, a local deejay who stands 6'4" and weighs in at 260 pounds, has thrown down the gauntlet to heavyweight boxing contender Cassius Clay, and the fighter has accepted the challenge. But the WYNR listeners who turn up at the Woods Theatre tomorrow morning (Wed.) to witness the match won't see any blood spilled. The boys will be dueling each other in impromptu rhyme.

Brown, who fancies himself a heavyweight at doggerel, wired the challenge to Clay a few weeks back in this form:

If you're so great—here's your chance,
Jump on a plane—we'll pay.
But I'm afraid you're chicken, pal,
With a tongue that's made of clay.

The prizefighter accepted the price (WYNR won't reveal how much) and agreed to do the stunt from the stage of the Woods, from 8 to 11 ayem tomorrow. He replied to the deejay's wire thus:

After I annihilate Bruce
I will be sad
Because there'll be no one
To make me mad.

The McLendon stations, of which WYNR is one, have also engaged Clay for a series of reports from Las Vegas on the forthcoming Patterson-Liston fight. Clay will phone in four one-minute reports daily for a five-day period, including the last three days of training and the day following the fight. They'll be carried by all stations in the McLendon group.

McCarthy's Well-Stocked Briefcase On Common Needs Spurs Europe Trip

Geneva, July 16.

A market by market analysis of common industry problems being experienced in Europe is proving an effective tool in the current field trip of John G. McCarthy, prexy of the Television Program Export Assn. The market by market analysis was prepared by TPEA's membership prior to McCarthy's field trip.

McCarthy described the Far East as "developing satisfactorily" for American programs and the Latin American situation as "status quo." TPEA's prezy, however, maintained that expansion and rapidly changing conditions currently require "on the scene efforts in Europe for the protection and development of U. S. markets there."

Commented McCarthy: "With television in virtually all of the countries of the world except the U. S. more or less financed by government arrangements, I feel continuing contact with top government echelons is imperative in our industry."

McCarthy disclosed he also has been in conference with officials of the European Broadcasting Union. He hailed EBU's support in endorsing the tv amendment to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, which would provide for freer flow of tv programs around the world as "the culmination of months of effort."

TPEA prexy described the EBU endorsement which represents a reversal of the group's original position, as "one of the strongest and most influential recommendations for affirmative and imminent action by GATT." He said this fa-

45 Fremantle Properties Getting Aussie Airing

Fremantle International now has 45 film properties on the air in Australia. Fremantle, which distributes tv programs exclusively outside the U.S., reports that it has shows running in every one of Austraila's 32 stations.

First year of "Biography" is running in 10 markets and ATN, Sydney, and GTV, Melbourne have purchased the second year's production. In addition to the film shows, Fremantle is the producer there of the five-day-a-week "Romper Room" live telecast.

British ATV Sets Tint Puppet Series For U.S. Markets

London, July 16.

Production has now started on three 30-minute color pilots of "Stingray," a new puppet yarn being produced in the Supermarionation process by AP Films for Associated TeleVision. Tint pilots, which are being brought in for around $60,000 each, will be pitched to the American market by ITC, ATV's-owned subsidiary, in the fall. Depending on reaction of Yank and other prospective customers, ATV will okay a 26-segment skein, expected to cost in the region of $42,500 per episode.

Preparation of this new high cost series—its predecessors were "Supercar" and "Fireball XL5"—follows recent trips to the U.S. by AP Films topper Gerry Anderson, his wife, Sylvia, a co-director of AP Films and, later, by deputy managing director Reg Hill. Filmers discussed potential of the new skein with Yank executives and examined problems of U.S. color technique.

According to Anderson, who recently shifted into a new and specially designed studio, the "Stingray" series is the most expensive his company has yet undertaken. Given that customer reaction lives up to expectations, Anderson hopes to begin full scale production nearly next year.

Harmon's K.C. Shift

Kansas City, July 16.

Merle Harmon is moving over to KCMO to do play-by-play of the Kansas City Chiefs, new entry in the American Football League. Harmon has been with WDAF as sports director and playcaster since 1959, handling football, basketball and baseball at various times.

In addition to handling the pro football radio schedule, Harmon will work with Bruce Rice, KCMO's sports director on daily sportscasts on both radio and tv. Rice is slated to do the play-by-play on schedule of Big Eight college football games

WPSD-TV Protests Blackout on Grid

Washington, July 16.

WPSD-TV, Paducah, Ky., is battling the CBS-National Football League "home territory" blackout practices both on the FCC and Capitol Hill fronts.

At issue is how do you measure the 75 miles in which a blackout is permissable for pro games played on the home field.

CBS and NFL contend a station can be blacked out if any of its primary signal falls within 75 miles of the home game.

WPSD-TV argues that the 75 miles should occur between the location of the home game and the tower of a tv station.

Paducah is 135 miles from St. Louis, but its primary signal comes closer than 75 miles to the Missouri metropolis.

As a result, CBS won't feed WPSD-TV pro football games on Sundays when the St. Louis Cardinals are playing in St. Louis.

WPSD-TV has formally protested this to FCC. Also, Rep. Frank A. Stubblefield (D-Ky.) has introduced a bill in the House redefining the measurement of a tv blackout.

7 ARTS IN $21,500,000 U BUY

Those Prime Time TV Features

Even as the supply of Hollywood films to television is dwindling to a trickle, the tv exposure of available features is now hitting an alltime high. With NBC-TV feeding pix to its affiliates two nights of the week, features have now virtually arrived at the point of being shown in prime time every night of the week in all of the nation's key cities. If that's a nightmare for theatre exhibitors, they can derive some comfort from the fact that the supply of films won't permit the situation to become much worse.

The widespread exposure of features in prime time is underlined by a recent survey made by Seven Arts. It revealed that this company's product by itself is being telecast in the cream evening hours every night of the week in one or more key cities. Add to this survey the product of the other major tv film distributors, such as MCA, MGM-TV, 20th-Fox, UA, etc., and there will be few holes in the across-the-board, cross-country primetime exposure of films.

Seven Arts' sampling gave the following breakdown of stations carrying films in primetime slots:

Mondays: KTVU, San Francisco; WTIC-TV, Hartford; WNEM-TV, Saginaw-Bay City-Flint.

Tuesdays: WTVJ, Miami; WJAR-TV, Providence.

Wednesdays: KPHO-TV, Phoenix.

Thursdays: WBNS-TV, Columbus; WSYR-TV, Syracuse.

Fridays: KXTV, Sacramento; WTCN-TV, Minneapolis; WLAC-TV, Nashville; KSL-TV, Salt Lake City.

Saturdays: WLAC-TV, Nashville; KRDO-TV, Colorado Springs.

Sundays: WBKB, Chicago; KVII-TV, Amarillo, Tex.

Attachment of the local programmers to the film grind policy, in face of the rising prices for new picture packages, is cued by the feature's overall solid ratings and their occasional spectacular returns. If a top film is being shown, indie stations have no trouble killing the network competition.

7 Arts' Whopping $14,739,109 On Sale of Features, Other Product

Seven Arts Associated Corp. racked up $14,739,109 in sales of its feature film packages and other product to television during the fiscal year ending Jan. 31. Gross was up $2,539,991 from the previous year and represents about 75% of the company's total revenue for the year of $19,407,905. Earnings were $1,705,793, compared to $1,100,55 for the previous year.

Seven Arts, which is distributing 211 Warner Bros. and 20th-Century features, has been releasing the films in a series of packages. Through Jan. 31, the first volume of films, released in October, 1960, was sold in 131 markets; the second volume, released May, 1961, was sold in 106 markets; the third, released January, 1962, was sold in 88 markets; the fourth and fifth volumes, released last September, were sold in 53 and 51 markets respectively.

Seven Arts is also continuing distribution of 13 one-hour concerts featuring the Boston Symphony; the "Emmett Kelly Show," a series of 39 half-hour kiddie shows; "En France," a series of 26 half-hour French language entertainment-instruction films; "Mahalia Jackson Sings," a series of 82 five-minute shows; and "Laffs," a series of 65 one-minute comedy sketches.

$5,000,000 Sales For 4 Star Distrib

Four Star Distribution reports sales of $5,000,000 as the syndication firm nears the close of its first fiscal year.

FSD started operation in September, 1962, with Thomas J. McDermott, prexy of Four Star Television, and George A. Elber, exec veepee of FST, naming Len Firestone veepee and general manager of the New York subsidiary.

Company put five off-web series into syndication: "Detectives;" "Zane Grey Theater;" "Target: The Corruptors;" "Law & Mr. Jones;" and "Stagecoach West."

In April of this year, three more off-web shows were put up for sale: "Dick Powell Theatre;" "Rifleman;" and "The Tom Ewell Show."

Says Firestone, "We plan, in the future, to offer new series of the same quality and may also come up with a few surprises."

Unmasking the 'Ranger'

After all these years, Telesynd thinks maybe its time to meet the masked rider.

Syndicator is offering an hour special "Lone Ranger" show, depicting how the hero got the title, why he donned a mask, how he met Tonto, his Indian aide, and how he acquired Silver, his trusty mount. Special is being offered not only to stations carrying the series but others as well.

TV Scripters Now Cut in On Foreign Take

Hollywood, July 16.

For first time in history of Writers Guild of America, tv scripters are receiving coin from the showing overseas of telefilms they have written. Vidscripters thus far have received about $30,000 for foreign exhibition of their stories, figure repping about $750,000 in Foreign Sales' by U.S. distribution companies, it was disclosed by Michael Franklin, exec director of WGA West.

Under the so-called "Wasserman Plan," devised by MCA prexy Lew Wasserman, new royalty concept gives writers 4% of the gross of a telefilm in prepetuity, that cut including foreign and domestic. It was a historic precedent in that it marked the first time in tv a writer has ever had been cut in on the foreign take, and it was the plan which more than anything else resolved the writers' strike of 1960, a bitter dispute principally on the issue of writers being cut in on the foreign pie in tv.

Under terms of 1960 settlement, production companies were to notify WGAW last spring if they wanted to shift from the residuals payment format to the royalty concept, those not wanting a change now being permitted to put that off until the 1964-65 season. A majority of the vidfilmeries, including the major studios, told WGAW they wanted an immediate switch to the royalty concept.

Coin writers have received thus far is for episodes produced for the 1962-63 season. Payments, to be made on a quarterly basis, are for foreign distribution coin received by companies up to last March 31. Coin received since then will be repped in payments, due in September.

WGAW hasn't yet received payments on a number of series going

10-YEAR DEAL ON 215 POST-'48S

Universal's post-'48 library of 215 pix went to Seven Arts Associated, under a 10-year tv leasing deal, for $21,500,000, plus a profit participation after certain conditions are met.

The deal, which has been in negotiation for some time, calls for leasing to "free" tv in the U. S., Canada, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. According to the joint announcement by Universal Pictures prexy Milton R. Rackmil and Seven Arts Associated topper Eliot Hyman, all of the 215 pix were released prior to 1957.

Universal post-'48 deal leaves only the Paramount post-'48 library still untapped for tv. All of the other major studios have leased part or all of their post-'48 libraries to tv.

Of the 215 Universal pix, 109 are in color.

The Universal-Seven Arts deal came in the wake of the consent decree which last September allowed Music Corp. of America to merge with and become boss of Decca Records and Universal Pictures. One of the stipulations in the consent decree involved the selloff to tv of Universal features. This ruling, that U put its post-'48 features up for distribution by June, 1963, has resulted in the block of 215 post-'48 features being priced "no lower than $21,500,000" plus a percentage of no more than 50% of the gross.

Reason for the stated bottom price is that the decree had stipulated that, at the time of its making the post-'48s available, Universal was to reveal an "upset price" or minimum. It was also stated that neither MCA nor Universal could become the distributor at this time. However, the decree said, if U gets no offer by Oct. 1, 1963, from a distributor then the company can do whatever it wants with the pix, except offer them to MCA.

MCA, prior to its merger with U, handled the distribution to tv of the Paramount pre-'48 library. Universal's pre-'48 library had been leased to tv via Screen Gems.

As for the Paramount library (see separate story) the company last week "walked away" from a $25,000,000 offer by Independent Television Corp. (the British Associated Television wholly-owned subsidiary).

In a separate deal, wheeling and dealing Seven Arts Associated acquired 228 additional 20th-Fox pix, including 103 post-'48's for worldwide tv and theatrical distribution. Previously, in 1961, Seven Arts acquired 109 post-'50 features from 20th-Fox for worldwide tv and theatrical distribution.

Among the 20th-Fox pix are such titles as "Bus Stop," starring Marilyn Monroe, "Mr. Belvedere Goes to College." "The Thirteenth Letter" and "Pick Up on South Street."

'LASSIE' 5-PARTNER AS 20TH FEATURE

Twentieth-Fox will distribute "Lassie's Great Adventure," the first feature-length "Lassie" theatrical release in more than 12 years. The film is a compilation of the five-parter seen on tv last season. Feature, to be presented in color, also includes footage not seen on tv.

Prior to '51, seven "Lassie" features were made. "Lassie" tv series starts its 10th year on CBS-TV this fall. Deal with 20th-Fox was made with Wrather Corp., producer of "Lassie."

Growing Acceptance Overseas Of 90-Min. U.S. Telefilm Series As Theatricals; MCA in Vanguard

Hollywood, July 16.

An entirely new market for Holywood's 90-min. telefilms is developing in the form of theatrical release overseas, of such vidpix. Such distribution enables the production company to recoup coin spent in production of the longies, as well as supplementing the theatrical programming in foreign markets.

Universal Pictures, for example, has released a "The Virginian" segment, "The Brazen Bell," starring Lee J. Cobb and George C. Scott, globally as a 90-min. color theatrical film. In addition, another "Virginian seg is being released as a theatrical feature in England July 30, and U is planning similar release of two more segments of "Virginian," produced by Revue, which like Universal, is an MCA subsidiary.

Disclosure of the new potential for the longie vidfilms was made by Berle Adams, MCA-TV veepee who has just returned from a two-months junket to Europe and the Middle East.

Adams said Europeans were "quite excited" at the concept of 90-min. and two-hour telefilms, feeling the elongation of vidfilms represented real progress in tv. What further whets the European appetite for the longies is that over there they are shown sans commercials.

The MCA-TV exec expressed surprise that at this early stage considerable interest was also evinced abroad in the two-hour vidfilm series Revue will produce in 1964-65 for NBC-TV. Many of the two-hour telepix undoubtedly will be released abroad as theatrical films, while others will be funneled to tv overseas, he indicated.

Adams said "The Virginian" has been so successful in its theatrical release abroad that MCA-TV is currently studying the advisability of releasing some of the new, 90-min. "Wagon Train" episodes abroad theatrically. Only "WT" segs seen in Europe thus far have been on TV and are those which starred the late Ward Bond and Robert Horton, who has exited the series. Segs starring John McIntyre (and Robert Fuller who has just joined the series) haven't been released overseas. In addition, the 90-min. "WT" shows are in color and have name guest stars, other factors which may prompt distribution of these for theaters abroad, rather than on tv, Adams said.

The exec said he found a number of developments occurred while he was abroad, probably the most interesting being the new "avant garde" move in tv in London, Paris,

Polovision

Milwaukee, July 16.

If anybody's keeping tabs, add to the long list of "firsts" in television WTMJ - TV's "Short Course in Polo," which will span five weeks on Sunday mornings as a feature of the "Sports Club" program.

Milwaukee station has televised occasional polo matches over the years but believes the new entry to be the first instrumental series on that sport to be offered on tv in this country.

ATV Withdraws $30,000,000 Bid For Par Post-48s

Hollywood, July 16.

Effort by Associated Television to NAB Paramount's post-1948 backlog of 200 films by upping its own bid from $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 has been nixed by Par.

Previously, ATV offered $125,000 per pic for backlog, when this offer wasn't acted on by Par, figure was hiked to $150,000 over weekend in offer to veepee Paul Raibourn by Mike Nidorf, prexy-chairman of ITC, subsid of ATV.

Nidorf, currently vacationing in Languna Beach, said ATV two months ago made the offer in writing to Par, expressing its willingness to pay $125,000 per picture—believed to be the highest bid ever made for pix to tv. It would have been a lease deal, with Par sharing in the profits, Nidorf explained. "They did not act on the offer, so we withdrew it," he added.

ATV previously had made a bid for the Universal backlog of post-1948 pix, but withdrew from that situation in favor of Par because Universal is restricting it to a seven-year deal, and it involves only U.S. and Canadian distribution, not global. ATV would have had global distribution under terms of the offer made to Par.

Major Promotion Set For Yankee Net's 35th Anni; A Quintuple Fact File

Boston, July 16.

Yankee net, RKO General's chain of 30 radio stations in Yankeeland, is set to beat the drums in the next few weeks for its 35th anni.

For the 30 stations in the six New England states, 1,200 of the country's leading ad execs and time buyers will receive, in five separate mailings, a colorful red, white and blue "Yankee Fact File" folder in which to keep all the facts on the Yankee net on the way to them now.

The quintuple mailings include a letter from prexy William M. McCormick, with the file folder, station map, and five fact sheets.

Purpose of the special fact-filled kit from Yankee, billed as first and largest regional radio net in America, is to acquaint media people expecially in other parts of the country with Yankee's solid rep in the N. E. market, McCormick said.

It's the first time in several years that any such extensive promosh has been done on this scale and is the brainchild of Alvin C. Korn, advertising and promotion director, and his department.

WABC-TV, meantime, has set a half-hour documentary on the late Babe Ruth, titled "Behind The Legend." It'll be telecast Aug. 15 at 8:30 p.m. Howard Cosell is producer-narrator and Roger Kahn, sports editor of the Saturday Evening Post, is writer.

HALLMARK HALL OF FAME

"THE TEMPEST" WITH RICHARD BURTON, LEE REMICK

Non-Weekly but Strong

As any student of both television and the calendar knows, some of the medium's best shows don't come on the air every seven days.

Here at NBC-TV we call these programs entertainment specials—and our arsenal of such shows for the approaching season is quite impressive.

There's "Hallmark of Fame," for which producer-director George Schaefer is planning to do six 90-minute plays (including a repeat of Shakespeare's "The Tempest").

One of "Hallmark's" TV-firsts will star Charlton Heston in a production of "The Patriots," Sidney Kingsley's absorbing stage play about the struggles of America's new democracy at the close of the 18th century. Also scheduled is Robert E. Sherwood's Pulitzer Prize drama, "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," and a December musical presentation of Handel's "Messiah." ("The Tempest," seen on "Hallmark" three years ago, stars Maurice Evans, Richard Burton and Lee Remick.)

From the world of music and the dance comes "Bell Telephone Hour" (see photos, above, of past

"Bell" and "Hallmark" shows), whose expanded schedule calls for alternate-Tuesday programs right through next summer. Among the forthcoming "Bell" headliners: Maurice Chevalier, Yehudi Menuhin and Joan Sutherland.

Starring in other musical specials will be singers Perry Como and Andy Williams. There'll be seven broadcasts of "Perry Como's Kraft Music Hall" (in the same time spot as Thursday's "Kraft Suspense Theatre"); and a dozen Tuesday sessions of "The Andy Williams Show."

The eight Friday-night editions of "Chrysler Presents a Bob Hope Special" will embrace five variety shows, a pair of comedy-dramas and a 90-minute Christmas program. (The star will also be seen as host of 26 color-filmed dramas on "Bob Hope Presents the Chrysler Theatre.")

Obviously, it's a powerful assortment of specials awaiting NBC-TV viewers next season. Just as strong is our entire lineup, which boasts the returning "International Showtime" and "The Eleventh Hour" as well as newcomers like "Espionage" and "Harry's Girls." All signs point to a great year.

TV Station Profits for 1962 Up 16.9%; Represents Alltime Peak

Washington, July 16.

Television profits soared to an alltime peak of 16.9% before federal taxes in 1962, according to the National Assn. of Broadcasters' annual financial survey, which was released Saturday (13).

Radio also bounced back after both media had gone through an off-year in 1961. "A typical, or median," radio station earned 7.7% profit before federal taxes in 1962, compared to 4.8% in 1961, NAB said.

The 16.9% profit of "a typical, or median" tv station is the highest ever reported by NAB and compares to a 12.6% profit margin for the "typical" station in 1961.

Radio and television stations both dipped 2.8% in 1961 when measured against 1960 figures.

James H. Hulbert, manager of NAB's Broadcast Management Department, said the survey is based on information obtained from questionnaires sent to commercial radio and tv licensees.

Total annual revenue for the "typical" tv station was over $1,000,000, an 8% jump over 1961. Except for the smallest market size, NAB said, typical stations located in all other markets showed a sizcable increase in profits.

Total annual revenue for the "typical" radio station was about $111,000, a 4.7% increase over 1961. Small market radio registered higher profits, while stations in larger markets showed a dip in profits, NAB said.

RAI-TV's Lagoon Pix

Rome, July 16.

Eleven features previously seen at various Venice Film Festivals will be featured in a series of weekly RAI-TV programs dedicated to the lagoon event and lasting through September. Similar series was very successful last summer in helping to spotlight the Venice gathering and its lasting values.

Pix chosen for this year's skein are: "Paisan," "Difficult Years," "Friends for Life," "David Copperfield," "Portrait of Dorian Gray," "Der Prozess," "Kind Hearts and Coronets," "Portrait of Jennie," "Christ in Concrete," "Seven Samurai," and "Aparajito."

Each pic will get its video net intro via a w.k. Italian showbiz personality. Series is arranged by pic critic Gian Luigi Rondi.

Burr, Ellington's 90-Min. TV Spec

Ottawa, July 16.

Raymond Burr, tv's Canadian-born "Perry Mason," has a totally unrelated project in hand and another in mind.

He's working on a 90-minuted tv spec with Duke Ellington "on past, present and future music." He also plans to hire a composer to write symphonic music for Shakespeare's sonnets, for a show presenting the music played by an orch and the sonnets recited by Burr. Ellington composed "Sweet Thunder" for a Shakespeare play at Stratford, Ont., Festival a few years ago.) He's had plenty stage experience, including Shakespeare..

Burr plans to tour that show within the next five years and would be interested in presenting it at one of the Stratfords. (He and Arlene Francis are big strawhat draws here.)

"Perry Mason" is now seen in 40 countries, Burr said. He considers the role, incidentally, "an exercise in acting. If you looked at the Perry Mason of six years ago I think you would find it old-fashioned."

'No Wilful Violation' WHAS-TV Appeals Fine

Louisville, July 16.

WHAS-TV has asked the FCC to set aside a $1,000 penalty for the station's alleged failure to fully identify the backers of a political telecast critical of former Gov. A. B. Chandler, who was defeated in a Democratic primary by Ned Breathitt.

Victor A. Sholis, v-p and director of WHAS, Inc. has made a formal reply to the FCC, saying the station had complied fully with the "spirit and intent" of the agency's sponsor-identification rules.

The FCC ruled May 22 that WHAS tentatively was liable for the forfeiture because of a half-hour program carried by the station April 29. FCC said the sponsor of "The Chandler Years in Review" a review of what Chandler had done and had not done for the State, was announced only as the "Committee for Good Government." The station should have made clear that the committee was acting on behalf of Chandler's primary opponent, Edward T. Breathitt, the FCC held.

Sholis denies any wilful violation.

Brit. Govt. Likes Coverage Plans For BBC's No. 2

London, July 16.

Official approval for the spread of BBC's second video network has been given by the Government. In addition to the London-based transmitter which will beam BBC II as from next April, the Postmaster-General, Reginald Bevins, has okayed the setting up of 17 UHF transmitters up and down the country.

Eight of the transmitters, serving Lancashire, south Yorkshire, central Scotland, south Wales the Isle of Wight, north-east England, Northern Ireland and the Midlands, will beam the Corp's second outlet by the end of 1965. The remaining nine transmitters it is hoped, will become operational sometime in 1966 bringing the 625-line web to the Bristol area, Norfolk, Angelsey, northeast Scotland, southeast Kent, Nottinghamshire, Suffolk, north Yorkshire and Northamptonshire.

First 12 stations, when in operation, will bring BBC II approximately 66% of the UK population and when the remaining five become live, some 75% Britons will be able to tune into it.

The Government has also moved to strengthen existing coverage by both BBC and independent webs by authorization of further 405-line, JHF transmitter stations. BBC is to build five new 405-line stations serving northeast Wales, southwest Scotland, east Lincolnshire, mid-Lancashire and southwest Lancashire.

The transmitter in northeast Yales will complete BBC's Welsh network which is to provide "distinctively Welsh programs" as opposed to national network fare.

ITA has been authorized to six new 405-line masts — in central Berkshire, Bedford-Peterborough, east Lincolnshire, Scarborough, Dundee and Caithness-Orkney — which, it is estimated, will increase the commercial network's viewership by about 1,000,000 and will hike coverage to 98% of the population.

ITA states that all its new transmitter stations will be on the air in 1964 or early '65.

Brit. Indies 59% And; BBC's 41%

London, July 16.

The commercial network is once again piling up a convincing lead over BBC, according to percentage of audience figures compiled by Television Audience Measurement Ltd. Research organization estimates that for the four weeks ended June 30, the indies grabbed off 59% of dual-channel viewers while BBC's percentage shrank to 41%.

Over the three months period April to June this year, TAM calculates that the commercial web took 61% of the dual-channel audience, an increase of 4% over the previous three months.

Visnews Parlayed Into a Worldwide Newsfilm Complex

London, July 16.

What was started six years ago as "an act of faith of high order" by Sir Ian Jacob, then director general of BBC, and John Davis, now chairman of the Rank Organization, had developed into a worldwide newsfilm coverage which was picked up by over 50 tv outlets in more than 40 countries. So said Kenneth Winckles, managing director of the British Commonwealth Newsfilm Agency, when presiding at a Dorchester luncheon last Friday (5) the first public function ever staged by BCINA since its formation in 1957.

The agency, now know throughout the world as Visnews, is owned as a non-profit-making trust by the BBC, the Rank Organization, the Australian Broadcasting Commission, Canadian Broadcasting Corp and today has worldwide links extending to Peking, Africa, the Soviet Union and, of course, the United States.

Lord Radcliffe, the eminent jurist who recently headed the Vassal spy tribunal, and who is the independent chairman of the BCINA's board of trustees, was the principal speaker at the luncheon and underscored the fact that the agency was providing an impartial service of hard news. He believed we were living in an era in which there was a paucity of news and a surfeit of comment, in which there was a greater tendency to report that "it was believed in well-informed circles" rather than "I think." Yet, even within that framework BCINA had succeeded in earning a "decent surplus" which had been ploughed back into the development of the business.

Lord Radcliffe suggested that what had been started off as an amenity had now become a necessity. The BCINA service was picked up by NBC and they were the major suppliers of newsfilms to Africa. Their London laboratories worked seven days a week, 24 hours a day, and they had distribution services in London, Singapore and New York. "Give or take a few viewers" there were over 115,000,000 people regularly receiving the Visnews service.

Among the guests at the luncheon were Lord Rank, president of the Rank Organization and John Davis, its chairman, Hugh Carleton Green and Ronald Waldman of the BBC, Geoffrey Cox of Independent Television News, members of Parliament and reps of the European and Dominion countries who regularly take the Visnews service. VARIETY was the only paper invited to the function.

Cullen Sponsor Conflict Cues His 'Tonight' Exit

Sponsor conflict between Hotpoint and Frigidaire cooled Bill Cullen's scheduled hosting for vacationing Johnny Carson on "Tonight" the last week of July.

Instead of Cullen, who regularly emcees NBC-TV daytime and nighttime "Price Is Right," Arlene Francis, regular panelist on CBS-TV's "What's My Line" will take over for Carson. Second week of latter's vacation, covering Aug. 5 to 9 "Tonight" strip, will be hosted by Allan Sherman.

Hotpoint participates in "Tonight," Frigidaire is a bankroller of the daily "Price."

ANTHONY NEWLEY
(A Do-It Yourself Film Profile)
Producer: Richard Evans
30 Mins., Mon., 10:15 p.m.
BBC-TV, from London

Before Anthony Newley took off for Broadway with "Stop the World," he recorded this half-hour survey of his movie career, and it was shown to coincide with the national release of "The Small World of Sammy Lee." Newley nonchalantly linked film clips illustrating his development from child performer to adult idol, and his informality was neatly matched by Richard Evans's production, which allowed him to saunter from camera to camera, buttonholing viewers in anecdotal style.

Excerpts were astutely chosen, kicking off with a snatch of Newley's Artful Dodger in the memorable "Oliver Twist" and his other adolescent success with Peter Ustinov in "Vice Versa," which indicated his early comic resource. The transition to long-pants parts was financially painful and tough, Newley indicated, and his new career was born with Jose Ferrer's "Cockleshell Heroes," where his busy ebullience led to a contract from Warwick Films. Although Newley was reported as restive under this deal, he kept quiet about it—and this was the only part of the show in which an interviewer might have probed below the surface.

It was "Idle on Parade" that launched Newley on the disk charts, and his bustling portrayal of an agent in the otherwise unhappy Frankie Vaughan movie, "Heart of a Man," which re-established his acting reputation. The program closed with a "Sammy Lee" clip that tantalized.

In fact, it was a genial essay in autobiography, and, although Newley gave little away about his interior thoughts, he displayed a deft knack for winning friends.

IT'S YOUNG AGAIN
With Alan Young, the Avons, Libby Morris, Alexander Dore, Robin Ford, Peter Glaze, Wendy Richard, Alyn Ainsworth Orch
Director: Milo Lewis
30 Mins., Thurs., 7:30 p.m.
Granada TV, from Manchester

Summer vaude shows tend to be directed at those stricken with sunstroke, and show a general lack of ambition. "It's Young Again" made a more sprightly and alert impression than most, and the disarming Alan Young pleased with his mixture of diffidence and extravagance. His forte is for modest incompetence, and it was well displayed in the two sketches that made up the bulk of the show.

In one, he was an anxious father, awaiting the return of his daughter from her first date. He extracted genial fun from his exaggerated concern, showing a light at the window for the gal's return and suspecting the worst before it had happened. He was nimbly aided by the volatile Libby Morris. His second item had him sharing a hotel room with a lordly member of the British Government, and this led to some pleasant farcical capers, such as inadvertently breaking the guy's glasses and replacing them with binocular lenses. Young was neatly casual throughout, and would have been helped by some pruning of his material.

Vocal interpolations in a folksy idiom were agreeably provided by the Avons, who had bounce and effectively contrasted with the comic mood. Alyn Ainsworth's orch smoothly backed, and Milo Lewis directed safely. Alan Young was most effective when partnered with a more thrusting performer, as he reacts to situations rather than creating them. Given this access of energy, the skein would even be acceptable in the fall. Otta.

NO HIDING PLACE
(Four Faces of Clare)
With Raymond Francis, Eric Lander, Barry Raymond, Robert MacLeod, Joanne Dainton, Ian Curry, David Conville, Peter Barkworth, Ray Mort, Dan Jackson, Meg Ritchie, Peter Hughes
Producer: Jonathan Goodman
Director: Ian Fordyce
Writer: Roger Marshall
60 Mins., Tues., 8 p.m.
Associated-Rediffusion, from London

Returning to the schedules with its format unimpaired, this popular sleuth skein was strictly routine, hampered, in the stanza caught, by a script that was riddled with non sequiturs, loose ends, and irrelevancies. The clue-tracking pair of Lockhart (Raymond Francis) and Baxter (Eric Lander) were mechanically proficient, and little attempt was made to give them a third dimension. Baxter, indeed, had little part to play in the plot, and seemed merely present so that Lockhart could have someone to talk to.

Tale concerned the murder of Clare Warren, first espied as the cool and wise girlfriend of an upcoming executive. The gal had a secret life, concealed from her ambitious boyfriend, in which she mixed with hipsters, hornblowers, and the like and was generally considered to be a mighty wild cat. First problem, thus, then which was the real Clare, but this was inexplicably dropped in the ensuing hunt, which led the sleuths to investigate a ship's crew, from a distinctly improbable clue.

Clare had another boy-friend among the stewards, and she had sent him packing before her demise. But he didn't kill her. It was a guy who had tried to make her, to prove that Clare wasn't the upright virgin she claimed to be. Clare had died of shock, and that seemed logical.

Compared with earlier shows, there seemed to be a falling-away in thesp calibre, much support being crude. But Roger Marshall's script gave little sustenance, and Ian Fordyce's direction was grimly competent, doing little to lighten the absurdities of, say, the hip-talk from the beat belt. Otta.

THE BOB MONKHOUSE HOUR
With Bob Monkhouse, Diana Dors, Shani Wallis, Mark Wynter, Sheree Winton, Tony Hawes, Royston Tickner, Irving Davies Dancers
Producer: Francis Essex
60 mins., Sun., 8:25 pm
Associated TeleVision, from London

Return of comedian Bob Monkhouse to tv after some months rest from the screen was probably the best thing that has happened to ATV in the comedy field since they gave Morecambe & Wise their own show. In this spec, second in a series of oneshot vaude outings replacing the "Palladium" during the summer, Monkhouse came across with a socko romparound that made for an hour of highly amusing tv.

He not only aisle-rolled his studio audience with some original yock material, scripted by vets Sid Green and Dick Hills with additional material by Monkhouse and Denis Goodwin, but, what's probably more important, he seems to have adjusted and refined his on-screen personality into that of a warmer, more human and certainly more loveable comic. The change, if it was not a flash in the pan, has put Monkhouse into a new class of comedian where he can be compared with, say, a Red Skelton.

He was particularly funny in a mime sketch where, as a young beat performer, he answered interviewer's questions by miming current local hits. He was also standout in a sympathy-raising scene involving a shy boy meets shy girl (Shani Wallis) routine. His timing was good, his delivery slick in a show that was a real triumph for this performer.

Monkhouse was ably backed by Diana Dors, who, of late, has been appearing more on tv as a songstress. Here she sang and played a sketch with Monkhouse. And the assorted talents Shani Wallis, Sheree Winton, Tony Hawes, Royston Tickner and Mark Wynter, who sang, youthfully and pleasantly a selection of old time hits were deftly employed by Producer Francis Essex.

An above par variety show, which owed a lot to Monkhouse. Watt.

REPORT FROM TOKYO
With John Rich, narrator
Producer-Director: Fred Rheinstein
30 Mins., Tues., 10:30 p.m.
Participating
NBC-TV, from N.Y. (film)

Problems and interests concerning residents of 11 major cities of the world are the basis of a new weekly NBC News tv series which preemed on Tuesday (9). The filmed programs replace "Chet Huntley Reporting."

While closeups of contemporary life in these cities would appear to provide a wide area for analysis, the kickoff installment hardly scratched the surface. Labeled "Report from Tokyo," this episode studied what was described as Japan's "troubled youth" and that nation's feverish preparation for the '64 Olympics.

Narrator John Rich posed as a tourist to check on how the Tokyo police will cope with the hordes of anticipated visitors to the games. The mayor of Tokyo also stressed the importance of the event to Japan.

But with the games a year away, the average viewer probably couldn't steam up much enthusiasm for these scenes. A better picture of Nipponese life was supplied by sequences depicting a busy family whose business enterprises ranged from a bath house to a gas station, among other things.

The family footage along with an interview of a male college student, served to point up the changed philosophy of postwar Japan from a militaristic nation steeped in tradition to a westernized people whose youth have become acutely materialistic.

Although NBC avowedly is striving more for mood in its new series, the phenomenon of Japan's changing youth could have been brought home much more forcefully by resorting to the old "March of Time" documentary technique.

Perhaps future "Reports" from Paris, London, etc. will be more penetrating. Gilb.

BEECHMONT OPEN
With Arnold Palmer, Tony Lema, Tommy Aaron guests, Jim Simpson, Jim McCarthur, Bud Palmer, Jimmy Demarest
Producers-Directors: Clay Dopp, Jack Simon
60 Mins., Monday 5 p.m.
CARLINGS, WINSTON
WEWS-TV and Sports Network, Cleveland
(Lang Fisher & Stashower, Esty)

The $110,000 Beechmont Country Club was as much an air classic and success as the tournament itself with its cliff-hanger triple-tie and Monday playoff. Considering the problems involved, nothing but kudos are in line for the group involved ranging from Paul C. Warren of the Howard Marks agency who served as overall chairman through the diligent efforts of the Sports Network 10-camera crew expertly handled by Clay Dopp and Jack Simon.

Although this review covers only the Monday afternoon playoff, the entire weekend coverage was stand out as a tv sports performance with camera and mike handling, particularly by Jim McCarthur at the 15 and 17th holes; Jim Simpson at 16 and anchorman Bud Palmer and Jimmy Demarest, doing the color, at number 18. Interviews with the winners at the end were short, effective and well done.

Carlings sponsored at least half the commercials with Winston about a quarter and local sponsors the rest. Network offerings to 150 markets were timely and effectively well done; the Carlings suds approach having been taped at Beechmont in advance to blend deftly with the atmosphere. In the regional spread, Ohio Bell Telephone picked up the tab with neatness and effectiveness.

Impact of television coverage was reflected, too, by the surge in attendance the final day of regular play, and the interest evidenced by sponsors for next year's offering. For golf fans and television, it all added up to welcome news. Mark.

ABC NEWS REPORTS
(White House West Wing)
With William H. Lawrence, Theodore Sorensen, McGeorge Bundy, Lawrence F. Obrien, P. Kenneth O'Donnell, Pierre Salinger
Producer: Lawrence Beckerman
Director: Richard Armstrong
30 Mins., Sun., 10:30 p.m.
ABC-TV

To launch "ABC News Reports," replacement for the Howard K. Smith show, ABC-TV White House newsman William H. Lawrence offered interview sketches of five of President Kennedy's closest advisors from their White House offices.

Virtually all of the candidates was in the camera closeups of Theodore Sorensen, special counsel and speech writer; McGeorge Bundy, special assistant and foreign policy advisor; Lawrence F. O'Brien, special assistant and Congressional liaison; P. Kenneth O'Donnell, special assistant and appointments secretary; and Pierre Salinger, Presidential press secretary. But while the interviews were too brief to give viewers much insight into the men and their work, the show did manage to leave a marked impression of the youth and dedication of the new breed.

With the exception of Salinger, who by the nature of his job and background would be more at ease with the press, the aides seemed mostly formal and cautious in their answers. O'Brien too, was at least facile in his answers, if given to Madison Ave. cliches, which no doubt derive from his long experience with political semantics.

'ABC New Reports" will continue through the summer with original features and reruns of last season's Bell & Howell "Close-Up!" but may get a new title and format come fall. Bill.

DIALOGUE: WITH AN AUTHOR
With Paul Shields, Maggie Davis
Director: Rushton
Producers: Frank Rushton, Shields
15 Mins., Sun. 11:15 p.m.
WAGA-TV, Atlanta

As a rule Paul Shields is forced to wait until some personality or big wheel blows into town to get the grist for his "Dialogue" series mill. This show came easy, however, since chatty Maggie Davis, author of "The Far Side of Home," is not only a professional writer, but also works in WAGA-TV's promotion department as chief aide to promotion director Ned Jay.

This segment of "Dialogue" thus turned out to be a WAGA-TV family affair . . . and a good one.

Mrs. Davis (she has four sons), with some slight prodding from quizzer Shields, admitted that her book had caused quite a bit of eyebrow-lifting and controversy in her presentation of what some have chosen to describe as "the other side of 'Gone With the Wind'."

Storyline of her book is a revealing, unusual conception of South's part in the War Between the States, dealing with the adventures of a young middle class private in and around Atlanta in the summer of 1864.

Answering a query by Shields, Mrs. Davis clarified:

"I had no intention of presenting the South in its usual role of either highly mythical, romanticized fiction or the current sick, sick, sick attitude.

"I dealt with sex, for instance, as it was, and as the soldiers saw it and dealt with it. If the book doesn't fall into any of the expected categories, it is because I wanted to write about Southerners who were vital, passionate people. To me, the fiction writer of today has lost a certain rapport with the reader because a lot of current heroes (if you can call them that) are whining, weakened, diffused beings who really don't hold your interest."

Mrs. Davis defended the sexy stuff in her book by telling Shields:

"After all we (she's a Virginian) did have sex in the South or you and I wouldn't be here."

By the time the interesting interview was over, Mrs. Davis, who, as do most femmes, likes to talk, gave a rather complete review of her book.

"My (hero) and people like him relate directly to the South of today, not the plantation owners . . . Let's face it, the vast majority of the South's population at the time of the 1861-65 conflict (some 92%) didn't own slaves and didn't live in white pillared mansions.

TOWN MEETING OF THE WORLD
With Walter Cronkite, moderator; Dwight D. Eisenhower, Anthony Eden, Jean Monnet, Heinrich von Brentano, others
Exec Producer: Fred W. Friendly
Producer: Arthur D. Morse
Directors: Av Westin, Vern Diamond
65 Mins.; Wed. 12:20 p.m. (repeat) 7:30 p.m.
CBS-TV, from N.Y., Denver, London, Brussels, Bonn

New, exciting possibilities in world communications were opened up by "Town Meeting of the World," telecast on this side of the Atlantic last Wednesday (10) by CBS-TV.

Telecast marked the first anni of the orbiting of Telstar 1, an event which led to Telstar II, which, in turn, made it technically possible for Wednesday's "Town Meeting" and other global interchanges of men and ideas, to be seen and heard simultaneously throughout the world.

The idea of the hour was simple and the town meeting idea was first broached by CBS prexy's Dr. Frank Stanton to the European Broadcasting Union. Happily, it was a case of a simple idea proving exciting. It was a pity that France, of all countries with her rich heritage of enlightenment, acted with pettiness and narrowness, in barring her ground station from use in the broadcast. Withdrawal of France's Fleumeur Bodou ground station, prevented European countries from seeing the broadcast live, as it was seen in the U.S.

The excitement in the program began in seeing Walter Cronkite question leading public figures. He was in N. Y.; Eisenhower was in Denver; former British Prime Minister Anthony Eden, in London; Jean Monnet, in Brussels; and Heinrich von Brentano, in Bonn. There were audiences, too, in the act, and their questions came into play later.

It wasn't simply a matter of technical razzle-dazzle. The fascination lay in the public exchange of ideas, irrespective of borders, the exchange of ideas coming not only from leading public figures, but from studio audiences in Denver and London. Why not have audiences in other spots such as Moscow, Peking, Bangkok, Zurich, in the next outing? Let leading public figures of the world—not only of the West—come forth and join "The Town Meeting of the World." Television, as a medium, can reach heights hardly explored today, in enrichment and enlightenment of the public and its leaders.

Action of France perhaps exemplifies why a broader forum may not be possible, if narrow principles are followed. France didn't want to participate because the nature of the telecast was "political and controversial." The French Government was sore because Monnet, "father of the European Common Market" differed with De Gaulle on the role of England and the U.S. in the Common Market. France is understood to have suggested instead of a world forum on public issues of the West, an anni telecast to be limited to the scientific aspects of satellite communications. That's like making a suggestion on how to lose audiences and detract from the medium.

The hour wasn't all heady, humorless stuff. That was one of its appeals. There was Lord Avon, dressed in evening clothes for a round of nighttime state affairs; Ike in Denver, sharp and affable in the morning. France's Monnet showed some wit in his responses and he belabored England like an errant child for the U.K.'s national deterrent stand. In the audiences caught there was a prof, an electrical workers union official, a housewife, all asking questions of the public figures. It was quite a demonstration of give and take. (Vidtape of the program was available in Europe the following day.)

CBS News' execs made a wise decision in selecting their guests of public figures. They weren't government officials. It was felt that public officials might be frozen in their replies and only official positions of the respective countries would be given. Officialese can be deadly tv. Perhaps Wednesday's outing might loosen them up and the groundrules may be changed for future "Town Meetings." It would be quite an event to have Kennedy and Khrushchev

Sofas into Loges

Remember when "home movies" meant baby's first steps, sister's first party dress or Dad's first barbecue at—or of—the new house?

Today, America's favorite "home movies" are something else again. They're the high-quality, recent-vintage, Hollywood motion pictures that NBC-TV has been bringing into the nation's living rooms every Saturday and Monday night.

Next season the parade continues unabated. Our '63-'64 schedule for "Saturday Night at the Movies" and "Monday Night at the Movies" is the most glittering yet. Among the 60 first-TV-run films from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and 20th Century-Fox are such stand-outs as:

"David and Bathsheba"—the Darryl Zanuck spectacular, starring Gregory Peck as the warrior king and Susan Hayward as the temptress he found more formidable (and formly) than Goliath.

"The Band Wagon"—the cheery musical in which Fred Astaire and Cyd Charisse have a ball with the Howard Dietz-Arthur Schwartz score and the bright, waltz-to-waltz dialogue of scripters Betty Comden and Adolph Green.

"The Seven Year Itch"—the screen adaptation of the Broadway comedy-hit, with the late Marilyn Monroe completely beguiling as summer-bachelor Tom Ewell's dream girl.

Those are but a handful of the films making their network premieres on the Saturday and Monday night series during the coming season.

Nearly three-quarters of the pictures are color films, and about the same proportion had their first movie-house showing after 1955. The 30 M-G-M movies on the schedule are the first ever released by that studio for network television.

None of the foregoing good news should come as too much of a surprise to the millions who've made a twice-weekly habit of watching full-length, prestige films on NBC-TV. The viewers' resounding verdict: the pictures are swell, the seating's ideal and the ushers are just like members of the family.

Look to NBC for the best combination of news, information and entertainment.

Lord Hill Namig As ITC Chief Invites a Parliamentary Blast

London, July 16.

Lord Hill of Luton's appointment as chairman of the Independent Television Authority, the official body which administers the commercial network, came under fierce attack in the House of Lords, when, opening the Lords' debate on the second reading of the Television Bill, Lord Morrison of Lambeth labelled the move "a public scandal."

The Labor peer charged that this was a blatant case of "jobs for the boys." Lord Hill, who was not present at the debate, was sacked after a short term as Housing Minister and, Lord Morrison wondered, was the Government taking care of him?

"It is a party appointment," he said, "and it is a job where that kind of suspicion ought not to exist." Lord Morrison went on to deplore the method by which the appointment was made known—in a written Parliamentary answer.

He said this was deliberately arranged to avoid vocal Parliamentary accountability. "The whole thing smells from beginning to end," he said.

Noted broadcaster and journalist Lord Francis-Williams also "regretted" the appointment. He pointed out that it was the first time in the history of broadcasting in this country that the chairman of either BBC or ITA had been a party political man.

Widening the debate, Lord Lloyd, a leading behind the scenes figure lobbying for the independent camp, said if tv was regarded as a growing industry it should be allowed to build up adequate reserves for expansion and research and a margin for additional expenditure to improve programs.

There was nothing in the Bill or in Government policy, he opined, that gave the smallest encouragement to anybody to embark on television. The emphasis was all on restriction.

Lord Archibald, chairman of the Federation of British Film Makers pointed out that the producer and trade union side of the industry felt there was a strong case for geting the networks to replace part of the flow of American product with local series. He saw no reason why 50% of telefilms should not be British.

Lord Bessborough, a director of Associated TeleVision, indicated that the slowness of Government policy on radio and tv was frustrating and inhibiting in a country which had been the pioneer in this sphere.

The Bill gained an unopposed second reading.

Later in the week, Lord Hill's appointment caused a Labor vs. Tory squabble in the House of Commons. Harold Wilson, Labor Party leader, asked Premier Harold Macmillan: "Is it not a fact that there is a great deal of concern that Lord Hill, whom the Prime Minister did not think good enough even for his Cabinet a year ago, should be appointed?"

Premier's reply was that the move was illustrative of the "very broad way" in which he has tried to make these appointments. He believed the appointment will be well regarded within the next two years.

Outside the Commons, Postmaster General Reginald Bevins has defended the appointment, saying that those who had criticized it were sure to have to eat their words.

Trethowan's BBC Deal

London, July 16.

BBC television, which has undertaken a massive recruitment drive in view of its impending launch of a new video channel, has landed one of the big fish in the small pond of top class political observers and commentators. He is Ian Trethowan, currently political editor of Independent Television News.

Starting in September, Trethowan will be working on a three-year contract. He is be a member of the "Gallery" unit, Corporation's latenight show dealing with politics, and will work on other BBC programs in the news, pubaffairs and political fields.

Ex-'Philco Playhouse' Battery Gets Recharge In Dorso's UA-TV Sked

What happened to the "golden age of television?" Some of the participants are quite active today, and, interestingly, are working under the banner of United Artists Television, independently of one another.

The creative production staff of the former NBC "Philco Playhouse" are the participants in question. David Susskind and Fred Coe, producers of the Philco series, and Robert Alan Aurthur, who was associate producer and script editor are engaged separately in coproduction ventures with UA-TV's exec programming v.p. Dick Dorso has the following lined up:

David Susskind, his Talent Associates-Paramount and UA-TV, are coproducing "East Side, West Side," starring George C. Scott, as a CBS-TV entry next season.

Fred Coe under his Rock Pony Productions banner, has signed an exclusive deal with UA-TV to coproduce several properties; the first being "The Reporter," starring Arthur Hill for CBS-TV '64-'65 season.

Robert Alan Aurthur, his Edgewater Productions and UA-TV will coproduce six properties consisting of both half-hours and hours also being prepared for the '64-'65 season.

with the royalty concept, but expects them soon. With the companies adjusting their own bookkeeping operations to the new royalty concept, not all of the firms have been able to report on foreign revenue yet.

Writers involved in a new series from revue, "Channing," have already received royalty coin although the show won't be on the air in the U.S. until next fall. That's because series has already been sold in Finland.

Other foreign markets involved in the initial payments to scripters are Australia, Japan, the Philippines, Argentina, Peru, Bermuda, the United Kingdom, Sweden, the Netherlands, Nigeria, New Zealand, Hong Kong, Taiwan, Korea and Okinawa. Prices range from $6,000 for an hour telefilm sold in the United Kingdom, to $100 for a half-hour in Okinawa.

Murdoch MacLeod, general director, United Church Women of the National Council of Churches.

The package of spots also includes excerpts from President Kennedy's speech. In all, Time-Life is providing 24 tv and 26 radio spots. Time-Life has offered to supply prints and audio tapes without charge to non-affiliated stations. It had asked the networks to aid in the distribution of the spots by offering them via closed circuit to their affiliates.

A typical spot, this one by Sen. Kuchel, reads: "Equality of opportunity under law is more than an American dream. It is an American Constitutional guarantee. It represents, however, a problem for every individual among our 180,000,000 Americans. We're a unique country, here we represent every race, every creed and every religion known all around the globe in every hemisphere. This session of the Congress will do what it can to effect Constitutional guarantees for all of us. But in the last analysis, it is you, the individual American, who can demonstrate that the dream of living together in happiness and peace in a free society can be achieved by the people of this country."

Dick Krolick, Time-Life programming exec, produced the spots.

B'cast Editorial Parley In Athens, Ga., July 25-27 Features FCC, D.C. Solons

Athens, Ga., July 16.

Nation's leading broadcast editorialists, researchers, investigators, communications attorneys and topranking Government officials—including Rep. Oren Harris, FCCommissioner Kenneth A. Cox, attorney Theodore Pierson and ABC-TV network's Howard K. Smith—will converge on this university town to participate in the first National Broadcast Editorial Conference July 25-27.

Parley is being cosponsored by University of Georgia's Henry Grady School of Journalism and Georgia Assn. of Broadcasters. Registrants to date include names from Iowa, Oklahoma, California, New York, Michigan, Ohio, Texas, Louisiana and all of the Southeaster States.

Sessions will be held at the University's Center for Continuing Education.

Rep. Harris, chairman of the House Committee on Foreign and Interstate Commerce, who has said he views the meeting as of "national importance," will make a major speech on broadcast editorializing July 26.

Another key topic for discussion will be political editorializing in a session set for July 2. Rep. Walter Rogers, chairman of the House Communications Subcommittee, has expressed great interest in NBEC and plans to attend the meeting "if possible."

Appearing on the editorializing panel will be Roger Turner, director of news and public affairs, WMCA, N.Y., the first station in the nation to endorse a presidential candidate; Eugene B. Dodson, general manager, WTV, Tampa; Byron Cowan, general manager WSAC, Fort Knox, Ky.; and Ralph Renick, vice president for news, WTVJ, Miami.

ABC-TV's Howard K. Smith will deliver the keynote address Thursday (25) and other major addresses will be given by Conference Manager Dick Mendenhall, editorial director WSB-TV, AM&FM, Atlanta; and Dr. Mary Ann Cusack, assistant to the president of the National Association of Broadcasters, Washington, D.C.

Richard Cheverton, of WOOD-TV, Grand Rapids, and past president of the Radio-TV News Directors Ass'n, will moderate a panel on management-legal-government editorializing problems. Speakers will include FCC Commissioner Cox, Attorney Pierson and Willard Schroeder, general manager of WOOD-TV & AM and past chairman of the NAB Radio Board.

John E. Drewry is dean of the University's School of Journalism, which also sponsors an annual Radio and Television Institute in Athens, and Raymond Carow, WALB-TV, Albany, is the newly elected president of the GAB.

FRENCH TV NEWSMEN MIFFED OVER LAYOFFS

Paris, July 16.

French tv newsmen expressed disappointment towards the governmental treatment of their recent demands and got little satisfaction from a meeting with Information Minister Alain Peyrefitte, under whose aegis video is. It looks like they may keep up flash strikes joined by other tv personnel.

Newsmen were especialy miffed by the laying off of several newscasters not long ago plus hirings of new people who have gotten precedent over tv longtimers who were due for advancement. They are also against cutting of overseas radio time which could lead to more work layoffs.

Continuous strikes could hamper the preparations for the second web due next year.

of having people relive their moments of danger, the motives of the criminals told by themselves, the knowledge that this is the way it happened combines to give the series an interest beyond the mere documentary.

"We couldn't have just come up with another crime program," Unger said. "TV has accelerated tremendously the speed with which an entertainment form becomes outmoded. They become dated within two years—new concepts and new approaches are constantly needed."

"We started with a case in Seattle. In each town the police department suggests a half dozen crimes. We walk away from stories that are 20 or more years old—because of the possibility of anachronisms, and the difficulty of getting the same people. Our measuring stick is how many of the principals in the case are still available."

Besides being partnered in the enterprise, Marvin is dubious about his part in the tradition-breaking series. "I don't play a character—just Lee Marvin, annotator, commentator, you might say a sort of involved Edward R. Murrow. I'm waiting until the programs begin in the fall. Some critic will find a word to describe my function and I'll settle for that."

three sponsors will be getting bonus commercials on top of the basic commitments.

General Cigar, for its White Owl brand, is standing in the wings ready to bankroll a post-fight show of interviews and analysis of the action by the experts. However, the fight must go at least seven rounds before such a post-fight show could be cleared for another sponsor. During the last four championship bouts covered by ABC Radio, there has not been any post-fight sponsorships because of the early end of the bouts.

Rocky Marciano, former heavyweight champ, will be in ABC Radio's corner this year along with Les Keiter, the blow-by-blow commentator, and Howard Cosell, the color commentator. Benkoil will be heading a 14-man radio crew at the Las Vegas auditorium.

Although a record number, probably exceeding 65,000,000 is expected to tune in on the radio coverage, this fight will not be costing sponsors as much as the first bout whose radio rights went for $400,000. Fear of another early kayo drove down the price of this match to around half that figure.

L. A. in Bid for New 'U' Channel

Washington, July 16.

The City of Los Angeles, seeking to take a leaf from New York's book, has asked the FCC for a UHF channel.

In a petition signed by Mayor Samuel Yorty, L.A. asked the commission allocate a new channel to the area or reallocate Channel 40 from Riverside, Calif.

The city proposes to use the channel, according to the petition, to provide the metropolitan area's 6,000,000 people with public health, sanitation, emergency, police, fire and traffic information, as well as to train and inform its 32,000 municipal employees.

Admittedly intending to pattern its station after New York's Channel 13, L.A. doesn't plan to sell any time but wants authorization as a regular commercial station, the petition said.

An engineering analysis indicates, Yorty stated, that an additional L.A. channel can be made available "without conflict with any present allocation." He pointed out, however, all allocated L.A. channels except 28 are in use and that is reserved for educational purposes and the city does not qualify.

As an alternative, the L.A. petition suggested Riverside's Channel 40. If the two applications now pending for the channel are not granted or do not result in actual station construction, "the public interest, convenience and necessity would best be served by authorization of the channel to Los Angeles," the petition claimed.

Yorty said that Riverside would not suffer in the switch. He explained in the petition that although it is 40 miles from Los Angeles, Riverside has "entirely satisfactory" reception of L.A. stations. In addition, there are five other channels assigned to Riverside or surrounding cities which, if put into use, would provide additional primary coverage.

production to where American producers dreamed the new technique would go back in the 50's when it was introduced. He points out that U. S. tv this fall will have only 14 hours of vidtape drama (all via DuPont) while the British will have 300 hours.

The p-d can't find enough praise for the English production facilities, from stock to cameras to lighting, and the professional dedication of the technicians.

There's really no heavy in his argument, says Cook. The British can dress a set with real class because of the traffic in vidtape drama sustains expensive and fresh stock. In the U. S., the networks are using dressing from the days of "Marty," because of the paucity of "live - on - tape" production through the years.

As far as drama production is concerned in America, vidtape is virtually dead, says Cook, conjecturing sadly that he and partner Schaffner may be the only people in the industry (besides Ampex and 3M?) who care—"But when tape goes, so goes a great arena for practicing your craft." He also feels that network tv would benefit greatly at least once a night by the contrast in mood and atmosphere that a vidtape production lends to the film grind.

Anyhow, for at least one of the seven DuPont shows Producers Co. is doing this year, Cook will be back in England for another codeal, probably around the first of the new year. And the first DuPont drama will be by English scripter Jacques Gillies, "The Takers," already in the can after production in New York.

Houston — KPRC-TV has organized a 25-member, seven vehicle caravan known as the KPRC-TV Celebrity Caravan to visit a number of neighboring communities. There will be over $250,000 worth of mobile television equipment carried by the caravan. The first visit was made in Alvin on July 4 where film and video-tape of several programs were made for telecast on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, July 4, 5 and 6.

VARIETY-ARB SYNDICATION CHART

VARIETY's weekly tabulation based on ratings furnished by American Research Bureau, highlights the top 10 network shows on a local level and offers a rating study of the top 10 syndicated shows in the same particular markets. This week six different markets are covered.

Both the network and syndication study features the total area homes reached and the metro area ratings on each show. The total area homes reached reflects the audiences on the basis of the total market area examined. The metro area ratings are based on the metropolitan markets within the total area examined. Top 10 shows, both network and syndicated, are listed on the basis of their showing in the total area homes barometer.

Various branches of the industry, ranging from media buyers to local stations to syndicators will find the charts valuable.

Over the course of a year, ARB will tabulate a minimum of 247 markets. The results of that tabulation will be found weekly in VARIETY Coupled with the rating performance of the top 10 network shows, on the local level, the VARIETY-ARB charts are designed to reflect the rating tastes of virtually every market in the U.S.

FREEDOM RIDE OF BUS 203
With Ike Pappas
Producers: Lee Hanna, Marlene Sanders
30 Mins., Sun., 7:25 p.m.
WNEW, N.Y.

The national turmoil over the current Negro struggle for civil rights continues as the hottest single story in local broadcasting. In the past couple of months, hardly a day has gone by without some metropolitan radio or tv station giving an important spotlight to some aspect of the racial conflict. The air, in fact, has been filled with interviews, debates, documentaries, editorials, all in responses to one of the major turning points in American history.

WNEW Radio, which has committed several newsmen to the southern front, came up with one of its most dramatic yarns last Sunday night (14) in recounting the symbolic July 4 bus trip to Baltimore by 200 New Yorkers, including several clergymen, who were joining in a movement to crack the all-white policy of a Baltimore amusement park.

WNEW reporter Ike Pappas, rigged with a hi-fi tape recorder, went along on one of the buses and picked up the most vivid details of the trips solely by the sound effects. Acutely felt was the mounting tension as the demonstrators were given final instructions on how to conduct themselves as the bus pulled into the amusement park.

Pappas also succeeded in taping the drama of the confrontation between the Freedom Riders and the police who, after a formal notice, hauled them off to jail in school buses. An interview with one prominent clergymen, released on bail, was contrasted with some laststand white supremacist statements made by local citizens gathered at the park. Choruses from folksongs chanted by the demonstrators were also artfully used to heighten the show's poignancy.

All in all, this was a firstrate effort demonstrating once again that the radio documentary has by no means surrendered to its tv counterpart. Herm.

PRESS CLUB CELEBRITY NIGHT
With Jaye P. Morgan, Ellie Frankel, Jane Scott, Bea Neufeld, Joe Hudson, Frank Gibbons, Chuck Thobaben, Harv Morgan, emcee
Producers: Hugh Harper, Aileen Green
55 Mins.; Wed. 11:05 p.m.
KYW, Cleveland

This was a three-part venture bringing stimulating conversation by talented people to a late evening audience. Name talent was provided through KYW-tv's Mike Douglas show, with both Hugh Harper, station flack, and Aileen Green, Press Club manager, rounding up guests—mainly news media personnel—to toss questions at the stars and to engage in some opionating of their own.

In the stanza caught, canary Jaye P. Morgan was name. With her, from the Mike Douglas show; was Ellie Frankel, pianist. The two successfuly cross plugged the tv stanza on the sister radio outlet, ably assisted by Harv Morgan, "Program PM's" emcee. Not only did Miss Morgan get across her own personality, but neatly mixed quips with such guests as Chuck Thobaben of Central Press; Bea Neufeld of the Press-News, and Jane Scott of the Plain Dealer. Perhaps the most stimulating exchange of conversation came when Frank Gibbons, noted Press sportswrited, and Joe Hudson, ex-Cleveland News, discussed with Miss Morgan the role of an entertainer—principally a comic—in projecting his philosophy.

Miss Morgan agreed with Gibbons that an entertainer basically was on the air to entertain, and this gave them no right (Steve Allen was cited as an example) to philosophize. Gibbons, whose background included an Army stint with the Glenn Miller band in England, scored with his point that some performers took advantage of their air position. Both Hudson, and Miss Morgan rightfully noted that comics could justifiably take current events as source material.

Entire program, recorded at the Press Club, was well executed and made for pleasant addition to the "Program PM" stable. Mark.

Jimmy Starbuck Kicks Up A Storm for TV's Forgotten Man—The Choreographer

Jimmy Starbuck, co-director of the "Sing Along With Mitch" show, is opening a campaign in behalf of the forgotten man of television — the choreographer. Himself a vet dance designer, Starbuck notes that choreography is one of the rare creative categories in tv not eligible for an Emmy award.

Newly elected to the board of governors of the Academy of Television Arts & Societies, Starbuck will be pressing for the Academy to make awards for choreography. He recognizes the pressure on the Academy to reduce the number of awards, but feels the dance is too essential to be brushed off or bracketed with the awards for best direction.

Starbuck also noted that choreographers are one of the few remaining segments of show biz that are unorganized. As a result, they do not have a standard contract which assures them residual rights in the program repeats. Each choreographer must bargain individually for this right. In his own case, Starbuck has had an exceptionally cooperative boss in Mitch Miller.

Having worked on the old "Show of Shows" series and other pioneer tv programs, Starbuck has witnessed the evolution of choreography on the tv screen from the purely pretty to emphasis on dance technique. Currently, he pointed out that the dominant dance idiom is "hep," "jazzy" and "pelvic." In the occasional use of traditional ballet, Starbuck noted that the public has become educated to the exposure of the body in a way that would have been scandalous 15 years ago.

TECHNICOLOR BID FOR VIDFILM BIZ

Hollywood, July 16.

Technicolor will make its big bid for a chunk of the vidfilm biz via its new lab, to be constructed by MCA at the Revue-Universal lot, with Techni leasing.

Techni's lab, to be for the processing of color and b-and-w film for tv, is expected to be completed early in 1965. When completed, it will have an immediate capacity for $15,000,000 in product annually.

Techni prexy Melvin H. Jacobs said the new plant will be available to the entire industry, that it will have the finest, most "up-to-date facilities existing anywhere in the world." Techni's staff and engineers will be responsible for the design, equipment and complete management of the new lab, he added.

what would be involved in increasing the power of existing clear channels rather than add new ones.

In the letter, FCC said petitions asking rule making to allow power boosts to 750,000 watts are before FCC "and will be acted on shortly." Four clear channels (WJR, Detroit; WLW, Cincinnati; WGN, Chicago; and WSM, Nashville) applied last Fall for 750,000 watts on a regular (not experimental) basis. The applications were all returned by FCC.

FCC held steadfastly to its previously stated position that duplicating clear channels will "result in service gains . . . bringing a first nighttime primary (groundwave) service—which is more satisfactory than skywave (secondary) service to significant areas and populations in the West, portions of which do not now have even an abundanee of reliable secondary services."

Harris had asked FCC what consideration had been given to providing alternative frequencies for the stations in San Diego, Calif., and Anchorage, Alaska.

FCC answered: "Studies were made, particularly after our first decision . . to determine whether other frequencies could suitably be substituted for use by the Anchorage and San Diego stations. This was particularly true in the case of San Diego, in which elaborate studies were made to see whether another channel would be suitable. It was found that in both cases, the frequencies selected were the best available."

Commissioner Frederick Ford did not agree with the Commission majority that the letter should be sent to Harris. Commissioner Robert E. Lee reaffirmed his dissent in duplicating the channels but wrote no letter.

West Germany, Italy and the Scandinavian countries, consisting of youthful tv execs who are eagerly seeking new ideas and concepts.

The buyers of U.S. vidfilms have become far more discriminating in what they want, they demand only the best, quality before they make a commitment, Adams related. "The day when a distributor went in and sold at a price is ended," he added.

Today the European buyer is more selective, and he doesn't mind paying extra for a film he really wants. As a result, in some nations they have hiked the price for American vidpix.

Adams said another significant development from the standpoint of the American vidfilm distributor is the imminent opening of new tv markets in the Middle East and Africa, as well as a number of new tv outlets in Europe.

Britain Preps For World TV Fest

London, July 16.

Britain's first World Festival of Television, sponsored by BBC, Independent Television Authority, the independent companies and the British Film Institute's vidmag Contrast, had its inaugural lunch on Thursday (11) at which Reginald Bevins, Minister responsible for broadcasting, was chief speaker. Welcoming the forthcoming video fete, he said a venture of this kind would encourage the advance of new ideas and new techniques in tv.

Festival, being organized by BFI for a November bow, will award no prizes.

A selection commitee, comprising representatives of BBC, ITA and the commercial stations will choose programs to be screened at the function. Programs will cover every category of tv from light entertainment and drama to sport and documentaries.

It is anticipated that more than 20 countries will be represented and will be sending in nominations during the next few months.

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER TELEVISION PRESENTS

View from the Lion's Den

International Velvet

■ Selling made-in-America television programs around the world is becoming a very busy business. The rough edges in communication have been smoothed. Even the TV trade papers are rushing out special international issues (four here and two overseas have knocked on our door in the past month). This is an enlightening experience as well as lucrative business. It's not the same as selling in South Dakota.

■ MGM-TV programs are now sold in 32 countries. Our man in Manila, or Paris, or Mexico City, or Tokyo has been busy on the spot—to say nothing of our sales manager in New York, Dick Harper. (We wonder if the phone company shouldn't look into the market for an international Yellow Pages.) But how do you sell your programs worldwide? MGM-TV with its own foreign sales force plus the International Division add up to 158 world-wide offices. That's a good spread in the market place. Also, that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer movie image makes excellent background music for the television era. Add a wide variety of programming (not counting movies) that's available and it's a world of TV entertainment from which the overseas buyer has to choose. All from a single source.

■ Some interesting choices have been made. Somehow, you can picture National Velvet jumping across a New Zealand television screen. And there's a sort of ultimate logic in finding Northwest Passage playing in the Far East. But how does an unveiled daughter in Father of the Bride come through in Bagdad? Do the Italians like Sam Benedict because he works in San Francisco, the home of Joe DiMaggio? There's the interesting case of the Eleventh Hour in Nigeria. Should the Thin Man series with Peter Lawford be counted as unofficial Peace Corps efforts in Argentina, Peru and Uruguay? A good sales point was made in selling landlocked Hungary The Islanders.

■ Interesting this international TV business. Our Gang in Rhodesia. Cero Uno in Venezuela (that's the Spanish title for a new series not yet released in the U.S.A.). Cartoons in Arabic, German, Japanese and Finnish. Which is probably a good place to end up.

Earl Ubell and Stuart Loory as an Atlas with a man aboard lofted away from Cape Canaveral; or Jim Gash's remarkable daily enchantment with the foibles of New York; or Ike Pappas' considerable anger (and not inconsiderable fear) as he told how an Oxford, Mississippi, mob attacked him and smashed his tape recorder; and James Van Sickle's calm reassurance as he guided us through the awesome detail of the rapidly escalating Cuban crisis.

WNEW knew that this was the direction for radio to travel. It had to bring into the home—to the listener—the feeling of what was happening to us as a nation, as a world.

In 1959, our first year, Marie Torre reported in the Herald Tribune that "enterprise and issues are bringing a boom in radio." She said, "In the area of news WNEW has demonstrated that a radio station can have the resourcefulness to make its own news." And she cited WNEW's first news beat—the first interview in English with Fidel Castro.

Five years ago who would have believed that a reporter from a "local" independent station would march out of the Sierra Maestra with Fidel Castro; that we would make headlines all over the world with the first exclusive interview with the exiled Batista; that WNEW would beat the world press by two hours with our story on the Soviet Union's resumption of nuclear tests; that we would have a nine-month beat on the plan to exchange Soviet Spy Rudolf Abel for U-2 Pilot Francis Gary Powers.

Or that a radio station—not occasionally, but week after week—could produce documentaries that inform, excite and provoke thought; that explore psychiatry; ride with the Freedom Riders, expose the slums, dance the twist, travel with the President, soar with the Astronauts. Programs that challenge the mind and the status quo; that probe a city's discriminatory relocation policies; that expose the blockbusting real estate dealer; that come to the aid of an embattled Southern integrationist editor.

To those who thought that television had turned radio into a background sound programs like those were the answer. Such programs, dealing in controversy and commentary and editorial opinion, were what Miss Torre had in mind when she said, "Radio people are creating the real excitement in broadcasting." And strong, sound and creditable news has helped to create that excitement as it has helped to shape the new personailty of radio.

The fact is that WNEW has always had personality — John Crosby called it "impish charm and originality"—but now we are proving that we have depth and scope; that we can deal vigorously with local issues; that we can have deep moral conviction; that we can stand for something.

recent times Negroes have portrayed many different kinds of roles, have been seen as medicos on "Ben Casey," a jurist on "Sam Benedict" of last season, and a Negro actor, Roy Glenn, is used in a semi-regular role as teacher in MGM-TV's new series, "Mr. Novak."

Some of the execs said there has been a shortage of qualified Negro actors, attributing this to the fact that in the past there has been a lack of opportunity for the Negro thesp, so much so relatively few new ones entered the biz. Little theatre groups would be an ideal training ground for such thesps, it was said.

Producer estimates were supported in an estimate by a Screen Extras Guild exec that employment of Negro extras has increased 100% in the past six weeks, in vidfilms and pix.

Screen Actors Guild, it's estimated, has from 150-200 Negro actors in its list of 9,500 membership in Hollywood. Guild has a membership of 14,000 nationally.

Typical of the comment:

Harry Ackerman, exec producer, Screen Gems: "There has been an increase in employment of Negro actors here the past year or two. We have constantly used Negro actors in shows wherever possible. It is all part of an awareness of the Negro's plight in the country. The Kennedy Administration has done such extensive, publicized work in the field of civil rights, it is reflected in all fields, including tv.

A Metro tv exec also noted an increase in Negro thesp employment, and said the studio used more Negroes on its "Sam Benedict" series last season than any series on tv. Much the same is being done for next season on its "Mr. Novak" show, where Negroes portray students and teachers. MGM-TV dates the upbeat in hiring of Negroes to two years ago. Studio said it is more "aware" of the situation today, but that its policy pro-dates all the recent bally for more Negro representation in the industry.

A Revue studios exec, while seeing no particular increase in Negro actor employment, said the studio is more aware of the problem, and hires Negro actors wherever possible.

Bing Crosby Productions prexy Basil Grillo said BCP's "Ben Casey" has always used Negroes, so that present policy does not represent any increase in this area. However, there has been an increase in the hiring of Negroes in telefilms the past 18 months, he asserted. Everyone is aware of the problem, he added.

Desilu studios production chief Jerry Thorpe said his company has no particular policy in this regard, that it depends on the individual producers turning out series for Desilu. "We use them occasionally for roles written for Caucasians," he said.

Four Star exec producer Dominick Dunne noted an increase in jobs for Negro actors over the past 18 months, saying "there has been a tendency to use more and more Negro actors."

At NBC-TV, Bob Wood, manager of broadcast standards on the Coast, said the network "is always talking to producers about hiring Negroes, not as Negroes, but as persons, as individuals."

An ABC-TV exec also said there is an increase in such work for Negroes, that it's due to "thoughtfulness" on the part of producers who seek to make their shows more true-to-life. A CBS-TV exec said he saw an increase, although not a significant one.

FCC Spells Out Emergency Alerts

Washington, July 16.

FCC has prescribed two basic changes in the nation's Emergency Broadcast System.

The first will permit the President, no matter where he is, to address the country over the system in a time of national emergency.

The second will permit AM members of the system to transmit emergency information over their normally assigned frequencies.

When the changes go into effect Aug. 5, it will mark the demise of CONELRAD under which emergency stations could only broadcast information over 640 and 1240 kilocycles in order to frustrate enemy planes or missiles from getting a fix.

The Defense Department decision that this is no longer necessary prompted the changes.

Under the new system, the 1,400 AM stations with National Defense Emergency Authorization will begin immediately to broadcast only information from the Federal Government, going silent at all other times.

All AM and FM stations with more than 10 watts power and all tv stations, except those members of the emergency system, will go off the air after referring their listeners to emergency stations in the area. FM and tv stations are not now members of the system, but a way is being sought to link them with it.

There are also weather warning and telephone company provisions that will be included in the changes. All AM, FM and tv stations may, at their option, transmit emergency weather warnings from the U.S. Weather Bureau. And phone companies are to link any unaffiliated radio station with a network free of charge in the event of a national emergency provided the station is a member of the defense system.

All emergency information is to be transmitted to the member stations by Associated Press and United Press International which are cooperating in the program.

KTTV's Sales Rep

Metro TV Sales, spot sales division of Metromedia, has taken over representation of KTTV, L.A., which was recently acquired by Metromedia.

John Dias, v.p. over Metro TV Sales, said the former national sales organization of KTTV has been absorbed in toto into an expanded organization.

Inside Stuff—Radio-TV

Arkansas and Michigan broadcasters have been appointed chairmen of the National Assn. of Broadcasters finance committees.

Named were: Radio Fund Finance Committee—John F. Patt, WJR, Detroit, chairman; Harold Essex, WSJS, Winston-Salem, N.C.; Rex G. Howell, KREX, Grand Junction, Colo.; John H. Lemme, KLTE, Little Falls, Minn.; Ben Sanders, KICD, Spencer, Iowa; and Ben Strouse, WWDC, Washington.

Television Fund Finance Committee—Henry B. Blay, KTHV, Little Rock, Chairman; Payson Hall, Meredith Broadcasting Co., Des Moines; William B. Quarton, WMT-TV, Cedar Rapids, Iowa; James D. Russell, Colorado Springs, Colo.; and Robert F. Wright, WTOK-TV, Meridian, Miss.

FCC Commissioner Robert E. Lee is booked as keynote speaker at a Chicago regional clinic July 22 to acquaint the tv trade and interested members of the public with all aspects of all-channel broadcasting and reception. Coincidental with Chicago's National Music Show, the session, starting at 8:30 a.m., will be in the Palmer House.

Sponsor of the clinic is the Committee on Consumer Information, an adjunct of the group set up by the FCC, the Committee for the Full Development of All-Channel Broadcasting.

Previous similar clinics have been held in New York and Washington.

Betty Adams, commentator on ABC Radio's "Flair Reports," came up with a fascinating example of the Castro-style of freedom now operating in Cuba. When Miss Adams established telephone contact in Havana with a Brooklyn student, Hector Hill, now visiting Cuba in defiance of the State Department, she asked him: "Does freedom actually exist for the Cubans?" The student replied that it did, not only for the Cubans but for the American students visiting there as well. He added that the Cubans can and do speak out against the revolution. But just as about Hill was about to give an example of this type of criticism, the telephone lines were jammed: A Cuban government bureaucrat had obviously been monitoring the whole interview.

FCC has approved Canada's table of assignments for UHF channels. Canada's Department of Transport had submitted the list to the Commission last Nov. 16.

The original Canadian list contained eight assignments which were too short spaced with UHF assignments in the U. S., and Canada agreed to delete them without the need of any negotiations.

International Radio & Television Society staged its annual Fun Day yesterday (Tues.) at the Wkygyl Country Club in New Rochelle. A golf tournament was followed by a dinner-dance and a show produced and emceed by WNEW Radio's William B. Williams with Bob Elliott & Ray Goulding, songstress Marie Janice and Deniz, a dancer. Yale Roe, ABC-TV director of daytime sales, chairmanned the IRTS Fun Day.

Coming off the poorest in the telecast was Heinrich von Brentano, former foreign minister for West Germany and present majority leader in the West German Bundestag. He, in responses, fell into the trap of communique language.

There were some minor technical difficulties; at one point the audio was lost. Matched against the achievements, flaws were minor, indeed. Horo.

PARADE

With Betty Robertson, Bill Walker, Billy Van Four Producer-Director: Norman Sedawie
Writer: Saul Ilson
Choreographer: Don Gillies
30 Mins., Wed. 8:30 p.m.
CBC, from Toronto

When illness forced Rosemary Clooney out of her "Parade" spot Betty Robertson, one of Canada's top nightclub singers, stepped in to do a striking turn—from a belting opener through some amusing numbers and a moving "Where is Love?" to a powerful closer. Miss Robertson was blonde-on-blonde for the date in a striking wig. If she wants to emigrate now—she turned down one N. Y. "grooming" offer last year—she'll have plenty of bids if this kinnie gets around.

Two other main factors in the sparkling stanza's success were writer Saul Ilson, reportedly moving to New York come fall for a tv contract, and producer-director Norman Sedawie.

This seg was topnotch heatwave fare, with zippy, imaginative choreography by Don Gillies with his group, teamed with Miss Robertson and Bill Walker in "On the First Day of Summer . . ."—a neat switch of "12 Days of Xmas" in a resort setting. Two adapted songs were: "Lady is a Tramp," with new lyrics, very well handled by blonde Pattie of the Billy Van Four, a personable, lively group; and Billy Hill's standard "Glory of Love," with Miss Robertson handling it admirably—remarkably resembling Miss Clooney not only in looks but in style. Her closer was an old melange of "Accustomed to His Face" and "Can't Take That Away from Me"—segueing back and forth in rhythm and style. Very tricky indeed, but she brought it off and wound in a bit of a blaze. Gard.

color video has thrown up many problems involving the adoption of a single method of tint tv on an international basis. For instance, although French and German engineers are quickly willing to concede that a color system from another country has a lot going for it, political pressures are also involved in the final decision. Thus while a German technician is able to see the advantages of Secam over PAL, he is aware that political byplay may mean more than the technical ability of any particular system when the final decision is made.

It is generally assumed here, however, that when it comes to broadcasting, BBC—and, indeed, Britain generally—has sufficient enough influence on the rest of Europe to bring about a position where what the UK says goes with most of the other EBU members. Major problem of the moment, however, is what does Britain say?

BBC has tried the NYSC system for a number of years over transmission as well as in the laboratory. And up until recently, it was almost taken for granted that this was the system to be adopted. However, almost entirely through the efforts of engineers at the independent ABC-TV station the French Secam method has been developed from a "laboratory toy" into a practical color tv system which has certain advantages over the Yank system (for instance, in lay terms, it loses less picture quality when transmitted any great distance).

The German PAL development of the NYSC system has further complicated the picture and in the last few months has become a serious contender for the premier color service for all-Europe tint tv.

But demonstrations have not solely been concerned with the final choice of system. Side issues have crept in and a situation has been reached where manufacturers have been demonstrating their latest developments in color transmission and reception.

For instance, the giant EMI company showed a new type of color tv camera and signal processing system. Known as the Separate-Luminance system, it is claimed to represent a breakthrough in color tv. It requires, according to experts, only one-third of the lighting normally needed and it gives improved picture definition with a reduction of shading and flicker. In addition, a smaller, simpler camera can be used.

On the broad issue, however, one thing is certain. Britain will settle on a color system that is acceptable to Europe as a whole. Postmaster-General Reginald Bevins said this week that Britain must not be rushed into making a quick decision (presumably by pressure from equipment manufactures and other interested parties).

He explained: "It would be quite wrong for the Government to approve a color system which was different from that used in the rest of Europe. In the future we shall have far more programs transmitted from Europe and far more transmitted to Europe." PMG has indicated it might be possible to give the go ahead to tint tv in this country by the early part of next year.

but they convinced hundreds of Greater New Yorkers to subscribe to a southern newspaper when its editor was blackballed by local elements in his town for his unpopular stand on equal rights.

His listeners do not find it unusual when Ted Brown pays his tribute to Pope Paul, or blasts a star performer for a demonstration in a restaurant, or for ending his three-hour segment with—"I have to leave you until tomorrow. All of me is saying so-long for now. My light green eyes—my wavy hair—my pearl-white teeth—my gold-flecked eyelids. But, don't cry—don't carry on—don't stamp your feet. I want to remember you just as you are."

The audience knows when they are serious, and when there winking.

The good personality deeply understands the moods of his listener; his pleasure, anger, curiosity, frustration; his willingness to learn, understand, laugh, agree or disagree, sometimes to be teased. Therefore he knows enough never to violate anyone's native intelligence.

Yes, good personalities are hard to find. It's easier to hire "Disk-Jockeys."

We think the effort is worth the difference at WNEW.

media believes it has the best people available.

On the home front at WNEW Radio, it's John V. B. Sullivan and Varner Paulsen and William B. and Klaven & Finch and Kyle Rote and Lee Hanna and Nat Asch and Jim Grau and Frank Young and Billy Taylor and Bob Hodges and Elmore Jones and Max Weiner, among others.

At Metropolitan Broadcasting Television, it's President Bennett H. Korn and Vice President Jack Lynn.

At Channel 5, it's Vice President John McArdle and Mel Bally and Sonny Fox and Sandy Becker and Kurt Blumberg and Bernie Zeidman and Arthur Forrest and Arthur Barron and Joan Freidin and Len Aronoff and Margaret Culmer and Lew Hicks and Art Rubin.

And backing this group is the headquarters staff of Richard Geismar and Mark Evans and Robert Dreyer and Mary McKenna and Phil Cowan and Murray Gross and Joe Madden and Pat Peterson.

And across the country, it's Harvey Glascock and Jack Thayer and David Croninger and Larry Frailberg and Al Krivin and Sydney Grayson and John Bone; and the people who head up Metro Broadcast Sales—Bud Neuwirth and John Sias; and the President of Foster and Kleiser, Ross Barrett; and that great showman, who for 23 years has done such an extraordinary job for "Ice Capades," John H. Harris.

All of these people, together with their co-workers, helped Metromedia to a record income of $53,069,751 in 1962, up more than $5 million over 1961. The corporation paid a whopping $2,489,639 in dividends to stockholders last year and the predictions for 1963 indicate even higher earnings and greater dividends. Which ain't bad for a young but lusty corporate complex.

The Metromedia future portends additional acquisitions, greater earnings, better programming, increased responsibility, and continued growth.

But to grow, one needs a strong and stable foundation, and in the Metromedia complex there is no stronger nor more stable component than WNEW Radio, now celebrating its 30th year of service to the community.

To the people of WNEW from the other people in the Metromedia family a 21-gun salute for past and present performance.

Grampian Champions Adequate Safeguards To Ensure a Profit

Aberdeen, Scotland July 16.

Small regional tv stations in the U.K., such as Grampian Television covering northern Scotland, require adequate safeguards to ensure "reasonable profitability," according to station's chairman, Sir Alexander King.

Cinema magnate King told his company's annual meeting here: "If, in addition to profits tax and income tax, television must have another tax, then it should be in the form of an excess profits tax, and not a tax on turnover."

On programming, he said local-orginated material had increased from two hours to six hours per week. The scope of programming had also considerably broadened.

In the winter period, no fewer than 50 Grampian-produced programs won a place in the TAM "Top 10" list for the area, 50% more Top 10 successes than had been achieved by any other regional company in the same period. This had been gained in competition with the best that British Independent Television and the BBC had to offer.

But, he warned, the year under review had been difficult, revenue-wise. As a result of a recession in the economy, and the introduction of the "discriminatory Television Advertisement Duty," the hoped-for increases in advertising appropriations had not materialized.

"If Grampian is to pay a reasonable dividend to its shareholders, we must have a guarantee that payments in respect of ITA fees and network programs will be based on a formula which takes account of the value of the area in marketing terms, and on actual rather than theoretical set-count coverage."

Dunsmore's Can. Exit

Ottawa, July 16.

R. L. Dunsmore, deposed early in June as chairman of the board of the Canadian Broadcasting Corp., has resigned from the board. Secretary of State Pickersgill told the House of Commons in early June that Dunsmore had been found illegally in the post of chairman and that the president (Alphonse Ouimet) should be chairman.

Dunsmore's term would have ended in September.

watched the long and silly arguments.

Curiously enough, it was not a direct transmission, because producer feared that too harsh words might be used. But at Stadthallen studio the political opponents kept within good behavior and Austrian-wide transmission was almost unchanged on the following day.

The one thing listeners would have liked to have heard remained unanswered. Just why the conservatives insist that Otto returns; the socialists just why they do not believe Otto's word of honor to abstain from "royal" politics. Fact is, they do not know themselves.

ALL SORTS TO MAKE A WORLD
With David Dimbleby
Producer: Humphrey Fisher
39 Mins., Tues., 6:50 p.m.
BBC-TV, from London

Stated aim of this new skein is to introduce people in their occupational setting, thus bridging the social gap. The initialler, briskly conducted by David Dimbleby (a chip off the old Richard), rambled around a Lancashire cotton mill, chosen as an example of mass-production industry, and various workers chatted about their attitudes to their jobs and to their leisure. Later segments will focus upon artists, farmers, and business tycoons.

The result packed few surprises, and it was somewhat reminiscent of an educational tour for high-school kids. Dimbleby described some of the weaving processes, machines were shown at the bubble, and operatives discoursed on the sound-track about their liking for vacations on lonely islands or their pride at producing a bumper quantity of diapers. The most stirring moments were provided by a couple of oldtimers who had started in the mill when they were 12 years old. One recalled attending school in the morning and working at the factory in the afternoon, and another recalled the 12-hour day. It seemed to be agreed that things had taken a turn for the better.

There were surprisingly few complaints about monotony, although some of the tasks displayed seemed deadening. What emerged most clearly was the bonhomie amongst the workers, and the absence of revolt or self-questioning.

As a slice of stolid reportage, the program was okay. But, if it plans to scan people, the skein should rove outside its work context. The general impression was too rosy and content to carry much punch, and Humphrey Fisher's production seemed needlessly constricted, getting no closer to human beings than a casual encounter in a canteen.

Foreign TV Followup

Armchair Theatre

Author Alexander Baron, a writer of no mean talent who has turned in many top bracket productions, unfortunately went stale on "Late Summer," a piece specially commissioned by ABC Television for its dramatic showcase, "Armchair Theatre." Ironically, the play had everything going for it. Subject matter augered well for a fine slice of dramatic tv. Strong leads. And a good director. But the firecracker turned out to be a damp squib.

What went wrong? Principally, Baron failed to inject enough depth into his characters. Dialog, in the main, was unexciting, and the people concerned were dull.

Yarn, that looked promising on paper, dealt with a middleaged, rich widow who was living with a young writer, who spent less time with the pen than throwing tantrums and sponging off her, and who finally left her.

But, set in a French resort hotel, the story brought in badly pictured out-of-season tourists and, unfortunately, no real atmosphere of the French location, a fault of the production.

That the relationship between the woman and the boy was at all believeable was a triumph for Constance Cummings who brought more to the role than the writing did. Her portrayal was a classic example of how a talented thesp can salvage, to some extent, a play that is falling apart at the seams.

John Stride was competent as the youthful gigolo, but failed to take what little chance he had to shine during the brawl scenes. Others in the cast such as Gerard Heinz, Yvonne Coulette, Joan Heath, Denis Carey and Valerie Bell, held down small roles with ease. But Roland Brand and David Futcher gave Shaky imitations of American tourists.

greatest instantaneous reaction in our history when nearly a thousand of them called, wired, wrote and stopped by 565 5th Avenue to express their feeling about our special programming at the death of Pope John XXIII—all within 48 hours after the first broadcast of Alexander Scourby's moving narration (repeated later that evening).

Is it any wonder we're trying to say thanks in a very special manner?

Actually, we're expressing our appreciation the best way we know how—through the brilliant talents of the kind of stars we've presented over the years, who for one performance or one thousand have given us the "sound" we still work hard at 24 hours everyday.

At Madison Square Garden July 24, 1963, many of these greats—these personifications of romance and rhythm, of love and laughter—will once again be performing, as only they can, for the greatest audience that ever adopted a radio station.

And I'm only saying that because it's true.

NARM to Weigh Industry Trends At Midyear Meet in Chi, July 31

Midyear meeting of the National Assn. of Record Merchandisers (NARM) will open July 31 at the Edgewater Beach Hotel, Chicago, with a gathering of rack jobber members of the organization. At this session, a closed regular members meeting, the rack merchandisers will consider various industry trends, among which will be the rise in rack jobbing activity by distribs and the legal implications of possible price discrimination by these distribs and their manufacturers.

Another trend to be discussed by the rackmen is the increasing problem for them of competition from large retail outlets which sell at low discount prices. Also due to be explored are the legal questions involved because these competitors allegedly get comparable or better discounts then rack jobbers. Preparation for the talks will be made during the NARM board meeting, to be held the day before, July 30.

James J. Tiedjens and Harold Goldman, midwest merchandisers and both past presidents of the association, will serve as co-chairmen of the meeting. The schedule for the convention, which will run through Aug. 2, will include a luncheon and several person-to-person sales confabs between manufacturers and merchandisers.

NARM prez Cecil H. Steen asserts that "the record merchandisers in NARM will come into their first meeting since our annual convention in March faced with industry problems which, for various reasons, seem to have attained major importance at this time. It has always been NARM's policy to bring problems of this kind directly to its membership in search for answers. We feel that this meeting could prove one of the most fruitful in our history."

Mahalia Jackson Gives Milwaukee 'Music Under Stars' a Tuneful Preem

Mahalia Jackson drew more than 9,000 to the opening last Saturday (6) of the 26th season of "Music Under the Stars," a series of al fresco public concerts and musical comedies sponsored by the Milwaukee Park Commission. Tickets were scaled from $2.50 to 50c, with persons of social security age admitted for 20c (or $1 for the entire series of five shows). Russell Stanger was guest maestro for the orchestral portions of the concert.

John Anello, resident conductor and impressario of the open air shows for the past 15 years, has set a pair of stage musicals and two other light classical one-nighters through Aug. 3. New York casts are being imported for the production of "Flower Drum Song" and "King and I," the latter starring Patricia Morison; and the concerts will feature pianist Ralph Votapek with Alfredo Antonini conducting on July 20, and Jerome Hines, Jean Madeira and Raquel Montalvo, with Anello conducting, on July 27.

While admissions help to defray most of the costs, the park district concerts run up a deficit of $30,000-$40,000 annually.

Hickory Label Sets Rose, Lucus in Key Exec Jobs

Lester F. Rose has been named national sales manager for Hickory Records and Joe D. Lucus has been appointed head of national promotion and advertising for the label. Both have long been associated with the company in a promotional and sales capacity.

The appointments are in line with the label's growth in the singles market and its expansion in the LP field, with particular attention paid to the country market. In this connection, Hickory plans release of three c&w albums within the next two months.

Three Pubs Win $750 In Mich. Tune Infringements

New World Music Corp., Chappell & Co. and Columbia Pictures Music Corp. have been awarded default judgment for $750 against Richard M. Pomeroy and Bessie M. Pomeroy, copartners doing busiiners as Radio 940, the owner of station WJOR, South Haven, Mich., in a copyright infringement action.

Plaintiffs charged the defendants with the unauthorized performance of three tunes: George & Ira World), Richard Rodgers & Lorenz Gershwin's "'S Wonderful" (New World), Richard Rodgers' & Lorenz Hart's "My Funny Valentine" (Chappell) and "The Guns of Navarone" by Dimitri Tiomkin (Columbia). Federal Judge W. Wallace Kent also awarded the pubs an injunction restraining the defendants from publicly performing these songs in the future.

Col's Int'l Sales In Puerto Rico Pow

Columbia Records is convening its annual international sales meet today (Wed.) at the Americana Hotel, San Juan, Puerto Rico. The three-day meeting will be attended by nearly 500 reps of the label's creative and sales organizations, headed by Goddard Lieberson, Col. prez.

Delegates from many of the company's overseas affiliates will be present in addition to domestic staffers. Also on hand will be an array of the label's artists, among them Tony Bennett and classical pianist Andre Watts.

Among the various business items to come up for discussion will be an announcement of new sales policies by the company in a move toward disk price stabilization.

ANDY WISWELL NOW VICTOR A&R PRODUCER

Andrew M. (Andy) Wiswell has been named a pop artist & repertoire producer of RCA Victor Records. His appointment, effective immediately, was made by Ben Rosner, manager of the diskery's pop a&r department.

Wiswell had been an exec producer for Capitol Records' east coast pop operations before joining Victor. During his eight-year tenure with Cap he won the 1962 NARAS Grammy Award as producer of "Judy Garland at Carnegie Hall" and the '63 Grammy for the original cast LP of "No Strings." He was producer for all of Cap's original cast LPs since "Music Man," his first for the company, and will be active in this area at Victor.

Mrs. Gibson Drops Claim To Tunes Don Composed

Knoxville, Tenn., July 16.

Mrs. Don Gibson, wife of the country music singer, has been granted an uncontested divorce in Knoxville Chancery Court. She received custody of their child and a property settlement plus $500 per month for support.

Under terms of an agreement Mrs. Gibson relinquished any claim to music composed in the name of her ex-spouse and held by Acuff-Rose Publications and Wesley Rose. In her suit she claimed that she personally wrote many of the Gibson's songs, including "I Can't Stop Loving You," a 1,000,000-record seller after it was waxed by Ray Charles.

A cross-bill filed by Mrs. Gibson against the music publishers was dismissed. Gibson brought the original action, but she later filed on "cruel and inhuman treatment" which was the basis for the decree.

NATIVE ROCKERS OUTSELL YANKS

By ROGER WATKINS

London, July 16.

Industryites and veteran observers of the music scene in this country are putting this year down as the one where Britain finally grabs the initiative from the Americans in the pop disk field. For native producers have, in the last six months, mastered the art of waxing the beat group a la Nashville (Tennessee).

Accordingly, the United Kingdom is now in the middle of a deluge of beat group disks, mostly made on the home front, where in the past the Yanks decidedly had the edge in this sphere.

Strength of the trend can be gauged from the fact that out of the 50 top selling disks here, 18 feature rock groups (not counting The Everley Bros., Paul & Paula and Cliff Richard and the Shadows). That the British have taken a commanding lead becomes evident when it is realized that of the 18 aforementioned groups only four are American.

Further indication of the rapidly accelarating demise of foreign pop singers from these parts is that on the current 50 top platters, only 16 emanate from the States.

Leading the Polls

Over the past six month, the first eight places in a local sheet's popularity poll went to British artists (five places to rock groups). Furthermore, it is certainly true that in the last nine months (since, in fact, Elvis Presley's "She's Not You") no Yank record has topped the British best sellers.

Prime factor as they are in the ousting of American disks from the British hit scene, the beat groups are having a profound effect in the local arena. Principally, they have sparked a drastic shift of emphasis in the source of talent supply from London to the Provinces.

For instance, the new and important names that haves emerged —such as The Beatles, Gerry & The Pacemakers, Billy J. Kramer & the Dakotas and one or two others—emanate from Liverpool. In fact, there is so much activity in that part of the country on the beat music front that a "Liverpool Sound" has been evolved, and is his big demand.

Similarly, in Birmingham and Manchester a host of new groups have sprung up which are attracting a lot of the glitter from the London-oriented popsters.

Talent 'Goldbrush'

With this upsurgance of music activity in the sticks, and the big swing over to groups, the record companies have been forced to rush out of town and into a flurry of signings. One industry exec described if as "similar to landbuying in a goldrush," with everyone from big operator to the smallest independent rushing to stake a claim in the hope of hitting a bonanza.

Illustrative of the proportions in which the new rock groups are now signed, EMI has just inked some halfdozen young groups from Birmingham which are added to a beat group lineup already comprising Shadows, Pacemakers, Dreamers, Dakotas Hollies, Swinging Blue Jeans and several more.

Similarly, Decca is making a play for any beat group showing any glimmering of talent. It has already waded in with The Tornadoes, Harris & Meehan, the Tremoloes, The Batchelors and Rolling Stones and so on.

Besides the continuing auditions which are happening on behalf of major diskeries and independents in the big inland provincial towns, disk producers are keeping a sharp eye on Merseyside where, according to one exec, around 150 groups have sprung up —and are working.

Prexy Kenin Hits 3 Negro Tooters' Bias Charges vs. AFM as 'Infamous'

Herman Kenin, prez of the American Federation of Musicians, has branded bias charges leveled at him and other AFM officers and board members as "an infamous and false accusation." The charges were made in a Federal Court suit brought last week by three Columbus, O., musicians who claim that the union governing board seeks to bar a merger of the white and Negro locals in Columbus.

The complaint was filed by Harland T. Randolph, William S. Stewart Sr. and William Tye on their behalf and on behalf of "all other Negro musicians similarly situated." Kenin, in answering the allegations, stated that "we have for many months been seeking the merger of the white and Negro locals in Columbus, as we do in every other area where this vestige of outmoded and unfortunate segregations exist and we shall continue to press this long-declared policy."

The Federation still has a few situations whereby two separate locals, one white and the other Negro, both work in the same territory. The AFM, however, has long been seeking to merge these locals wherever possible. But, in some instances, the local tooters prefer the segregated system for one reason or another and have refused to merge, although all peacefully coexist.

Discussing the Columbus action, the AFM prez noted that he personally has met with the Negro locals of Ohio to urge integration but has been unable to obtain any effective promise of cooperation. He added that the Federation adheres to a firm policy of local autonomy and hence can take no official action in such matters.

"The litigation brought by the three Negro musicians in Columbus appears to have the purpose of preventing, rather than advancing the cause of integration that we of the Federation seek to promote," Kenin asserted.

CBS' DJ Randle Also on Col Wax

CBS deejay Bill Randle is also becoming a Columbia Records producer and packager. He will undertake sundry special projects and develop new ideas and talent.

Randle, when he was a prominent midwest disk jockey (first in Detroit, then Cleveland) before CBS brought him to New York, supervised a number of a&r projects. His experience as a purveyor and merchandiser of wax works resulted in the parent CBS Inc. arranging for his extension of activities with the Columbia Records arm.

UA NAMES JACK GOLD SINGLES SUPERVISOR

Jack Gold has been appointed director of singles activities in the artist and repertoire department of United Artists Records. He'll supervise the singles releases of the UA talent roster and those of its subsids, including Arthur Godfrey's Contempo imprint and the Ascot, Garex and Park Avenue labels. He will also purchase masters for these lines and is working on several album projects for the diskery.

A vet of the music pub and waxing fields, Gold has been responsible for several disclicks over the past years. He came to UA Records from the company's publishing affiliate, Unart Music, where he was exec producer in charge of creative projects for the past year.

He'll be assuming a role in the planned enlargement of the UA roster of house artists, now developing rapidly via tieins with the parent film company's product and that of UA-TV, its video affiliate.

Sight Sound, New St. Pete Diskery, Cuts 1st Release

St. Petersburg, Fla., July 16.

Dixieland dominates the first release of Sight Sound Records, recording division of Sight Sound Motion Productions Inc., formed here early this year by Howard (Jeff) Forbes, veteran radio and television producer-director and George Holm, longtime cinematographer. Sight Sound studios represent one of first such efforts in south.

The disk, an EP 45 rpm featuring smoothly rhythmic music by The Nite-Caps, instrumental duo currently appearing at local Embers, favorably demonstrates organ-trumpet combination. Released July 1, it includes "It's A Lonesome Old Town," "Georgia On My Mind," "Do You Know What It Means To Miss New Orleans" and "Limehouse Blues."

Artists are organist Marie Zachary and Ray Stone, trumpet. Music director at Sight Sound is William J. (Bill) Weeks. Soon to be released is a single featuring Arnie Mossler and his Suncoast Dixielanders.

Pickwick Still Releasing Controversial Lou Monte LP; Set Court Hearing

Pickwick International, distributor of low-priced disks, will go into N.Y. Supreme Court today (Wed.) to answer a $500,000 damage suit brought by singer Lou Monte who charges that Pickwick has been distributing an "unauthorized" LP containing songs by him and bearing his likeness on its cover. Disk is called "Spotlight on Lou Monte."

Contrary to earlier reports, Pickwick has not ceased circulating the 99c album, as Monte so far hasn't obtained an injunction halting the distrib from issuing it. In his complaint, Monte claims that Pickwick is "perpetrating a fraud on the public" by selling the LP. He also asserts that he has been pacted with Reprise Records since 1961.

Cy Leslie, Pickwick prez, contends that tapes for the disk were made by Monte in 1949 in a licensed studio by a diskery which is a signatory to the Labor and Trust Agreement of the AFM.

Monte also claims that only three of the tunes in the album are actually sung by him. Leslie notes that four of the 10 tunes are by the Italo singer and the balance is the same type of Italian interpretation which Monte uses.

Pitt Batoner Hal Betters Burned in Brush Fire

Pittsburgh, July 16.

Harold Betters, local bandleader and jazz trombonist, suffered first and second degree burns at his home in nearby Connellsville when he tried to put out a brush fire. An overturned can of gasoline caused most of the damage.

Doctors expect him to be out of action for over three months.

Darin's 'Roses,' '8½' Track, Domino's 'Here,' Orbison's 'Dreams' Top LPs

BOBBY DARIN: "18 YELLOW ROSES & 11 OTHER HITS" (Capitol). Pegged to his latest disclick "18 Yellow Roses," this album gives Bobby Darin a chance to cut loose on a set of pop hits of recent vintage. Arrangers for the session, which scores solidly, are Bert Keyes, Jack Nitzsche, Walter Raim and Bobby Scott and they have put good work behind the singer. Tunes include "Walk Right In," "Not For Me," "I Will Follow Her," "Cant Get Used to Losing You" and others. Darin gives 'em all a brisk treatment that should put this latest effort for Capitol into a top action orbit.

"8½" (RCA Victor). The soundtrack of Federico Fellini's latest import has been turned into a striking musical package. Like the pic itself, the Nino Rota score is a congress of contrasting themes and moods, ranging from a lilting waltz through a jazzy piece to a harsh Brechtian ballad. The varied styles gives this film music an unusual impact.

"HERE COMES FATS DOMINO" (ABC Paramount). One of the most durable of all rock and rhythm 'n' blues artists, Fats Domino is still going strong in this latest session. With arrangements by Bill Justis, the singer-pianist puts the emphasis where he has always put it—on the beat and an earthy vocal sound. This set drives through an array of tunes, some familiar and others not, which never lets that big beat go. Teen ears should dig this latest from Domino who seems to be a bottomless well of pop material and interpretations. It's his first Nashville LP and has put that town's vaunted sound into a fine set of grooves.

ROY ORBISON: "IN DREAMS" (Monument). The hot vocal sound of Ray Orbison is nicely presented in this Monument session. The singer, who has scored with a string of clicks in recent years, has a fine outing with this album which crisply spotlights his emotional singing style. Tempo ranges from hard-driving material to moodier pieces, all of which keep the beat going solidly throughout. Orbison swings out nicely on the pop tunes presented, some of which are from the recent disclick songalog. His effective treatment should put this set into a high sales and programming orbit.

JAMES DARREN, SHELLEY FABARES, THE MARCELS, PAUL PETERSON: "BYE BYE BIRDIE" (Colpix). This session gives Colpix a chance to showcase four of its top-selling artists in the Charles Strouse-Lee Adams score from "Bye Bye Birdie." The idea is ably introduced as James Darren, Shelley Fabares and Paul Peterson combine in "Put On a Happy Face," then swing out individually on others. The Marcels also step out on the show's two rock numbers, "One Last Kiss" and "Honestly Sincerely." Stu Phillips produced, arranged and conducted the LP. He did an excellent job of bringing out the best in his performers to create a sock and original LP. Now a Columbia picture, "Birdie" will be around all summer. So should this LP, in stores and on the air.

"JAY & THE AMERICANS AT THE CAFE WHA?" (United Artists). This is a fine outing for Jay & the Americans which gives the unit the opportunity to try various styles, including folk, pop and a touch of jazz. Since the boys are at the Greenwich Village Cafe Wha? for the session, there's also some patter and an occasional comedy bit. It adds up to a nice showcasing for the unit's versatility and should garner lotsa attention from buyers and programmers. Tunes range from the Broadway "A Lot of Living to Do" to the rock "Kansas City" to the folk "This Land Is Your Land," all dressed up in a smart harmonic vocal style.

LEROY VAN DYKE: "THE GREAT HITS OF LEROY VAN DYKE" (Mercury). Here's a natural for a country cleanup. Leroy Van Dyke has become a potent force in the country & western field by virtue of his three major clicks; "Auctioneer," "Big Man In A Big House" and "Walk On By" (all included here) and this package will reaffirm that standing. His c&w style covers the rocking beat ("The Life You Offered Me"), the cheating-blues songs ("If A Woman Answers") and the uptempo beat ("The Other Boys Are Talking"). A c&w addict couldn't ask for much more.

CANNONBALL ADDERLEY: "CANNONBALL'S BOSSA NOVA" (Riverside). The bossa nova continues to attract the attention of disk companies and their artists as this latest from Cannonball Adderley attests. Swinging with the Bossa Rio Sextet, the saxman blows nicely through lotsa bossa melodies. The Sextet lends fine backing to Adderley's wailing, keeping the beat in a sharp groove and adding some melodic work. Adderley drives surely on the faster numbers and displays a more subtle touch on the slower bossa bits, all adding up to a groovy session in this Latino vogue.

"HOOTENANNY" (Crestview). If its folkmusic you want, there's about as healthy a roster as anywhere on Elektra Records. This company's Crestview subsid has herein gathered together performances by several of these artists and put them into a package called "Hootenanny." Present are the Limeliters, Josh White, Theodore Bikel, Bob Gibson, Bud & Travis, Oscar Brand, Judy Collins, Ed McCurdy, Judy Henske, the Dillards, the Travelers 3 and Will Holt. Several of them have graduated from their Elektra beginnings through the years, but their performances have been nicely preserved. They're now combined for a fine folk sampling which should attract lotsa coin and programming attention.

CLARK TERRY SEXTET FEATURING BEN WEBSTER: "MORE" (Cameo). The popular "More" theme from the film "Mondo Cane" provides the springboard for this swinging jazz outing from the Clark Terry Sextet, featuring Ben Webster. Trumpetman Terry wails nicely on the title item, which is dressed in a bossa nova backing for this session, and steps out slickly on others. Webster's sax work also gets a showcasing as the group cuts through some interesting material like the "Anthony and Cleopatra Theme," "Gravy Waltz," "The Good Life" and some jazz pieces by Terry, among others.

"HEDY WEST" (Vanguard). Hedy West, an authentic product of the southern backwoods, debuts on disks in a highly appealing roundup of folk songs. Accompanying herself on the banjo, Miss West displays a small, but sure voice of considerable charm. The songs are all solid Americana, including such standout entries as "Drowsy Sleeper," "Shady Grove," "500 Miles," "The Brown Girl" and "Fare Thee Well."

"THE GREAT HAWKSHAW HAWKINS" (Columbia Harmony). Columbia's Harmony series has a fine country addition with this LP by Hawkshaw Hawkins. The victim of that recent plane crash which took the lives of several other C&W stars, Hawkins' voice nicely preserved in this album which presents the singer-guitarman in a solid array of appropriate tunes. He gets an emotional vitality into his work which puts this outing high up on the country list as he renders such as "Put a Nickel in the Juke Box," "I Can't Seem to Say Goodby," "Patino," "Big Ole Heartache" and others.

JULIE LONDON: "JULIE'S GOLDEN GREATS" (Liberty). The moody, emotional ballad, as exemplified by "Cry Me A River," is in fine hands when Julie London takes over. The pitch becomes more romantic and the message more meaningful. So, in addition to "Cry Me A River," which established her in the disk field, she's got "In The Wee Small Hours Of The Evening," "I Love You Porgy," "Midnight Sun" and "Black Coffee" to tug the programmers. And, for a change-of-pace brightness there are "Daddy" and "Come On-A My House."

NICK NOBLE: "RELAX" (Liberty). Crooner Nick Noble tries out his pipes on a set of standards with this session. The result is a simple and generally-effective outing. The tunes are in a ballad mood, and the singer gives 'em a smooth, glossy treatment that puts the songs across with strength and savvy. The renditions are straightforward with no gimmicks in voice or orchestration. Noble matches this honesty with strong and easy technique. He gets a nice feeling into his work and registers as a disker with solid potential.

Minneapolis, July 16.

An eight-man Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra ensemble and the orchestra's pianist are donating their services for a concert here July 25 for the benefit of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People and the Congress of Racial Equality.

Proceeds will go to both organizations' legal departments which are in need of funds. The concert is being sponsored by the Minneapolis branch of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom at a time when its heads feel that many localities will welcome the opportunity to aid in the Negroes' current struggle for "a better deal."

Meyer Davis Supplying Orchs for Waldorf, N. Y.

Meyer Davis will supply the music for the Empire Room of the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria, N.Y., starting in the fall. Milt Shaw, current at the Plaza's Persian Room, headed the main orchestra last season. Davis has already started as the inn's official tooter supplier, with a trio in the hotel's Peacock Lounge.

Davis will also be one of the operators of the Amphitheatre of the N.Y. World's Fair next year. It's the site of the Billy Rose Aquacade of the 1939-40 Fair. In addition, Davis supplies the musicians for many White House functions and the orchestras on the several ships of the United States Lines.

Gospel Singers in A.C. Nitery Draw Fire & Brimstone From Negro Clerics

Atlantic City, July 16.

Appearance of the Willa Moultre Gospel Singers at Le Bistro, Irv Kolker's nitery on the Pacific Ave. bistro strip, is being protested by clergymen from the Negro churches in the resort.

The Gospel Singers, with a program of hymns, spirituals, etc., are on a card with songster Jack Jones, comedienne Kay Carole and the Mike Longo trio four times nightly. The group opened last Monday night (8) and despite the protests, Kolker says they will remain.

The singers are five Negro girls who were organized about three months ago by Willa Moultre, one of the group. She is a sister of Clara Ward, of the Clara Ward Singers. Her mother heads the Gertrude Ward Gospel Singers now appearing in Disneyland. Her father is George Ward, head of a choral group at the Mutchmore Memorial Baptist church in Philadelphia, her home city.

The Rev. Henry A. Hildebrand, pastor of St. James A. M. E. Church here,says: "I very definitely feel that the use of Gospel songs and Gospel singers as a medium of nightclub entertainment is both a sacrilege and a mockery of one of the instruments of worship used by a great many people.

"The Gospel songs or the spirituals have come to us out of the travail and suffering of a people who employed them as an escape from the indignities and despair of human slavery."

He added that persons who use them as a means of amusement, especially through the medium of commercial entertainment, are doubtless persons who neither know nor appreciate "the blood and toil and sweat and tears" that gave birth to the Negro spirituals.

Rev. Hildebrand's stand is backed by all pastors of churches in the resort's Negro section.

The Gospel singing group can't see it that way. They say that the ministers "teach us we should go wherever people are to bring the words of the Gospel, so how can they object to us appearing in nightclubs?"

Taken off Jackson was a small amount of heroin and two marijuana cigarets, and in his apartment, police said, they found 18 packets or heroin, three of marijuana and a number of "bennies."

Seeks Arthur C. Clough

Vinton, Va.

Editor, VARIETY:

I wonder if any VARIETY reader can help me with information about a tenor singer, Arthur C. Clough, who was popular in vaude and musical comedy 40 to 55 years ago. I need to know more about him to write a biographical sketch for a series about pioneer recording artists.

All I know about Clough is that he had the same name as a minor English poet of the 19th century, was a member of the Brunswick Quartet in vaude, and made a fair number of records for Victor, Columbia and Edison. He was a much better singer than the average popular tenor. I believe I have heard that he was also active as a radio singer in the 1920s. If he is still alive he must be somewhere around 80, since he began making records 54 years ago, in 1909.

Niteries to Get Break With IRS' Bow To Court Edicts on Tax Collections

A major break for nitery operators came last week when the Internal Revenue Service decided not to challenge several court rulings which held that it was okay for cafemen not to collect the 10% cabaret tax when the bill is paid prior to the presentation of the floorshow.

This is a new departure for the IRS which has always declared that collection of the check prior to the start of entertainment or dancing automatically entitled a patron to see the show and therefore he was subject to the levy. The recognized exception was the pre-theatre dinner served in hotels and niteries, where the patron left before festivities started.

The IRS move is likely to mean a vast change in nitery operation, and many owners hope that the end of the tax in this instance will hypo dinner business. It is now likely that separate checks will be given for food and liquor consumed prior to the start of the show. Should a patron stay over for the entertainment and order additional items, a separate check could be given on which the tax would be added.

Cafemen indicated that the IRS has legalized this procedure which was based on court rulings in several cases. All of the cases were virtually identical—a patron had paid his bill before the show went on and the operator didn't add the 10% tax.

One of the earliest tax cases of this nature arose when the 20% cabaret bite was in effect. Nick Prounis, operator of the Versailles, N.Y., claimed that a verbal ruling by the IRS had been given him which stated that food and liquor consumed before the entertainment went on was not subject to the tax.

This was later disputed by the IRS, which pressed for approximately $750,000 taxes. Unable to pay such a huge backlog, the Versailles closed and never reopened. Had Prounis taken the issue to court, he might have won.

Gunman Shoots Mass. Resort Nitery Owner As Rusty Warren Plays On

Revere Beach, Mass., July 16.

While Rusty Warren was in the middle of her act at the Surf Club Tuesday (9), the nitery owner, Peter DiCarlo, 51, was shot twice in the chest by the father of a man now doing a long prison sketch for a stickup at the same spot.

The shots came during the second show, but most of the capacity audience was unaware of the shooting because the gun used by his alleged assailant, John Silva Sr., 62, was equipped with a silencer.

Two bullets were removed from DiCarlo's chest in an emergency operation. After being on the danger list for 24 hours, his condition was reported as "satisfactory." Silva was treated for a severe head gash. Police clubbed him with a revolver to subdue him following the shooting.

Police said Silva walked into the lounge of the club, where a door had been pulled from its hinges by Saturday night (6) crowds trying to get in to catch Miss Warren, and blazed away at DiCarlo.

Silva's 28-year-old son, John Jr., pistol whipped DiCarlo's son, Joseph, during a stickup at the club in August, 1961, and is now doing 16-20 years in State Prison for that crime. Shooting of the elder DiCarlo is believed to have stemmed from that, police said.

Miss Warren was booked into the club for two weeks, opening Monday (1) and closed Sunday (14), with a sellout every night.

Empire, Newcastle, Vaude Showcase, Due for Razing

Newcastle-on-Tyne, July 16.

The Empire Theatre, sole mainstay of vaude in this northeast England city, has been sold to Newcastle City Council for $525,000, and will be torn down in September. The city planning committee will give "favorable consideration" to an application for a new vaudery on modern lines.

Only remaining theatres in Newcastle are the local legiter, the Theatre Royal, and the Flora Robson Playhouse. Many American acts have topped the bill at the Empire, but shows have been difficult to obtain in recent years.

Hilton Hotels Int'l To Operate P.R.'s Dorado Riviera

San Juan, July 16.

Hilton Hotels International has signed an agreement to operate the Dorado Riviera Hotel for an inital 20 years. The 222-room hotel, a half-hour drive from San Juan which also has an 18-hole golf course, will be called the Dorado Hilton, according to Conrad Hilton, president of Hilton Hotel Corp.; Gasper Roca, president of International Investment Co., and George Geiger, president of Dorado Hilton Hotel Corp., a new company which owns the hotel's facilities.

International Investment Co. acquired 50% of the ownership of the hotel as part of the transaction on a total investment of $1,200,000. The Dorado Hilton as it stands today is valued at an estimated $7,500,000. The State Mutual Life Assurance Co., of Worcester, Mass., remains holder of the first mortgage in excess of $3,000,000.

Formal announcement, made both here and in New York, climaxed a series of reports about the changeover in the hotel's ownership and management.

While International Investment took 50%, Geiger, who is also president of Hotel Abbey, in New York, retained the other 50 per cent of the ownership. Geiger, prime developer of the new hotel, also was named president of the Dorado Hilton Hotel Corp., while Roca was named board chairman.

Conrad Hilton in a statement said that Hilton Hotels feel that the Dorado Hilton would complement the Caribe Hilton Hotel's San Juan operation, which does not have a golf course.

It was also learned that the Hilton chain will start an intensive sales promotion program for the Dorado Hilton through all its outlets. A manager for the Dorado Hilton is expected to be named this week. Meanwhile, Caribe Hilton Hotel manager Lawrence Boyle, and other executives from San Juan and other Hilton hotels, continue to run the hotel.

Rochester Hockey Club Hits Lean 'Capades' Deal

Rochester, N.Y., July 16.

The Rochester Americans of the American Hockey League, which annually promotes 'Ice Capades" in the Rochester War Memorial Auditorium, has requested a different rental arrangement for future bookings.

Jack Riley, general manager of the hockey club, who said "we need a better break on the ice show," has asked the War Memorial Commission for a $1,000 a day rental against 50% of profit arrangement. Riley's figures show the hockey club has lost money the last two years of the "Ice Capades" promotion when the terms were less favorable for the club.

"Since our hockey loss is considerable, we must get a better break on the ice show," Riley said in his letter to the commission. Lester Pollock, special consultant to the commission, is due to meet with Riley.

Diahann Carroll's Dual Deal at Sands, Vegas

Hollywood, July 16.

Diahann Carroll, current in the legit-musical "No Strings," has been inked to a dual deal for the Sands Hotel, Las Vegas. She's to play her first date Oct. 9 for three weeks. The second will be for three or four weeks during a mutually agreeable date in 1964. She's to get $12,500 weekly during both stints.

Deal was made by General Artists Corp.

AGVA Postpones Suspension Trials

Hollywood, July 16.

Hearings by a three-man American Guild of Variety Artists' trial board of other AGVA members up on same charges which drew 10-year suspensions for past prexy Penny Singleton, Bruce Yarnell and Doug Spears, have been continued by board to an indefinite date.

Motion by William E. Ferriter, attorney for Miss Singleton who last week brought suit against union and four members in Los Angeles Federal Court over the AGVA action in suspending her, was granted by board when Ferriter pointed out that actress' upcoming suit would have a direct bearing on other cases, since they were all being tried on same charges. Attorney's motion was made as board started hearing on Roy Rogers (not the cowboy actor) Wednesday (10) at Knickerbocker Hotel.

Trial board—consisting of chairman Vincent Silk, Sid Marion and Jack Haley, same panel which previously sat on cases of Miss Singleton et al.—was interrupted shortly after proceedings started when a U.S. marshal entered room and served Silk and Marion with copies of the Singleton suit, which names both as defendants.

In her complaint, the actress asks an injunction against union to prevent it from enforcing its 10-year suspension of her, charges breach of contract and demands $75,000 damages, and alleged bias and prejudice by trial board.

An hour later, during the noon hour, the U.S. marshal served Jimmy Kelly, branch manager of local AGVA, and Irvin Mazzei, union's western regional director and also named as defendant in Singleton suit, with same documents as were served Silk and Marion.

Hearing by Federal Judge Leon Yankwich on actress' first cause of action—an injunction against enforcement of AGVA suspension—has been continued until July 22. Bench granted motion by AGVA attorney Edgar Bardin for a continuance upon his assertion that necessary evidence was in New York.

Los Angeles, July 16.

Leon Escobar, director of a Mexican ballet troupe, was awarded $6,352 damages from Frank Sennes yesterday (Mon.) by Superior Judge Jesse J. Franpton, on grounds that Sennes did not fulfill an agreement made June 20, 1958 whereby he was to book ballet at Stardust Hotel, Las Vegas, and Palmer House, Chicago.

Escobar in his suit claimed he cancelled a South American tour in favor of U.S. stands. Sennes in his defense claimed he couldn't obtain approval of American Guild of Variety Artists to appearance of Escobar's troupe.

Caribe Hilton's Staff Shifts

San Juan, July 16.

Nicolas Albors, previously entertainment and publicity manager at the Caribe Hilton Hotel, has been upped to executive assistant manager of the Mayaguez Hilton, scheduled to open early in 1964.

Patricia Lee Tracy has been named director of public relations and social activities at the Caribe Hilton, while Luis Velez, staffer with the Hilton banquet department, has been promoted to banquet sales manager.

Adams May Win AGVA Presidency By Default as Pat O'Brien Withdraws

The race for the presidency of the American Guild of Variety Artists may fall to incumbent Joey Adams by default unless the courts order otherwise. Pat O'Brien, who had agreed to run against Adams, has withdrawn from the contest but complications may force his name to be placed on the ballot.

Should O'Brien win under those circumstances, it's likely that the presidency may either fall to Adams who would be runnerup, or it could go to the candidate elected to the first vicepresidency. Other possibility is that ex-AGVA prez Penny Singleton may be placed on the ballot.

The complicating factor came last week in Los Angeles Federal Court, where Miss Singleton filed suit to force AGVA to call off her 10-year suspension. Hearing was postponed to July 22 due to lack of time by the AGVA attorney to acquaint himself with the facts in the matter and because he stated that the AGVA ballots had already been printed.

If that is the case then O'Brien's name is already on the ballot. Before the July 3 deadline for withdrawal, O'Brien had sent in his acceptance along with his picture and statement for publication in the union's house organ. His change of heart came after the deadline.

O'Brien bowed out of the race on grounds he doesn't have the necessary time to properly devote to post if elected. He's writing a book, is set for summer and Fall stock and has a picture to do in Europe, probably in Ireland, later in Fall.

O'Brien skied to San Antonio, Tex., Monday (15) to star in production of "Mister Roberts," follows this with an engagement in "Finian's Rainbow" in Binghamton, N. Y., then is slated to go to Sullivan, Ill., for "Holiday for Lovers" in which he will star with his wife, Eloise.

Also withdrawing from the race for treasurer was Frank Ross. Russell Swann and Arthur Tracey are the sole candidates for that post.

Britain's Isle of Man Ups Ad Coin to Lure Tourists

Isle of Man, Eng., July 16.

An additional $36,000, given to the island tourist board this year, will be used to advertise this resort's location and promote special events this summer.

Members of the island parliament believe the Isle of Man may emerge in next five years as the leading holiday resort of the British Isles. It was a fashionable vacation spot in Victorian days, and many feel it can re-emerge.

Some 450,000 visitors are expected this year. The Isle of Man has stage shows in its main centers, plus other outdoor attractions.

Sherman, Ex-MCA, Named Assistant To GAC's Barnett

Paul Sherman, a former resident attorney at MCA, has been named assistant to GAC board chairman Lawrence Barnett. He gets veepee chevrons as well. Sherman, after the demise of the MCA talent agency last July, helped form the lawfirm of Sherman, Barovick & Konecky, of which the senior members were all MCA alumni. One of the firm's clients was UTM Artists Ltd., which was recently absorbed by GAC.

Sherman will come into GAC in a non-legal capacity. He had been a copyright expert. While at MCA he supervised legit, film, literary and variety fields. He's a Yale Law School grad and is chairman of the Authors' Committee of the American Bar Assn. and a charter trustee of the Copyright Society of the USA.

The appointment of Sherman moves GAC further along into the MCA image. Barnett was president of Music Corp. of America, an MCA subsidiary and remained with the MCA parent until April 20. With his entry into GAC as board chairman, he became the second largest holder of Baldwin-Montrose common stock. B-M is the GAC parent company.

Elsewhere at GAC, Ira Okun of the Coast nitery dept. shifted to the William Morris Agency. In New York, Judy Kyle of the club-date dept., and Jesse Strum, of the one-nighter sector, resigned.

Comedian Johnny Matson will emcee this year's annual "Aqua Follies" starting tomorrow (Wednesday) and continuing through July 28 before moving on to Seattle to headline a celebration there. The locally produced Al Sheehan water and stage show is the principal attraction of the annual Aquatennial festival here.

In addition to Matson, stage acts will be the Three Renowns, a British comedy adagio turn, and husband-and-wife West & Maza presenting "Build a Band."

The stage portion also has a line of 24 dancing gals to supplement the show's main attraction which is topdrawer high diving and swimming stars and 28 Aqua Darling swimmers.

'Holiday on Ice' Preps '64 Edition in Knoxville

Knoxville, July 16.

Ruth Tyson and her crew are here at the Civic Coliseum rehearsing the 1964 edition of "Holiday on Ice." Five weeks of preparation will be conducted prior to the Aug. 14 world premiere at the Coliseum.

After leaving Knoxville the troupe will start a 43-week tour of 31 states, ending in Mexico City next June. This is the third year the 20-year-old ice show has rehearsed and premiered in Knoxville.

Zeckendorf Retaining Show Biz Realty; Deny MCA Freedomland Buy

Hollywood, July 16.

William Zeckendorf, the beleaguered head of one of the nation's largest realty firms, Webb & Knapp, is apparently attempting to hold onto his New York show biz related properties. This formula is becoming evident with his retention of the Zeckendorf hotels which include the Astor, Taft, Drake and Commodore, and despite rumors, Freedomland, the Bronx amusement park. Zeckendorf reportedly was negotiating with MCA for the sale of Freedomland. However, a Zeckendorf spokesman denied the report.

Zeckendorf last week ordered a sale of 25 properties in New York through which he hoped to realize over $7,000,000. The proceeds totalled $2,622,000 on 10 properties. The other 15 failed to draw any bids.

A single tract comprising 500,000 sq. ft. adjacent to Freedomland was not sold at the auction held Wednesday (10) at the Hotel Astor's grand ballroom. Zeckendorf declared later that it had been disposed of for more than $2,000,000 to a motel chain. It was estimated that the average mortgage on the properties was around 40% of the value. Therefore, the net return to Zeckendorf for the day's activities would be around $1,575,000 in cash.

A British investment in Webb & Knapp didn't fare too well either. The Second Covent Garden Property Co., which poured $12,600,000 into Zeckendorf projects, was forced to lower dividends considerably during the current year. A report circulated over the weekend to shareholders stated that the half-year dividend was cut from 6% to 4% and forecast a final

Laurentians, Canada's Borscht Circuit, Luring U.S. Tourists with 'Catskill' Bills

By CHARLES LAZARUS

Ste. Agathe, Que., July 16.

In its own comparative way, this "capital" of the resort playlands, some 60 miles north of Montreal, is to the Laurentian mountains what the Monticello-Liberty-Kiamesha Lake, etc., area is to show biz and the Catskills.

No question that this year the live-performance shows have been hypoed quite considerably over recent years and, given a break by the weather—the last week has been real rough with the freak cold spell that stretched all the way to Manhattan and beyond—resorts and performers should make a good buck by the time Labor Day rolls around.

Credit for this improved situation can go first to construction of the Laurentian Autoroute, an expressway which brings tourists up to the mountains at a 70-mile limit, making Ste. Agathe just about one hour from Montreal; second, the peripatetic and fast-moving Jack Rubin (Montreal's Charlie Rapp), whose Eldon Star House Agency has come up with some smart gimmicks and ingenious doubling and tripling among the hotels; and third, the fact that the tourist season finds the area loaded with Americans, the majority of whom seem to like American-type entertainment even when they're away from home.

Over weekend, (6-7) there were four hotels that attracted the bulk of customers—La Marquise, Manor House, Ste. Agathe Chalet and Castle des Monts. However, only La Marquise presented a bill aimed at getting not only a bigger crowd, but "better business" in terms of clients whose taste was at the roots of the longhair set.

La Marquise

This spot, operated by Sonny and Lillian Marcovitch, seems to have latched on to a good thing with its "Miniature Concert Series." Show caught featured soprano Evelyn Maxwell and basso Edward Roch, both singing light classics and popular opera arias to begoff applause, plus Maury Kaye at the piano with his "Capsule Concert."

Kaye also plays the pop classics on Friday night, and has a Jazz Festival on Wednesdays, but it's not so much the actual "new" type of show which is attracting the customers, but the new tone which the owners are giving the place.

Feature last week, for example, was an exhibit of "French-Canadian" which got heavy play in the papers, radio and tv, and it's intended to continue this policy on a year-'round basis.

No cover or minimum at nitery show.

Manor House

This is more standard stuff with an emcee and singer getting good reaction from the vacationers. Featured at show caught were chirper Annie Brooks, who'll soon appear at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto; Jolly Roger doing okay emcee chores, and Lenny Rubin at the ivories, aided by a small band.

Manor House is popular spot for the younger, action set, and provides a nice attraction for those who accept a modest entertainment package.

No cover or minimum, but nominal charge (25c) for outsiders.

Castle Des Monts

Solid entertainment package provided by Nelson Ventor, whose saxophone played with great skill, and jump vocalizing, had the crowd begging for more.

Arleigh Peterson & Cynthia were the openers with some native fire dancing which had the crowd on edge. Don Keller's ventro stint should be speeded for better results. Lee Kane is an adequate emcee.

Chalet

Barney Flegel's Band and emcee Don Hatfield furnish informal laughs for the young set, who accept their entertainment with a minimum of informality. Okay but nothing sensational.

Godfrey's Theatre Dates

Arthur Godfrey has booked a pair of theatre dates for next year. He's pacted for the Fisher Theatre, Detroit, May 4, to be followed by O'Keefe Centre, Toronto, May 11. These will be vaude revue at legit scales.

Other appearances booked for him by Ashley Steiner-Famous Artists include the Trenton State Fair Sept. 14 and Harrah's, Lake Tahoe, Sept. 23. Acts on the bills with Godfrey will comprise Nipsey Russell, Buffalo Bills, Geesinslaw Bros., Dixieland Eight and singer Kong Ling.

AS-FA recently started a personal appearance department headed by Harry A. Romm.

Tomerlin Bros. & Bill Harrah Give Reno New Look

Reno, July 16.

There's an all-new look to Center Street in downtown Reno—thanks to gamblers Bill and Jim Tomerlin, and Bill Harrah.

The Golden, destroyd by fire in April, 1962, reopened with the Tomerlin Bros. proudly hosting first nighters for a look see at the plush new facility.

And in June, Bill Harrah held a grand opening his new casino-restaurant immediately adjacent to the Golden. The two new businesses are expected to hypo the downtown trade and were rushed for opening in time to nab the summer tourists at this gaming mecca.

Albeit the Golden is not yet complete, it's enjoying fullhouse business. In operation now is the huge casino area, a card room, three bars and the Carnival Room, a 200-seater with entertainment from dusk to dawn. Currently billed are Buddy Greco, Helen Boice, Johnny Bachemin, Frank Verna Four, the Availables, and the Notables.

To be completed at the Golden within a few weeks are the La Rue Cafe, a 175-seat restaurant on the street floor, and the Gourmet Room, an intimate spot for the more discriminating diners, on the lower level.

The Golden's theatre-restaurant, with a capacity of 500, is scheduled to open between Aug. 1 and 15 with a Barry Ashton production. Ashton was producing the Golden's show at the time of the 1962 fire.

Future plans for the Golden call for a 25-floor hotel tower, a 1,000-seat convention centre, swimming pool, and other facilities. The second, third and fourth floors of the structure will accommodate inside parking for 300 cars.

Harrah's new casino, operated almost back to back his Virginia Street club, features gaming on the street level. plus a bar and snack bar.

Also expected to stimulate Reno downtown business is the opening of the Riverside Hotel, scheduled for late this month. Shuttered since last December when the inn went bankrupt under the helm of Raymond Spector of New York, the hostelry has been extensively remodeled on the street level.

The Corner Bar of the hotel has been restored and the theatre-restaurant has been eliminated to allow for expanded gaming areas. Entertainment will be of the lounge type, with a long bar separating the casino from the entertainment area. The stage will be visible to bar patrons, with lounge seating on a level below the bar.

A group of California and Nevada investors have leased the entire hotel from the Hughes Porter Corp., which purchased it from Spector. Jack Sommers will oversee the hotel, bar, and restaurant operations, and Johnny Sanford has been named to manage the casino. Neither hold a financial interest in the hotel at this time. Both men were formerly with the Holiday Hotel in Reno and were reportedly instrumental in forming the combine that bought the Riverside.

The annual Greensboro Agricultural Fair, which opens a five-day run Sept. 24, has named Glenn W. Canter manager. He previously was assistant to Mrs. Clyde Kendall, secretary of the Greensboro Fair Assn.

Chicago, July 16.

Duke Ellington is writing a one-hour "musical extravaganza" limning 100 years of Negro progress for the A Century of Negro Progress Exposition at Chi's McCormick Place Aug. 16-Sept. 2. He is calling it "My People," and it will have a cast of 50 singers and dancers including Joya Sherrill, Geoffrey Holder, Lil Greenwood, Milt Grayson, Carmen de Lavallade, Bunny Briggs, Tally Beatty, and the Alvin Ailey Dance Theatre. He also expects to use drop-in guest artists for the two-a-day shows.

"I've got only about one minute of social protest written into the script," Ellington told reporters at a press conference, "because while this aspect warrants notice, it unfairly tends to overshadow the continuing contributions of the Negro to American life. 'My people' is definitely not political. It has social significance, but the accent will be on entertainment."

The exposition commemorates the 100th anniversary of the issuance of the Emancipation Proclamation by President Abraham Lincoln in 1863. In addition to the Ellington show in the Arie Crown Theatre, a performing arts center will be set up in the exhibit hall with the Larry Steele Dancers depicting the history of Negro dances on one stage and a variety show on the other.

The rest of the exhibit hall will

Chasin, Citron, Park, All Ex-MCA, New Ag'cy Pards

Hollywood, July 16.

George Chasin, former MCA senior veepee and board member, has joined former MCAgents Arthur Park and Herman Citron, in what will henceforth be known as the Chasin-Park-Citron agency. Chasin had also been overtured by GAC and Ashley-Steiner regarding joining those companies as a top exec.

Chasin was head of MCA's motion picture, literary, publication and theatre departments until the talent agency folded a year ago. He had been slated to be prexy of the spunoff agency, until Government intervention forced dissolution of the percentery.

Subsequently, Chasin affiliated with MCA Inc. at Universal City as an exec. and he recently resigned that post, to return to the agency field. Park and Citron had formed their own agency following the demise of MCA's agency.

The trio are full partners under the new setup.

Horse Acts Not Extinct Says Tommy Hanneford

Chicago.

Editor, VARIETY:

In a recent article in VARIETY, Mrs. Bonnie Kernan was quoted as regretting the demise of excellent horse acts and giving this as the reason for not having a horse act in her current production.

It seems to us that Mrs. Kernan is indulging in a bit of nostalgia. And as frequently happens, when dreaming about the good old days, one's memory may be inclined to be quite accurate.

We feel the horse acts of today are far superior to those of even a generation ago. Since ours is a development of five generations, today in our act three members can do very hazardous horse-to-horse back-flip which was indeed a rarity not too long ago. The three-person standing jump is a regular feature of our act at every performance. And one of our members does the handstand-on-horse for three full revolutions of the 40-foot ring—a great advancement over yesteryear.

Mrs. Kernan may be right in saying there are not as many horse acts as in the past, but to imply that the present ones are inferior is an opinion not substantiated by fact or audience reaction. Nostalgia and memory are wonderful but sometimes deceiving.

Classy Club Act Rises From Ruins

By John Pagones

A NEW NIGHTCLUB act, like a new play, ought to be reviewed twice—on the night it opens and near the end of its try-out period.

Pagones

No matter how carefully an act has been conceived, no matter how perfect the rehearsals, it still needs a shake down before a live audience to iron out the wrinkles.

The case of Elizabeth Seal and Zack Matalon, who finished a two-week stand at the Shoreham's Blue Room last week, is a prime example.

Husband and wife, both are established stars; Miss Seal on the stage and Matalon in the supper clubs both here and abroad and, most recently, on the stage, too.

Their opening night was fraught with bugs, not a few of their own making. But by the end of their engagement they had evolved a smooth, classy, well-balanced show of dancing and singing.

Chief among the Matalons' problems on opening night was the defection of their musical conductor. It's a long, involved story and the upshot is that the Matalons are bringing suit against him.

The miracle is that the show came off at all without the essential arrangements, but Bob Cross and his band worked like demons and, with a little improvisation here and a lot of improvisation there, everything managed to fall into place.

THE NEXT problem was the microphones. Concealed on the person to allow complete freedom of movement, these mikes can cause complete chaos, unless there is perfect radio reception. Hearing aids, transistor radios and random radio signals can interfere and on opening night the contraptions simply weren't working. They produced either a fearful static or no reception at all.

Some other insignificant, though disturbing, items also crept in. Matalon's costume, for instance, a white suit and pastel shoes, was made almost comic by a harsh spotlight. (Liberace wears a white suit, too, but it is studded by so many sparkling artifacts it doesn't make any difference.)

But the Matalons have a lot going for them. Besides a bundle of talent and immense pride in their work, they have tremendous drive, energy and brains. Not incidental was their act, which was basically sound.

First of all, Matalon, a trained musician as well as a singer and dancer, worked on the arrangements. A passel of new numbers were introduced.

The mikes were ditched for the conventional stand-up mikes. (Gordon and Sheila McRae, only two months ago, had the same trouble here and also were forced to use stand-up mikes.)

THE REST was simple. Opening nighters will remember the finale, "Me and My Shadow"; Miss Seal's splendid "Dis Donc," from "Irma La Douce"; Matalon singing his own composition, "Banana," and two or three more numbers.

All else is new; all else is first rate, the kind of joyful verve you can expect in an excellent supper club act.

Matalon shows a wonderful singing voice in "Old Devil Moon" and handles the continuity with easy style.

Disneyland Shelling Out 42G Weekly To Entertain 35,000 Daily Visitors

By DALE OLSON

Hollywood, July 16.

With 11 varied entertainment groups, a diversity of unusual amusement attractions and a full schedule of specialty events, Disneyland is entering its "Salute to Summer, 1963," with a $42,000 weekly entertainment tab.

Walt Disney's magic kingdom today has grown far away from the mere fantasy and mystical area it started out to be almost nine years ago. By its ninth anniversary, on July 17, the famed Anaheim tourist attraction will include as wide a variety of amusement as can be found in any operation in the country—and perhaps the world.

ing day marks an international step for Disneyland when Donna Jackson, one of the permanent park hostess staff, leaves for Copenhagen to participate in an exchange plan with the Tivoli Gardens which will send one of its hostesses to Disneyland.

Summer schedule at the park heightens nighttime activities. Disney has gathered as varied a collection of musicians as can be found to attract the widest audience potential. Significantly, with only three exceptions, each is included in the initial $1.60 ticket tab to the park.

Attractions include The Elliott Bros. orchestra, offering conventional dance music; Spacemen & Kay Bell, group headed by one of the former teenage Bell Sisters (now a L.A. schoolteacher who works Disneyland on weekends and in the summer) who gives the Twist and watusi set all the frenetic gyrating rhythm they could want; Ward Singers, the gospel group led by Mother Gertrude Ward; Royal Tahitians, island singers and dancers who present a collection of musical varieties that culminates in an exciting fire night dance; Scottsville Squirrel Barkers, bluegrass music in Frontierland; Pat & Victoria, folk singers at the Pirate Ship; Gonzales Trio, Mexican songs in Frontierland; Pavillion String Quartet, folk singer Denny Brooks and, on weekends, the Firehouse Five Plus Two.

Three attractions at extra cost to patrons are topped by the newest Disneyland feature, the Enchanted Tiki Room. At a 75c admission, the room offers good fare for families and should rate top tourist attention. For the more sophisticated, it may be a mishmosh of exaggerated color and too much craftsy animation, but it maintains interest for engineering alone.

Unique Animation

Show essentially is a concoction of talking and singing birds and statues, all presented under a new "Audio-Animatronics" system developed by WED Enterprises. Following 10 years of research and a cost of $1,000,000, system is presented for the first time at the park, using 225 animated performers.

Two additional ticketed entertainment attractions are Papotin's Revue, Andre Tahon's company of marottes (puppets) presented here in a fullscale miniature show following a successful production at Las Vegas, and the famed Young Men From New Orleans, Dixieland band playing on the Mark Twain riverboat. Latter features top Dixie stars of the country, including Johnny St. Cyr, Harvey Brooks, Alton Redd, Mike DeLay and Paul Barnes. Both are 50c tabs.

For specialty offerings, the park has Tiny Kline, 73-year-old former circus headliner who sails 863 feet across the park on a high wire as "Tinker Bell," ending her stint in a blaze of fireworks that costs $1,000 per night in the fireworks display alone.

At this point, total expenditure in Disneyland has grown to $44,000,000. Summer attendance averages 35,000 a day.

For next season, the park is now completing a New Orleans Square, to feature a haunted mansion (already built) and the Pirates of the Blue Bayou ride.

clared last week that ballots would not be printed for another fortnight. The AGVA house organ, with pictures and statements of all the candidates, is printed before the ballots go to press, according to George Abrams, executive secretary of HBA.

There is also a possibility that the name of Miss Singleton, who was nominated for the presidency at the recent AGVA convention, may be ordered put on the ballot by the Federal Court. AGVA had ruled her ineligible because of the suspension. She is seeking to have the suspension invalidated and have her name restored to good standing.

Last year, Miss Singleton was also suspended, that time for five years, but she was made persona grata after the election. She was again put on the unfair list shortly before the June convention, an action which was upheld by the delegates.

be devoted to 21 "theme centres," progressively tracing the evolution of the American Negro from his African heritage to his present status. Emphasis will be on Negro contributions to the arts, sciences and professions.

One theme centre will be the Sports Arena, where a Baltimore Zephyr basketball star will act as official host in an audience-participation show. Youngsters will compete against and receive instruction from w.k. basketball, baseball, tennis and track stars.

Civic and governmental displays will include exhibits by the City of Chicago, the State of Illinois and an Avenue of States in which other states will show the contributions of native Negro sons. Federal agencies which will be exhibitors include the Dept. of State, the Commerce Dept., Veteran Administration, Post Office Dept. and the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare.

President Kennedy has authorized issuance of a special commemorative stamp on the opening day of the exposition. U.S. Postmaster General J. Edward Day will attend the preem ceremonies and will officially open a temporary postoffice at McCormick Place, where stamps and first day covers will be sold.

Chi Cops Hit Major Peeleries With New Crackdown vs. B-Girls & 'Rolling'

Chicago, July 16.

Chi police have mounted a tough new campaign against strip joints where B-girls solicit customers to buy phony liquor for $2.50 and sometimes get rolled in the process. The police commissioner has assigned a "preventive patrol" for almost constant surveillance of 15 major peeleries considered to be the property of the crime syndicate.

Also, the Illinois Dept. of Labor said that it would seek to revoke the licenses of theatrical agents who book exotic dancers into the peel parlors (called "bust-out joints" by the demi-monde). The law permits the State Labor Dept. to revoke the license of an agent who books a dancer into "any questionable place, or place of bad repute . . . the character of which the licensee knows actually or by reputation."

The crackdown was apparently precipitated by a recent four-part series by Sandy Smith, crime writer for the Chicago Sun-Times. In what amounted to a police beat coup, Smith acquired the books of one of the divestiture dives, and from them deduced that the 15 syndicate spots were taking in $1,800,000 annually, with little of it reported to the Internal Revenue Service.

Smith also traced the ownership of the joints to two alleged "elder statesmen" of the mob, one responsible for the south State St. "parlors" and the other for the north Clark St. spots.

In one of the articles, Alton Sharp, Chi branch manager for the American Guild of Variety Artists, was asked why the stripperies were permitted to use records for the peelers in violation of that union's Minimum Basic Agreement which specifically forbids this. Sharp said that he was "amazed" that nothing had been done about it. The strippers are the largest regular contributors of dues and health & welfare payments to the Chi AGVA office.

No Savez Francais So Ontario Rep Quits Mont'l International Exhib Board

Toronto, July 16.

Because he can't speak French, Harry Price, immediate past prexy of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, and Ontario rep on the board of the forthcoming international exhibition in Montreal, has submitted his resignation.

On policy differences between him and the board, Price said, "Not being bilingual, I wouldn't know." He and Victor Oland of Halifax, are the only two of the 14-man board who cannot speak French.

Oland said that, in Halifax, four meetings were attended but discussion was mainly in French. He expostulated, "I can see what Mr. Price means. It is not very good to attend a meeting and then have to read about it in the press after the meeting."

The Montreal exhibition is being financed by $20,000,000 from the Federal government; $15,000,000 from the Province of Quebec; and $5,000,000 from Montreal).

A spokesman for the "world's fair" said that weekly meeting (Fridays) deliberations were distributed to directors some five days later.

(Eleven of the board members are residents of Quebec, with one each from Ontario, Nova Scotia and British Columbia).

No provision is made for simultaneous translation at the meetings, claimed Price, but upon request, said a spokesman, a translation of any portion of the meeting, not understood by a board member, can be obtained from the chairman or secretary.

Inside Stuff—Vaude

Hesseltine, Bookman & Seff, one of the offshoots of MCA, feels that it has a list of clients sufficiently distinguished as to classify the firm as a major company. Citing its roster, firm's topper Stark Hesseltine takes exception to a July 3 story in VARIETY containing the sentence, "The only major compayn formed by MCA personnel that hasn't come into GAC is agency for the Performing Arts headed by Dave Baumgarten." Hesseltine says, "with all due respect to our former colleague and friend, we humbly submit that you left us out."

Americana, N. Y.

The Royal Box of the Americana tees off its summer policy with Della Reese (following Eddie Fisher's click semester) and with it is a reduced "entertainment charge" (so billed, instead of couvert) of $2.50 and $3 (Sat.). Miss Reese brings to the class boite a swinging song session that is in high key and shows off the RCA Victor disker in fine fettle.

To paraphrase her rousing finale "Long Way From St. Louis," Miss Reese has come a long way from her native Detroit and her swing-singing novitiate with Mahalia Jackson. She doesn't forget her gospel heritage as she reprises "Sweet Chariot" and finales with audience-participation tambourine support, handing out the props to the customers who get into the mood with the same gusto as the Sweet Chariot nitery in N.Y. which paved the way for the tambo bit.

Miss Reese is another personality who gives answer to the now old-hat, crying-towel mourners about where will new talent come from. Talent will out and, in Miss Reese's case, apart from the obvious seasoning as a group member of the Mahalia Jackson gospeleers, she has achieved poise and authority. Her basically attractive personality is well fortified sartorially.

Vocally she swings from the opening "Happy Face," which is an appropriate theme song for the cheerful earful who medleys items like "Danced All Night," "Wanna Be Around," "Fly to Moon," "More," "Bill Bailey," "Nobody Till Somebody," "Lady Tramp," "Best Thing For You," "Don't You Know" (her smash disk) etc.

Her saloon floor authority is evidenced with the minimal but effective small talk, such as the "insincerity" of stalling for a routine encore repertoire which any singer has thoroughly rehearsed and would be heartbroken if there wasn't enough "genuine" applause to warrant being recalled.

The Royal Box has again dispensed with the elevated floor that Fisher incepted; it would be a good idea for all talent so that the offringsiders can have equal vantage views. The room seems to be doing business and plans remaining open all summer, with Carmen Cavallaro and Phyllis Diller as the July-August bookings until the Royal Box formally reopens for the fall with Johnny Mathis, Diahann Carroll and Pearl Bailey among the new season components.

Charles Fiske's dansapators more than sustain their end of the Royal Box's attractions, not the least of which is Claude C. Philippe's excellent groceries and a slick service staff under maitre d'hotel Peter Ronga and aide Tony Pappas. Abel.

Helen Forrest, Frank Sinatra Jr., Pied Pipers, (4) Ziggy Elman, Tommy Dorsey Orch (15) directed by Sam Donohue with Jeannie Thomas; Joey Stevens, club emcee; $2 admission, $4.50-$5 minimum.

The music of the Tommy Dorsey Orch directed by Sam Donohue fills the Vermillion room of the 500 Club and introduces Frank Sinatra Jr., just as many years ago Frank Sinatra Sr. was introed to start his show biz career with the original Dorsey organization.

The combination of the Dorsey band, young Sinatra, songstress Helen Forrest, The Pied Pipers, Ziggy Elman and Jeannie Thomas gives an all music 80-minute show which has no letdown and should do boff business here throughout the week.

The fact that young Frank is in the big 500 Club, where Sinatra Sr. has played to sellout crowds so many times, may have attracted the curious. But they are rewarded with a standout show.

Sinatra Jr. appears early, well backed by the Dorsey orch to sing such oldies as "Without a Song," "I've Bought You Violets," "Night and Day" and "Pennies from Heaven." He's deserving of the applause which follows each of his numbers. His begoff is "Sunny Side of the Street."

He's strongly reminiscent of the voice and looks of his sire. And while the 19-year old lad has much to learn, he has the stuff to make his own way. He offers none of the patter for which pop is noted, but relies on his song routine.

His appearance here follows three months in which the unit played the southwest, midwest and Coast before coming east.

Titian-haired Helen Forrest, sharp in a midnight blue strapless gown, is featured by the Dorsey group and does a varied program of oldies which scores with the patrons. She goes sentimental with "Lonesome Road," soulfully sings "September," changes pace with "Shimmy Like My Sister Kate," and bows off after a medley of faves. She encores with "You Made Me Love You."

The Pier Pipers—Clark Yocum, Lee Gotch, Ralph Brewster, and the eye-catching Jeanne McManus—register solidly with yesteryear faves. Quartet does "Sunny Side of the Street," "Dreams," "You're Driving Me Crazy" and "I'll Never Smile Again," latter this with young Sinatra. They all get heavy and deserved mitting. Fast "Chicago" as a finale brings in Donohue with his big sax.

Show tees off with orch playing Dorsey theme song and bringing on Jeannie Thomas with vocal, "Start of Something." She does "Tonight" and bows out with "Shine" to nice miting. She's followed by trumpeter Ziggy Elman, once a localite, who plays a hot "Swanee River" plus a dozen others.

Sam Donohue does a sock job with the orch, which gives vocalists top backing and contribs a varied program of its own. Tino Barzie, who put show together, relies on tunes made famous in the Dorsey era. Withal, it's a production of music, mostly oldies, with no patter beyond the few words of introduction by Donohue. Club emcee Joey Stevens introes the band. Walk.

Pigalle, London

London, July 9.

Shani Wallis, Palermo & Phillips, Will Gaines, Peter Dixon, Vicky Grey, Pigalle Dancers & Mannequins, Christiane, Jack Nathan Orch; special material, Billy Petch; $4.20 minimum.

"Tropical Paradise," the new concoction for out-of-towners and charge accounters at this brassy nitery, shows a fine flair for individual acts. But the basic formula of terpers, semi-nudes and gaudy decoration remains the same.

The routines, egregiously devised by Billy Petch, are given with more enthusiasm than talent by a bevy of gals, more notable for their physiques than their physiognomy. One, tagged Christiane, swims in a water tank. Another, Vicky Grey, deploys limber limbs. Peter Dixon warbles as if his life depends on the volume—as indeed it may.

What makes the show superior to most of its kind are the performers not imbedded in the format. Topliner is Shani Wallis, an enthusiastic thrush who succeeded Elizabeth Seal in the West End "Irma La Douce." In a metallic gown and looking like every businessman's dream of a closing-time date, she scores with a display which stirs the corpuscles and aims straight at the lonelyhearts.

It's a well-calculated routine, taking in oldies like "Isn't It a Lovely Day?" and a fairly witty ditty about the Christine Keeler affair. Miss Wallis shows a keen sense of audience judgment, even coming up, on the night caught, with a serenade to some Spanish customers. Her personality is admirably attuned to this sort of hybrid entertainment.

As a performer, Miss Wallis tends to be a composite of other singer's influences, even trying a Judy Garland tremolo and a Connie Francis rasp. But she has an unerring touch with an almost musicomedy number, and a nice sense of humor.

Palermo & Phillips, from South America, come up with an exciting display of juggling-to-music, bringing gasps with their club-wielding and their snappy presentation. In a more offbeat vein, Will Gaines, a Negro terper from the U.S., produces some superb tapping and acrobatics delivered with deceptive ease.

It might be time for the Pigalle to try a drastic change of format, for the tendency to dub oldhat dance routines with different titles has surely outlived its usefulness. But, on this occasion, the standby formula is saved by gifted contributions from the soloists. And Miss Wallis is a large tonic in herself. Jack Nathan's band, more zippy than usual, is a decided asset. Otta.

7TH TIME IN K. C.

NELSON EDDY and GALE SHERWOOD are back at spruced-up Eddys' in Kansas City, following their fire. It's their seventh run there. "All in all, Mr. Eddy and Miss Sherwood will probably restore your faith in night-club entertainment," said Don Hearn, Washington Daily News.

Upstairs at D'stairs, N.Y., Marks Another Cultural 1st With 'Money' Revue

The intimate cafe revue seems to have its natural course, and now the Upstairs at the Downstairs which gave this form its greatest impetus has done some further pioneering with the installation of a book show. It's the first to be specifically written for a cafe. The move reflects a further advance on the cultural front for niteries.

The new display installed by Irving Haber is "Money," a sprightly and rewarding two acter with a four-people cast. Music is by Sam Pottle, and book and lyrics by David Axelrod and Tom Whedon. Ronny Graham, who brought in the previous revue, "Graham Crackers," has directed the current effort with an eye for action and humor. He has gotten much of both in the process.

The foursome on stage are hard-working and personable players. They perform with zest and spirit and at several points give some of the material more value than it inherently contains. The writers have taken a difficult course. They have chosen satire as their medium, which traditionally in the theatre, is something that closes Saturday night.

Money

Irving Haber presentation of Ronny Graham production, "Money;" with George Coe, Barbara Quaney, David Rounds, Jon Stone; director, Ronny Graham; costumes, Mr. William; lighting, George Curley; music, Sam Pottle; book and lyrics, David Axelrod & Tom Whedon; two piano accompaniment Sam Pottle & Bob Rogers. Opened July 9, '63 at Upstairs at Downstairs N.Y., $5-$6 minimums.

However, they have brought home the book with earthy humor and readily understood laughs. They have taken pot shots at many items, including organized charities, the medico-shows, medicine and many folk foibles. Most of the points are telling.

The plot has David Rounds, a scion of one of the "oldest nouveau riche families in the east," falling for a girl who'll have nothing to do with him until he amounts to something on his own. He ultimately finds that his major talent is idleness and just spreading his wealth about, which is okay with Barbara Quaney.

George Coe as the man-of-all trades knows how to throw a subtle dig at the status quo and Jon Stone has his moments as a suitor who is a born loser. His rendition of "Give a Cheer" is one of the high-points of the show. Miss Quaney carries her share admirably. She's the sole femme member of the assemblage but she doesn't let that interfere with a lot of natural drive which she puts into her work.

There are two major highspots in the show aside from the aforementioned Stone aria. The "Commitment" sequence, which pokes much fun at existing institutions, has a lot of social satire that is actually funny at any level of presentation. A more elaborate item is "The Philanthropist's Progress" in which the hapless hero just tries giving his money away. It provides a funny sequence of events which is tied together in the subtitle "A Cautionary Cantata."

The tunes are in the tradition of the modern musical. One just doesn't whistle them on the way out of the theatre, but they do further the action and help create atmosphere. The music and show are admirably performed with composer Pottle at one piano and Bob Rogers at the other. There are occasional interludes with an organ attachment. The scenery and costumes are minimal inasmuch as street clothes predominate in most scenes. A split curtain suffices as the scenery.

There is the feeling of "Candide" in much of the show. The naive hero provides a similarity to Voltaire prototype. But aside from this classical genesis, "Money" is a modern show. It says a lot socially and entertainingly. Jose.

The Losers, L. A.

Los Angeles, July 9.

Sam Fletcher, Lou Levy Trio, Eric Miller; two-drink minimum.

Many of the elements from which jazz has evolved and continues to widen are captured in Sam Fletcher's performance, a mixture of rhythm and blues, swing, balladry, touch of rock 'n' roll and gospel. Blended into one unit of personal interpretation, the basic varieties of the American jazz forms join to give Fletcher a compelling style that puts him in the top ranks of the field.

In his opening stint, singer concentrated generally on hard sell and belting rhythmic deliveries. He controls his drive, however, with sharp, precise speech and attention to lyric responsibilities. Phrasing is excellent and his communication generally solid.

He swings most strongly on "I Believe in You," gets wildly frenetic on "Nobody," yet shows easy, soft balladry on an early hit, "Riding the Tall Hope." Billie Holiday tune, "God Bless the Child," indicates singer's sensitivity and solid technique.

Yet, Fletcher makes a serious mistake in going into big show ballad like "If Ever I Would Leave You," which doesn't fit his kind of intepretive style and free form and robs him of the authority he otherwise shows.

Lou Levy Trio is an asset to Fletcher, backing with expert musicianship.

Intermission singer-guitarist Eric Miller works hard—too hard—in the noisy between-show sets. Miller, who mixes folk and jazz, overstylizes and strains, working against the odds of a loud lounge. He might be more effective if he just worked to his own musicianship and ignored the people. "Bye Bye Blackbird" was best of the tunes caught.

Show is in through July 23, with Bobby Short following. Dale.

Colony, London

London, July 9.

Tessie O'Shea, with Ernest Rampolo. George Birch Orch; $6.50 minimum.

Before heading for Broadway later this month and her debut in a musical book show—"The Girl Who Came to Dinner"—Tessie O'Shea is headlining at the Colony in Berkeley Square, and once again she proves a firm fave with the West End supper trade.

Despite her outsize figure, Miss O'Shea is a vivacious and nimble entertainer who has enjoyed the billing of "Two Ton Tess" for years. Indeed, one of her liveliest entries is "Two Ton Tess from Tennessee," which has been her trademark song from way back.

With a facility of establishing an easy rapport with the diners, Miss O'Shea briskly goes through a half hour routine with a well selected pop program, including such standards as "Too Young," "Five Minutes More," "Little on the Lonely Side," "Loverly Bunch of Coconuts," and "Slow Boat to China."

Miss O'Shea, a pro entertainer since she was a five-year-old, has had a remarkable run as a headliner in vaudeville, revue and cabaret, but has not previously appeared in a book show. On her current stint at the Colony there is every reason to believe that she will score in that medium, too.

As always, she is accompanied on the 88 by Ernest Rampolo, with the George Birch combo giving restrained backgrounding. Myro.

Copacabana, N. Y.

George Kirby, Timi Yuro, with Jack Medoff, Faye Dean, Ralph Young, Joseph Mele & Frank Marti Orchs; $6-$7 minimums.

The summer schedule at Jules Podell's hospice calls for a lot of experimentation. Each act appearing during this period gets more than the usual amount of managerial attention. Podell is looking for new winter headliners and is hopeful that the current schedule of putting in talent new to the Copa will result in creation of new attractions.

The current bill comprises George Kirby, who has been at the Copa previously, and Timi Yuro (New Acts). It's an entertaining twosome with Kirby called upon for the major share of the work. The Negro entertainer, a gifted impressionist, achieves a deal of fidelity with virtually every character he portrays.

Although now on the portly side, Kirby even captures some of the physical attributes of his slim subjects. He provides a happy romp among the celebs he depicts. He takes the humorous aspects of his subjects for amplification. He groups them in an easy manner and also rattles them off in good combination. He's a leisurely operator, lets the audience soak up the laughs and walks off after a 50-minute stand.

The production elements in the show remain as is. Singers Ralph Young and Faye Dean perform the Milton De Lugg & Bob Hilliard tunes capably, while the Doug Coudy line makes picturesque movements around them. The Joseph Mele Orch showbacks with competence. Frank Marti supplies the relief. Jose.

Isy's, Vancouver

Vancouver, July 10.

Gaylord & Holiday, Celeste, Dorreen Cannon, Bobby Hales Quintet; $2 admission.

Last time around these parts Ronnie Gaylord and Bert Holiday were monikered as the Gaylords for their vocal stylings. This present stint marks their first local stand under the new heading of Gaylord & Holiday and the change of billing has made no difference in the duo's fine and mellow songalog.

Opening with their perennial "From The Vine Came The Grape," the twosome reprises "Volare" and "The Little Shoemaker" before Gaylord swings to a pleasing solo, "Left My Heart In San Francisco," and Holiday follows up with "The Wrong Woman," abetted by Gaylord's fancy electronic guitar. Singers duet again for a stirring "Hava Ngelah," then switch pace with etchings of other chanters a la Ink Spots' "If I Didn't Care" and Mills Bros.' "Glow Worm."

Comedy high spot comes with clever sequence that offers sharp impressions of twisting as various stars would do it. James Cagney, Cary Grant, Tony Bennett, Burl Ives and Kingston Trio are among those carboned to a turn and this routine nets hefty applause. They finish strong with a medley of Jolson evergreens and have trouble begging off after two encores.

Duo have Don Ray sitting in at piano with Lenny Levere at bass and Harvey Lang on drums. It's satisfying harmony and entertainment all the way.

Personable magicienne Celeste (Evans), who left Vancouver originally to tour the world with service shows, is back home with more of her sleight of hand and demonstrates a smooth degree of deception. Visually appealing in a figure flattering strapless gown, she makes like a Merlin with rope, handkerchiefs, doves, billiard balls, newspapers and playing cards. Her quick handed wizardry earns solid appreciation.

Doreen Cannon beguiles with a neat curtain-raising song and dance session. She opens her songbook with a medley of standards, best of which is "From This Moment On," then segues from "Its All Right" to a straight terp turn on the modern jazz side. Her toe work is expert and gets a good hand.

Bobby Hales' house quintet backs the bill nicely and provides tempos for intermission dancing, with okay vocals by chirper Eve Lynn. Bonifaces Isy and Richie Walters should be well pleased with business for this show's two weeks.

Guy Mitchell next up July 17. Shaw.

Palmer House, Chi

Kitty Kallen, The Four Winds, Ben Arden Orch; $2.50-$3 cover.

Over 100,000 Shriners and their families are in Chicago for their national convention, and while they have a reputation as being slow with a buck, they are a fun-seeking bonus for the entertainment biz. The convention is headquartered at the Palmer House, and the show caught was blanketed with boisterous red-fezzed members of the Ancient Arabic Order of the Mystic Shrine.

Kitty Kallen has become a summertime regular at the Empire Room since her hiatus of several years ago, and her turn has the polish and flair to assure the delegates from Dubuque that they have seen a top act in Chi's plushest room. Her turn has a deceptive easiness that belies her considerable song savvy and knowledgeable showmanship.

Songstress smartly anticipated the festive crowd by loading first part of her show with uptunes to capture the auditors, then modulating down to click with such ballads as "Look To The Rainbow," "San Francisco" and a well-received medley of her early disclocks. As might be expected, her audience-participation numbers went over with a bang, particularly her opening "Hello" gambit and later her "Yes-No" game.

The Four Winds are an engaging quartet of folk singers who got their start at the U. of Notre Dame. They are musically adroit and punch their tunes across with a fresh enthusiasm. However, some of their arrangements are a bit slick for the simpler folk tunes such as "Joy Joy," "John Henry" and "This Little Light of Mine" and could do with a simpler and more direct approach.

The group score strongly with a stark version of "Ballad Man," a rollicking rendition of "Twelve Gates," and Buddy Hill's sensitively lyric solo on "Black Is The Color." The other members of the unit are Mike Kealy, K. C. Lynch and John Biil, and they are as adept on their instruments (banjo, two guitars and bass) as they are vocally.

Shoreham, D.C.

Ray Bolger with Muriel Landers, Bob Cross Orch (14), Steve Kisley Orch (7); $3.50 cover.

The Shoreham Hotel's handsome Terrace gives Ray Bolger plenty of room for dancing and horseplay, and it is a delight to watch him. His act, the work of a perfectionist, has an even pace, with a casual manner all the way. It adds up to extremely pleasant summer entertainment, and the outside audience responded with extra heavy mitting.

Bolger, seemingly as agile as ever despite the calendar, runs through a gamut of dance routines, including the Charleston, black bottom, conga, samba, rhumba, cha cha and jitterbug.

The crowd, natch, was waiting for his familiar "Old Soft Shoe," and they got it. His "Once in Love With Amy," another of his standards, sends his limber legs all over the big stage. He finally begged off by getting everyone to sing the tune with him.

His comedy bits with Muriel Landers, his hefty and light footed associate, score heavily. As usual, her involvement in the act as a ringsider is handled with such expert timing and showmanship that many were fooled that she was actually a regular with the act and not a club guest.

Norm Geller does an expert job as musical conductor, leading the able Bob Cross orchestra, which was also fine during the dancing hours. Steve Kisley's orchestra does a nice job in alternating.

Carp.

Terrace Room, L. A.

Los Angeles, July 12.

"Ecstasy On Ice", George Arnold Revue (10) featuring Kai Farelli, Marc Douglas, Margie Lee, Essie Davis, Buddy Schroff, Carol Anderson; George Liberace's orch (10); PC cover.

The icing is back on the Statler Hotel's entertainment cake — and high time. The Terrace Room's $44,000 mobile rink rarely was used over past three-and-half years of Barry Ashton and more recently Moro-Landis girly revues. Being the only one in California, it is still a great novelty. This all-blade show, in for eight weeks, is a nice hot-weather touch and should help the hostelry lure convention biz, in which it specializes.

The George Arnold revue (perish that title!) is an amalgam of routines he has staged on the rink of the Thunderbird, Las Vegas, so the lavish costuming probably already has been amortized. Pace is properly brisk over the 45-minute course and all the usual frappe-frolic bases are touched except so hoary a one as a sleighbells number.

The Danish skater-juggler Kai Farelli is tops in the specialty parade, working so adroitly with clubs, balls and acrobatics one forgets at times he is on blades.

Margie Lee's "Slaughter On 10th Ave." ballet bit is another highlight and Essie Davis and Buddy Schroff—singly and working tandem—are quite gymnastic. Carol Anderson chirps as well as glides in production numbers. Young boy singer Marc Douglas, seeming less at ease on steel runners than the others, has a solid vocal inning on three pops.

Four unbilled girls round out the production routines, which include a Viennese waltz, a crinoline caper, a hoedown and two radium-lit routines, a can-can and a finale utilizing "The Music Man" medley.

George Liberace's orch has shifted here from long roost at the Hollywood Roosevelt hotel. It plays the show with eclat and should prove a big asset between the two shows nightly in that crew has a dance beat which pleases this spot's clientele — as does leader's strolling fiddles (3) and accordion gimmick. The tablers take to it. Stunt was effectively used here years back by Eddie Bergman.

At this point management is uncommitted as to future show policy. Off this sampling, succeeding iceshows may be in the deep freeze offing. Was.

Los Angeles, July 10.

Nikki Price & Dave MacKay; two-drink minimum.

In Nikki Price and Dave MacKay, Marshall Edson has a rewarding attraction for jazz buffs. Some of the artistic nuances of their work may evade the casual pub-prowler, but enough should filter through to please even the fellow who flunked music appreciation in high school.

Epic Records song stylist Miss Price does the bulk of the warbling, with both keyboard and vocal support from her spouse, MacKay. Their artistry ranges from a lushly rhapsodic arrangement of "Joey" to a cluster of punnish song parodies. Included in their set are a romantically dreamy "Folks Who Live On The Hill," a spiritualistically moving "Motherless Child," a souped-up scatty "Jordan" and Miss Price's sultry treatment of the witty "Peel Me A Grape."

Miss Price's extensive range enables her to pierce the upper vocal stratosphere, but her jazz motivation and feeling never wavers, even up in the rarefied air of the summit. MacKay is a swinging and sensitive pianist, and his voice has a similarity to that of Johnny Mercer.

A sparse group was on hand at the YLC to greet them on opening night. Business should improve in the course of their two-week stay. Tube.

Duvernay, Hull

Hull, Que., July 9.

Suzanne Lake, Brian Brown Trio; $1 cover.

Suzanne Lake has played the Ottawa-Hull spots several times and each time her stint exhibits upped quality and savvy. This booking in the Hotel Duvernay's Executive Penthouse is no exception. Canary routines mostly show tunes and handles them neatly.

Experience in stage musicals, including Broadway, have given Miss Lake the savvy and she's built on it to big impact. Nice arrangements back in the stanza which wisely splices standards like "It Had To Be You" for balance.

Backing here is by the house combo, Brian Brown Trio, which also plays its clicko jazz for dancing.

Miss Lake is here to July 20. Gorm.

Latin Quarter, N. Y.

"The Venus Touch" revue, with Les Cinci, Jack Durant, François Szony & Nancy Claire, The Sportsmen (4), Glenda Leigh, Art Johnson, Barbara Lange, Tim Harum, Line (21); Jo Lombardi Orch; $8 minimum.

E. M. Loew and Ed Risman for the last two Latin Quarter shows have reached into the radio-tv field for top name acts, and apparently have hit upon a winning combination. Jerry Colonna and his augmented act played for four weeks to fine biz. Now they have the Sportsmen, for years on Jack Benny's tv show. Loew and Risman have backed this male quartet with two new turns. The fresh lineup played to capacity the first show opening night.

The Sportsmen have an easy approach and aplomb to put over almost any song. Their tunes range from "Laughing Man," the opener, to the spiritual with which they climax their stint.

Reference to "Lucky Strike" program, on which the Sportsmen sang for years, is an excuse to bring in a novelty "Flight of Bumble Bee" number. One of standout offerings is a bit in which each lad explains individually and vocally how he came to join the group.

Szony & Claire dance team, in a return date here, score solidly with their adagio. Comic Jack Durant, who also has appeared here previously, had the aud from the outset.

Durant, who has eliminated his familiar imitations, still does the impression of Clark Gable in "Gone With Wind." It's a natural because he resembles Gable. Durant paces his turn nicely by switching to a song or two. He still retains that bit of kidding some male in the audience with the pat line, "You Too?"

Les Cinci, mixed Apache dance team, are holdovers but the femme appears to be a newcomer. It's a slick turn. Production numbers remain the same from the "Out of Space" to the "Wonderful World of Yesterday." The Cleopatra-Marc Antony sequence still is a highlight, with Glenda Leigh per usual impressing as Cleo.

Reno, July 10.

James Darren (with Al Lerner conducting), Kuban Cossacks (3), Blue Ribbon Belles (5), Don Conn Orch (13); no cover, no minimum.

There's every indication that James Darren—his thesp talents established in pix, his vocal appeal on records—is headed for big league status as a nitery act.

Harold Smith Sr. may have figured it a gamble to book the young singer in this intimate room, but after opening night he was assured Darren's a good bet to fill the Fun Room thrice nightly for his three-week stint, albeit it's his saloon debut.

Granted, the youngster's name on the marquee at this point has not the value of many other names current in the Reno-Tahoe-Sparks area. But, an opening turnout—full house— and auditor response is sufficient proof to suggest Darren's exposure on film and his many disclicks leave him not unidentifiable with the strictly adult set which frequents the Reno gaming houses.

Despite the tyro classification as a saloon entertainer, he comes on with a sincerity and warmth, and an empathic quality that belies both his youth and lack of exposure before a live nightclub audience. Walking to the mike flashing a genuine smile, the handsome songster bows with "Young Lovers." Immediately impressive is his regard for diction, his lyric consciousness and interpretation.

And, like a pro, he gives brief individual attention to ringside femmes as he essays "You're Nobody," "Moonlight in Vermont," "Let's Misbehave," "As Long As She Needs Me." But he also has the masculinity and personality for strong appeal to the males.

Bowoff on show caught was a bit on the weak side, giving impression it was questionable to singer that he may be overdoing it, or doubts he had scored. It's a minor fault that'll be easily corrected. Another improvement would be concentration on between-title patter for more relaxed and convincing manner. This, again, is an area that will be polished with little effort.

Style while vocaling is easy but assured. He handles the mike with authority, the histrionics are natural and not over-worked. If he's trying to develop a particular stage deportment, that showcased in this debut needs little variation. Darren shows much potential for the nitery circuit. Expertly batoning the Don Conn Orch (from the keyboard) during Darren's turn is Al Lerner.

The Kuban Cossacks win big palms in accenting song and dance from the Ukraine, and they are highly proficient at both. Despite the Reno altitude, trio shows no strain in the physically taxing Cossack routines. Suited in loose-fitting satin native garb, they also make for good visual appeal. Pace is fast, timing and precision near perfection. Act is ideal for many situations. Long.

Club Harlem, A. C.

Atlantic City, July 10.

Larry Steele's Smart Affairs of 1964 with Billy Daniels, Slappy White, Norma Miller & her Jazzmen (4) Welcome Travelers Gospel Singers (6) Shirlee May, Freda Payne, Lola Falama, Beige Beaux (4), Beige Beauts (8), Modern Harlem Girls (6), Johnny Lynch orch (15), written, produced and directed by Larry Steele; original music and lyrics, Steele; musical arrangements, Bill Sanford; choreography, Sterling Bough; costumes, Donald Fontaine; lighting, Herman Spell; $4 minimum, $2 admission, weekdays; $4.50 minimum, $3.50 admission weekends.

Larry Steel's "Smart Affairs" revues have become an institution in Atlantic City's summer entertainment picture, and this his 17th, again fills the big stage at Club Harlem with top show values.

Its a long show, playing as caught some two hours and 20 minutes. Production could stand trimming, which will probably come as the Steele shows usually run about two hours. But dispite length, it moves at a fast pace.

Billy Daniels headlines the revue and does 35 minutes of songs concluding with his "Old Black Magic" on which he is given an able assist by his longtime pianist, Benny Payne. Daniels moves from one type of song to another, and scores with all. As usual, he is a begoff.

Slappy White, out of the Steele show last year, again proves he's an outstanding comic, mixing his stuff well and getting maximum with his material, which is new from when last caught here.

Steele has brought in a new act, The Welcome Traveler's, a group of six boys who change the show's pace a bit with folk and gospel songs all of which score. Their best include "That is Why," Brightly Beams," and "Leaning on the Ever Lasting Arm."

Norma Miller & her Jazzmen contrib a refreshing and original act, all of her comedy dance numbers reaping lots plaudits. Shirlee May, who's been lifted from Steele's Beige Beaut line, keeps them contented with four well done vocal numbers, her best being the novelty bit "Somebody's Baby."

More daring than any previous production number in a Steele show is a scene displaying its pix Modern Harlem Girls with chests nearly exposed. This comes in the opening number of the show which brings on the Beige Beauts with cue cards that they later join to compose a large photo of Daniels.

Undrape bit follows a routine by two Beige Beaux and Lola Falama with Steele doing a brief vocal on an original "Rio-Rio." To the vocal "My Kind of Girl," the six Modern Harlem Girls bring a bit of Vegas into old Harlem as they parade in beautiful, but abbreviated costumes.

Steele's second production number features Freda Payne as the innocent but talented girl alone in the big city, where she is confronted with temptations, each symbolized by a Harlem Girl in a stunning but bizarre costume. For each temptation there is a force of good likewise symbolized by a Harlem Girl.

Steele contribs three original songs—"Let's Put the Show on the Road," "Rio-Rio," "Smart Affairs" and "The Greatest Thing in Life." He acts as emcee throughout the show, which again was written, produced and directed by him.

The dancing of line girls and boys, the actractive costuming and the top stars booked throughout the season (Sammy Davis Jr. comes in Aug. 8 until 21) should mean top business for Ben Alten and Cliff Williams, who have operated Harlem for year. Club is managed by Jack Southern. Walk.

Desert Inn, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, July 9.

Eddie Fisher, Ford & Hines, Bobby Burns, Tony Mack, Donn Arden Dancers (12), Carlton Hayes Orch (17); produced by Frank Sennes; presented by Wilbur Clark; choreography, Donn Arden; $4 minimum.

Eddie Fisher's sixth appearance at Wilbur Clark's gaming spa is a reprise of his fifth; he still has a top level nitery act dominated by a familiar voice that's better than ever. The star warmly sells himself, and tosses in a few new gags about his domestic situation which he assures audiences is water under the bridge.

Eddy Samuels sensitively guides the Carlton Hayes orch (17) as Fisher's 88er-conductor; the Jolson medley still gets the peak applause, and other numbers include "Back In Your Own Backyard." "No Sad Songs For Me," "Let Me Entertain You," and the "annuity" disclicks.

Phil Ford & Mimi Hines, an extremely tough act to follow, soot-lights the delightful Miss Hines clowning through impressions of dogs, mice, and the NBC "peahen" described by Ford as "poultry in motion." The shapely, femme half of the comedy team again shows that she has a well-trained operatic voice, which is a neat balance to some fine shenanigans.

A new Donn Arden production number called "The Crazy, Lazy Days of Summer" initials the bill. It features singer Bobby Burns, dancer Tony Mack as "Casey at the Bat" and the Arden dancers as the most beautiful baseball players in history.

Fisher is in for two weeks only, then Andy Williams toplines, with Ford & Hines staying over. Duke.

Village Vanguard, N.Y.

Miles Davis Quintet, Blossom Dearie; $2.50 cover.

Miles Davis has had a complete renovation of sidemen with no marked change in the sound or presentation. His jazz is as ever coldly efficient, but mostly joyless. This sad situation must be blamed primarily on the trumpeter's ostentatious approach to his audience. Plenty talent, no showmanship.

Davis' condescending approach seems to infect the men with him and cow the auditors. In a half-hour set of four instrumentals, only one had the excitement the date would warrant. Two were boppers with extended solos all around that only briefly sparkled. A finale, more melodic and plushy in the Davis-Gil Evans (arranging) tradition, had the sound of film music of the near future.

Group does not play together, relying much too much on the exhaustive (or exhausting) solo. There are snatches of fine ensemble between Davis and tenor saxist George Coleman, and with some serious woodshedding there could be more. Ron Carter, bass, and Tony Williams, drums, are fine on the back beat, but the latter's solo work shows nothing as yet (he's a 19-year-old protege of the leader). Pianist Herbie Hancock has flashes of brilliance and sometimes warmth.

Pianist-thrush with a lyric lilt Blossom Dearie spells the group. Her set as usual is signatured by her distinctive voicings and well-edited book with special attention to imaginative and intelligent lyrics. Bill.

King's Club, Dallas

Dallas, July 12.

Joan Fairfax, Raul Arrambide, Lonnie Mitchell Trio; private club, no cover or minimum.

Songstress Joan Fairfax, in her first Texas date, clicks solidly with fine pipes, good songolog and some show savvy. After a neat opener, "On the Bright Side," she tosses off a throaty ballad, "In Times Like These" and belts with "Days of Wine and Roses" for good tabler response. Comely Canadian canary smartly works to the males, getting one on stage for a brief twist session and he's awarded a bottle of champagne.

Highlight of her 30-minute stint is a salute to tv's Garry Moore via a "wonderful year" medley as she caresses briefly a baker's dozen tunes.

Strolling troubadour Raul Arrambide pacifies the patrons tableside between shows with Spanish songs and top guitaring.

Nev., July 11.

The combination of Patti Page and Guy Marks is a powerful lure on any marquee—and in this outing at John Ascuaga's Nugget it's paying off handsomely, as evidenced by sellouts for both opening night shows, along with heavy advance reservations.

Miss Page, who hasn't played the Reno-Sparks area for seven years, has apparently lost none of her fans during her too-long absence. First-nighters, including many golfing celebrities in for the Nugget's annual tourney, gave the singers a rousing welcome — and deservedly.

Smartly gowned in a white, full-skirted, tight-bodice creation, Miss Page gives generously of her talent, and she has a lot to give. On the new ones, the oldies, the standards she was awarded with full attention and impressive palm endorsement. Opening with "Sunny Side of the Street," she retains rapport for full turn, exuding personality and charm.

She hits all areas: ballads, blues, folk stuff, a bit of comedic-novelty. Using no props, no gimmicks, no vocal gymnastics, she belts with command, can hush a room with the soft, tender titles. Varied catalog includes "Boys Night Out," "I'm Walkin'," "Catfish," "Good Life," "You Made Me Love You," and "Boll Weevil." And, natch, there's a medley of hit disclicks, topped with "Tennessee Waltz."

Effective is stroll through far reaches of room (with wireless mike) to "Say Wonderful Things." On the lighter side, Miss Page duos with conductor-pianist Rocky Cole in a Durante carbon to "Love You I Do." But on the serious she shows much soul and integrity for lyric interpretation. For Sparks date she brought along her own guitarist, Jim Helms, and drummer, Mel Zelnick.

With the uninitiated, Guy Marks has a wealth of varied material and a tremendous talent for selling same. But the edge has been worn by his frequent television exposure of the same act he uses in niteries: the ostrich imitation, the copy of a singer from the big band era, the video satires, Karloff singing Belafonte.

As a mimic, he's down to perfection in his impressions of Bogart, Mitchum, and Cooper in a routine built aroung Chief Crazy Horse. The physical mannerisms, physiognomy are unerringly and uncannily accurate. Ditto for vocal inflections. He also wins top hand with takeoff on opera.

The George Arnold Singers and Dancers part the curtains in a new, and colorful, production following the circus theme initiated when the Circus Room first opened with all shows tagged the "International Follies." Theme is accented with another hard-to-believe performance by Little Bertha, the Nugget's elephant under direction of Jenda Smaha.

Sergio Franchi and Edger Bergen open July 25. Long.

Interlude, L.A.

The return of Pat Collins heralds a lively and lucrative summer season for the Sunset Strip's most active attie. Widespread popularity and appeal of this glamorous hypnotist is attested to by the three-month span of her current engagement, hard on the heels of her recent lengthy tenure at the Interlude.

Basically what distinguishes Miss Collins' captivating act from those of her colleagues in hypnosis is her lighthearted, unpretentious approach. Hypnosis itself having long since lost its novelty-mysterioso aspect, it no longer stands up as a show biz attraction if approached with too much pomp and ceremony and reverence as a science.

Miss Collins accents the entertainment facet and plays down the hocus pocus and "look into my eyes, you are going deep into sleep" bit. She concerns herself with exposing and exploring the personalities of her subjects. The star of her act is neither Pat Collins nor hypnosis. It is the subject who comes out of the audience and gets hypotized.

When the act is over, one has really gotten to know these people. They have become more than mere mesmerized guinea pigs performing tricks in the manner of dogs sitting pretty for a bone. They have become intriguing personalities. Occasionally Miss Collins hosts what she terms "celebrity parties" which should hypo the take.

Reno, July 12.

Buddy Greco, Helen Boice, Johnny Bachemin, Availables (5), Frank Verna Four with Bonnie Ventura, Notables (5); no cover, no minimum.

Open less than two weeks, the 200-seat Carnival Room in the Golden is proving a favorite entertainment spot for both locals and tourists. It's warm, intimate and plushly decored. And the current bill can be credited for the strong lure.

Buddy Greco, a regular on the Reno-Tahoe scene, was tapped by the Tomerlin Bros. to headline the opening show as the rebuilt Golden (destroyed by fire in April, 1962) went back into business on July 3—and it was unquestionably a wise choice.

The Greco appeal is twofold—and he's highly professional in both: vocal, piano. In this Golden debut, he gives a generous sampling of his wares, and auditors respond accordingly.

Backed by a seven-man band for this stint, he proves his showmanship and musical knowledge in pro fashion and has tablers with him all the way. With heaviest accent on the vocal stylings, he offers the likes of "Day In Day Out" and "Lady Is a Tramp." Be it ballad or uptempo, he's completely at home.

Helen Boice comes on as a natural with the saloon crowd. With infectious delivery, she touches on many bases: weight, love life, and show biz. She's wise in the way of story-telling, is loaded with throwaways and one-liners. Miss Boice also is a winner with song and parodies, none on the serio side. Material is basic—and funny.

Johnny Bachemin, newcomer on the Reno scene, should be tagged for a playback. He's multi-talented as singer-dancer-pianist, and has an easy way of reaching auditors. He works with much enthusiasm.

Alternating with the lead acts are the Availables (five lookers assembled by Barry Ashton), who handle both song and dance chores. The Frank Verna Four with Bonnie Ventura, and the Notables.

Show changes scheduled for Aug. 1. Long.

Los Angeles, July 10.

Lauri Allen, Jackie Curtiss & Bill Tracey; no cover, no minimum.

Songstress Lauri Allen has launched a fortnighter here in support of the indefatigable, irrepressible comedy team of Jackie Curtiss & Bill Tracey, regulars at this jolly trolly since last July, prior to its move from the suburbs to its current niche on La Cienega row.

Blond Miss Allen, though not yet the compleat vocalist, has potential as a jazz stylist. Her best offering is a scatty "Just You, Just Me." She's most at home on the free-wheeling efforts that enable her to experiment with uptempo melodic ideas. On the ballads and romantically-oriented showtunes, however, she tends at times to manufacture breathy vocal contrivances or overextend herself in the upper register, producing a shrillness or tonal uncertainties.

Curtiss & Tracey are a gifted and versatile pair, particularly the former, an unusually adaptable and quick-witted comic-impressionist. Tracey plays straight man and offers several breezy rhythm vocals in the course of the long act. In addition to his wildly uninhibited clowning, Curtiss delivers a solid set of celebrity impressions, among which are takeoffs on Eddie Fisher, Mel Torme, Pearl Bailey and "the Will Mastin Trio without Sammy Davis Jr."

Some of the material has been around, much of it is of the off-color variety, and quite a bit falls into the dialect (chiefly Yiddish) area. But the whole is considerably superior to some of the parts.

A trip on the trolly is certainly worth the nominal fare. The Eddie Paul Trio backstops skillfully throughout. Tube.

SZONY AND CLAIRE

Currently LATIN QUARTER
New York

Alan Frazer, Boston Record, "It's for Szony and Claire that everything's coming up roses."

Tidelands, Houston

Houston, July 2.

Brill & McCall, Hoyt Hudson, Don Goldie Orch (4); $1 entertainment charge.

Brill (Charlie) & McCall (Mitzi), young husband-wife team, come on with announcement they are starting new trend in comedy—two stools and no talent. Stool count is correct, but there is plenty of talent. Relatively unknown, team has been together only six months, and this is fourth nitery engagement. Material needs only to jell a little for couple to rate top bookings.

Brill, who wears horn-rimmed glasses, is remindful of Steve Allen. Miss McCall is short, gamin-type with mobile features, and an unusual flair for comedy that brings top returns.

Team explores tv commercials, and Miss McCall gives impression of Mae West conducting women's tv show. They also manage to get in a few swings at Cleopatra, and femme half of duo is a nervous entertainer auditioning for "Jerry Lewis Show" (team, incidentally, has signed for several appearances in the fall).

They also essay seg called "Stages of Life," designed as a Berman-type comic, lump-in-throat bit, but it doesn't quite hit mark. The sequence needs polishing and better timing. Act was timed at 35 minutes.

Young Hoyt Hudson is pleasing young singer, with obvious experience before teen audiences, who receives good palming. However, for nitery exposure plaudits might be more robust if he tones down facial and body gymnastics, opens his eyes and sings. Among tunes in his songbag are "Coming Home" and "You're Nobody Till Somebody Loves You." Don Goldie band does fine backing chore.

Show plays two frames. Skip.

Chicago, July 9.

"Vaudeville '63" with Bert Vallencourt, Bill Starr, Shirley White, Joy Hawkins; produced by Robert Clarke; directed by Richard Tyler; words and music, Mark Stern; choreography, Bill Starr; orchestrated by Hal Scott; sets and scenery, Archie Schromm; gowns Georgiana Jordan; no minimum or cover.

The Camellia House, which usually goes showless during the summer, is experimenting with an original petit revue this year, and despite the energetic efforts of a facile cast, it comes off as only mildly diverting. Entitled "Vaudeville '63," the show is a letdown in that it is apparent that producer Robert Clarke has gone to a great deal of time, trouble and expense and has been waylaid by the words and music of Mark Stern, which are at best glib and at times sophomoric. The cast, a smart foursome, and Jimmy Blade's house orch strive to overcome the shapeless tunes and doggerel lyrics, but to little avail.

The avowed intention of the revue is to present vaudeville of an earlier era as it would sound today. While this blending of the two approaches would seem an intriguing concept, in this case it comes off as a dilemma. The writer appears to have been uncertain as to whether to play it for broad parody or nostalgic verisimilitude and as a result it founders on the shoals of indecision.

It is to the cast's credit that they sometimes overcome the book by dint of work and will power. Bert Vallencourt, who has substantial road company legituner experience, turns in a savvy and sophisticated song and dance performance, particularly in a parody of Nelson Eddy & Jeanette McDonald along with Shirley White. Miss White is an accomplished and attractive singer with a lovely lyrical voice, perhaps too lyrical for her impression of Helen Morgan.

Bill Starr, who understudied Robert Morse in "Take Me Along" on Broadway, displays great vitality in occasionally pulling up the limpid lyrics by their bootstraps, particularly in an English music ball numberf titled "The Evie Ivie Over." By an odd quirk, Joy Hawkins, a tall saucer-eyed and baby-faced brunette young beauty, comes off with many of the performing honors. Miss Hawkins, who just graduated from Northwestern U., appeared in that school's Waa Mu Show, an elaborate annual undergraduate revue, and her ingenuous vivacity is right at home in this show.

It is conceivable that brilliant choreography and staging might have injected zest into this show. However, Starr, who created the terpery, appears to have chosen not to challenge the performers' abilities in this area and they have responded in kind with routine footwark.

Miss Hawkins is charming as an eager bump-and-grind artist, but is graceless in a straight waltz number. Director Richard Tyler has created a sense of esprit within the framework of the lackiustre sketches, but must share the responsibility for the feverish aimlessness of the show.

The Camellia House is not charging a minimum or cover during the seven-week run of the show. Mor.

JFK's German LP

destag chairman Dr. Gerstenmaier, and Mayor Willy Brandt of Berlin, are being released on an LP by the Deutsche Grammophon Gesellschaft. Among the excerpts from JFK's speeches made in Cologne, Bonn, Frankfurt and Berlin are is famous words spoken to gigantic crowds in front of the Town Hall Berlin-Schoneberg: "Ich bin ein Berliner" (I Am A Berliner).

Permission to publish JFK's speeches on LP has been specially granted and all the German political leaders to be heard on the disk also have given it their okay.

A special feature of the LP is its retail price of 12 German marks ($3) instead of the usual 18 DM ($4.50). All profits are to be donated to the German Peace Corps which was founded during JFK's visit (excerpts from the ceremony with JFK's speech are also on the disk); it is the German equivalent of the U.S. one founded by Kennedy.

Because of JFK's enormous popularity here, and also because of the good cause to which the profits will be put, it is estimated that 100,000 disks could be sold (a huge number of LPs for the German market).

The LP is being launched with saturation-type publicity in all the major West German daily papers. An international press conference was held today (Tuesday) in Hamburg's America House to launch the project. A specially packaged presentation box will be handed JFK personally in the White House by the German Ambassador, Karl Heinrich Knappstein.

those disturbing lines anymore. Also, he referred to an amusing gimmick about "World." During the intermission of this three-and-a-half hour pic, loudspeakers installed in the cinema's lobby and powder rooms will inform the audience about the continuance of the various phases in the film to maintain the comedy elements. Kramer explained that "I now know that the comedy is the most grim business. It's much more difficult to create and maintain a comedy than to do a drama."

Kramer, who is generally regarded here as Hollywood's most sincere producer, revealed his next projects: Filmization of Katherine Anne Porter's bestseller, "Ship of the Fools," and a screen version of Adele Rodgers St. John's book, "The Final Verdict."

Shamrock, Houston

Houston, July 12.

Teresa Brewer, Shep Fields Orch (14); no cover or minimum.

Pert thrush Teresa Brewer has a fine show and left stage after 40 minutes to ovation. Yet the spark that would have made it a great performance was missing on preem nite at the Shamrock Hilton's International Club.

This was due perhaps entirely to fact that Miss Brewer couldn't always be heard. It seemed to stem partially from the mike set too low and band, beefed up for show, was too loud. Singer is used to larger rooms with band farther away.

This isn't to say that Miss Brewer fails to score. She does, and heavily, with top returns for her w.k. "Old Man Mose," "Lida Rose," "South Rampart Parade" and tremendous begoff with special material for vocals and terping.

She has line of six young men, and they do particularly well with barbershop backing for "Lida Rose." They perform well for her four quick costume changes, and all are undoubtedly talented. Yet, somehow—perhaps because they all are different in appearance and personality—they fail to blend into background as they should in backing the headliner.

Miss Brewer has full control over her unique pipes, and her terping, if not greatly demanding, meets all requirements. She has excellent show, with Herb Buchanan arranging and conducting, and the spark undoubtedly will be there before she finishes her two weeks.

Shep Fields has one of the better dance bands, and is welcome back to his home base after absence of about two years. Orch draws dancers to the floor, and other than being a bit overpowering in opener, appears to handle Miss Brewer's difficult arrangements well. Young Patricia Lynn is Fields' talented band thrush.

Show plays two frames with Florian Zabach and Jo Ann Miller due July 25. Skip.

Mance Liscomb, New Road Singers, Cousin Emmy; $2 Admission.

Folk music as a representative spokesman for the ethnic cultures of the world has undergone frequent changes through the years depending on the particular tenor of the times. Thus, it is not surprising to find The New Road Singers, a new quartet, turning a song like "Wake Up One Morning" from the original religious context to a message of freedom.

Quartet (Mike Janusz, Marcia Berman, Victor Pierce and Ethel Raim) mix folk base with a strong Gospel strain. Essentially, they are freedom singers. Much of their material closely touches on the racial problems in the country, making them more in the area of public demonstrators than entertainers.

While group appears serious, they have not yet found full rapport with each other and blend does not have a smooth, appealing sound. Janusz, formerly a single, stands out most securely. Top tune at Tuesday (2) opener was soft ballad "Ramblin' Boy."

On earlier is Cousin Emmy, radio personality known for her country fiddle and banjo Homespun and folksy, performer has a vast repertoire and delivers such rare old tunes as "Johnny Booker" and "Wish I Was a Single Gal Again." Unusual act features number of tricks like a hollow cheek pat to tune of "Turkey in the Straw." Her banjoing on "Listen to the Mockingbird" is fine.

Mance Liscomb, vet New Orleans style blues performer, who is a regular at the club, is top billed.

Show is in to July 24. Dale.

TIMI YURO
Songs
25 Mins.
Copacabana, N. Y.

Timi Yuro, who now records for the Liberty label, is one of the youngsters who has been around for a couple of years having made her initial splash through the diskings, and now seems a staple on the circuits.

Miss Yuro is essentially a singer without too many complications. Basically, she seems like she would hew to a straight line, tell her story in blacks and whites and thus provide strength to her offerings. However, she seems to have been taken in hand and a lot of elements which seem foreign to her have been introduced. There are moments in her turn when she gets overdramatic. There are many overarrangements and there are times, when an individual song goes on long after its message has been thoroughly discussed.

Miss Yuro's milieu seems a strong beat superimposed on w.k. standards. The embellishments that have been added to this comparatively simple plan seem to have detracted from her efforts. Rendition of "Vesti la giubba," in Italian, normally a tenor aria, gives her a change of pace as well as a chance to show a wider range. She does this rather well. But a lot of overproduction hampers her turn.

Miss Yuro's gowns by James Duka give her a big-girl look. She makes a good appearance and shows an ability to get around well on the floor. Jose.

LOS DUENDOS GITANOS
Flamenco
15 Mins.
Chateau Madrid, N. Y.

Los Duendos Gitanos, flamenco trio, seem to know their way around the Castilian field. Two boys and a girl are expert heelpounders with the girl chiming in with some earthy song arias. On their last effort of the evening, a guitarist assists them.

The team split their appearance doing the opening and closing sequences of the show. Their bow comprises a lively jota filled with humor and skill and they close with a spirited allegrias in which they exceed each other with vigorous dance passages. The group makes an excellent floor turn providing rich atmosphere, authentic terps and picturesque costumes. Jose.

JIMMY BAYS
Songs
20 Mins.
Rendezvous Room, Beverly Hills

Jimmy Bays has a mixture of known pop styles and delivers in a big, pleasant voice. Material generally is in standard line, presented in an easy and charming brief stint. Singer has soft, smooth and nice sound but lacks individuality or vitality. He looks like the man in the Rolls-Royce, gray-haired, suave and distinguished.

"It Could Happen to You" had nice, even tone in show caught and Frankie Laine-styled "You've Changed" had drive. Overall performance, however, needs more vitality. Dale.

Unit Reviews

Robert Goulet Revue
(CIVIC ARENA, PITT)

Pittsburgh, July 10.

Norman Rosemont presentation of "Robert Goulet Revue," starring Robert Goulet and special guest star, Carol Lawrence, with the Step Bros., Wiere Bros, John Harmon, Tom O'Steen and Bob Lone. Written and created by Duddy and Jerry Bresler; Irving Squires, general manager; Musical director, Jerry Bresler; directed and staged by Ralph Alswang; Tony Charmoli, choreographer for Carol Lawrence. Opened at Civic Arena, Pittsburgh, under sponsorship Civic Light Opera Assn; $4.95 top.

The Civic Light Opera Assn. has come up with one of the hottest personalities to bounce into stardom in years in Robert Goulet. And his advisers have fashioned the finest and most expertly executed revue type vaude layout ever seen in the two-year history of the Civic Arena.

Goulet is tremendous. On night caught (Wednesday (10), he turned the vast building into an intimery, getting almost perfect studio control in sound as he rollicked through 61 minutes of top drawer entertainment.

Achieving immediate acceptance because of his strong Columbia Records and tv exposure, Goulet was a winner from the time he hit the stage with "Wake Up." He follows with a couple more songs, then goes into a Lerner & Loewe medley highlighted by "They Call The Wind Maria" and "Gigi." In this seg, he finished up strong with "The Blues are Marching In," an original tune by Lyn Duddy and Jerry Bresler. The duo also furnish the star and his future bride with their windup duet, "Darn it Baby, That's Love." Both songs have hit potential.

In his "Old Songs" medley, Goulet brings out the rhythm section of the big CLO orchestra onto centre stage and gives out with such standards as "Melancholy Baby," and "It Had To Be You." It was this portion of the show that reaped the wildest applause when he sang the Billy Bigelow "Soliloquy" from "Carousel."

Goulet brings on Miss Lawrence for a stirring windup to his act with three songs with her. After the auditorium had been hushed into silence, he walked out and sat on the apron to sing his hit from "Camelot," "If Ever I Would Leave You."

Miss Lawrence had it a little rougher because her reputation is mostly from Broadway and the folks here still think of "Maria" in "West Side Story" as being Natalie Wood. But Miss Lawrence didn't wait long in turning the building into static electricity when she sings "Riding High" while John Harmon and Tom O'Steen whirl her around the huge stage.

O'Steen, incidentally, was a last minute replacement for Bob Lone, who broke his foot the afternoon of the opening. O'Steen, a local dancer, had the routines down pat by Wednesday and was instrumental in aiding Miss Lawrence in all her production numbers.

Opening the show are the Four Step Bros. They set the fast pace that was to follow. Their familiar vaude turn brought up the tempo of the layout to a healthy pitch and the Wiere Bros, in the second spot, kept it there. Although the Wiere brothers have been coming here for the past 25 years, their act is just as fresh and new as they've ever been. The real big yocks of the show come from them, with the strongest bit being their takeoff on "Bridge of the River Kwai."

The technical brilliance of the show is noteworthy. Putting the band behind a scrim traveller which was in four parts, operating on a single track, the show is able to get excellent effects from three rear propectors. They are used as an annunciator and in creating sets and moods for the show.

The words and music of Lyn Duddy and Jerry Bresler, who also conducted, blend everything together. One of the memorable parts of the show is the staging, lighting and direction of Ralph Alswang. Lit.

Ethel Merman Revue

Atlanta, July 9.

Ethel Merman, Reese & Davis, Elkins Sisters (3), Bob de Voye Trio, The Wanderers (4); Milton Rosenstock directing Theatre Under-the-Stars Orch (17).

Ethel Merman has never been seen in person down South and when Atlanta's Municipal Theatre Under-the-Stars had the chance to set her revue to open its 11th annual season, they grabbed it pronto. It was wisely figured that Miss Merman's name would provide the al fresco arena with a gimmick that would boom its season ticket sales. And it did, to the tune of a record $100,000.

While Miss Merman is, natch, the big draw of the revue, she has surrounded herself with four acts who can travel under their own steam. This is particularly true of a pair of comics, Tony Reese & Pepper Davis, whose material is topical and fresh, delivered with swiftness and mixed with sight gags that kept the large opening night audience busy with their mitts.

Reese feeds the giggle lines to Davis, a burly type, who, like Jackie Gleason, is nimble and can take falls that seemingly would kill a wrestler. Boys work hard and score heavily.

Reese, who doubles as emcee, brings Miss Merman on to open the show. She has thinned down to sylphlike proportions and with her red hair glinting, she makes a handsome figure.

She starts belting 'em out in her familiar style and had the audience from the tee-off. She opens with "Lady With a Song," written especially for her by Roger Edens for this tour. Singer follows with such numbers as "I've Got Rhythm," "This Is It," "Got a Lot of Livin' to Do" and "That Old Feeling."

Every time the first few bars came out, a wave of applause would surge from the 5,400-seat amphitheater and drown out her voice. At the end of each number, cheers mingled with the plaudits.

Following Miss Merman are the acrobatic Elkins Sisters, Trudi, Elfi, and Lori, who hail from Vienna. They feature precision routines and cartwheeling to so-so reception.

Bob de Voye Trio, two boys and a girl dancer, give classical interpretations to their dance routines to a good hand. Wanderers, scheduled to appear in first part of show, didn't appear until second half and then only two of four made it to the mike. Emcee explained that other pair simply hadn't arrived. The two on hand started the act and after two numbers the missing duo showed up. Their songs and arrangements were pleasing.

Miss Merman closes the show with another round of songs, beginning with "Alexander's Ragtime Band" and including "They Say It's Wonderful" and "Eadie Was a Lady," which she concluded with a bump that roused the audience.

Miss Merman's personal director, Milton Rosenstock, was in charge of the music. Her two onstage pianists were her own Lou Kessler and Atlanta's Carlton Palmer.

As staged, Miss Merman's revue is a well balanced show. It does not lag and, of course, the star commands entire aud attention while she is on almost one hour with her marathon of songs, totaling 30 numbers. Lucc.

Cops Nab St. Pete Club Owner on 2 Vice Raps

St. Petersburg, Fla., July 16.

A police raid on the downtown Two Bit Club last week resulted in owner William (Tiny) Sylvia being charged with two counts of operating a house for prostitution and two counts of contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Arrest followed a week-long investigation by detectives, who say teenage girls had been soliciting customers of the bottle club for prostitution. Two Bit Club members pay a $10 a month fee plus additional charges for ice and mix for drinks which the club stores for them.

'Daisy' Cancellation Raises Poser: Rodgers, Lerner's Next Partners?

By JESSE GROSS

A revived guessing game, to which legit tradesters had an obvious answer three years ago, is now drawing a blank when introduced among the Sardi set. What's got the theatrical crowd stymied in view of the cancellation last week of the projected Broadway production of "I Picked a Daisy" is the question of future collaborators for composer Richard Rodgers and lyricist - librettist Alan Jay Lerner.

When Oscar Hammerstein 2d died in 1960, the educated guess on his probable successor as Rodgers' partner was Lerner, the latter being on his own following the decision of Frederick Loewe, his longtime collaborator, to take it easy because of health reasons. The speculation of a Rodgers-Lerner collaboration was borne out when the two revealed some time ago they would write a musical together.

They later disclosed the tuner would be "Daisy" and that it would be choreographed and directed by Gower Champion with Robert Horton and Barbara Harris in lead roles. However, the scrapping of the venture had been expected by some insiders who felt "Daisy" was on shaky ground ever since production activity was postponed from early this year to next fall. The prevalent report is that the project, which would have had to enter into firm booking commitments last week, was cancelled because of incomplete lyrics.

Although Rodgers has been quoted as saying his partnership with Lerner will continue, the latter reportedly declined to comment when queried in Hollywood about the same matter. Rodgers, whose past collaborators were the late Lorenz Hart and then Hammerstein, referred to them and Lerner in the N. Y. Post as having one thing in common, "not liking work." However, as was pointed out in the Post piece, Lerner's friends suggest that any delay in his writing of the lyrics may have been due more to his desire for perfection than to lack of industriousness.

Whether Rodgers and Lerner will eventually collaborate on a musical, or perhaps complete "Daisy," is a matter of speculation. There are those in the trade, however, who believe the two will go separate ways and, if so, it's anybody's guess now who they might enlist as collaborators. In Rodgers case, he's soloed since Hammerstein's death by doing both the words and music for "No

Rodgers-Hart 'Syracuse' Newest Old B'way Tuner Scheduled for London

London is going in for old Broadway musicals. "The Boys from Syracuse," a New York production in 1938-39, is to be unveiled for the first time on the West End next November. "On the Town," which debuted on the Main Stem in 1944, is currently in its initial London outing at the Prince of Wales Theatre. "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," which opened in New York in December, 1949, had an unsuccessful first presentation in the British capital last season.

"Syracuse" is to be presented on the West End by the Richard Rodgers producing firm in England, Williamson Music Ltd. Rodgers composed the music for the tuner, an adaptation by George Abbott of Shakespeare's "Comedy of Errors." The lyrics were written by Lorenz Hart. Rodgers' decision to present the musical in London was prompted by the bullish reception accorded the current off-Broadway revival of the show.

Casting and production preparations are being handled in London by Jerome Whyte, Williamson representative there. Christopher Hewitt, director of the off-Broadway presentation, will also stage the West End production, which is scheduled to open Nov. 7 at the Drury Lane Theatre. "My Fair Lady," which has been playing the Drury since April 30, 1958, closes Oct. 15 to tour the provinces, starting with a 16-week engagement in Manchester.

Martha Wright Resumes Singing in 'SP,' Concerts

Martha Wright, who recently completed a straight acting stint as femme lead in one of the touring companies of "Mary, Mary," returns to singing roles the week of Aug. 5-10 as Nellie Forbush in "South Pacific" at the South Shore music tent, Cohasset, Mass. She's already played the part more than 1,000 times, first as Mary Martin's successor in the original Broadway production, and then on tour and in stock.

The singer-actress will appear next Saturday (20) with the New Haven Symphony in a pop concert at Madison, Conn., with Harry Berman conducting.

Shubert Houses Getting Facelifts

Lawrence Shubert Lawrence Jr., general manger of the Shubert circuit of legit houses, since the death of John Shubert, has been activating his proposed plan to facelift many of the theatres.

He has put a new facade, inside and out, on the Booth and Plymouth already, is working on the Shubert Theatre, and the Golden and Royale are next slated for new seats, carpeting etc.

Renovations are also being carried on backstage. Improvement of conditions in that area had been pressed for by Actors Equity in the negotiations for its present contract with the League of N. Y. Theatres. Several seasons ago, the union forced a backstage cleanup at the Majestic Theatre by holding up a performance of "The Music Man" at the house.

IT'S A QUIET SUMMER FOR ATHENS THEATRE

Athens, July 16.

Of the 26 groups which performed in Athens legit theatres last winter, only 14 continue their presentations this summer. The National Theatre is presenting Greek classics at the Epidauros and Athens Festivals in open ancient theatres.

Kostas Moussouri's and Aliki Vouyouklaki's groups are not working during summer, the former star being in New York to attend foreign plays and the latter being busy with screen contracts. Some minor other groups are touring the country, presenting several local and foreign plays in the provinces.

During the regular winter season, 52 plays were presented, of which 33 were foreign. Of the latter, six were Yank plays "Sabrina Fair," by Samuel Taylor; "Irish," by August and Ruth Goetz; "Orpheus Descending," by Tennessee Williams; "Zoo Story," by Edward Albee, "Front Page," by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, "Death of a Salesman," by Arthur Miller.

Off-B'way 'Coach' Gets To Paris TON From Spoleto

Paris, July 16.

Though having lost costumes and sets after a train wreck on the way from the Festival of Two Worlds at Spoleto, Italy, Jean Erdman's production of "The Coach With the Six Insides," based on James Joyce's "Finnegan's Wake," went on with only back curtains and makeshift costumes gleaned from the local Flea Market. The show, which scored at the Theatre of Nations in the American Avant Garde cycle ending the season this week, was previously done off-Broadway.

The Erick Hawkins Dance Co., a modern group, got split reviews, but some of the attempted delving into the mind and spirit via specialized music and terping hit responsive critical chords.

The off-Broadway section ended with the A.C.T. of San Francisco production of "Happening," staged by Allan Kaprow.

'QUIET, WE'RE LIVING'

Adapt Tv-Into-Legit In Spain, Too

Madrid, July 16.

Two television series, "Quiet, We're Filming" and "Quiet, We're Living," written and directed by Adolfo Marsillach, who also stars, have been adapted for legit.

Marsillach will stage his satirical outlook on movie-making in Spain and Spanish life in general at the Poliorana Theatre in Barcelona during the coming season.

Equity Turndown Blocks Study Of Stock Conditions

Plans have apparently been scrapped for a proposed study this summer of the employment problems of actors working in summer stock. The survey was to have been undertaken by Dr. T. Bruce Birkenhead, of the economics department of Brooklyn College, under a $5,000 grant from an anonymous donor offered the college by the Cleveland Trust Co.

Dr. Birkenhead, who recently completed an intensive report on the "Economics of the Broadway Theatre" for his PhD dissertation, notified the Cleveland Trust that he would be unable to proceed with the study, after having been informed by Actors Equity that the union would not cooperate with him in the matter. Equity, when queried on the subject, said such projects are usually turned down because they're generally too time-consuming for the union's staff and that there is also certain financial data the association, under a pledge to managers, can't reveal.

The union, according to one of its representatives, also believed the anonymous donor to be Robert H. Bishop 3d, head of the Musicarnival, Cleveland, and president of the Musical Arena Theatres Assn, whose membership comprises musical tent theatres throughout the U. S. MATA had offered to cooperate with Birkenhead in the survey which was to have been limited to its member theatres.

In view of its feeling that Bishop was behind the survey which, in-

ST. PAUL BOOKS 'LATE' AS 'WOOLF' SUCCESSOR

St. Paul, July 16.

Ed Furni, manager of the local municipal Auditorium, is getting the "Never Too Late" road company as the fifth of his next season's six Theatre Guild-American Theatre Society subscription shows. It will be in place of "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" which he turned down lest it offend too many people in this strongly Catholic community and be unsuitable in subject matter and dialog for a municipal building.

"Virginia Woolf," however, will be one of the six TG-ATS subscription season offerings in adjoining Minneapolis at Ted Mann's Orpheum for its exclusive Twin Cities' engagement. But St. Paul is not likely to have "Never Too Late" exclusively in the Twin Cities, as it's also a Minneapolis Orpheum tentative non-subscription season booking.

Furni also passed up "Beyond the Fringe," and it will be a Minneapolis TG-ATS offering exclusive for the Twin Cities. Furni doesn't think such strongly British fare would go over well enough for a fortnight in the two towns. He hasn't yet obtained a replacement booking for it as his subscription season's sixth show.

Plan Strawhat Musical From Edwin Booth Book

Williamstown, Mass., July 16.

A musical adaptation of "Prince of Players," the Eleanor Ruggles biographical novel about Edwin Booth, is listed for presentation the week of Aug. 26 as the final item of the strawhat season of the Williamstown Summer Theatre.

The librettist, composer and lyricist for the project are not specified, but Nikos Psacharopoulus, executive director of the theatre, will stage the work.

'Take Her' Folds, Winding Up Tour; Off-B'way 'Blacks' Only Chi Legit

Chicago, July 16.

"Take Her, She's Mine" closed at the Blackstone Theatre here last Saturday (13) leaving the regular Loop houses without a legit offering. A summerlong run at the 1,447-seater had been anticipated for the comedy, which was to have undergone a key cast change last night (Mon.) when Eddie Bracken was to have succeeded Tom Ewell as star. The town gets an off-Broadway legit import tonight (Tues.), however, with the opening of "The Blacks" at the Studebaker.

Another show which had been earmarked for a warm-weather span here was "Milk and Honey," which cut short a Shubert Theatre booking July 6 to move to the Geary Theatre, San Francisco. The musical, which opened May 27 at the Shubert, was originally scheduled for a 24-week run at that house through Nov. 9.

The withdrawal of "Milk" from the Shubert has resulted in the house being grabbed for return Chicago engagements of the touring productions "My Fair Lady" and "Stop the World—I Want to Get Off." "Lady" is scheduled for a July 31-Aug. 31 stand at the 2,100-seater, to be followed by a Sept. 2-14 booking of "World."

There's also been some talk of Jayne Mansfield appearing at the Shubert from Sept 16-Oct. 26 in a production of "Rattle of a Simple Man." The theatre gets the road company of "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying" on an open end booking Nov. 11. The next tenant slated for the Blackstone is "A Man for All Seasons," opening Sept. 23.

The Studebaker will be active at least part of the summer with the arrival of a production of Genet's "The Blacks," for a minimum 24-day run. It's been brought here with a cast made up of past members of the off-Broadway company by Arthur Morse, head of Chicago Summer Theatre Corp. which normally operates the Edgewater Beach Playhouse during the warm weather season.

Morse figures that the play has been timed right for the present racial climate and for the Century of Negro Progress, an exposition of the race's contributions to American arts, sciences and professions in the 100 years since the Emancipation Proclamation. The expo is expected to attract a large visitor turnout when it opens in August.

"Calculated Risk," with Dana Andrews had been booked to follow "Blacks" at the Studebaker, opening Aug. 13, but the deal recently fell through. Morse's company will wait for the initial reaction to the Genet play, to see if it might not run indefinitely, before booking another show.

Ready 'Aida' for Stadium; Use 400 College Studes

"Aida" will be performed in the football stadium of Indiana Univ., Bloomington. The Verdi classic, played by a cast of 400, will be presented by the university's Opera Theatre on the football field July 27 and 31, and Aug. 3 and 7.

Mario Cristini has designed the sets which will employ 900 square yards of water-proofed canvas for backdrops. A light bridge will support more than 100 light installations. The university's symphony will be in the pit and singers are being recruited from the school's music division.

Professors, summer students and Bloomington residents are being asked to volunteer as warriors, slaves and prisoners.

Stagehands Picket 'Brecht on Brecht'

Theatrical Protective Union, Local 1, the New York stagehands union, is continuing to picket the revival of "Brecht on Brecht" which opened last Wednesday night (10) at the Sheridan Square Playhouse, N.Y. The union is demanding the employment at $137.50 weekly of an electrician by the off-Broadway offering, produced by Cheryl Crawford and presented by the Greater N.Y. Chapter of the American National Theatre & Academy.

The production, which has refused to accede to Local 1 on the matter, has one non-union electrician on its payroll at $100 weekly. The employee has been paying a "representation fee" to the union which wants one of its men hired as an addition to the production's present staff. Martin Levine, business agent for the union, contends that the original off-Broadway production of "Brecht on Brecht" used three members of Local 1, in addition to non-union personnel.

It's the union's intention to place its members with shows being presented off-Broadway on the theory that such presentations should employ union professionals. Levine says he's willing to tailor his demands to the budget of a production and in line with this discussions have been held between him and Paul Libin, president of the League of Off-Broadway Theatres.

SET CHAMPION TO STAGE 'CALL DOLLY' MUSICAL

Choreographer-director Gower Champion, who became available for other assignments with the cancellation last week of the projected Broadway production of "I Picked a Daisy," has been tagged by David Merrick for his production of "Call on Dolly." The vehicle, a musical version of Thornton Wilder's "The Matchmaker," is slated for a mid-January opening at the St. James Theatre.

"Dolly" has a book by Michael Stewart and music and lyrics by Jerry Herman.

Margaret O'Brien Will Costar for 'Clowns' Tour

Margaret O'Brien will costar with Dane Clark in the major city tour of "A Thousand Clowns." Clark will be repeating the role he played for a while on Broadway as successor to Jason Robards Jr. The prime time presentation, scheduled for a Sept. 11 opening at the Playhouse, Wilmington, will be sent out by Fred Coe & Arthur Cantor, coproducers of the New York original.

Another edition of the Herb Gardner comedy, with John Ireland as star, is being produced for a bus-and-truck tour of split-week stands by Lawrence Witchell & Kenneth J. Stein, by arrangement with Coe & Cantor.

Recent paintings by Alfred Ceike are being exhibited this week at the Tappan Zee Playhouse, Nyack, N.Y.

Helen Bonfils Presents Full-Scale Gratis 'SP' As Denver Goodwiller

By T. BIDWELL McCORMICK

Denver, July 16.

This week's presentation of the 30th annual Denver Post free open air musical brings to $2,140,000 the total personal spent thus far on the project by its sponsor, Helen Bonfils, since she assumed its financing a dozen years ago. Originated as a goodwill builder in depression days by the newspaper, of which her late father, Fredrick C. Bonfils, was one of the founders, the venture first used amateur talent. Now professional leads, a full union orchestra, stagehands and electricians are employed. A. G. Birch, newspaperman and ex-showman is the producer.

This year's offering is "South Pacific" and stars Joshua Hecht and Betty Jane Watson. A complete working stage is constructed each year and professional set designers create the sets for the open air Greek theatre in the center of grassy Cheeseman Park in the heart of Denver's Capitol Hill residential district, where the audience spreads out blankets or sits on camp stools and park benches to view the performance. Loud speakers bring the music and voices to the far corners of the huge park.

Musical numbers: "Business is Booming," "Debtors Lament," "Talk," "That's What I'd Like for Christmas," "The Pickwickians," "A Bit of Character," "Learn a Little Something," "There's Something About You," "You Never Met a Feller Like Me," "Look Into Your Heart," "The Winter Waltz," "A Hell of an Election," "Very," "If I Ruled the World," "The Trouble with Women," "That's the Law," "British Justice," "Do as You Would be Done By," "Good Old Pickwick."

When "Oliver" came along to achieve standout boxoffice success on both sides of the Atlantic, it was a certainty that other Dickens adaptations would follow. Now, a trio of accomplished craftsmen have had a go at "Pickwick," but the episodic nature of this work (done previously as a straight play) makes it a far more difficult vehicle for transition to the stage, and it is bitty and sketchy.

It is not easy to forecast the success this new musical may have. It has plus factors in the marquee appeal of Harry Secombe, one of the favorites of the British stage, and superb decor by Sean Kenny. Secombe, the head man of the famed Goons radio team, is a potent b.o. force and there is a public which will welcome his first appearance in a conventional musical. And Kenny's designs, with their startling mastery of mobility in transition from one scene to another, though occasionally distracting, will intrigue and fascinate most audiences.

Wolf Mankowitz, who undertook the gigantic task of adapting the material, had to confine himself to a few of the better-known incidents of the adventures of the members of the Pickwick Club, and, not surprisingly, his main story line revolves around the famous breach of promise suit between Pickwick and Mrs. Bardell. But other incidents have been brought into the script, and some of these remain in isolation from the main plot, taking on something of the appearance of revue sketches. Amusing and adequate in themselves they may be, but they do not fit the story line.

Cyril Ornadel has written 19 tunes. They are mainly pleasant enough to listen to as an accompaniment to the onstage action, but have little memorable quality. Only one or two give Secombe a real chance to show off his fine tenor voice. Secombe's best opportunity comes with "If I Ruled the World," which he reprises solo as the climax to the show, with good effect. Oddly enough, the star does not have a solo (apart from the reprise) throughout the entire production, and only participates in three of the 11 numbers in the first act.

Leslie Bricusse has some slick and sometimes witty lyrics, with a number for Jingle aptly called "Very," which admirably illustrates the stilted form of dialog for which that character is noted. There is also a very breezy number in "You Never Met a Feller Like Me" (sung by Sam Weller and Pickwick) in which the heavyweight Secombe does a couple of rather sensational cartwheels. One unusual musical item is the "Winter Waltz," skated on a minature ice rink, in which Donald Graham and Joan Ismay show off their skill on blades.

In his adaption, Mankowitz starts the action with scenes at the Fleet Prison, where Pickwick, accompanied by his loyal servant Weller, has been committed for refusing to pay the damages in his breach of promise suit. Then it goes into a prolonged flashback, describing the events that led to his incarceration. There are the scenes at the "George and Vulture" tavern, where the unscrupulous Jingle elopes with Wardle's spinster sister; the incident in Pickwick's chambers which led Mrs. Bardell to believe she was being offered a proposal of marriage; the offices of Dodson and Fogg, the shady lawyers who represented Mrs. Bardell; and, of course, the courtroom scene itself. Among the extraneous incidents incorporated in the script are the duel between Nathaniel Winkle and Dr. Slammer and the election meeting at Eatanswill. The former has little or nothing to do with the plot, though is amusingly done. The latter is not even particularly amusing.

As already indicated, a lot depends on Harry Secombe. He has the right physical makeup and inventive sense of comedy and oozes warmth and charm. It would be hard to imagine a more suitable British artist to play the title role. Teddy Green is quite a find, and as Sam Weller is one of the best things in the production. He is a bright and lively personality with a flair for convincing Cockney characterization. Peter Bull's Sergeant Buzfuz is a standout cameo, and he makes a memorable impact in just one scene. Jessie Evans hits the right note of hope and despair as Mrs. Bardell, Anton Rodgers makes an engaging Jingle, Gerald James and Oscar Quitak are in good form as members of the Pickwick Club, and others who stand out in a big cast are Julian Orchard, Hilda Braid, Dilys Watling, and Michael Darbyshire and Tony Sympson as the two shady lawyers.

"Pickwick" is a big and expensive production with a substantial overhead. It has a big chorus of singers and dancers and the production is skillfully held together and controlled by Peter Coe's accomplished direction. But it will need a hefty weekly b.o. take to keep it going, and whether that can be accomplished must be in some doubt. Myro.

Wild About Harry

Spoleto, Italy, July 16.

Plays in 17 scenes by Henry Miller. Staged at the Festival of Two Worlds by Herbert Machiz. Scenery, Roy Levine. In the cast of 16: Harry Millard, Wendy Mackenzie, Mildred Dunnock, Michael Dunn, Fiddle Viracola, Alec Murphy, Gina Sciandra, Saviana Scalfi.

Henry ("Tropic of Cancer") Miller, of Brooklyn, Paris and Big Sur, has emerged at the Festival of Two Worlds here as a dramatist via his work, "Just Wild About Harry," which runs to seven loosely-connected scenes. Those who perhaps anticipated the force of Miller's prose, or its scandal, were somewhat letdown. What emerged in Herbert Mazhiz's production was a kind of spectacle of movement, lighting, sound effects which tended to overshadow the text itself. Even so, a remarkable and arresting event.

"Harry" the lead, may very well be Henry himself of yore, playing havoc with all sorts of female hearts, while beset with complexes and frustrations. He lives in a world populated by dwarfs, policemen, prostitutes, ambulance drivers with vaguely Hitlerian uniforms and marchers with Cuban flags, billiard players and an old lady carried in a procession to symbolize the essence of the Mother. In the final scene, Harry is shot by the prostitute who is in love with him. But, though dead, he is still able to pass in review the bygone years, episodes, people and events in a sort of "flash" technique—and only then does he decide to declare his love to Jeanie the prostitute — who never was able to get such statement from his lips while Harry was still among the living.

Roy Levine has created the proper atmosphere with his sparse but evocative sets and Herbert Machiz (who directed Tennessee Williams "The Milktrain Doesn't Stop Here Anymore" last year in Spoleto and on Broadway) has directed a group of first-class actors with care and insight. Among the 15 actors, Harry Millard in the lead and beautiful Blonde Wendy Mackenzie impressed the audience most. Michael Dunn, Fiddle Viracola, Alec Murphy, Gian Sciandra and Saviana Scalfi were all notably good in the characterization of the various parts—but the list would not be complete without mentioning a 16th character, the symbolic old lady-mother brought in procession: the bit part of all bit-parts, interpreted magnificently and unforgettably by Mildred Dunnock who made the old (Stanislavski or Max Reinhardt?) saying "there are no small parts there are only small actors" more apparent that it has recently been demonstrated.

Spoleto proved once again, with this item of exceptional interest, that it is a Festival very different from most Festivals. Goth.

Enrico

London, July 10.

Michael Dorfman presentation of two-act (14 scenes) musical comedy by Garinei and Giovannini, with music by Renato Rascel; English version in collaboration with Peter Myers & Ronald Cass; no staging credit given; decor and costumes, Coltellacci, with decor adapted by Disley Jones; orchestrations, Peter Knight; musical director, Ian Macpherson; lighting, Robert Ornbo. Stars Renato Rascel. Features Roger Delgado, Frank Coda, Bryan Blackburn, Julia Carne, Franco Bocchi, Gloria Paul, Roberta D'Esti, Clelia Metania, Denise Frampton, Trevor Thomas, James Land, Carole Ann Ford, Philip Hinton.

Girls: Lindsey Anderson, Frances Ede, Denise Frampton, Anna Franklin, Audrey Gunner, Carol Lucy, Rosemary Lyford, Peta Pelham, Jacqueline Sands, Cheryl Thornton, Christine Yates.

Opened July 3, '63, at Piccadilly Theatre, London; $4.20 top.

Musical numbers: "Buona Sera," "Just Round The Corner," "Varieta," "Bon Giorna," "Socialist Anthem," "Strike," "Com'e Bello," "Theresa," "The Boater," "My Son," "The Furlana," "Arrivederci Not Addio," "The Song of Rome," "Ballad," "Resistance Song," "Boogie Woogie," "Made In Italy."

"Enrico," a whopping hit in Rome, opened in the West End after a couple of unfortunate delays. First time there were technical hitches in staging the show (and it is easy to see why, with the complicated, smoothly effective stage machinery), and next the star, Renato Rascel, collapsed from exhaustion during rehearsals. It finally opened to a highly mixed press and it is also a highly mixed entertainment. There are some very good plums in it but also many glaring faults. Still it is a pleasant, undemanding show and in England there are probably enough Italians, or people who have visited and enjoyed Italy, to give it the right sendoff towards a fair run.

Apart from its star, and a few scattered Italian phrases, the English version is as resolutely British as the tourists who visit Rome and Naples and that could be in its favor in chalking up a

Inside Stuff—Legit

Lawrence Roman, author of "Under the Yum-Yum Tree," sees a conceivable $1,000,000 gross for the comedy on its presentations in Los Angeles and San Francisco. The play, which was an unsuccessful 1960-61 Broadway entry, has been flourishing on the Coast.

The Frisco production, as reported in VARIETY recently, has passed the one-year mark at the On Broadway Theatre, where its weekly potential capacity gross is $9,100. The take lately has been running around $7,000 weekly. Using that amount as the average, the total gross thus far at the On Broadway is figured at about $400,000.

In L.A., the comedy is berthed at the Ivar Theatre, having moved there in May, 1962, from the Las Plamas Theatre, where it opened Sept. 13, 1961. Roman says the production in L.A. has grossed about $500,000 to date.

The Puppet

Chicago, July 9.

Playwrights at Second City presentation of a two-act (nine scenes) drama by Bernard Sahlins. Staged by Sheldon Patinkin; sets, Clarence Mitchell. Opened July 8, '63, at the Playwrights at Second City, Chicago; $2.50 top.

Cast: Thomas Erhart, Ray Inman, Ann Eggert, Mark Gordon, Joseph Chaikin, Omar Shapli, Melvin Spiegel.

Bernard Sahlins would do well to roll "The Puppet" back into the typewriter and remove all its pretensions of belonging to the Absurd school. In his debut as a playwright, the co-producer of Second City has mistaken obliqueness for profundity and has tried to make an allegory of a situation that is more effectively a parable. But his basic play seems worth salvaging for perhaps an off-Broadway production, providing he can find a way to clear it of the almost ludicrous "new wave" mannerisms and the desired opaqueness.

The play's virtue is that it makes believable the fantastic universe of a carnival troupe of human puppets whose lives are manipulated both onstage and off by a tyrant with a flair for sleight of hand magic. Involved are a girl, a scarecrow of a man and a young Negro; and the carefully-drawn parallel to the Petrouchka story takes an ironic turn when an outsider joins the group as an understudy, falls in love with the girl and disrupts the weird order of things in the family circle. In the end, the master of men who pulls the strings is destroyed but not until he is realized as a kind of puppet himself, the leader who is dependent upon his followers for his identity and who is as encaged by them as they are by him.

Sahlins weakens his work by trying to say too many things at once, shooting off on tangents of family and corporate structure, on civilization, on love and other themes which he either touches on epigramatically or dwells on obscurely in the dialog. He has also failed to put a focus on the central figure, so that it is impossible to tell whether it is the puppet master or the intruder who is the intended protagonist. As a result of this confusion, the destruction of the despot in the final scene lacks power.

Considering the problems of script and the limitations of the Playwrights at Second City stage, Sheldon Patinikin has done admirably in staging it, for it is vivid and remains interesting despite the verbosity and slow pace. Mark Gordon is wholly persuasive as the tyranical boss of the troupe who is principled by his own rules; and the other key role, that of the intruder, is handled satisfactorily by Joseph Chaikin. Thomas Erhart is effective as Pet, the counterpart of Petrouchka, but Ann Eggert and Roy Inman just meet the requirements as the other human puppets. Omar Shapli suffices for the Dostoyevskian detective who seems to know more than he says and whose part in the whole setup is the most obscure of all. Les.

Brecht on Brecht

Greater N.Y. Chapter of American National Theatre & Academy revival of a Cheryl Crawford production, arranged and translated by George Tabori. Staged by Gene Frankel; production stage manager, Quinton Raines; piano accompaniment, Jane D. White. Opened July 10, '63, at the Sheridan Square Playhouse, N.Y.; $3.50 top weeknights, $3.95 weekends.

Cast: Roscoe Lee Browne, Anthony Costello, Micki Grant, Kathleen Murray, Dolores Sutton, Joseph Warren.

"Brecht on Brecht," the potpourri of saying and writings by the German playwright-director, is back on the off-Broadway boards. The new cast is capable, though not up to the level of the original company of the longrun 1962 version. But the current production does contain fine moments and provides an interesting evening.

Most successful of the performers are Roscoe Lee Browne, Micki Grant and Dolores Sutton. Browne plays with authority and charm, and with his fine timing, is especially effective in his delivery of Brecht's wryly comic lines. His reading of "The Old Hat" monolog about a young actor is admirable.

Miss Grant sings "The Ballad of Marie Sanders" and a couple of other songs with great intensity, and Miss Sutton brings the presentation to a powerful conclusion with a skillful, moving performance of the Jewish wife scene from "Fear and Misery in the Third Reich."

Kathleen Murray sings pleasantly, if not very Brechtianly, and is acceptable in a scene from "Good Woman of Setzuan." Joseph Warren does well with "Galileo," and Anthony Costello rounds out the company adequately.

Despite picketing by the stagehands union, the presentation was almost capacity at the preview covered. Kenn.

The Millionairess

Louisville, July 9.

Louisville Theatrical Assn. & Laurence Henry Co. presentation of Theatre Guild, in association with Charles Lowe, revival of comedy in three acts (five scenes), by George Bernard Shaw. Staged by Gene Saks; scenery and costumes, Fred Voelpel and Vincent Piacentini Jr.; lighting, Richard I. Mix. Stars Carol Channing. Opened July 8, '63, at the Brown Theatre, Louisville; $3.50.

Julius Sagamore ..... Gene Wilder

Woman ..... Eda Reiss Merin

Carol Channing, a star of musicals, tv and niteries, is making her straight play debut in "The Millionairess," the George Bernard Shaw comedy which the Theatre Guild originally produced in 1952 and is reviving for a stock tour and then a Broadway presentation next fall. It opened the summer season at the recently refurbished Brown Theatre here. The show will undergo tightening (it ran some 20 minutes too long at the opening performance), and the cast will presumably be well routined by the time the piece reaches New York.

The Shaw comedy deals with the trials and tribulations of the supposed richest gal in the world, who lets a husband slip from her grasp, applies the judo treatment to her lover and puts the hex on an Egyptian doctor. She disposes of her wealth, becomes a sweatshop seamstress and scullery maid, but her business acumen soon has her managing a profitable business, and the proprietor of a swank hotel.

Miss Channing is on stage throughout most of the play, and with capable direction and ideal supporting cast, the Shaw piece becomes fascinating theatre. The comedienne handles the Shavian lines effectively, although her familiar mannerisms and comedy style creep in occasionally. Katharine Hepburn played the role in the 1952 production.

With a little snipping here and there, particularly the Commercial Road basement scene, the piece should be well tuned sophisticated Broadway audiences. With current inflation running into stratospheric figures. "Millionairess" might just appropriately add three naughts and become "The Billionairess" before the Theatre Guild and Charles Lowe bring the production to Broadway. Wied.

Legit Followup

Beyond the Fringe

(John Golden, N.Y.)

Although "Beyond the Fringe" has played more than 300 performances in New York, it's still as fresh and irreverant as a newborn babe, and much more amusing. A joke about the Profumo scandal has been added to Peter Cook's superb imitation of Harold MacMillan, but most of the other sketches are timeless, requiring no such updating.

Alan Bennett's hilarious Sunday sermon is perhaps the show's best number, but belly laughs are the rule rather than the exception. Jonathan Miller's zany bit about men who lose their pants on trains, Dudley Moore's nutty piano interludes, and the wonderful Shakespeare satire are other highlights of the evening

A few of the skits run too long, and there's sometimes a sense of sameness about the ribbing of ineffectual intellectuals. But "Beyond the Fringe" is, on the whole, a delight. Kenn.

'Fair Lady' 105G, 'World' $36,623, L.A. 'Camelot' $100,195, 'Milk' 21½G (4), S.F.; 'Take Me,' Two 'Mary' Troupes Close

"My Fair Lady," which hadn't been doing too well on the road lately, was back in the powerhouse groove last week in Los Angeles. It and the second-position "Camelot" in San Francisco registered takes of over $100,000. Also big were "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying" in Frisco and "Carousel" in Los Angeles. "Stop the World—I Want to Get Off" did well in L. A. and "Sound of Music" was okay in Washington. "Milk and Honey" played only part of the week in Frisco.

There were three closings last Saturday (13), the "Mary, Mary" companies in Detroit and Philadelphia and "Take Her, She's Mine" in Chicago. Joining the touring list next Monday (22) in L. A. will be "A Man for All Seasons."

the theatre most of her life, having produced, appeared in and/or financed various Broadway and off-Broadway plays. When the Denver Post discontinued its financial support of the popular opera several years ago, Miss Bonfils, rather than see it discontinued, assumed full financial obligation, about $130,000 annually. The eight performances generally play to about 110,000 persons, representing the capacity of the lawn permitting a view of the stage.

Nearly 600 persons will take part in the production and presentation of this year's show. The stage is 220 feet long, 26 electricians are employed on the intricate lighting and sound systems and 28 stagehands are used. In addition to the principals, the chorus numbers 60 and there is a full orchestra.

The city administration, the city parks and recreation departments, the police and fire departments all lend additional assistance in the annual presentation, which is free to the public on a first-come, first-served basis. Many come in the early afternoon in order to secure space near the stage and bring picnic lunches, as nothing is sold in the park, not even a copy of the Denver Post.

Goulet Hot $89,363, Pitt.; Slezak $23,333, Philly; Biz Up For Bard Fests

"The Robert Goulet Revue," in which the singer's bride, Carol Lawrence, also appears, got the Civic Light Opera season in Pittsburgh off to a sock start last week. The Playhouse in the Park, Philadelphia, had another good session with Walter Slezak in "Romanoff and Juliet" and business was up substantially at Stratford Shakespeare festivals in Connecticut and Ontario.

At the Bard festival in Stratford, Conn., the weekly number of performances will be increased to nine with the addition starting July 26 of Friday matinees. Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra," the first non-Shakespearean work to be performed at the Connecticut spot will be given several preview showings next week. It's scheduled to open there officially July 30.

B'way Better; 'Never' Back to SRO, 'Oliver' $59,306, 'Loves Me' $39,327, 'Tovarich' $37,066, 'Fringe' $28,710

Broadway improved last week for the first time since mid-June, when business went into a decline and hit murderous proportions the July 1-6 session. Registering the biggest gain last week was "She Loves Me" which climbed $8,539 over the previous stanza. Increased revenue at "Never Too Late" pushed that comedy back into the capacity groove with "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying."

The boxoffice pickup did not include "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," which suffered a substantial drop with Jerry Lester subbing in the starring role regularly played by the vacationing Zero Mostel. The list of shows has been reduced to 12 with the closing last Saturday (13) of "Pajama Tops" and the suspension following the evening performance last Wednesday (10) of "Dear Me, the Sky is Falling" because of the illness of its star, Gertrude Berg. The comedy is scheduled to resume performances July 29.

Lincoln Center Rep Will Open ANTA-Wash. Sq. Theatre Next Jan.

The red tape has been cleared for the debut here next January of the Repertory Theatre of Lincoln Center, N.Y. The company will initiate its activities in a theatre to be erected in Greenwich Village, however, rather than the Center's $8,200,000 Vivian Beaumont Theatre, which isn't expected to be ready for occupancy until 1965.

The Greenwich Village house, to be called the ANTA-Washington Square Theatre, will be built on land donated by New York Univ. The cost of constructing the 1,140-seater, figured at $400,000, will be assumed by the American National Theatre & Academy. Whether the house will be used only on a temporary basis until the Vivian Beaumont is completed, as originally planned, is a matter of speculation.

Robert Whitehead and Elia Kazan, coproducing directors of the Repertory Theatre, visualize the possibility of using the Greenwich Village spot permanently in conjunction with the Vivian Beaumont. That would naturally depend on such factors as the success of the venture, as well as the attitude of NYU and ANTA. The Repertory Theatre's present agreement for occupancy of the downtown site involves a commitment for 100 weeks of playing time there.

The Repertory Theatre is to open Jan. 21 in Greenwich Village with the preem of Arthur Miller's "After the Fall," starring Jason Robards Jr. The play will be directed by Kazan and designed by Jo Mielziner, as will a new untitled comedy by S. N. Behrman, formerly called, "But for Whom Charlie . . ." The Behrman entry will be the last of three plays to be unveiled during the initial repertory season.

The other offering will be a revival of Eugene O'Neill's "Marco Millions," which Jose Quintero will direct. The Repertory Theatre plans presenting a second play and possibly, a third, under Quintero's direction during the next three years. The three plays for the initial season are to be offered as a subscription series, with the sponsors hoping for a response large enough to guarantee keeping a play in repertory a minimum of four months.

The regular boxoffice sale for tickets will run from $2.50-$6 Mondays through Thursday and from $3.50 to $6.50 Fridays and Saturdays. For subscribers the ticket range will be $2-$5 during the week and $3-$6 over the weekend. A permanent company of 40 is to be utilized by the Repertory Theatre which will begin rehearsals for its inaugural semester in October.

Incidentally, the ANTA-Washington Square Theatre will be a steel structure with stage conditions similar to the Vivian Beaumont. Both theatres have been designed by Mielziner and Eero Saarinen & Associates.

Set 'Deputy' For 20 Productions

Frankfurt, July 16.

Although it has been the object of widespread condemnation, the Rolf Hochhuth drama, "Der stellvertreter" ("The Deputy") is continuing to flourish like the proverbial green bay tree. The play offers the argument that the late Pope Pius XII failed to make the utmost effort to dissuade the Nazis from persecution of the Jews before and during World War II.

"The Deputy" is now set for 20 productions in almost as many countries, including The Hague, Helsinki, London, Paris, Oslo, Stockholm, Tel Aviv, New York, and in Aarhus and Odense, Denmark. The published text of the play has become a bestseller in West Germany.

Additional German-language productions are being prepared for Dusseldorf, Flensburg, Frankfurt, Bielefeld, Giessen, Hamburg, Hannover, as well as Vienna and Basle and Bern.

Billy Rose is planning a Broadway production of the drama for next fall.

The cancellation of "Daisy" will presumably benefit other Broadway shows which are expected to get some of the heavy theatre party trade which had been anticipated for that musical. "Daisy" had been earmarked for a December opening at the Majestic Theatre, N. Y. That house is now scheduled to get the Mary Martin-starrer. "Jennie," which was to have been berthed at the Winter Garden Theatre, N. Y. It opens Oct. 17 on Broadway.

Miss Ginger Rogers
1605 Gilcrest Drive
Beverly Hills, California

Dear Miss Rogers:

Dallas is still reeling from the impact of your unforgettable "Unsinkable Molly Brown." You must have felt from the standing, cheering ovation on opening night to the standing, cheering ovation on the closing matinee that the city was yours.

Final tabulation on box office receipts places your Dallas engagement third highest in the 22-year history of the Summer Musicals. Certainly we are overjoyed at this kind of business; the momentum you generated will help us all summer. But our delight is even greater at the consistently marvelous level of performance you maintained throughout a very rigorous two weeks.

Once again it has been proven that there is no substitute for a star -- particularly for a star such as you who enjoys the everlasting affection of the entire American public.

In Molly Brown's own words, "Ginger, we're whales over ya."

Sincerely,

Tom Hughes

"Here is no cinema luminary smiling at her public while awkwardly going through the paces of a stage role, but instead an actress of magnetic charm and skill using a seasoned talent to shape out as wallopingly lively and warmly amusing a 'Molly' as there ever has been . . . Ginger tackles the Colorado tornado with zest, making her not only saucily entertaining but someone almost as moving and endearing as Kitty Foyle . . . In Ginger Rogers, Hollywood has an ambassadress to make it proud."

cidentally, he denies, Equity was also reluctant to go along with the project on the theory that it would be supporting a managerial-inspired study which might be used against it in future negotiations. Dr. Birkenhead's answer to this is that the same might apply to the management group.

Dr. Birkenhead, who's working this summer as business manager at the Cape Cod Melody Tent, Hyannis, Mass., also argues that the survey would not have created a burden for the Equity staff, but was to have been accomplished by direct questioning of performers at the tent theatres through a comprehensive questionaire concerning their economic, social and academic backgrounds, their present status and problems, as well as their future plans.

When Dr. Birkenhead informed the Cleveland Trust that he would be unable to proceed with the study he also noted that he might be able to make a study on his own with a smaller grant. However, that angle has not been pursued further by the Cleveland Trust.

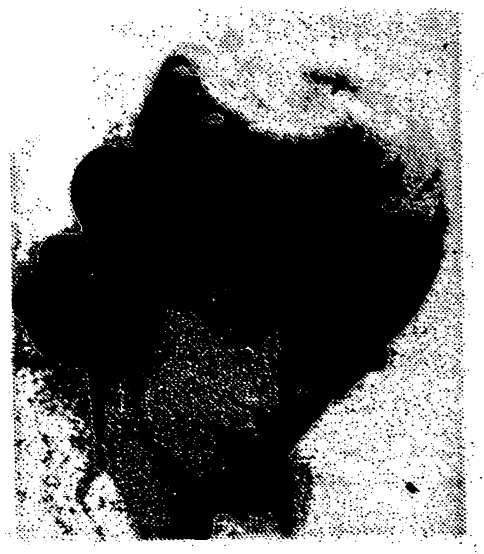
"BARBARA GILBERT'S Singing Keeps 'Molly Brown' Afloat"



"Miss Gilbert, a vivacious, curvacious redhead, saves the show with her zesty portrayal of the indomitable Molly." HENRY WEFING, Herald-News, N. J.

"BARBARA GILBERT SHINES In 'MOLLY' at PLAYHOUSE"
By KENNETH G. WALLACE
Record, N. J.

"History tells us there really was a Molly Brown. I don't care what history says. What made her unsinkable—as in 'The Unsinkable Molly Brown' which premiered at the Playhouse on the Mall in Paramus last night—is Barbara Gilbert.

"This redheaded kook, bouncy as a Fagin check, gave a seemingly tireless performance which paced the Meredith Willson musical to a slam-bang opener at the theater in the Bergen Mall.

FINE SUPPORT

"Admittedly, there was ample and laudable support.

"But it was, in the final count, the free-wheeling, give-it-her-all Barbara Gilbert who brought the first night audience to its seven curtain-call reception.

"Just as it was Tammy Grimes who kept 'Molly' swinging along Broadway, so is it Miss Gilbert who does it for the show at the Playhouse on the Mall.

"She's lively, lovable and kooky, acting out the story of the illiterate Hannibal, Mo., gal."

JACOB SCHAAD JR.
Newark News

"Barbara Gilbert is nothing less than terrific, bringing to the role all of the bounce and brass that it requires. Miss Gilbert takes charge right from the start and with her showcase role the night is hers."

pop boxoffice success. The British like to take their Continental pleasures with the minimum mental effort.

Thin storyline concerns a simple Italian hatter born on Italy's Independence Day, 1863. At curtain rise he is celebrating his 100th birthday in Rome. Through a number of superficially linked scenes his life story is shown against a background of Italy's history. When the charade deals with simple things like love and entertainment it has much of the uninhibited gaiety associated with Italian carnivals. But, in later stages, when it purports to deal with the two wars, the rise of Fascism, the Resistance, the mood is uncomfortably flippant and distasteful.

Person responsible for staging the show is not named on the program, though two directors were involved. But, though untidy and needing some pruning, the general effect is brisk and energetic and the scenes come to swift life through the agency of a revolving stage and moving platforms. Both decor and costumes are standout and are the brain children of Italy's Coltellacci.

Renator Rascel, who wrote the click "Arrivederci Roma," is also responsible for the songs on this show. He has provided the acceptable sort of music that Italian violinists play to restaurant visitors in the sentimental glow of the evening. At that level he has produced four likely winners, "Just Round The Corner" (frequently reprised), "Com'e Bello," "Arrivederci Not Addio," and "The Song of Rome." But many of the lyrics are too slickly reminiscent of cabaret material to fit in to the general atmosphere and it is likely that hands of Bryan Blackburn, Peter Myers and Ronald Cass have had much to do with these. Some more talented warbling would help, too.

Rascel sings, mimes, acts, and plays guitar acceptably but in no department does he make the impact that a role as large as his demands. He is a small, leprechaun of a man who has charm and a sly comic sense but he never dominates the stage. The rest of the cast work as a team and are called upon to play many roles. Gloria Paul, a statesque brunet dancer, singer and comedienne, with a knowing eye is a knockout. Clelia Matania, Roger Delgado, Bryan Blackburn, Roberta D'Esti and Frank Coda perform with diligent skill rather than dazzling inspiration. But Ralph Beaumont has urged a splendid chorus to top efforts in singing and dancing and when they are around the show rarely flags.

The book needs more wit and bite to make it a pungent commentary on this peek at a fateful 100 years' Italian "History." But there are some very amusing situations. Rascel learning to dance, his first timorous entry into a brothel, a touching, if corny, first act finale as young men go off to war, a peppy boogie-woogie sequence and a cynical song titled "Made In Italy," about Italy's current commercial "civilization" with a punch tagline about Elizabeth Taylor are scenes which stick agreeably in the mind.

Private Lives

London, July 4.

Michael Codron revival of a three-act comedy by Noel Coward. Staged by James Roose-Evans; decor, Christian Kurvenal. Features Sarah Harter, Edward de Souza, Roger Booth, Rosemary Martin, Janie Booth. Opened July 3, '63, at the Duke of York's Theatre, London; $3.15 top.

Sibyl Chase ..... Sarah Harter
Elyot Chase ..... Edward de Souza
Victor Prynne ..... Roger Booth
Amanda Prynne ..... Rosemary Martin
Louise ..... Janie Booth

"Private Lives," Noel Coward's oft-revived, high jinks morsel of the early 1930s, is in for another West End airing, this time by the Hampstead Theatre Club. The comedy updated with references here and there to Onassis and so on, but the script doesn't need such modifications. Coward's period sophistication, expertly expressed in the witty dialog, makes the play a perennial.

Despite a tendency to be a little stagey in his posturing at the outset, Edward de Souza, in the male lead originally played by the author, is more flexible in the later scenes. Matching his overall slick and suave performance, Rosemary Martin, as the former wife, is warm and delightful, with attractive spice and kittenish appearance and mannerisms.

Sterling portrayals come from Roger Booth as the blustering bore and Sarah Harter as the squeaking, simpering newlywed. Janie Booth clicks as the French maid.

Windfall

London, July 3.

John Gale Productions & Packard Productions presentation of three-act comedy, by Michael Gilbert. Staged by Alastair Sim; decor, Hutchinson Scott. Stars Alastair Sim; features Hugh Latimer, Garry Marsh, Ronald Adam, Merlith Sim, Margaret Wedlake, Kerry Gardner, Douglas Muir, Peter Furnell. Opened July 2, '63, at the Lyric Theatre, London; $2.15 top.

Alexander Lindsay ..... Alastair Sim
Maj. Gunn ..... Douglas Muir
Margaret Lindsay ..... Margaret Wedlake
Brian Cleeve ..... Kerry Gardner
Bernard Mailler ..... Peter Furnell
Jean Lindsay ..... Merlith Sim
Hubert Palling ..... Hugh Latimer
Henniker ..... Ronald Adam
Sir Henry Lamphrey ..... Garry Marsh

"Windfall" illustrates the age-old phenomenon of how obviously inferior plays sometimes get produced. Its chief interest, however, is the skillful but futile performances of Alastair Sim as star and such players as Hugh Latimer, Garry Marsh, Ronald Adam, Douglas Muir, Margaret Wedlake, Merlith Sim, Kerry Gardner and Peter Furnell in supporting roles.

The slight plot of the Michael Gilbert comedy involves a struggle over proposed methods of saving an insolvent school, and how a brilliant junior scholar's stock market cleanup provides the necessary funds. Sim, who also staged the piece, gives another of his expertly synthetic performances as winningly crochety pedagogue, with solid assists by the others.

Hutchinson Scott has provided a routine set that's probably an authentic replica of an English boarding school.

Commitments Force 'Sail' to Exit Melbourne Despite Profitable B.O.

Melbourne, July 16.

Although Noel Coward's "Sail Away" is doing excellent business at Her Majesty's, it closed here last Saturday (13) and moved on to Sydney, where it's figured likely to stay until October, when "Camelot" opens. "Sail Away" then goes to Brisbane and Adelaide.

Curtailing the profitable run in Melbourne was necessitated by the fact that J. C. Williamson Theatres, the producer of the show, operates houses in most capital cities here and New Zealand, and John McCallum, the firm's joint managing director, has to arrange the schedule well in advance. In this way, long before a show is even fully cast, length of runs have to be estimated, and frequently theatres are leased to other managements for seasons (currently, Her Majesty's, which is in Adelaide, is occupied by Garnet H. Carroll's "The Sound of Music").

Judging from the length of runs achieved by "Sail Away" on Broadway and in the West End, Williamson was right in limiting its Melmourne engagement to seven and a half weeks. The advance sale also seemed to confirm this. Long before the opening date of "Sail Away," a four-week booking by the Russian Georgian State Dance Company was set for the theatre.

Coward's arrival on the scene to supervise final rehearsals stimulated great interest in the show, as did the return of Aussie-born Maggie Fitzgibbon in the leading role. First night notices were good, with raves for Miss Fitzgibbon, and the show is now figured a gigantic success here. But that came too late to change the length of the scheduled engagement.

In Sydney, on the other hand, "Sail Away" could perhaps flop. It is generally asserted Down Under in regard to the rivalry between Melbourne and Sydney that what one city likes the other will dislike—although in actual practice this frequently proves to be merely folklore.

In the legit field, Googie Withers remains the Williamson draw card and her "Woman in a Dressing Gown," a somewhat mediocre play, proved most popular. Following Irene Handl in "Goodnight Mrs. Puffin," and Joyce Grenfell's one-woman show, Williamson will stage "Mary, Mary" with Muriel Pavlow and Derek Farr, and probably the same two in "Signpost to Murder." Meanwhile the Aussie comedy, "Who'll Come A'Waltzing," seems to be doing steady business.

HABIMAH'S NINE WEEKS

Will Give Repertory at Little, N.Y. (In Hebrew)

Israel's Habimah Theatre will play the U.S. next year for the first time since 1948. A nine-week engagement at the Little Theatre, N.Y., starting Feb. 1, will precede another nine weeks of touring. American-Israel Cultural Foundation will sponsor the tour which will be managed by The Little Theatre, Inc., headed by Roger Euster.

The 650-seat Little Theatre in the Times Square area has been taken over by Euster's firm and legit activities are expected to be resumed there next fall with an Oct. 7 opening of David Black's production of "Semi-Detached," the British comedy by David Turner. The theatre had been in use as a television studio in recent years.

A repertory of three plays are to be performed in Hebrew by the Habimah which will employ a company of 30 for its U.S. trek. Among the offerings will be S. Ansky's "The Dybbuk," the play which brought the organization into prominence in 1922. Theatres will be equipped with earphones for simultaneous English translation of the Hebrew dialog.

The U.S. tour will be part of the cultural exchange program between Israel and the U.S. which the America-Israel foundation sponsors.

Jill Schary's Memories

Jill Schary Zimmer (husband Jon Zimmer is a tv producer) has written "With A Cast of Thousands: A Hollywood Childhood" as her teenage memoir wherein she reviews what it is like to be a "Hollywood princess"; dated by Sinatra and Walter Winchell Jr.; receive flowers from Gable, meet Brando, answer the Saturday night doorbell and there'd be Howard Hughes, Elizabeth Taylor, Gene Kelly, Van Johnson, the Moss Harts, young Senator Kennedy (now the President) who watched movies in the private projection room of the Schary's West Los Angeles residence, attend classes with Gary Cooper's daughter, Dickie Zanuck, Joan Benny, Jane Fonda, play with the children of David O. Selznick, Leland Hayward and Margaret Sullavan, etc. All this because her father, Dore Schary, was production head of Metro.

Mrs. Zimmer has a detached perspective on this now. She soon realized that all children didn't go to school by limousine, and the rest of her saga is equally more realistic. McCall's will excerpt condensation before Stein & Day publish the unexpurgated book version in October.

K. O. 'Tropic' & 'Fanny' In N.Y.

Last Thursday (11) was a bad day for the literateurs in New York which resulted in the virtual disappearance of two tomes from the shelves of New York bookstalls. N. Y. Corporation Counsel Leo A. Larkin and the district attorneys of the five counties comprising New York are pressing charges of obscenity against John Cleland's 1749 epic, "Memoirs of a Woman of Pleasure," better known as "Fanny Hill." At the same time, Henry Miller's "Tropic of Cancer" was adjudged "obscene" by the N. Y. Court of Appeals which upheld a decision to that effect in the lower courts.

"Fanny Hill" was recently the subject of a major promotion by G. P. Putnam & Sons which recently republished the book. Even before obscenity charges were pressed against the opus, a temporary injunction barring its sale was obtained by Ralph Thompson, secretary and editor of the Book of the Month Club, who claimed that his name had been used without his permission as endorsing the book. Thompson says that an introduction quoted an article he had written in 1955 which made it appear that he approved of the book. He based his injunction plea on the premise that use of a person's name for commercial purposes without his written consent is illegal.

Mrs. Patrick Dennis' Novel

Louise Tanner's second book, her first novel, "Miss Bannister's Girls" (Farrar, Straus & Cudahy), will be followed by a Dell paperback reprint next fall of her first book, "Here Today," a nonfiction study of some fading celebrities of the '30s.

Mrs. Tanner, herself educated at Miss Chapin's School and Vassar, drew on that background for "Miss Bannister's Girls." She was long with the Franklin Spier ad agency. Her husband is Patrick Dennis, author of "Auntie Mame" and "Little Me," whose other noms-de-plume include Virginia Rowans ("Love and Mrs. Sargent") and Edward Everett Tanner 3d, which happens to be his real name. However, he's Pat to his wife.

16-Year-Old Novelist

Caroline Glyn, born Aug. 27, 1947 in London, is author of "Don't Knock the Corners Off," a first novel which she began writing when she was 9 and completed last year when she was 15. It has just been published in England, where Sir Compton McKenzie hailed it as "a discovery: an astonishing, probably unique performance by a girl of 15." Coward-McCann is bringing it out in this country.

Precocious author wrote her first book, a volume of short stories, at six; published her first poem at seven; her collected poems were published when she was 14; and a year later completed this novel. At 14 her first exhibition of paintings in Bromley (Eng.) Little Theatre won her a scholarship at Farnham Art School; incidentally, all but two of the paintings were sold.

Miss Glyn is the great granddaughter of novelist Elinor Glyn, author of "Three Weeks" and "It," which were lurid bestsellers in the 1920s.

Win Fanning's Krug Spot

Win Fanning, entertainment editor of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, is now doing legit and film criticism on WIIC's "Luncheon at the Ones," replacing the late Karl Krug.

The show, hostessed by Alice Weston, goes off the air on July 22 and will return in the fall when Fanning will join Miss Weston, Buzz Aston, Bill Hinds, Tim Kirby and Mario & The Merrymakers three times a week as a regular. The show is on WIIC five times weekly from 1 to 2 p.m.

Dancer-choreographer Rhoda Levine's third book to be published by Atheneum is "Three Ladies Beside the Sea," a juvenile. Author has been associated with the N.Y. City Center Opera season and the Spoleto (Italy) Festival of Two Worlds). Edward Gorey did the illustrations for Miss Levine's adolescent book.

Mark Rascovich's current best-seller, "The Bedford Incident" (Atheneum), is "affectionately dedicated to Gwenn and Ed Rigg whose kind understanding and warm friendship have gone far beyond the call of duty or ordinary inlaws!" What's unique about this is that Rigg is board chairman and dominant owner of the Holt, Rinehart & Winston firm; the author's wife is the daughter of the Riggs but Rascovich prefers not to have his books published by any firm that smacks of nepotism.

Novelist - playwright Lester Cohen's memoir of his Chi childhood being published Sept. 25 by Chilton under title of "Mom and Pop."

Shubert Will

(claimed by Mrs. Eyerson-Shubert) and (b) the documentation by Mrs. Kerttu Helene Shubert (the first wife) and her attorneys, Gerald Schoenfeld and Bernard Jacobs, that full search had been made of all safety boxes, office, Hotel Astor room etc., and that nothing but the Dec. 8, 1960 will was found.

This is the will which leaves the bulk of an estimated $500,000-$600,000 estate to Kerttu. The second claimed will, supposedly executed June 26, 1962 (on the eve of John Shubert's departure for Europe) "disposes" of funds or makes provisions for kin that would run well over $1,000,000.

This is the will which (1) cuts out Kerttu, (2), cedes most of it to Nancy Mae Eyerson; (3), names John's mother, Catherine Mary Shubert, of 875 Fifth Ave., New York, sole executrix. This second will is called a "forgery" by Kerttu and her attorney Schoenfeld. Latter testified yesterday that he, as attorney for Shubert, would have had an awareness of any subsequent will. This latter document, incidentally, as was presented by the mother's attorney, Milton R. Weir was a carbon copy, and unsigned. The original thereof remains subject to search and formal presentation.

It was while young Shubert was enroute to visit Mrs. Eyerson-Shubert and the two children that he died on the train last Nov. 19.

Mrs. Shubert, the mother, details that the later will cut out Kerttu; set up separate trust funds for the two children from funds expected to be, realized from his book, "Shubert Alley," which publishers allegedly estimated would bring him $1,000,000. This document allegedly left the mother $500,000 cash; $5,000 each to three godchildren (not otherwise identified); left $1,000 weekly for 10 years to Lawrence Shubert Lawrence Jr., for a period of 10 years; cash for such bequests to be obtained from sundry safety boxes, "the name of these banks known to my mother." Only one $250,000 insurance poicy, naming Kerttu sole beneficiary, was conceded. New document supposedly talked of his "troubled unhappy life for approximately 18 years," and made other provisions for Nancy Mae Eyerson and the two children.

Lawrence Shubert Lawrence Jr. is a second cousin and is currently running the Shubert (Select Theatres) destinies. Schoenfeld and Jacobs are the Shubert house lawyers.

James N. Vaughan appeared specially for Jacob J. Shubert, now 87, the last surviving of the three Shubert brothers, and father of John. Weir had Monroe Goldwater as his special counsel. Mrs. Eyerson had Lowenstein, Pitcher, Hotchkiss & Parr representing her legal interests. Arthur M. Field appeared as special attorney for the infants.

Kerttu Shubert's counsel testified that on the night the mother claimed she was dining in Sardi's with John, i.e. on the eve of his European sailing, he was actually with four others, and two of them stayed on with him into the night. Handwriting expert Albert D. Osborn, for Kerttu et al., testified he is "convinced this is not a genuine document" and that the claimed second will is "not in his (John Shubert's) writing." The claimed safety box in which the carbon was found was said to be a "third party" box, i.e. belonging to the corporation, and not John's personally. Schoenfeld testified he had advertised among banks and elsewhere seeking any other John Shubert safety deposit boxes.

SCULLY'S SCRAPBOOK

By Frank Scully

Palm Springs.

This is the sweating season of the year when editors and far-seeing contributors begin worrying about Christmas, and one of them passed his Anacin bill to me.

"Dear Mr. Scully," writes Gerald Walker of New York, "is there a Christmas which stands out in your memory? An especially happy one . . . disappointing . . . deeply moving? I'd like to hear about it for two projects I'm editing!

"1) 'The Christmas We'll Never Forget' for December Good Housekeeping—Christmas stories involving married couples, told in first person by either husband or wife.

"2) 'My most Memorable Christmas,' a special, handsomely printed, larger-sized book to be published by Pocket Books in November—first person, not limited to married couples. Some contributors so far: Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh (Pres. of Notre Dame U.), Bing Crosby, Mary Martin, Walt Disney, Taylor Caldwell, Marian Anderson, George London, Charlton Heston.

My, Autographs Even!

"Would you be good enough to send me 200 words (or more) for either or both of the above by June 20? We will need your written permission to use the story; and we may decide to use your actual signature at the end of it. For both reasons, would you please sign below and return this letter with your material?"

I looked in vain for a small honorarium but didn't find so much as a self-addressed stamped envelope. This should have been the end of it, but I am made of much softer clay and, anyway, once a thing like this enters my head I can't just forget about it and go on to something else.

I began thinking that was my most memorable Christmas and did it involve anybody like Bing Crosby, Mary Martin, Walt Disney, Marian Anderson or Charlton Heston? If it did I could of course ask their pressagents to combine our memories and give this anthologist a white Christmas without any further dreaming on my part.

Will Barry Fitzgerald Do?

But, malheureusement, I don't know these people well enough to share Christmas with them. The nearest I could come to sharing such an experience was with the late Barry Fitzgerald who once stole a picture from Bing Crosby, the one called "Going My Way."

I saw the older Sheilds' boy walking down Hollywood Blvd. alone one Christmas Eve. By then the place was a pretty sad Stem. The overstuffed and underpaid Santa Claus had ridden down the boulevard with a Hollywood personality, some bit-player labelled a "star," for the last time. Perched high on a motorized sled he had waved at the tin Christmas trees lining the boulevard and at the stragglers who were still around, more than likely with no place to call home.

Opened With Vigah, Finished Bushed

There never was a spectacle that started with such vigah and eclat as that Hollywood Santa Claus parade and never one that died so completely before the curtain fell. The opening parade began the night after Thanksgiving. Hundreds of thousands poured into Hollywood and lined the boulevard.

They were waiting for Leo Carillo, the old VARIETY cartoonist, to come prancing down the street on his silver saddled steed. Behind him school bands from everywhere split the air with their B-flats. Stars rode by in their cars. The parade was a mile long. En fin, Santa Claus arrived, perched high on a throne with a name-player at his side. They rode by, with Santa shouting "Merry Christmas, Merry Christmas!" to people who had hardly digested their Thanksgiving dinners.

Gus Plays Santa Claus For Scale

Somebody would be sure to shout back, "Hi Gus, see you're working, Good!"

This went on night-after-night for a month, except that all the bands and other bubbling props never came back after that first night. Not even Leo Carillo.

Santa rode down accompanied by a name-player each night and that was all. Traffic didn't even stop for him and his consort.

Obviously the thing was over and done with long before Dec. 25. Only the Citizen-News ("No news is Citizen-News") kept plugging the nocturnal solo ride of Santa.

By Christmas Eve the town was just about sold out of baubles. Some natives were even tossing out their Christmas trees by then because they were dried-out fire hazards.

Scully, The Goldwater of Christmas

We were reactionaires in this matter. We did not buy a Christmas tree until Christmas Eve and we did not take it down till Twelfth Night. Trees that would be offered for $12 early in the Christmas rush during the height of the parades, would be thrown at you for $1 on Christmas Eve. And these dollar pines would be fresh trees.

It was on one such Christmas Eve while out on the hunt for a fresh tree for a buck that we saw Barry Fitzgerald wandering along Hollywood Blvd. by himself. We asked him what he was doing out alone on a night like this and he said, "Oh, nothing, just window-shopping."

Up The Hill For Fitz

So we picked him up and took him to our hillside home, six blocks above the boulevard. And there on Christmas Eve he joined us and our children in trimming a Christmas tree.

For a bachelor who had known such things in Ireland but had seen no evidence in Hollywood of honoring the great feast day it was a heart-warming night.

The Tom and Jerrys were out, the fireplace was sparkling, and the tree was getting prettier by the minute. Below Hollywood was still lit up for late shoppers.

Of course, we had small children who took away as much from the lower branches of the tree as we put on, but altogether it was a lot of fun.

Tully Praises—With Regrets

Fitzgerald himself wasn't funny. He was enjoying himself in a melancholy Irish way.

I thought of the time we had a party at Jim Tully's place on Toluca Lake. Jim was stoned but well aware of what he was saying.

"There," he said pointing to Fitzgerald "is the greatest comic in Hollywood."

Fitzgerald grinned from ear to ear.

"Of course I'll regret having said this in the morning," Jim added, "but it's true."

And Jim had once been Chaplin's press agent.

I certainly pity people who have to write stuff like this in July. Don't you?

Fair's Industrial Showmanship

Seldes, and his firm produced and designed the theme show for the Seattle Worl's Fair).

General Motors Futurama Bldg., covering nearly three acres, 10 stories high with 70,000-a-day capacity for its rides and other "adventures into the future in science and research," is an extension of GM's 1939-40 Futurama, one of the "hits" of pre-World War II expo. The entire GM site will embrace seven acres, alongside the Grand Central Parkway in the Transportation Section of the 1964-65 Fair, and is only a short distance from GM site in 1939-40.

Disney's Triple Threat

Disney is involved not only with GE (not GM, as was indicated last week), but with Ford and also a Pepsi-Cola showmanship display.

The affirmative "show business" displays as promulgated by the Big Business exhibitors is a continuation of recent industrial showmanship.

This has been accented by Fair prexy Moses as being more than sufficient to appeal to the masses, and that a midway ("and its sordid components") are not needed.

The industrialists point to the ultramodern skills manifested in audio animated and electronically controlled figures, shows and displays as being the "new showmanship," but are quite frank in the hope that the public will not be sated by too much of this sort of thing.

There is recognition that the traditional "amusement area" must have some zing to it keep the masses on the Fairgrounds.

"If there isn't enough doing at night, and this becomes dominantly a daytime fair, with its educational values dominant," as one Big Business exec put it, then he fears for that 23,000,000 mass attendance. That's where the "fun-less" part of it could be a problem.

Exhibit technique has changed so radically, it is pointed out, that the applied show business values may well take the place of the other elements.

Showmen Back of the Scenes

Jo Mielziner is designing the AT&T show, for example. Borden's "All About Elsie" (or "Little Moo") will be in the nature of an industrial musical. The 7-Up Pavilion, with adman-showman John Krimsky at the helm, will feature intimate musical combos. More elaborate will be the "Best of Broadway" proposal by George Schaefer and Angus G. Wynne Jr. in their musicomedy theatre as part of the Texas Pavilions and Frontier Palace development. Morton Da Costa will create and direct the extravaganza (100 years of American musical comedy is the theme) at the Wynne-Schaefer Music Hall.

But not even the "industrial fat cats," as one of the self-styled Big Business underwriters, could afford the theatrical craft unions and their overheads with their three shifts-per-day, seven days a week. This is why showmen, craftsmen, creators et al. of the calibre of Disney, Robert Russell Bennett, Miles White, Mielziner, George Schaefer, Kay Swift, Leon Leonidoff, Meyer Davis et al. find their talents mated to "electronically controlled reproductions and automated, animated lifesize figures uttering" the action.

Admittedly, a "new showmanship" will probably emerge from this 1964-65 mating of sound and automation, with back-of-the-scenes creative writers, producers, composers and designers, and yet it still bothers all concerned that if they don't turn out en masse, what price electronic glory?

All agree with Moses' antipathy to vulgarity and sleaziness, yet many recall the realities of any fair or exposition.

1939 Nudity Recalled

By coincidence, on the same Wednesday that the VARIETY "funless fair" alert story appeared, Norton Mockridge's column in the N.Y. World-Telegram & Sun recalled "The Naked Truth About the Fair Game." His column teed off with this quote:

"The N.Y. World's Fair will have ample amusements to satisfy every taste, without ever emphasizing any branch of attraction; such as fan dancing. There will be no shows where the nude bodies of young women are exploited".

Mockridge went on, "These words sound familiar? I read them the other day to several people and asked who said them. They all replied, 'Bob Moses' . . .-But Bob Moses is not the man who uttered the above words. They were intoned most solemnly to me and to other reporters in the summer of 1938 by the late Grover Whalen, president of the 1939-40 World's Fair. Whalen went on to pledge that there would be big, artistic shows and historical pageants, but no unwholesome attractions, no stripping, no bubble dancing, no nudies, no peep shows. No, sir!

"These words dutifully were published," Mockdidge continued, "and soon Whalen and other Fair officials were being goaded by investors, exhibitors and concessionaires who reminded them that it was s-e-x that had put over other fairs . . ."

NTG, Faith Bacon, Rosita Royce

When Billy Rose's "extravaganza of shapely mermaids," including the charms of Eleanor Holm in a bathing suit became part of the new thinking, "that was the crack in the dam," continued Mockridge. "Girlie shows poured into New York like a tidal wave. Exhibitors fought bitterly with agents and with each others to get the most enticing shows. Whalen defended his stand by saying that shows at the Fair would be no more daring than shows current in Broadway night clubs . . . And so the Fair booked every nudie show it could get. There were such things as the Congress of Beauty, a combined stageshow and nude ranch, produced by that nabbob of nudity, (the late) NTG; the Crystal Lassies, dreamed up by Norman Bel Geddes; the Crystal Palace, featuring Rosita Royce, who was attired only in doves; the Dream of Venus, in which voluptuous mermaids, tutored by Salvador Dali, wriggled about in a glass-enclosed water tank; Frozen Alive, a nude girl in a cake of ice; Garden of Allah, 'spicy scenes from Cleopatra's life'; and Living Magazine Covers, in which uninhibited girls posed for the kind of magazine covers you've never seen. Overnight, New York was inundated with naked females. In April 1939, Faith Bacon, who danced in a dress of leaves which a fawn obligingly ate, was arrested for promenading up Park Ave., nearly leafless, dragging a fawn on a string . . . Yvette Dare, a dancer at the Congress of Beauty, begged for arrest by strolling the midway while a trained parrot systematically pulled off her clothes . She got a bad sunburn, but no arrest. Reform groups and church officials angrily complained, and Mayor LaGuardia, Police Commissioner Valentine, License Commissioner Moss and Investigations Commr. Herlands spent more of their time worrying about unbedecked lasses than they did about running the city. Nudity was there to stay, and there was so much of it in the waning days of the Fair that a woman with clothes on drew a crowd."

That 'International' Flavor

In a jet age where global distances are minimal, the paucity of international glamor is not the least of the normally expected appeal of a world's fair. A New York World's Fair, with many major European powers conspicuous by their lack of participation, is an obvious disappointment to all concerned.

The realists recognize full well that The Bureau of International Fairs which "officially recognized" only Seattle last year is merely an escape hatch. There apparently just wasn't enough want-to-participate by the holdout nations.

The class dining pavilions did much to generate that "after-dark" spark to the 1939-40 Fair, despite the alarms of global warfare. Today, in a world seemingly dedicated to coexistence despite the sundry global irritations, "nobody can get very excited about a pavilion extolling the virtues of Lower Uganda," as one exec put it. In short, he too worries about the absence of the plush nationalistic pavilions and their culinary appeal, be they French, Italian, British and even Russian—none of these is represented for reasons indicated before.

"If it's going to be a cafeteria type of dining-out," said another, "they'll leave early."

(This is not so, technically, because there are several plusheries in work under Knott, Restaurant Associates, and kindred auspices, but they may prove to be dominantly for the "inside" exec mob.)

'The Shrinking Dollar'

Pointing to costs, starting with the 75c admish fee in '39 to the $2 in '64, and the trebled costs for exhibit building, another executive observed that the most fitting theme for Bob Moses' show would be "The Shrinking Dollar."

Statistically, the 1962 Seattle Expo with its 74 acres is dwarfed by the 650-acre Flushing Meadows undertaking. Seattle clocked 9,600,000 admissions; New York aims for 23,000,000. (Another exec observed, "American Express could be a good barometer on the pace of advance sales as to the b.o. success of the 1964 Exposition.")

There have been some Big Business refutations to the concern expressed by midtown Manhattan hoteliers, niteries, clubs, pubs, etc. on business, by citing the special trains they will be bringing in from other cities "to see the fair and see our own exhibits." One exec mentioned tieing up 1,000 rooms in several, admittedly lesser hotels—save for the big brass—to accommodate this influx. The Manhattan bonifaces still contend these will be a captive audience, in the main, probably eating at the company's cafeteria or accommodations on the Fairgrounds. This is refuted because any such influx must swell business peripherally.

GE's Theme Song

GE's Steven C. Van Voorhis, citing the "Just A Dream Away" theme song written by two of vet songsmith Al Sherman's sons, for the Disney-"General Electric Progressland," thinks "people will be whistling when they leave the building." This, in refutation of the VARIETY reference to "whistling a turbine."

One thing appears certain—as the Fair's premiere draws closer it is becoming a hotter subject of conversation and concern for New Yorkers. These advance alerts are for the ultimate welfare, in the hope of doing something now before it's too late next year.

Monorail

Next Monday (22) at a N. Y. Hilton Hotel luncheon, at which Fair prexy Robert Moses will attend, Carter L. Burgess, chairman of the American Machine & Foundry Co., will detail plans for building a Monorail at the N. Y. World's Fair. Lucien Chadenson, of Paris, president and chairman of SAFEGE-Transport, and Major-General L. J. Sverdrup (ret.), of Sverdrup & Parcel, consulting engineers, will also attend. AMF plans to build all types Monorails, not just for the Fair. The Monorail was an important contribution to the success of the Seattle's Century 21 Exposition two years ago, and proved one of its prime b.o. appeals.

Intra-Fair, the N. Y. expo has a deal with Greyhound bus for transportation and commutation.

Double-Ringling Circus

It should be clarified that while John Ringling North will have a one-ring circus at the Fair, the regular March 27-May 12, 1964 engagement of the Ringling Bros.-Barnum & Bailey "greatest show on earth" will play Madison Square Garden, as it has for generations, for its kickoff spring season of six or seven weeks in New York. Russia's Moscow State Circus plays New York's Madison Square Garden early this fall, and not next spring, as erratumed.

In actuality, under cultural exchange, with the Morris Chalfen Circus now in Moscow, and the Moscow Circus to tour the U.S., North for the first time will tour a Ringling show on the Continent. It opens Sept. 17 in Paris. RB&B general manager Arthur Concello is due back from Europe this week with the details.

The Ringling Circus at the Fair will be housed in its own building, adjoining the Amphitheatre and the Florida exhibits, and across from the International Exhibit.

Opera

A peripheral '64 World's Fair entertainment adjunct will be the 16 performances, post-season and non-subscription, which the Metropolitan Opera will present April 27-May 10 at its Opera House (not at the Flushing Meadows fairgrounds) in collaboration with American Express which will act as exclusive agents for tickets. Rudolph Bing's program will include the cream of the crop of the Met roster of singers and musicians.

"Hollywood East" is another entertainment feature pointed to; this the Robert J. Gurney Jr. exhibit of a simulated Hollywood motion picture studio in which Bernie B. Kreisler will be associated. It is not yet fully financed.

Time's Trailer

Time Inc., which will publish the Official Guide Book for the Fair, as well as the official map and souvenir book, has just put on display at the Time & Life Exhibition Center in the Time-Life Bldg. a "New York World's Fair: Preview." This features 40 architectural models, renderings and special displays including U.S. Steel's Unisphere, which is the symbol of the fair.

Other displays include models of buildings and displays by American Gas Assn., Bell Telephone, Coca-Cola, DuPont, Eastman Kodak, Electric Power & Light, Equitable Life, Formica, General Cigar, General Electric, General Motors, Johnson's Wax, National Cash Register, Philippines Pavilion, RCA, 7-Up, F&M Schaefer Brewing, Sinclair Refining, SKF, Transportation & Travel Pavilion, Travelers Insurance, Westinghouse and the World's Fair Corp. (special map showing all exhibitors at the Fair).

Other architectural renderings to be shown: Continental Insurance, Ford, IBM, Irish Pavilion, Liebman Breweries (Rheingold's Little Old New York), Lincoln Center, Marina of the Future, Museum of Science & Technology, Scott Paper, Simmons Beautyrest and the Texas Pavilion Music Hall (George Schafer musicomedy theatre).

Also a model of the Vatican Pavilion as well as renderings of the Protestant Center, Christian Science, Mormon and Billy Graham Pavilions.

Time-Life's packaging of the guide book, with three combinations of adult and children's tickets, will afford a 33% saving and is going on sale pronto.

Czechs' Magic Lantern

the result is quite unusual. With this process, opera is given the full scope of the motion picture screen, and in turn, motion pictures are afforded all the best aspects of live opera.

Like A 3-Ring Circus

In the presentation of "Tales of Hoffman," the three screens are filled with three pictures — each one a different shooting angle of the same action slowly unfolding the plot of "Tales of Hoffman." While this is going on, live opera singers and ballet dancers, recruited from the Czechoslovakian National Opera, sing their arias and dance their ballets simultaneously and on cue with the action and sound on the screen. It almost takes on the aspect of a three-ring circus, because the viewer finds his eyes traveling among the three screens and the various live performers on stage.

In "Tales of Hoffman," 16 live performers are used. Spotlights point up the actors while the motion picture relies on its size to hold the attention of the viewer.

The live performers are outstanding in their field.

The motion picture uses new and bizarre techniques, such as jumbo closeups with the picture bleeding off the screen, low-angle shooting and floor-to-ceiling photography using immense mirrors on the ceiling to reflect the scene of a grand ball in progress.

In addition, the process reverts to rear projection so that the live actors on stage are not hit with a beam of light from the projection booth. In this manner, a performer sings the Barcarole while standing in front of a huge screen showing gondolas going up and down the Grand Canal in Venice.

Stunning Effects

In certain instances, the live performance is magnificently welded with the motion picture and the effect is stunning. A treadmill is also employed on stage to allow the opera singers to walk in front of the motion picture screen, thus simulating a promenade deftly merged with the screen action.

Another unusual technique is the manner in which the actors appear behind the theatre screen while a picture is playing on it, and by means of ingenious backlighting, they become superimposed on, and integrated with, the screen action.

Lanterna Magica is a superb and fantastic medium because it is a true marriage of motion pictures and opera. It is under the direction of Vaclav Kaslik, who is also director of the Czechoslovakian National Theatre. It is the brainchild of Alfred Radok, inventor of the process, who first demonstrated the medium five years ago at the Brussels World's Fair. The top price of admission is only 20 Czech koruna or $1.40, but it is quite evident that the process, the actual motion picture, the live performers and the physical theatre, have all got to add up to an expensive production. However, under the Communist policy, Czechoslovakians are offered inexpensive entertainment as the government subsidizes all forms of culture.

New Concept

Lanterna Magica is definitely a new artistic conception. It is a combination of stage and films, constituting a uniform synthesis, together with the musical, artistic, literary and ballet form of expression. The spoken word, music, songs, experiments with sound, light and color, pantomimes, dances, as well as creative stage-setting, are all basic factors of the resulting image.

The film plays different roles in the performance: it creates the proper environment, and affords the actors with a monumentous background. The film supports the actors' performance on stage, determines the rhythm of the act, and can rapidly combine figures, environment and time.

Lanterna Magica is not just a technical innovation, but a form which offers the creative artist a new mode of expression, a new language. In the idiom of this language, statistics can be used side by side with poetry, static pictures, live dances and recorded music. The new poetic vigor of the process stems from its ability to see reality from several angles, on several time levels, and to connect facts which, in reality, are not joined at all. Lanterna Magica is capable of showing the modern world in its entire dynamic force and interdependent relations. The combination of the stage and screen, tricks, montage, free handling of time and space — all this is characteristic of a most unusual process.

Castro's Press Pitch

Negro magazine writer Louis E. Lomax, who recently talked to the State Dept. about the junket, saying his taking the trip would be based on an article for Harper's magazine. Reports are that Negro novelist John O. Killens might also make the trip.

Definite rejections have been registered by WLIB news director Charles Herndon; WWRL news commentator Leon Lewis; and Richard M. Elman, WBAI-FM director for drama and literature.

Other invitations went to Negro magazine and newspaper personnel, including staffers on the N.Y. Amsterdam News; N.Y. Courier; and the Afro-American edition published in Newark. Indications are that all will refuse the invite.

Institute director Giraldo Mazola Collazo's invitation was written in large script type and preceded by individual cabled advisories that alerted the potential guests that the full tab would be picked up. Trip would be from New York to Havana via Mexico City with a full 20 days in the Cuban capital and return. Acceptances were to be filed by collect cable.

Invite indicated a mistrust of the U.S. mails. It said in part, "We have sent to you, and I suppose that you received it already, a cable about this matter, we don't wish to rely only in the possibility that this letter was received for you." Cable also was uniquely worded, reading in part: "We can resolve your stay here and your travel to Cuba from Mexico and we to attend it with many pleasure during 20 days."

Plan called for the Negro newsmen to leave New York July 23 for the 10th anni of Castro's initiating of his revolt against the Batiste government.

HILL, HAGEN: B'WAY 'BESTS'

Theatres and Eating Places Targets Of Incessant Picketing In Georgia

Atlanta, July 23.

Just when Georgians believe they are going to get a respite from erupting racial problems, a disturbance pops up in another area and one more ugly situation develops. Quiet had come to Savannah and Albany, two hotbeds, last week and the whole state was looking to a breather over the weekend, when trouble broke out in an unexpected area, Americus, a thriving little city in South Georgia.

Involved were a number of Negroes who Friday (19) made repeated attempts to be admitted to the Martin Theatre. They were refused admission and arrests followed. A spokesman for the integrationist group said 11 adults were arrested at the theatre and later "more than 30" were taken to jail following a street march toward the police station.

Meanwhile, in Atlanta, door guards shoved, kicked and struck some of the 12 youthful racial demonstrators who blocked the entrance to Leb's Restaurant in downtown Atlanta Friday (19) during the noon rush hour. An employee of Leb's asked each demonstrator to leave and when they refused they were arrested on charges of violating Georgia's anti-trespass law. Bond was set at $200 for four who had been arrested previously. Other eight were placed under $100 bonds.

When paddy wagons pulled away from scene, the demonstrators from the Committee on Appeal for Human Rights, burst into song.

Arrests followed attempts of demonstrators to enter restaurant and were roughed up for their pains. They then sat down, joined arms in front of restaurant's front Controlled Integration Leading to Open Door Starts In Durham, N.C.

Durham, N.C., July 23.

Following two months of negotiations between local theatre owners and the mayor's bi-racial interim committee, all but one of Durham's theatres have agreed to a plan of "controlled integration." Under the plan, which went into effect last week, each of the theatres will admit four Negroes each day the first week, a larger number the second week, until, after a month, the theatres will be totally desegregated.

The theatres participating in the plan include the Center, Carolina, Northgate and Criterion. Only the Uptown, which specializes in exploitation pix, has refused to go along with the tide. Previously fully integrated was the art policy Rialto, which has had no problems with its open-door policy.

Michael Wilding Gives Up Thesping for 10%ing

Hollywood, July 23.

Michael Wilding is giving up acting to become a talent agent. He is taking an exec spot with Hugh French Agency Inc. and will concentrate on developing package properties for motion pictures and tv series.

Wilding will be a director of the agency along with Hugh French, Robin French and John Heyman, agency's London head.

Wilding will work principally in Hollywood but also will spend time in London working on properties for the firm's stars in Europe.

Shapiro-Bernstein Branches Into Act Management Field

Shapiro-Bernstein, old line music publishing firm, is branching into the managerial field. The SB Talent Corp. was set up last week for the firm's entry into artist management.

The move into management stems from SB's belief that the music industry today is turning more toward the delivering of a complete package—song, artist and master. With this in mind, the company is on an all-out effort to step up the overall productivity of the organization.

During the past few months, SB and Painted Desert Music, its BMI subsid, have signed a number of writers to exclusive contracts, and a number of recording artists, including Joyce Paul, Denny Randell, Ted Cooper and Eddie Martin.

Emil La Viola, SB's professional manager, is in Nashville this week to assist Gary Walker, manager of the firm's operation there, in producing several Joyce Paul masters.

Linda Hope, 20, Student At Ogunquit Strawhat

Ogunquit, Me., July 23.

Linda Hope, 20-year-old daughter of Bob Hope, is a student actress at the Colony Players school here. The project is conducted by John Lane, operator of the Ogunquit Playhouse.

The comedian's daughter is among 18 students from all sections of the country studying theatre in the eight-week course. She had a small part in the Colony's first presentation. Last week she worked on lighting.

CRIX CITE CAESAR; LEIGH, COOK TIE

"Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" has added to its collection of citations by making a clean sweep of the principal straight play categories in this year's annual VARIETY poll of a representative group of the New York drama critics. In the musical division, the standout entry is "She Loves Me."

Uta Hagen and Arthur Hill were chosen by the first-string drama critics for their lead performances in "Woolf." Alan Schneider got the nod from the reviewers for his direction of the controversial offering and Edward Albee, the author, was the choice as most promising playwright.

The 12 critics participating in the poll were in greater agreement in their choice of Hill, who got nine ballots, than in any other selection. Miss Hagen, who was tied with Maureen Stapleton as the best femme lead for her performance in "The Country Girl" during the 1950-51 season, was this year's winner by a margin of one vote over the four received by Hermione Baddeley ("The Milk Train Doesn't Stop Here Anymore"). Schneider was the choice of half the critics and Albee got eight votes.

Recognition of "She Loves Me" by the aislesitters does not include the category of best performance by a male lead in a musical. The winner in this division, beating four other contenders, is Sid Caesar who nabbed a total of five votes for his assorted roles in "Little Me."

However, Barbara Cook, of "She Loves Me," is tied with Vivien Leigh, of "Tovarich," for the best performance by a female lead in

Britain Envisions Own Satellite

London, July 23.

Plans to build Britain's own communications satellite gained impetus this week with the decision of the British Aircraft Corp. and Marconi to pool their resources for research and development in this field.

Working on the theory that the British Government will soon want a space communication system under its control, the two companies are cementing themselves in a strong position to get a franchise to build the satellites.

BAC equipment has already been used in the two American built satellites which Britain sponsored and Marconi, with vast technical experience in communications have been involved in the ground side of the project.

Talent Agencies Using Tastes of Kids To Analyze New Performer Trends

The talent agencies are now studying the tastes of youngsters as forerunners of new developments in the performer field. The range of tastes important to agency thinkers extends from the early teens to the college level and runs from rock 'n' roll to folk. The youngsters in the last decade provided the signposts which gave the entertainment firmament some of its most solid of the newer names in the live performance fields.

The major area of experimentation lies in the folk movement today. The coffeehouses, the summer theatre festivals, the folk joints all have been the showcases which produced such headliners as the Kingston Trio, Limeliters, Peter, Paul & Mary, Tommy Makem & Clancy Bros., Joan Baez. The field has even extended itself into video with the presentation of ABC-TV's "Hootenanny."

A talent agency is not even regarded as modern unless it takes interest in the avant garde outlets. The colleges, incidentally, have become the most important facet of one-night bookings in the majors. Their buying habits are closely studied.

The rock 'n' roll movement has dwindled considerably during the past few years. To some extent, it has been replaced by gospel. However, there is little doubt that it is still going strong in many areas around the world. During its run, r'n'r provided a slew of solid names which include Bobby Darin, Connie Francis, Bobby Rydell, and

American Lad Clicks As Hindu Temple Dancer

Nalan Najan, the Hindu temple dancer born in the United States of Spanish-Russian parentage, returned to India this year for further study. Previously as a boy, under a grant from the Theosophical Society, he had studied for four years in remote villages there.

His recent studies were at the invitation of the Maharaja, Adita Pratep Singh Deo at the Palace of Seraikella where he tackled Chhau, a form of dance relatively unknown today even in India. Resultantly he made an appearance in Madras early in July, drawing strong reviews despite his American origin. Madras is to a Hindu temple dancers what Madrid and Seville are to Spanish dancers—the acid audience test.

USSR Opens Film Archives to Help Jewish Docum.

Moscow, July 23.

Official approval has been given by the Soviet authorities to an Israeli producer for a documentary film tracing the history of the Jews in Russia.

Margot Klausner, the producer who operates her own studios just outside Tel Aviv, was told by the Film Dept. of the Ministry of Culture, that her request for such a project, first made some six months ago in writing, has now been granted, and the Russians will give her access to all filmed material available in the Soviet archives.

Later in the year, Mrs. Klausner

Int'l Peace Film Fest's Los Alamos 'Location'

All the recent anti-bombing and peace agitation around the world and in the U.S. has prompted the setting up of plans for an international Peace Film Festival. Present notions call for it to take place in Los Alamos, New Mexico, the testing ground which first gave birth to U.S. experiments which developed the atomic bomb.

Proposed dates for the fest are Nov. 9-11. Awards are to be offered in most of the usual film fest categories with a special award to the feature or short subject that best furthers the cause of peace. Robert W. Kunce of Los Alamos is handling the details.

Skouras Retains Nizer To Sue Wanger Because Of 'Life With Cleo' Book

Twentieth-Fox chairman Spyros P. Skouras yesterday (Tues.) announced in New York that he plans to institute legal proceedings against "Cleopatra" producer Walter Wanger for the latter's remarks re Skouras in the book, "My Life with Cleopatra."

Skouras' libel action is to be included in a counterclaim to be filed in a suit brought by Wanger last month against 20th-Fox, Darryl F. Zanuck, Skouras and N. Y. Post columnist Earl Wilson.

Skouras, in an official statement released by 20th, says that Wanger's book, written in collaboration with Joe Hyams, is "filled with inaccuracies, falsehoods and distortions, flatly contradicted by the record and contrary to Wanger's own statements in correspondence written during the production of 'Cleopatra'," Bantam Books published it as a paperback.

Said Skouras further: "Wanger's book contains a malicious and wholly groundless attack upon me as a film executive, and also as to

Publicist Compares 1939 N.Y. Fair Shows & Ticket Techniques with '64

By BILL DOLL

Publicist worked with the late Mike Todd at the N.Y. World's Fair 1939 and now reps several key "show biz" exhibits at the '64 Fair. He also had the aborted "French Pavilion", which was an American promotion with French ideas, that collapsed aborning, although Doll observes "don't be surprised if it doesn't come to life again". He's typical of more optimistic showmen who see beaucoup "fun" and a "midway"—under other guise—booming the '64 show to its anticipated 70,000,000 admissions (not 23,000,000 gross sales, as erratumed last week) via blockbooked tickets, industrial, educational, civic and kindred tieups. Doll is also typifies all Gotham hopefuls that the 1964-65 N.Y. Fair is a smash; civic pride chiefly figures in being captious "now, before it's too late for Bob Moses to do anything". There also have been rumbles that the N.Y. Fair Corp. prexy may "relent" a little on some of his hidebound amusement standards. Publicist Doll points up—as did a followup story last week—that there will be plenty of showmanship on both sides of the '64 Fair—from the Industrial Area and the Amusement Area.—Ed.)

Concensus of those downbeat crix on "a fun-less '64 fair" mentioned what the Fair doesn't have so I'd like to switch to what the 1964 N.Y. World's Fair does have. We all know that outdoor show business has been easy prey for beefs and grumbles ever since the first bumpkin had his pocket picked on a carnival midway.

In rebuttal to the "you can't whistle a turbine" nifty, four of our most famous ASCAPers are tuning up the Leon Leonidoff-Meyer Davis Amphitheatre show and Dick Buttons' "Magical Ice-Travaganza."

Maybe "midway" is a dirty carnival word so call it The Lake Amusement Area, or whatever you please but, it's still a midway in my book. Furthermore, it's right on that some curving finger of

'Weekend With Lulu' Not Intended For Kids

Zionsville, Ind., July 23.

A comedy-mystery, said to be suitable for children, was scheduled to be shown at the Zionsville Theatre recently. When Jim McMahon, the projectionist, opened the film can, he found an opus titled "Weekend With Lulu."

This was not the film expected, but Eva Harm, theatre owner, announced the change to the kid-filled house. The film began to roll. Lulu appeared—in a bikini. Things were just getting interesting for the adults when Mrs. Harm decided to give Lulu the hook. She gave the members of the audience passes for a future show.

Lincoln Center Culture Offset to '64 Fair Midway

New York.

Editor, VARIETY:

While I certainly found your article "Fun-less '64 Fair Worries N. Y." interesting, there are many factors which I feel mitigate your conclusions—or at least those of the "Gotham bonifaces, hoteliers, restaurateurs and showmen" who are afraid that the lack of a midway at the Fair will hurt their businesses.

Just the reverse. The philosophy of the New York World's Fair appears to be one of spreading the Fair through the entire city. An example of this is designating Lincoln Center here in Manhattan as the performing-arts branch of the exposition. Special performances of ballet, opera and concert music are already scheduled to be performed in connection with the Fair. Special programs which, in effect, will bring the N. Y. World's Fair into Manhattan are being worked on now at Lincoln Center.

Whereas a midway on the fairgrounds might keep many Fair visitors from coming into New York at all, the Lincoln Center tie-in with Philharmonic Hall, the Metropolitan Opera and the N. Y. State Ballet Theater will serve to draw these people into New York hotels, restaurants and nightclubs

Barcelona Critics' 48-Hour Clemency

Barcelona, July 23.

In a novel experiment and with a single exception, Barcelona drama critics have agreed to withhold their theatre reviews for 48 hours during Spanish classic repertory programming of the national Teatro Espanol company.

Under the direction of Cayetano Luca de Tena, the government-sponsored theatre company is making its inaugural tour of the major provincial capitals and is presenting a series of classic Spanish plays from the pens of Lope de Vega, Calderon and others with a highly-touted cast. Starring Armando Calvo, Miguel Angel, Carmen Bernardos and Maite Blasco. Setting for the troupe is the open-air Greek Theatre at Montjuich Park.

Forty-eight hour delay in reviewing plays comes on the heels of a plea from impresarios urging critics to withhold opinions until a production has been launched via ads and word-of-mouth. Sole exception among crix here was Montsalvatge who writes in leading a.m. daily, La Vanguardia.

Grove Press' Pix Prod. Year; Also 4-Star TV Tieup

The Real Spiel

Hollywood, July 23.

A commercial spieler in tv may suffer the agonies of ailments prescribed by the advertised product but it's paying off—not in cure but what it takes to pay the medic. Jill Jackson was up for an arthritis remedy last week but lost the job because she isn't afflicted with it.

Miss Jackson's agent, Dale Garrick, insisted that she sign an affidavit to the effect that she must use the remedy prescribed. It's an FCC ruling, he told her. One spieler who didn't have dandruff was ruled out because his thatch was free of the stuff. Another couldn't qualify for a denture plug because he didn't have any store teeth.

One "medicine man," afflicted with splitting headaches and acid stomach, chortled, "at last there's some justice." He's the busiest guy in town.

Soldier Network (AFN) Marks 20th Anni; Now Has 50,000,000 Listeners

Frankfurt, July 23.

American Forces Network, headquartered in the suburb of Hoechst near here, marked its 20th birthday party on July 4—and on hand to help celebrate at a giant party at the AFN centre in an old castle were some of the people who came to fame through the soldier network.

Bill Ramsey, Cincinnati-born singer who is now one of the top record stars in Germany, popped up for the event since he was once an airman working at the station as a producer. Likewise Caterina Valente, whose records were popularized over the station for the last decade, came to sing at the fest.

The soldier network was started in 1943 in a cellar room of the BBC in London, and now besides in centre in Hoechst, it has studios in Berlin, Munich, Kaiserslautern, Nuernberg, Bremerhaven and Stuttgart, plus three additional stations in France.

With the help of 70 relay stations, it now reaches over 50,000,000 listeners throughout Europe and North Africa—making it the biggest international station in the world.

Last year, for instance, it received over 160,000 letters from listeners in more than 20 lands.

Since the Paris Convention in 1954, the station has had the right to provide information and entertainment for the American troops and their families stationed in Europe, and the accent continues to be on both these fields. During its 19-hour operating day, for instance, it sends out 19 news shows, one every hour on the hour.

About 55% of the broadcast time is devoted to music — and since it has the latest popular records and follows the dance fads of twist and bossa nova, its influence has been felt behind the Iron Curtain as thousands of listeners tune in the "forbidden" western station to hear what is going on

Nils Asther Back Acting In His Native Denmark

Copenhagen, July 23.

Nils Asther, the Swedish-American actor, who used to make love to Garbo in the silent movies, is back in business—this time in a Danish film. He has switched to character parts and plays a British auto tycoon in "Gudrun," based on the novel of that name by Danish Nobel prizewinner Johannes V. Jensen. The shooting is taking place here and in London and is expected to take a couple of months.

Asther, now is in his 50s. Although known as a Swedish-American, with more than 60 films behind him, he was born in Denmark, where he is now living.

He was hired for the part by 26-year-old producer Morten Schyberg, who is making the film on a $100,000 budget.

Asther arrived in Hollywood in the early '30s after United Artists had given him a five-year contract. "I was having a good deal of success in German movies at the time," recalled Asther. "At first they gave me the star build-up, but by the time I reached Hollywood, I was already, at 19, a forgotten man."

He had no work for months until director Herbert Brenon came to his aid with a script called "Sorrell and Son."

Garbo had arrived at that point also. "She came to Hollywood only because Moritz Stiller, the Swedish director who had discovered her, insisted on having her along if he

Laurel Zanuck As 'Pioneer of Year'

Twentieth-Fox prez Darryl F. Zanuck will be the Motion Picture Pioneer of the Year for 1963. Producer will be honored at the annual M.P. Pioneers dinner in New York in November.

Zanuck, a three-time Oscar winner, first earned industry recognition as production chief at Warner Brothers in the late 1920s and early 1930s. He resigned from WB in 1933 to form 20th Century Productions with the late Joe Schenck and in 1935 became vicepresident in charge of production when 20th Century merged with Fox Films.

At the time Zanuck was elected prez of 20th last year, he had been an indie producer for the company since 1956. His last personal production for his own DFZ Productions is the current blockbuster, "The Longest Day."

GOAL: A NEGRO IN EVERY CREW

Four Current German Releases Loom As Restoring Nation's Overseas Chance

After several years on the slump side, things are looking up for the German film industry. In silent days, Germany was one of the world leaders in filmaking. Now its upzooming with four pix of solid quality which are doing good biz in Europe and look to be imported for Yank distribution. All of this is quite heartening to German film people who now foresee a breakthrough in the U.S.

One of the current German successes is "Die Bekenntnisse eines Moeblierten" (Confessions of a Boarder) and Continental Distributing is planning to bring it to the States. Allied Artists is interested in a western called "Der Schatz im Silbersee" (The Treasure in Silver Lake) and a comedy called "Ich Bin Auch nur Eine Frau" (I'm Also Just a Woman) is being dickered for. And there's another comedy, "Das Schwarz-Weiss-Rote Himmelbett," (The Black-White-Red Four-poster) which has been drawing attention.

Plans expressed have been to bring these pix to the U.S. as subtitled and dubbed features for art house and general release, according to Munio Podhorzer, himself a Yank distrib of German films. One of the problems with the German film industry in recent years has been over-production of mediocre fare of no, or little, exportability, Podhorzer says. From an earlier and indigestible 120 or so pix a year, around 60 are now turned out in Germany. From this total comes the promising four.

Germany has had such a boom in nearly all forms of industry that the recovery of prestige by German films is overdue. It must be stressed that the Germans were timid as to films, after years of control by the Hitler crowd. Also there was after 1946 a desire to indulge in "escapism," a type of schmaltzy film which did well enough at the German boxoffice but was old hat elsewhere. Between the royal princess type of romance and the earlier Nazi propaganda a long break in the world habit of attending German features ensued.

In 1949, 62 pix were produced, mostly by talent recruited from the war. Year by year production increased until, in 1955, 122 pix were made in Germany. Although production reached a new high, quality sank to a low," the importer states. Coproduction deals were made with countries like Italy, France, Belgium and the Netherlands but "audiences rebelled and the advent of tv dealt blow," Podhorzer comments.

"The situation became acute this past year when only 69 films were made and German theatres were finding it more profitable to show American and other foreign films," he emphasizes. Meanwhile German stars Romy Schneider, Curt Jergens, Maximilian Schell, Maria Schell, Horst Buchholz and others began making pix for Italians, French and Americans, while German producers were going broke, Podhorzer says.

However, the four pictures mentioned here have not only drawn sock critical acclaim but have also attracted lines outside German theatres, something that hasn't happened for local pix for years. Distrib firms from all over are dickering for the pix and plans for subsidization from Bonn are being considered. There are still many problems, Podhorzer points out, "but the industry is looking up."

Wometco, Miami, Net on Ascent

Wometco Enterprises, Miami-based theatre circuit and radio and television station operator, had net income of $1,043,459 for the first 24 weeks of 1963, equal to 72c per share, compared with a net of $916,197, or 64c per share, for the corresponding period of 1962. Company stated the new period's profit set an all-time high.

Board declared the regular quarterly dividend of 15c on the Class A and 5½c on the Class B stock.

Wometco, whose shares are traded over the counter, also is engaged in vending, operates Miami's Seaquarium and holds the Pepsi Cola and Canada Dry franchises in the Bahamas.

Cinerama-Commerce Dept. Exhibit at N.Y. '64 Expo; Ray Bradbury Writing

Hollywood, July 23.

Ray Bradbury has been signed to write and assist in creative development of a new joint Cinerama-U.S. Dept. of Commerce film exhibit tagged "Tomorrow Morning" for the 1964 N.Y. World's Fair.

Jeremy Lepard will produce the exhibit, showing the evolution of the American character and pioneer spirit. Entire top floor of the U.S. Pavillion will house the exhibit, consisting of several motion picture screens, tri-dimensional screens and numerous tri-dimensional exhibits. Film will run 15 minutes and is slated for January completion.

Unusual deal was set by Malcolm Stuart, veepee of the GAC Literary Dept. Lepard stressed exhibit will in no way spotlight science-fiction, area in which Bradbury has been well known.

Writer recently sold "The Martian Chronicles" to Alan Pakula and Robert Mulligan and "Fahrenheit 451", is now being filmed in Europe by Francois Truffaut.

TEJAS PRODUCTIONS GOING ON TEXAS COIN

Hollywood, July 23.

Tejas Productions Inc. has been formed by a group of Texas businessmen for the production of motion pictures, and is now shooting "Indian Paint," starring Johnny Crawford and Jay Silverheels in Texas.

Writers' agent Jay Richards helped form the group, and is assistant to producer Robert L. Callahan. W. Goree, mayor of Grand Prairie, Tex., is prexy of TPI. Idea of group is to promote the theatrical feature and vidfilm industry in Texas, and it plans to build a sound stage for pix at Grand Prairie, also to acquire a 400-acre site for locationing.

"Paint" is from a book by Glenn Balch. Norman Foster, who is directing, wrote the screenplay. Film has all-Indian characters. Budget for the picture is $218,000. Crew was imported from Hollywood. No release has been set.

PRESSURES IF IATSE RESISTS

By MICHAEL FESSIER JR.

Hollywood, July 23.

Campaign being waged on behalf of the Negro in Hollywood by the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People stepped up here when demands for inclusion of Negroes in "virtually every television and motion picture production" and implementation of "fully entegrated technical crews" were presented some 100 industry reps at a meeting held under auspices of Assn. of Motion Picture Producers.

After two hour conference at AMPP headquarters, AMPP exec V.P. Charles Boren stated that while no agreement was reached on existence of alleged discrimination within the industry, that an "area of agreeableness" was established.

Herbert Hill, NAACP national labor secretary, however, declared that industry reps had expressed a "tacit admission" of existence of discrimination; that they had acknowledged that they had been "remiss" in area of civil rights.

General tone of conference postmortems was that many such meetings were likely to be held. The session was merely a preliminary.

Hill stressed that NAACP would not stage any of the nationwide demonstrations or sponsor boycotts they had threatened until a "reasonable time" had passed during which no "substantive gains" were made. He would not further elaborate on "reasonable time" although he did several times acknowledge that meetings might well go on for "several years."

An agreement was reached the following day, however, which if implemented could see NAACP gaining substantial portion of its demands almost immediately. Following a two hour huddle between NAACP reps and 22 IATSE business agents a joint statement was issued which disclosed that IA veepee George Flaherty had advised the biz agents to take the NAACP's "one Negro in every crew" proposition back to memberships for a "favorable recommendation."

IA union toppers, it might be noted, have contended right along that no discrimination exists within their shops though most will acknowledge that no Negroes are now members of their unions.

After huddle, Hill declared that "we are gratified that Mr. Flaherty as IATSE veepee, has urged an affirmative response by the IA locals to our request. We regard it as a good beginning and plan further meetings in the future."

Hill and the others of the NAACP negotiating team which includes attorneys Thomas Neusom and James Tolbert, earlier held a press conference. Launching into specifies for the first time. Hill named "Hazel," a Screen Gems teleseries, as initial target for crew integration demands. He said that show was selected randomly and only because its crew "has reportedly not as yet been selected. (According to SG, 13 segs of show have been completed for fall telecasting and the crew will not be reassembled for "two or three months."

If integration is not effected by Hazel's fall production start, the NAACP is prepared to hit Ford, who sponsors program, with a nationwide "consumers boycott," according to Hill. (Integration was later defined by Tolbert as "at least one Negro per crew.")

It was stressed that the NAACP has no bias against Ford. General Motors or Chrysler could as easily have been selected as target. (Tolbert stated that he was "well aware" that Ford has spent a considerable amount of money in behalf of the Negro.)

Any other teleseries or features that go into production after start of "Hazel" must also have integrated crews, NAACP reps further insisted.

64,200 Shares Change Hands as UA Third Most Active Stock on Street

United Artists was the third most active issue on the New York Stock Exchange last Thursday (18) when 64,200 shares of common exchanged hands. It was surprisingly heavy activity resulting in a drop of an eighth of a point, closing price being $24.37½, new low which compared with a high of $32.

Fred Anschel, researcher for Shearson, Hammill & Co., said he guesses a mutual fund interest was behind two exchange distributions of 30,000 shares each.

This brokerage outfit also told clients to expect second quarter earnings considerably below last year's 62c per share but an improvement in the second half of 1963 is likely, what with "Irma La Douce" and "Great Escape" going well currently. Estimated earnings for all of 1963: $1.80 to $2 per share.

Anschel comments that UA's $1.60 annual dividend rate is not entirely secure but nonetheless guesses it will continue because of an improved outlook for 1964.

Lean for 'Doc Zhivago'

David Lean is set to direct and Robert Bolte to script Carlo Ponti's production of "Dr. Zhivago," Russian novel by late Boris Pasternak who won the Nobel Prize, but was denied USSR permission to accept it.

Lean and Bolte similarly worked together on Sam Spiegel's "Lawrence of Arabia."

20 Creators Work On U Features

Things are perking at Universal. The company presently has 20 writers at work on 17 different projects. Nine producers are handling this output. Already in a sturdy inventory position, U now shapes to have the largest production schedule and number of properties in the past six years.

The 20 writers make up the largest complement of scribes the studio has had working at once since 1957 and that was before the company switched from old mass production method which turned out 32-34 features a year. Now the company concentrates on fewer pix, with an emphasis on star power and big b.o. potential. Another aspect of the current surge is that 10 of the 17 properties in

2 N.Y. Theatres Sue SportsVision & Loew's For 'Monopolizing' Bout

S. H. Equities Inc., operator of the Jefferson Theatre in Manhattan, and 490 Theatre Corp., management of a Puerto Rican house in the Bronx, have filed an anti-trust suit in N. Y. Federal Court against SportsVision, its prez, Robert Rosenkrantz, and Loew's Theatres, alleging "conspiracy" and "illegal monopoly" in the distribution of the closed circuit telefilm of Monday's (22) Liston-Patterson championship fight. Suit seeks $300,000 in treble damages.

Plaintiff exhibs charge that SportsVision discriminated against them in its licensing of the film to Loew's for showing at the National Theatre in the Bronx and the Sheraton in Manhattan. It's charged hat SportsVision refused plaintiffs the rights because of "illegal monopoly and conspiracy."

Plaintiffs claim that they applied to SportsVision, producers of the fight telecast, and that they were told that it had been licensed to Loew's and that the circuit would have to give its permission for the bookings. It's then alleged that Loew's turned down the request, despite the fact that its pact with SportsVision was not exclusive. Plaintiffs claim injury to their business as a result of this refusal.

ONE FROM SPAIN SET FOR VENICE FESTIVAL

Madrid, July 23.

Venice Film Festival chief Luigi Chiarini selected Luis Berlanga's "El Verdugo" (The Executioner) as the official entry there next month, after a visit here to screen possibilities "Verdugo" stars Nino Manfredi, Emma Penella and Jose Isbert under the direction of Berlanga, who collaborated with Rafael Azcona on the original script.

The second Spanish entry in official competition for the Golden Lion will be picked by a Uniespana selection team. Favorites are Juan Antonio Bardem's "Nothing Ever Happens" and "Los Tarantos," the latter a gypsy version of the Romeo and Juliet yarn, starring flamenco terp Carmen Amaya.

'Tarzan' in Hammock For While as Sy Weintraub Corrals 'Last Elephant'

Sy Weintraub was in New York recently talking it up for his production of "Tarzan's Three Challenges." It's the 37th Tarzan picture, has Jock Mahoney as the tree man and was made in Thailand.

Weintraub has the Tarzan cinematic franchise, having bought out Sol Lesser for $3,000,000. This amount covered other Lesser properties. Interesting angle is that Weintraub started out in radio and television some years ago with $1,500 he had borrowed and parlayed this to the extent that he could swing the Lesser deal and, additionally, set up his own financing for his new theatrical features. "I roll the dice and if I win it's my money, and I'm rolling on my own judgment," he states.

Weintraub began with his buying on the old Flamingo Films (using that borowed money), subsequently became active in tv production and, in Minneapolis, station operation.

He plans now to give Tarzan a rest for a while, is readying to produce "Gilligan's Last Elephant," from the book by Gerald Hanley. He has been releasing through Metro but there's no distribution deal set for "Elephant" as yet.

LEVINE TO EUROPE—AGAIN

Due for London Confab on 'Zulu' —Other Projects

Joseph E. Levine, prez of Embassy Pictures, left New York for Europe last Monday (22) for London and Rome. He'll be checking the progress of various features in production under his co-aegis, as well as dickering fresh productions.

In London, Levine will meet with Stanley Baker whose Diamond Films is coproducing "Zulu" with Embassy and Paramount. Location shooting was recently completed in Natal, South Africa, and final photography on the $3,000,000 adventure pic is currently winding in London. In Rome, Levine will see his and Carlo Ponti's "Ghost at Noon," which finished recently starring Brigitte Bardot and Jack Palance. He'll also visit the sets of "Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow" and "Empty Canvas," both also Ponti-Levine productions.

He'll be in London through tomorrow (Thurs.) and in Rome from Friday (26) through next Monday (29). Joining him in the former city will be George Weltner and Charles Boasberg, Par world sales v.p and domestic sales manager, respectively.

Rude Managers, That's Routine; But Ask 'Who Directed the Picture?' And You're Eyed Like Litigant

New York.

Editor, VARIETY:

It becomes increasingly obvious that Show Biz is the one industry where "The customer is always right" and "Courtesy Pays" are not the bywords. Just let a customer complain in a movie theatre about poor projection or a seat with bare springs and he is given a smug, "Well, you don't know anything about it," by the manager, who adds, "That's the way it is, take it or leave it." Chances are the customer will leave it, leave the theatre never to come back again, or maybe decide to leave movie-going out of his life.

Does the theatre man care? In a city of 8,000,000 people he should care? While I've met this disregard for patrons all over the country, I've never seen it as bad as in New York. Why does the industry constantly go out of its way on all levels to alienate customers and then complain about poor box-office?

But brushoffs on service complaints are as nothing compared to the suspicion you arouse if you seek "trade" information.

For instance, I happened into a Bijou showing one "Hercules and the Captive Women," actually paid 90c (believe it or not), and really enjoyed the picture (having gone in to see the co-feature, I expected little of this one). I was curious about it, not having paid attention to the credits: who was the producer; the director? To find this out I would need a press book. To get a press book I would have to find the distributor. Who is the distributor? Woolner Bros. But they are in New Orleans . . . somebody locally handles it, but who? Just try to find out.

The theatre frankly didn't know. Ah, but their booker would. And know he did — but he wouldn't tell. Neither would National Screen Service. Who was I? Why did I want to know? It became very suspicious. Why wouldn't they tell? Were they all doing something illegal? Was a crook distributing it without a license to do so? Nobody would let on. Not only that, but they all became insulting, suspecting me of planning to sue them—FOR WHAT?? Pray tell, what have they been sued for in the past that I, a customer (paid 90c), could sue them for again? They told me to go away, that it was none of my business.

Even the distributor, George Waldman, long on Film Row, when confronted by me in person after a long search, was defensive. "If you're not in the business you don't need to know." His whole office stared while I, a gross intruder, not wearing the badge that identified me as "In," asked a simple question. "Now goodbye." Why so brusque? One simple question —who directed the picture—was not to be answered.

No wonder "Saturday Night at the Movies" is so popular.

ROONEY MEMOIR LITIGATION

Ghoster Kahn Peeved at Actor and Putnam's at Both

Mickey Rooney has been slapped with a suit in N.Y. Supreme Court by freelance writer Roger Kahn who wants $75,000 from the actor claiming that Rooney reneged on a contract for the "ghosting" of his autobiography.

Kahn claims to have submitted a manuscript to Rooney in July, 1962. The actor, who has filed a general denial of the charges, claims that "the manuscript submitted to me was in all respects unsatisfactory." Meanwhile, last February, G. P. Putnam's Sons, who were to have published the tome, sought the return from Rooney and Kahn of $9,000 allegedly paid as an advance against royalties on the book.

Ferrer Yens 'Greco,' Rivals Jumps Gun

Madrid, July 23.

Recent statement by Mel Ferrer that he plans to star in and coproduce "El Greco" with Impala Films of Madrid early next year has stirred at least two other producers into feverish preparation to get their Grecos on the screen first.

Ferrer, now in Hollywood, picked up the rights to "Greco and Toledo," penned by the late Gregorio Maranon—one of Spain's eminent modern author-philosophers. The Hollywood actor also found time to survey Toledo exteriors during his long costarring assignment on "Fall of the Roman Empire." He is dickering with Serge ("Sunday and Cybeles") Bourguinon to take the directional spot. Ferrer will play the title role.

A Spanish production company, headed by Gonzalez and Carballo, have meanwhile announced an early shooting start for "Lady in Ermine," based on the Elizabeth Szel novel of the same name, dealing with the amorous side of Greco's career. The producer-partners have selected Miguel Madrid to play Greco and Maria Cuadra as Jeronima de las Cuevas, the alleged femme in Greco's life.

A third project dealing with El Greco is being rushed by Spanish director Jose Luis Merino, but no details are yet available on producer or cast.

Simon & Schuster's "Cleopatra Papers" by ex-20th-Fox touters Jack Brodsky and Nat Weiss is the cover feature of the current (Aug.) Esquire. They reveal some cogent inside stuff on the back-of-the-camera (and back at 444 W. 56 St.) headaches while Liz and Dickie were playing their own real-life triangle. The publicists obviously kept a running "dear diary," person-to-person report (one was the location man, the other the homeoffice publicist, and then they later swapped spots when Brodsky's wife had to return to the U.S. because of impending motherhood). The intimate closeups on the dramatic personae re Mankiewicz, Wanger & Co. make for revealing stuff. A previous paperback on the same subject was published by Walter Wanger in collaboration with Joe Hyams. Esquire's editors gave themselves a retake or three on actual language of the stars. But which is paraphrased in an earthy term that crops up repeatedly in the dialog.

Authors Brodsky and Weiss are reportedly miffed at Esquire for having "hidden" a promised Esky plug for the Simon & Schuster book, due to be published next week. In the opening paragraphs of the original galleys of the Esquire piece, the reader's attention was called to the fact that the article was only a portion of an upcoming tome. As it finally ran, this reminder appeared on page 110 of Esquire. The authors fear, of course, that Esky readers will think they've read "it all" and won't bother to buy the book. Latter goes into much greater detail on the entire 20th corporate upheavel than is indicated in the Esquire condensation.

Under a Damascus, Syria, dateline, AP reported that Joanne Woodward and Juliette Greco "made" the Arab blacklist, no reason given, adding that latter's platters would also be boycotted. Previous Arab world frown, presumably because of Israeli sympathies and-or bookings, included Elizabeth Taylor, Frank Sinatra, Sammy Davis Jr., Danny Kaye and Paul Newman (husband of Miss Woodward).

Harry Saltzman in Gotham for huddles with UA brass re his currently lensing "From Russia With Love" coproduction with Albert R. Broccoli, their second of 10 Ian Fleming Bond-the-sleuth mysteries for the distrib . . . Mike Lipscomb summer jobbing in Embassy publicity department . . . James Garner in New York for a week of promotion for Universal's "Thrill of It All" which opens shortly at Radio City Music Hall . . . Charles M. Powell, Roy S. Duckworth, Bernard E. Youngstein, Tony Silver, Blanche Livingston and Ted Arnow on Ruth Pologe's AMPA Awards committee.

Hisashi Fukuzawa named UA's sales manager for Japan, having been with the company since 1954 and in the film biz for over 20 years . . . Claude Gersene, moppet legit-film actor, inked for Rex Arlington's "Twilight in Paris," to roll on location in September . . . "Irma La Douce" has added Friday and Saturday midnight showings at the Baronet Theatre, N. Y. . . . Frank London, dialog director for "Carpetbaggers," will also be an actor in the film—but sans dialog of his own.

"The Leopard," 20th-Fox, is like the festival pic of the year, having played (and won in) Cannes, Moscow and Locarno and is now set to open the Montreal fest Aug. 2 . . . Elmo Williams, 20th's production head, looking for addition stars for "Third Secret." Signed so far are Margaret Leighton, Stephen Boyd and Pamela Franklin. This is one of the properties the now-defunct Entertainment Corp. of America started out to make.

Franklin Schaffner added John Starr's film treatment, "The Whistle Blows for Victory," to his Gilchrist Productions program . . . William Bowers to script Metro's "Too Big for Texas" . . . Rochelle Hudson returns to screen for first time in 20 years in William Castle's "Straitjacket" at Columbia Pictures . . . Gene Taft and Stephen Bernhardt, prepping "No Kisses for My President" for Warner Bros., added four properties to their indie slate, including "Me and My Brother," "Henrietta," "No Dice, Warden" . . . Jeffrey Hunter forced out of star role in John Ford's "The Long Flight" at WB, due to Warners preempting him for its "Temple Houston" teleseries, which goes into immediate production.

Negotiaitions on for Cary Grant's indie outfit to join forces with Henry Saperstein in coproduction of "Two Hours to Darkness," Grant to star and Reuben Bercovitch to produce. . . . Glenn Ford bought William Saroyan's novella, "The Oldest Story," for production under his Newton banner. . . . James B. Harris put back start of "I Want My Mother," Rita Hayworth-Sue Lyon starrer, until early 1964 to launch "Bedford Incident" first. . . Robert L. Lippert switched skedded French filming of "Les Cinq Soldats" (The Five Soldiers) to Hollywood. . . . Warner Bros. and Metro reported both romancing Joel Grey, currently starring in "Stop the World—I Want to Get Off" at Huntington Hartford Theatre here, with film and tv deals.

Donald Duck's eccentric English has been translated into fractured French in all but the earliest Walt Disney pictures starring the feathered Cyrano for distribution in French Canada, France and latter's colonies. La voix francais de Donald Duck is supplied by Rollie Hammond, the same who emceed the Jayne Mansfield show at Brant Inn (Burlington, Ont.) Sky Club last week, which the local top cop censored.

Phil Gerard and Herman Kass on the Coast huddling with David Lipton as to ad-pub-promotion plans for forthcoming Universal releases Brazilian producer-director J. B. Tanko and Chris D. Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) has expressed considerable interest in the upcoming filmization of Ossie Davis' Broadway comedy "Purlie Victorious," which will be tagged "Gone Are the Days" on film, and has promised to supply lines of patrons, numbering as many as 10,000 in New York, for engagements of the comedy which satirizes the racial situation in the south. So far no distrib deal has been set for the pic which stars Davis and wife Ruby Dee and includes other members of the original Broadway cast. The final print is completed and talks are in progress.

Arthur L. Mayer named chairman of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers (AMPA) showmanship fund committee and will direct fund-raising activities for the organization's campaign to put more showmanship into distribution and exhibition . . . Bert Solomon, Embassy Pictures pub department staffer, recently completed a novel which is being peddled . . . Leslie Martinson will direct "For Those Who Think Young" for Sinatra Enterprises and UA release, rolling Aug. 14 . . . Chris Noel and Jacqueline White into "Soldier in the Rain," Blake Edwards production for Allied Artists.

Vacationing Army Archerd (DAILY VARIETY) caught up with Darryl F. Zanuck in Paris. He put his intentions this way: he would not vamoose the 20th-Fox presidency before the new Malibu Studios were open and operating. He now foresees Malibu complex as containing 60 to 80 stages, a veritable super-studio on the 2,500-acre tract, to which additional acreage may be added. 20th must vacate its present plants in three years. Among economies following the move to Malibu will be some $1,250,000 spent annually at present to keep ancient walls of present studio in repair. Transportation items of $2,500,000 annually will also be avoided. Zanuck detailed new system at company whereby vote on every issue coming before board is of record, also a weekly budget diary on every production is now of record. GEO. SKOURAS FACES BATTLE

National Boxoffice Survey

Trade Holds Strong; 'Cleo' Still Champ, 'Horn' 2d, 'West' 3d, 'Irma' 4th; 'Birdie,' 'Arabia' Next

Relief from hot weather in several sections of the country is proving a stimulus to the cinema boxoffice this round, but most of all it is the stimulating product which is proving the biggest booster.

"Cleopatra" (20th) (5th wk) will be champ again, just as it has been for the previous four weeks. "Come Blow Your Horn" (Par) (7th wk) again is finishing second, same as last round.

"How West Was Won" (MGM) (22d wk) is moving back to third spot, after dipping to fourth last session. "Irma La Douce" (UA) (7th wk) is capturing fourth position, with indications it may go higher with added playdates.

"Bye, Bye Birdie" (Col) (5th wk) is winding up fifth, same as a week ago. "Lawrence of Arabia," also from Columbia, is holding in sixth position although out in release 28 weeks.

"Summer Magic" (BV) (2d wk) is moving into seventh place, the first week out to any extent. "Great Escape" (UA) (4th wk) is finishing eighth. "L-Shaped Room" (Col) (4th wk), will take ninth position, new high for this pic in weekly ratings.

"Gathering of Eagles" (U) (4th wk) is taking 10th place. "Women of World" (Embassy) (3d wk) is capturing 11th spot first time it's made the weekly ratings. "PT 109" (WB) (4th wk) round out the Top 12. "Spencer's Mountain" (WB), "Mutiny on Bounty" (MGM) and "Mouse on Moon" (Lope) are the runnerup films.

"This Sporting Life" (Cont) shows promise among the newcomers, with a great gross opening stanza in two arty New York theatres. "Donovan's Reef" (Par), due at N.Y. Paramount this week, hints potential this round. It is hep in Minneapolis, sock in Washington, hotsy in L.A. and big in Frisco.

"Thrill of It All" (U), due next week at N.Y. Music Hall, is rated smash on its initial playdate in Louisville. "Sparrows Can't Sing" (Janus), fairly new, shapes stout in N. Y. and Washington and okay in Cincy and Boston. "Heavens Above," from same distrib, also looks promising this week.

"Flipper" (MGM) looms big in Chi and stout in Boston. "King Kong Vs. Godzilla" (U), big in Cincy, looms hotsy in L.A.

Note: The number of weeks out in release for bigger and longrun pix are designated in such cases.

Liston Again Hooks Theatre Fans & Patterson; SportsVision's 125G Net

By EDDIE KALISH

Calling it "a disgrace to the fight game," ranking challenger Cassius Clay about summed up the attitude of many theatre patrons after last Monday's (22) championship fight which saw champ Sonny Liston k.o. challenger Floyd Patterson in a fast 2:10 of the first round in Las Vegas. But SportsVision, theatrevision producer of the bout, ended up in the winner's corner, grossing an estimated $700,000 on its total ancillary package, of which around $500,000-$600,000 was taken in at boxoffices around the country.

SportsVision piped the quickie into 143 locations, including theatres, auditoriums, arenas and such, in 109 cities. In all, about 450,000 seats were available, at prices ranging from $3.50 to $10 but averaging in the mid-$4 range. Also included in the producer's $700,000 gross was $50,000 from ABC radio and about $50,000-$60,000 from community antenna systems around the country, as well as the take from a deal with the BBC.

Of the gross, SportsVision is figured to have netted around $125,000. Championship Sports, promoters of the fight, reported an SRO take of $286,180 at the 7,500-seat Convention Hall site. Of this, the fighters will each get about $78,000. Their cut of the ancillary take will give Patterson 35% and Liston 30%, as established in a return bout agreement set before the first fight in which Liston took the title from Patterson in an even faster knockout—2:06 of the first round.

Allied Artists has the film rights to the bout and has prepared an 11-minute pic, with slow motion segs and the Clay bits. In all, theatre viewers saw a 35-minute show from air time till the final ring interview following the contest which saw the challenger hit the canvas a total of three times in the 2:10. Picture was clear and efficiently photographed and Jack McCarthy handled ring announcements and blow-by-blow effectively.

However, Steve Ellis, who handled the surrounding palaver, drew many unintended chuckles from the audience. He was a wealth of useless info and a master of banality and inaccuracy. He made up for this in part with an interview right after the k.o. with Liston during which he showed the champ a play-back of the knockdowns. But his constantly asking Liston "what are you doing now Sonny," which mostly drew pregnant pauses, marred this segment. There was no chat with Floyd. But brassius Cassius stepped in for a few words.

Clay, in fact, spent more time on camera than the actual combatants and was far more colorful than their contest. Before the fight he pulled off a funny bit by shaking hands with Patterson and recoiling in mock terror when he looked across at the champ. Afterwards, however, he carried on pretty good, calling Liston a "bum" and demanding a chance at him, tearing up advance headlines proclaiming the victory—once for the tv cameras and once for news photogs.

Around the country there were the usual ups and downs. In Minneapolis, where promoter Tommy Anderson was expecting b.o. trouble, the fight attracted 3,022 patrons to the 9,000-seat Municipal auditorium, with tickets scaled from $3.50-$5, for an okay gross of $12,390. He was willing to take the gamble when promised the Clay-Liston fight, which has now been tentatively set for Philadelphia, Sept. 23 or 30. In the Bronx, hundreds of $5 ticket-holders demanded and got their money back after a power failure at 10:45 knocked out the fight.

Biz was generally brisk around Gotham, although observers after the contest were heard to comment that a few more of these quickies and there won't be much of a theatre biz in the future. It was the second time that many of the patrons had spent roughly $2 a minute to see Liston and Patterson collide and they weren't happy.

Los Angeles, July 23.

Los Angeles fight fans paid approximately $126,500 in 11 situations to watch brief Liston-Patterson closed-circuit scrap. Houses were scaled from $10 top down to $3.50. Orpheum and Wiltern were sold out. Balance of sites about 70%.

Others included Hillstreet, Village, Warner, Huntington, L.A. Olympic Aud., Pasadena Academy, Glendale Alex, Long Beach Aud., Fox Wilshire.

ASK UA CIRCUIT, 'WHERE'S DIVVY?'

By WHITNEY WILLIAMS

Hollywood, July 23.

A proxy fight looms over management of United Artists Theatre Circuit, one of the largest chains in the country. Group of important investors in circuit, including theatremen, business leaders, realtors and film production figures, are dissatisfied with operation of circuit. They have formed a combine and reportedly control around 350,000 shares of the 1,140,466 outstanding.

Syndicate is working under the name of Better Management for UA Circuit. Members include Samuel Goldwyn, Walter Reade Jr., who also heads his own distribution and theatre circuit; Mary Pickford; Jerry Ohrbach, David May, Al Bloomingdale, bizmen; and Maxwell Cummings, Montreal real estate operator.

Group for past year has been quietly buying up UATC stock, to add to previous holdings. First move has already been made toward obtaining control of company, of which George P. Skouras, brother of 20th board chairman Spyros Skouras and late Charles Skouras, is president.

Proxies were mailed to UA stockholders last Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday (15-17) bearing names of Cummings, Ohrbach (who resigned July 1 as prexy of Ohrbach's Inc.) and Reade, with a view to calling a special meeting, permitted under laws of Maryland, where UATC is incorporated. Session probably would be held in N. Y., where circuit is headquartered.

Dissident faction was formed because of concern over the circuit's present status and its future, according to one of the group, who asked not to be identified. "We felt," he said, "that any company which hasn't paid any dividends since 1952 isn't doing well for its stockholders."

Joseph H. Flom, attorney for the group, said this week that the company's holdings "are inherently valuable and can be made to produce an adequate profit for stockholders." He stressed that the dissidents are disturbed by the "lack of dividends."

Chain had net income of $301,473 for the fiscal year ended Aug. 31, 1962 on gross revenues of

Can't Expect Quality From Video; Dave Picker Contends Hope For Film Biz With Experimentors

It is the "definite responsibility" of the major picture companies to help in the development of the younger, more experimental filmmakers who have been arriving on the scene. Such is the opinion of David Picker, UA v.p. and dealmaker, who points to his own company's dealings with people like Frank & Eleanor Perry and Ralph Nelson as examples of how this can benefit both a company and the industry.

Nelson's "Lillies of the Field" was a big success at the recent Berlin Film Festival where it won for its star, Sidney Poitier, the best actor award. Perry's indie "David & Lisa," for which UA naturally is not taking any bows, has been a strong factor in the confidence of other new filmakers to try their luck and UA is currently making a pic with Perry in Pennsylvania called "Ladybug, Ladybug."

"Where are these guys to get their experience?" Picker asks. "There's no real quality on tv. They have to be given a certain amount of opportunity and it is the definite responsibility of the majors to see that they get this opportunity. We have to give the creators their chance. Don't give 'em carte blanche, but it must be done," he states.

UA is presently talking with Nelson about more pix and of course Perry is already working on one, with others to follow. Although Tony Richardson is not exactly a film newcomer, his production company is currently lensing a low-budgetter in Ireland called "Take Love Easy" and there will be others. They're not all successful, he clearly points out, but they can mean things for their participants as in Perry's case and that of director Dennis Saunders who directed a low-budget pic for UA called "War Hunt" which itself was a bomb but which led to other megging assignments.

"You have to do a certain number of 'Lillies' and 'Ladybugs'," he says. "If you don't you stagnate. It's just not being done enough. It used to be the studios that built talent but most don't do it anymore." Universal currently has a plan to go into operation whereby it will produce some low-budget films under a separate production scheme than that used for its major productions, with the intention of building young creative picture talent.

It's not just a matter of giving the creators an opportunity either, Picker points out. "It gives a company a chance to get special subject matter. The results aren't necessarily commercial but they're very important because without them where are these people going to come from? Also, if we didn't make some of the pictures we have made in the past, we wouldn't have had some of our winners," he notes.

Picker feels that not enough companies are trying to develop this type of picturemaking talent and that, in ignoring these folks, they are not fulfilling their responsibility to either themselves or the industry. He feels that this is unfortunate because the industry needs constant creative stimulation and this is one of the major sources of such inspiration. He says that he is constantly talking with young filmakers about projects and feels that more picture company execs should spend more time with these makers. After all, "for the cost of one 'Taras Bulba' you can make a hundred of these," he comments.

Shepperton On the Hum

Robert S. Ferguson, Columbia v.p., back in Manhattan after the transAtlantic bit, related that the Shepperton Studio in Middlesex was going in high gear. American filmmakers have the lot well occupied.

Hal Wallis is going with "Becket," Otto Preminger is editing "The Cardinal," Carl Foreman is finishing "The Victors," Stanley Kubrick is editing "Dr. Strangelove" and Irving Allen is shooting the interiors for "Long Ships."

DFZ on Average Film Costs: From $2-To-$6-Million

Paris, July 23.

Twentieth-Fox isn't anticipating any more pix in the budget category of "Cleopatra" ($30,000,000-plus). Prez Darryl F. Zanuck reported here that in view of today's production costs, 20th will make "a few pictures" in the $2,000,000 range, but that most will average about $3,000,000.

However, he added, "The Sand Pebbles" will cost in the neighborhood of $6,000,000, and "The Sound of Music" will be about the same. That's still a far cry from the "Cleo" expenditures.

The prez anticipates making 10 to 12 films in Hollywood and six in Europe in the next year.

WELTNER, BOASBERG SEE BRONSTON IN MADRID

George Weltner and Charles Boasberg, big men at Paramount, left New York Monday (22) for Madrid conferences with Samuel Bronston concerning the latter's production of "The Circus," which is to be a Par release.

Indications are that further Par-Bronston coproductions (or some other kind of affiliation) are in the offing.

Prescott's Two Cartoon Features

Readying For Market — 'Oz' Carrying Name — Voice Cast—Animated Overseas

Boston, July 23.

Norman Prescott, Boston-based film producer, is back from Europe with the first rushes of his new indie production, a full-length animated color feature, "Return to the Land of Oz."

Judy Garland's daughter, Liza Minnelli, plays the voice of Dorothy. (Publicity angle: mother played Dorothy 23 years ago in "Wizard of Oz"). Ethel Merman is the wicked witch voice; Danny Thomas, the tin man; Peter Lawford, the scarecrow; Milton Berle, the cowardly lion; Rise Stevens, the good witch; Jack E. Leonard, the signpost; Paul Ford, Uncle Henry; Paul Lynde, pumpkinhead; Herschel Bernardi, the wooden horse; Mel Blanc, the crow; Margaret Hamilton, Aunt Em. (Miss Hamilton played the witch in the Judy Garland starrer 23 years ago).

The animated film version, Prescott said, is all new from top to bottom "taking 'Dorothy' back to Oz for a second visit with an entirely new score of 15 orig songs written by Sammy Cahn and Jimmy Van Heusen. Theme song is: "Faraway Land." Others: "If You're Gonna Be a Witch. Be a Witch," "B-R-A-N-E Spells Brain," "An Elephant Never Forgets," "Horse on the Carousel," "You Have Only You," "That Feeling for Home."

Walter Scharf did the scoring for the picture and has completed the entire cast album with the "Oz Symphony Orch," comprising 85 tooters. The film, Prescott stated, runs two hours with an overture in Broadway musical style during which audiences will see abstract colors, shapes and forms on the screen. The end titles show the animated characters taking curtain calls with their cartoon faces dissolving into the actual faces of the name personalities who play each role.

"Return to the Land of Oz" is skedded for winter release, Prescott, former Boston and New York radio and tv personality, and executive vice president of Pleasure Island, $4,000,000 Wakefield, Mass. amusement park, said. It is planned as a roadshow picture in widescreen and color, at present.

"Oz" is Prescott's second animated film. His first, made in Europe, "Pinocchio's Adventure in Outer Space," is completed and is currently being scored.

Prescott is mapping his own promotional campaign for the "Oz" film and has already worked out a number of interesting gimmicks.

Final Moscow Festival Reviews

Meet Balujev
(RUSSIAN)

Moscow, July 16.

A Lenfilm Studio production. Directed by V. Komissarzhevsky. Screenplay, V. Kozhevnikov and Komissarzhevsky; camera, V. Levitin, D. Meschiev; music, V. Christjakov. At Moscow Film Fest. Running time, 120 MINS.

Balujev is a senior engineer working on a pipe laying project carrying natural gas through a remote part of the country. At first, it looks as though the problems of construction will provide the film with its drama. But the difficulties of going through a bog are dropped, and the narrative concerns itself instead with the problems of other individuals at the camp. These incidents are of little point or interest, and the characters artificial. The film meanders along talking all the time, and uncertain of what it is supposed to be saying or doing.

Film is timidly modern in that the rights of a worker as an individual are stressed, an affair is suggested, an abortion hinted and official attitudes held to be restrictive. But it's all very dull.

J. Pereverzev makes a hearty Balujev, the girls are certainly not camp workers, the score is inappropriate, the direction labored. How unfortunate that one of the few Russian films dealing with the present rather than the last war should be so confined in outlook and lacking even the elementary principles of cinema art. Prat.

Each Day I Cry
(Hiko Shojo)
(JAPANESE)

Moscow, July 16.

Nikkatsu Corp. production. Directed by Kei Urayama. Screenplay, Grayama & Yoshio Ishido from original story by Kei Moriyama; camera, Kurataro Takamura; music, Toshiro Mayuzumi. At Moscow Film Fest. Running time, 114 MINS.

Saburo Sawata ..... Mitsuo Hamada

This is a sympathetic, well-acted study of a wilful, high-spirited young slum girl neglected by her drunken parents, who finds a companion in a boy her own age. He leaves her because she cannot seem to avoid misadventures which cast her in a dubious light and eventually take her to a reform school. Boy and girl are finally reunited and here the film should end with the hope of a better life.

Unfortunately, the director drags on to reach the same conclusion after introducing other issues of little consequence and which are under-developed.

The main part of the narrative takes a realistic view of life, in a fire in which a chicken house is burned down and the birds fly around in agony against the night sky with their feathers aflame. Prat.

Lupeni 29
(RUMANIAN)

Moscow, July 16.

Romfilm (Bucharest) production and release. Stars Lica Gheorghiu, Colea Rautu. Directed by Mircea Dragan. Screenplay, Nicolael Tic, Eugen Mandric, Dragan; camera, Aurel Samson; music, Theodor Grigoriu. At Moscow Film Fest. Running time, 118 MINS.

Iona ..... Lica Gheorghiu
Petre Letean ..... Colea Rautu
Todor Baci ..... George Calboreanu
Varga ..... Stefan Ciobotarasu
Matelanu ..... Costel Constantinescu

Dupeni is a mining town in Rumania which was hit by industrial unrest in the '20s, and this film spotlights the culminating struggles of 1929 when workers were mown down by the military before their strikes succeeded. The subject is probably more inspiring than the resultant film, which has been directed with a heavy hand. An unlikely starter for Western territories.

At the beginning, the subject is treated as a personalized story, showing a young husband going off to work, leaving his wife and child behind at home. But there's a mine disaster that day, and he never returns. Some years later the wife gets work at the pit, but at that point, the individual narrative is submerged. And the focus is on the mass movement struggling for existence.

There are some impressive crowd scenes, but these are often too loosely edited. However, a negative nightmare sequence of a mine disaster comes across with stark realism. Much of the dialog sounds as if it come straight out of the text book. The subject provides few chances for individual performances. An overpowering score in stereophonic sound is no help, but other credits are up to average. Myro.

Toha-Hero of Southern Bandung
(INDONESIAN)

Moscow, July 16.

Perfini Film Studio (Usmar Ismail) production. Directed and written by Ismail. Camera, Max Tera Kusnen; music, Saiful Bachri. At Moscow Film Fest. Running time, 160 MINS.

This Indonesian film is a worthy and sincere try by a nation that has had little experience in production. The lack of professional know-how is all too evident. Pic can only be rated a possibility for the Asian market.

It's a story of the country's war of liberation against the Dutch, culminating in an exploit of individual heroism when a soldier sacrifices his own life to blow up an enemy ammunition dump. Running through the yarn is a charming and tender romantic theme, though the treatment is always on the naive side. Despite its deficiencies, the film shows promise of technical skill, and the acting is sincere. Myro.

Cold Tracks
(NORWEGIAN)

Moscow, July 16.

Directed by Arne Skouen. Screenplay, Skouen and Johan Borgen; camera, Ragnar Sorenson; editor, Byern Breigutul; music, Gunnar Sonstevold. At Moscow Film Fest. Running time, 91 MINS.

Odmund ..... Toralv Maurstad
Ragnhild ..... Henni Moan
Tormod ..... Alf Mailand

Norway is in the minor league among the European filmmaking countries, and that is all to clearly reflected in this festival entry. It is a slow, mainly dull wartime story, with little prospects outside the Scandinavian territories.

Twelve fugitives from Fascism are crossing the mountains towards the sea and, they hope freedom. But their departure is delayed when the guide decides to pick up his sweetheart. Bad weather interrupts the journey, and the fugitives are buried in the snow. Fifteen years later, the guide returns to the scene, only to find that his former sweetheart is now married to someone else on the expedition.

The trek across the snowy mountains lacks excitement, and the direction and action is on the heavyhanded side. Myro.

Naked Among The Wolves

Moscow, July 16.

DEFA (East Berlin) production and release. Features Erwin Geschonnek, Fred Delmare, Armin Muller-Stahl, Gerry Wolf, Eric S. Klein. Directed by Frank Beye. Screenplay, Bruno Apitz, based on his own novel; camera, Guenther Marczinkowsky. At Moscow Film Fest. Running time, 121 MINS.

Although there has been an abundance of films from the Eastern European bloc on the subject of concentration camps, there are few to match this East German production for sincerity and production quality. It is a powerful narrative of the last weeks at Buchenwald, before its liberation by the Yanks, and it is a moving experience. As always, this type of yarn is hard going for Western audiences, but it merits some playing time in the West.

The author had the misfortune to have had first hand experience of Buchenwald, so presumably there is an authentic background. And apart from the fact that the camp guards and the Gestapo are shown as bullies and thugs, there is little of the conventional propaganda tract in the story.

As a novel approach to the plot, the main incident revolves around a young Jewish boy, rescued from the Polish ghetto, who is secreted into the camp by a Pole. The commandant gets word that the boy is there, and starts a reign of terror, but the camp underground gets to work, moving the child from one hiding place to another, outwitting the guards until the end. By the time the boy is found, it is too late as the noise of American artillery penetrates the camp, and the guards prefer to run for it.

The climatic scenes in which the thousands of inmates realize that they are free at last is magnificently photographed. They are caught running towards the camera lens, gradually filling the screen and showing natural signs of joy and hysteria. There are, on the other hand, some incidents which strain credibility somewhat, but they are of relatively minor significance.

As it is always easier to portray heavies on the screen, it is the camp guards and the gestapo bullies who emerge as clearcut characters. But there is a high all-round standard of acting by a cast unknown in the West. Technically, the pic measures up to present day standards. Myro.

The Dear Family
(DANISH)

Moscow, July 16.

A/S Nordisk Films Kompagni Production. Directed by Erik Balling. Screenplay, Arvid Muller based on play by Gustav Esmann; camera (Eastmancolor), Jorgen Skov; music, Kai Normann Andersen. At Moscow Film Fest. Running time, 100 MINS.

Friis ..... Gunnar Lauring
Elise ..... Lise Ringheim
Emily ..... Belle Virkner
Ida ..... Ghita Norby
Jacob ..... Ole Soltoft
William Randall ..... Bjorn Watt Boolsen
Claes of Lejonstam ..... Jarl Kulle
Valdemar Nystrom ..... Ebbe Langberg
Count Maagenhjelm ..... Henning Moritzen
Von Schidpadde ..... Keld Markuslund
Ludwig ..... Buster Larsen
Julie Hansen ..... Lily Broberg
Irmelin ..... Susse Wold

The scene is Copenhagen at the turn of the Century, and against a rich background. Story covers the misadventures of a wealthy widower, his three lovely daughters, their husbands and suitors. There are the usual incidents with early cars, lively dances, amorous dallyings and family scandals.

Dialog is occasionally witty, but the events are stagebound if nicely photographed. Acting generally is deft.

Most of this is however, of no consequence. One of the best scenes involves an Englishman who is delegated to tell a neice of "the birds and the bees." Prat.

Marriage Circle
(INDIAN)

Moscow, July 16.

R. D. B. production, Calcutta. With Suchitra Sen, and Soumittra Chatterjee. Directed by Ajoy Kar. Screenplay, Nripendra Krishna Chatterjee; story Ashutosh Mukherjee; camera, Bisu Chakravarty; editor, Baidyanath, Chatterjee; music, Hemanta Mukherjee. At Moscow Film Fest. Running time, 120 MINS.

The theme of racial inequality is the purpose of this drab Indian film. Unfortunately, in telling the story of a rich man's daughter who marries a poor professor, it trails off into a tedious collection of silly misunderstandings. The couple part, and when the wife later finds a new significance in the holy words from the Veda (spoken at the Hindu marriage ceremony), she goes back to her husband only to find he has disappeared.

The conflicts are slight and hardly justified, reality is barely suggested, and the emotions seldom touched by this slow film. Prat.

Saladin

Moscow, July 16.

A Lotus Film production for the Egyptian State Cinema Commission. Directed by Youssef Chanine. Screenplay, Youssef Al Sebai; camera, Eastmancolor), Wadid Serry; music Francesco Lavagnino. At Moscow Film Fest. Running time, 180 MINS.

Saladin ..... Ahmed Mazhar
Virginia ..... Nadia Loufti
Richard of England ..... Salah Zulficar

Here we see the Crusades from the Arab point of view. They are the heroes—the English, French and Spanish are the villains—and they justify this attitude. This three-hour, costly Egyptian epic is a revealing production in many ways. Judged on the same level as the average Hollywood and Italian "spear and sandal" epic, it's superior in technique, story, authenticity and vigorous acting. Its makers, having learned from Hollywood, naturally follow a melodramatic and often absurd course. But their firm belief in the power of love, the uselessness of war and the dignity of the Arab people cannot be denied.

The narrative forcefully reminds Christians of the horrors they have committed in the name of Jesus Christ, who himself preached

First Sci-Fi Fest at Trieste

"X"-The Man With X-Ray Eyes
(COLOR)

Slick programmer with science fiction mixed with chase scenes; treats too many aspects skimpily but has exploitation handles.

Trieste, July 16.

American International release of James H. Nicholson-Samuel Z. Arkoff production. Stars Ray Milland; features Diana Van Der Vlis, Don Rickles, Harold J. Stone, John Hoyt. Directed by Roger Corman. Screenplay by Robert Dillon from original screenplay by Ray Russell; camera (Eastmancolor), Floyd Crosby; editor, Anthony Carras. At Trieste Science-Fiction Film Fest. Running time, 80 MINS.

Dr. Xavier ..... Ray Milland
Diane ..... Diana Van De Vlis
Sam ..... Harold J. Stone
Crane ..... Don Rickles
Dr. Benson ..... John Hoyt

American International has enough exploitation handles in this sci-fi thriller, with some philosophic aspects and more suggestive and justified nudy-comico scenes to have this shaping a good programmer. Film has fine technical assets, color and Ray Milland as a name.

Basically its the plot where the scientist tampers with the unknown and is severely punished in the end. Ray Milland is a doctor who has devised a drug that he thinks will allow men's eyes to see infinitely more.

He tries it on himself when he is refused a grant to continue experiments on animals. He at first is put out of commission by a blinding light but then can see inside human tissue and through clothes. This permits him to visit a party where the women are nude to him (but this is kept to bare limbs and shoulders). But it also has enough suggestiveness for those wanting kicks rather than story.

Things get worse as he kills a friend inadvertently, forcing the doctor to hide out in a carnival as a mindreader. A girl who believes in him tries to help and they go off to work on some antidote. But winning money via seeing through cards at Las Vegas has a well-done police chase and his ending up at a revivalist meeting.

There are many interesting comic, dramatic and philosopical ideas are touched on but treated only on the surface. However, director Roger Corman keeps this moving and Ray Milland is competent as the doomed man while others are adequate if only stereotype figures. Special effects on his prism-eye world, called Spectarama, are good if sometimes repetitive.

In short, an above average sci-fi thriller with a better technical envelope to pay off commensurately. Mosk.

The Amphibious Man
(RUSSIAN-COLOR)

Trieste, July 16.

Sovexport release of Lenfilm production. With K. Korieniev, M. Virzinskaya. Directed by Y. Kasancki. Screenplay, A. Blajaev, Kasancki from book by Blajaev; music, Tirentev. At Trieste Film Fest. Running time, 100 MINS.

Sea Devil ..... K. Korieniev
Alicia ..... M. Virzinskaya

Legend, romaitic love, melodrama, adventure, folklore and science fiction are adroitly mixed in this Russo Sovcolor opus. It's naivite is okay via its folksy feeling. This could well be a specialized dualer abroad if its deceptive simplicity may make it more difficult for arty houses.

In some mythical Latino country, a scientist has turned his only son into an amphibious man who lurks in the waters near a little town and frightens pearl divers who dub him the Sea Devil. One day, he saves the comely daughter of an old fisherman from a shark and falls in love. But she is promised to an evil overseer of the divers by the father. And she marries the evil one. It seems the amphibious man also can walk about on land as a seemingly ordinary mortal.

Direction has a romantic flair and displays fine work with the cavorting scenes under the sea, and the Devil's trip into town which is strange and new to him. This basically is good moppet item, too, as well as entertaining for adults.

The scientist had hoped to found a brace of new people who would be completely free but realizes that the world is not ready for this yet.

Color is good, the underwater scenes are expertly done and the story fine except for too much forced plotting at the end. A successful adventure opus is the tag for this. Mosk.

The Celestial Brothers
(RUSSIAN-COLOR)

Trieste, July 16.

Mosfilm production and release. Direction, editing, lensing and compilation by A. Gostiev in Sovcolor. At Trieste Sci-Fi Film Fest. Running time, 70 MINS.

Documentary depicts the training, space flights and reception of the two Soviet cosmonauts, Nikolaiev and Popivic, who orbited together in space last year. It is of interest in its look at the preparation and the footing within the capsules in the space conscious age.

But this needs shearing of its excess propaganda aspects and the repetitive footage of the two men at play. In this form, it could be an okay supporting film for special use abroad as well as possibly for tele.

Both are shown under the severe duress of space tests of noisy lights and sounds, weightlessness, parachute jumps and physical training. Then the blast off, with rockets concealed for military purposes, shots of them in the capsule and the mighty welcome of the Russo people and Premier Khrushchev's kisses. Color is good and the men come over well in their simplicity and dedication.

Shots of Lenin worked in for extra patriotic note, their visit to his mausoleum, and some speeches can be cut. It is technically good in spite of the mixture of news footage, handheld camera work and improvised aspects. Mosk.

Trieste, July 16.

Czech State Film production and release. With Zdenek Stepanek, Radovan Lukavsky, Dana Medricka, Miroslav Machacek, Frantisek Smolik, Jiri Vrstala, Marcella Martinkova. Directed by Jindrich Polak. Screenplay, Pavel Juracek, Polak; camera, Jan Kalis; editor, Josef Dobrichovsky. At Trieste Sci-Fi Film Fest. Running time, 90 MINS.

Vladimir ..... Zdenek Stepanek
Mac Donald ..... Radovan Lukavsky
Nina ..... Dana Medricka
Marcel ..... Miroslav Machacek
Anthony ..... Frantisek Smolik
Erik ..... Jiri Vrstala

This rates as a finely made futuristic look at space travel. If it has a few shafts of propaganda, this Eastern Bloc pic is otherwise refreshingly free of dogma. In these days of space travel it bodes something of dualer or specialized use abroad. Its close quarter work and solid special effects and theme also make this loom a video bet in foreign spots.

A space ship is on its way to explore a new planet in some future time when there is evidently a one-world government judging from the many differing nationality names on board. But all, of course, speaks only Czech. There is space fatigue and adventures as a radiating star induces sleep in the crew and a discovered derelict space ship is found to have live atom bombs on board.

This last is explored by two men on the space ship and it is revealed as probably American, due to dice and money clasped in the hands of a dead man. Talk has it that the 20th Century had the Hiroshima bombing but also some great men and things.

But the main appeal is the inventive interiors of the ship, Ikarie XBI, the method of eating, a comical robot and the one man who goes mad from space claustrophobia. Direction keeps the human relations on a simple almost schemate plane and the mixed female and male crew do not have any jealousy trouble.

But aside from this, the impeccable ship interiors, the space efforts on leaving the ship to examine the derelict and the gleaming workings keep this interesting despite the shallow personages. It is technically firstrate. Acting is good within its conventionally geared people. A grain more of inventiveness would have made this one of the better sci-fi pix. Mosk.

NOVEL NEW FILM FEST: SCI-FI

Footnotes To Moscow Fest

By the end of the first week 481 journalists had been accredited to the Moscow festival, more than half of them coming from overseas . . . In theory, housing all fest guests in one huge hotel should make for ease of communication. In theory. But the huge Moskva Hotel, like all the others in the Soviet Union, dispenses with the facility of a telephone switchboard, but there's a do-it-yourself dialing service, which can only function when one knows the room number of the person to be contacted. Otherwise, meetings are a chancy affair, usually in the vast dining hall at meal times. . . . United Artists set the social ball rolling with an intimate supper party after the screening of "The Great Escape." Ilya Lopert, who has a fluent command of the Russian lingo, organized a lavish caviar-cum-vodka meal in the House of Journalists. . . . The Hungarians followed the next night, after the showing of "The Song of Iron," with a midnight buffet at the Moskva. There was no shortage of caviar or vodka at this shindig, either. . . . With the ruble worth a dollar, fest visitors are astounded at the high cost of living, though it doesn't seem to deter the Muscovites who crowd around the stores and cheerfully stand in line to buy everything that's going—but not at bargain prices. Soft drinks in the Palace of Congress, where the fest films are unspooled, can cost up to a ruble. . . Conversely, Cuban cigars are widely on display, and despite the artificiality of the rate of exchange, are moderately priced.

One of the more frustrating aspects of the fest is the lack of adequate documentation. Trying to get a synopsis and cast list of a film in competition, particularly in English, is like asking for gold. Many reviewers found themselves spending more time searching for the credits than in actually seeing the films. . Among the many pix in the non-competitive sector was the Cannes prizewinner, "This Sporting Life," which Continental is distributing in the U.S. . . . Edgar Anstey, one of Britain's leading documentary directors, served on the short film jury. . . . Film fans, it seems, are the same the world over. There's a constant crowd day and night outside the Moscow Hotel to catch a glimpse of the stars, but they behave in a most orderly manner and do not make a mad scramble for autographs. Instead, they applaud anyone they recognize. . . . Among the personalities getting this treatment were Geraldine Page, Georgia Moll, Simone Signoret and Yves Montand, and a host of artists from the Eastern European bloc.

At the half way mark, the festival had a day of rest from films, and organized a day's outing along the Moscow canal. George Stevens Jr. fascinated the Russians on this trip with his color Polaroid camera. They were astounded at the instant print service. . . . Hitting back at Izvestia, which beefed that the lyrics of "West Side Story" had been deliberately omitted when the pic was first shown, Stanley Kramer read the lyrics at the second showing at the Kremlin Palace. He made it clear that they had nothing to conceal. . . . The French Embassy in Moscow invited a contingent of fest guests for the Bastille Day ceremonies. . . . Associated British Pictures, via Robert Clark, Dr. Eric Fletcher, M.P., and Macgregor Scott, tossed a private luncheon in honor of Madame Ekaterina Furtseva, the Soviet Minister of Culture, and Alexei Davidov, the boss of Sovexport Films . . . J. Jay Frankel was also around the fest, but living in splendid isolation at the Sovietskaya, away from the main crowds at the Moscow. . . . The fest bulletin, Sputnik, is published daily in Russian, and in English and French on alternate days.

Francis Lederer, now director of ANTA's Academy of Performing Arts in Los Angeles still possesed of charm and presence, is here to see films and study the work of the State Institute for Theatre Arts. . . . Not only were posters advertising the festival all over town, there will be a special postage stamp issued.

Politics intruded: the Chinese delegation didn't come and its film was withdrawn. The Russians are apparently extremely worried over the Chinese issue. . . . Sergei Bondachuk is using the Kremlin buildings as his "backlot" for his mammoth production of "War and Peace." This should cut down his costs! . . . The Russians were, mainly, pleased with Vidor's "War and Peace" and think Audrey Hepburn made a perfect Natasha.

Thomas Guttierres Alea of Cuba didn't come after all and his place on the jury for shorts and documentaries was taken by Octavio Cortasar. . . . Alexander Karaganov (USSR) added to the jury for features and Asrula Sani (Indonesia) added to the shorts jury panel. . . . The Press Club is adorned with caricatures of film people and guests by painter, Alexander Sokolov. . . . The Russian delegation consists of 18 members of the Organizing Committee of the Assn. of Film Makers of the USSR, lead by Sergei Gerassimov, and another 25 delegates from the 15 "republics" . . . nothing is perfect after all: in the new Palace of Congresses the designers thought of everything—except that everytime a door opens during a performance the light from outside streams in! . . . Kuwait has now entered the festival with the short "Feast at Kuwait" making the number of participating countries 56, if we count right.

Hootenanny, Then Gospel Music Craze, Latest For Fad-Riding Sam Katzman

Hollywood, July 23.

Sam Katzman is hopping onto latest flush of excitement in the folk music field. Producer is now in the midst of filming "Hootenanny Hoot" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. He has lined up The Brothers Four, Gateway Trio, Judy Henske, Sheb Wooley, Johnny Cash, Joe and Eddie and Cathy Taylor to perform some 13 songs in the picture. Folk artists collectively have record sales of 25,000,000. Additionally, Wooley and musical director Freddie Karger have composed the title song, which Wooley will sing in the picture.

"Hootenanny," consistent with Katzman's record of low cost films, will be shot on a $500,000 budget. (He's produced more than 500 pix since 1930.) Not stopping with "Hootenanny," Katzman is also prepping a film with writer Robert B. Gordon on the Gospel music craze, which he dopes as the next trend. Previously, Katzman was firster with rock 'n 'roll, calypso, twist and other momentary entertainment whirls.

Reminiscing to VARIETY, producer recalled his first film of major note 25 years ago was "His Private Secretary," made at a cost of $9,300 and sold through states rights. He got $16,000 back on one playdate alone.

Starting at William Fox as an office boy in 1916, Katzman ended up a director and, after 13 years, "I found out I didn't have a steady job." He decided then he would never work for anybody again and, although his association with Columbia has been lengthy, it has been on a fully independent status. Previously, he had been with Monogram, then Allied Artists when the name was changed. Pictures turned out during this time were bread-and-butter moneymakers, made modestly but bringing back not so modest grosses.

TRIESTE, ITALY, IN INAUGURAL

By GENE MOSKOWITZ

Trieste, Italy, July 23.

It might seem continental Europe hardly needs more "festivals," of any kind. The terrain is literally dotted with film, music, arts and mixed festivals. Indeed the festival is the only, and the end, idea of resorts anxious to promote greater tourism. With that much prelude, herewith a report of the first Science Fiction Film Festival, staged here July 6-14 without the blessing of the Federation of International Film Producer Assns.

Trieste's main value inheres in specialization. The bigger film festivals (like Venice, its Adriatic shore neighbor) are broader, more cultural and not receptive to anything so commercial as "exploitation" features.

Another novelty here was the decision of the jury to recognize no difference between a feature and a short. Hence the grand prix, the Golden Spaceship (sic), was split equally between a longie and a shortie.

Short notice given as to the Sci-Fi Fest had auspices accepting old with new product. Japan which has a notable production of sci-fi pix, was conspicuously absent. Subtitles were missing but breakin as for "celebrities," only two people involved with film production showed, and they were both American, namely, James Nicholson, head of American International, and Bill Levy his European rep.

Not being member of the Motion Picture Export Assn., belonging to FIFPA, AIP could enter this affair. Company world-preemed a new pic "X-The Man With the X-Ray Eyes," starring Ray Milland and directed by Roger Corman, as well as sending an older one "At-

Los Angeles, July 23.

National General Corp. will pay a 4% stock dividend Sept. 20 to stockholders of record Aug. 20, marking first time that company has declared a dividend since 1960 and another milestone in its steadily increasing earning performance. Failure to pay any dividends has been frequently raised at some of the recent stormy NGC stockholder meetings. Firm has 3,313,363 common shares currently outstanding.

Eugene V. Klein, company prez, stated, "The stock dividend is an effort to enable our shareholders to participate in the continuation of our development." The company now, he assured, "is in a position to consider a dividend policy on a continuing basis."

Exec also stated this does not rule out the possibility of cash dividends "when practical." At present, NGC is using its cash to implement its diversification program.

National produced earnings of $1,700,000 or 53c per share on sales of $23,700,000 for first half of fiscal 1963, ended last March, according to Klein, who indicated expectations for substantial gains throughout the year.

Company is adding a nationwide system of closed-circuit theatre color entertainment and plans entry into production and distribution of motion pix in its increased diversification program.

Yanks Put Best Foot Forward; Stevens: 'Moscow Fest Very Special'; Emergent Lands' Amateur Films

By HAROLD MYERS

Moscow, July 23.

Because the Moscow film festival is an event of the greatest political importance, and because it also has considerable cinematic interest, the American film industry thought it was worth a try to play them in their own ball park—and win, That is how George Stevens Jr., of the U. S. Information Agency summed up the decision to send a delegation that was not only powerful in numerical terms, but loaded with distinguished names in all phases of Yank film making.

Recalling that at the two previous fests American participation was far less than distinguished, Stevens said the festival provided the ideal opportunity to show the Russian people the character of American films, and the thinking of American film makers. There had been many opportunities to achieve this objective, such as press and tv interviews, press conferences, and the actual presentation of films both in and out of competition.

Stevens is convinced that the United States has dominated this fest, not alone by the stature of the delegation but by the quality of the features unspooled here. Of the official entry, "The Great Escape," he is satisfied that in all the circumstances this was the best film available, and the reviews in the Moscow press had been mainly encouraging. Although Soviet Culture criticized it for being a too light-hearted treatment of war, Izvestia took that paper to task for reviewing it in that vein, while the official fest organ, "Sputnik," clearly labelled it an anti-fascist picture. And that, of course, is an accolade from the Russians.

The most successful of the non-competitive Hollywood films were undoubtedly "Some Like It Hot" and "West Side Story," and that illustrates the wide variance in the tastes of the Soviet cinemagoing public. "Judgment at Nuremberg," shown privately by Stanley Kramer to members of the jury, was immediately invited by the Russians to be shown at the Palace of Congress in the Kremlin last night (Mon.) after the close of the festival, to an audience of film workers and Muscovites.

On the basis of his first hand observations, Stevens believes there is a need for a reexamination of the type of films offered the Russians under the Cultural Exchange plan. Because of the fact that motion pictures reach the mass audience—far more so than live shows, concerts, or even books—the film aspect of the Exchange is of major importance, and has done more to stimulate curiosity about the American way of life than any other medium. It was hard to agree a cut and dried formula, but he would favor two simple rules: (1) never to offer an inept film; and (2) always show the best in picture making.

Kramer Praised

Stevens was most gratified with the cooperation he had received from the entire American delegation. Stanley Kramer, who served on the jury, had done a great service for Hollywood, by his articulate observations, and blunt and forthright comments wherever necessary. The stars such as Danny Kaye, Tony Curtis, Geraldine Page, Susan Strasberg, Susan Oliver and Shelley Winters, had all contributed towards making America the dominant force in the festival, as well as adding the so-necessary glamor and excitement to the proceedings. There appears to be little doubt, too, that Kramer's personal stature had prevented the jury from making decisions solely on idealistic values.

The main failing of the festival has been in the over-abundance of events, both in and out of competition. The number of official e-

Dialog between VARIETY man attending the Moscow Film Festival and the press documentation distribution centre.

"Do you have a credit sheet for the Indonesian film?"

"Are you Indonesian?"

"No."

"Well, are you specially interested in Indonesia."

"No, I would just like a credit sheet."

"Well, if you aren't interested in Indonesia, why do you insist on getting the information."

At this point the VARIETY man bowed to their "logic" and made a dignified exit.

United Artists Plot Far Ahead as '66

The film business may be getting like the automotive industry where they work years in advance on new models. At United Artists, execs are presently working on plans for 1966 filming and releasing, with over 20 "major productions" already blueprinted well into 1965.

For one thing, this gives the company time. This all-valuable asset enables lengthy preparation of adpub drives and marketing development. Pix like the company's "McLintock," which has been seen in final form weeks ago but which isn't set for release until Thanksgiving, exemplify this idea, along with such as "Dr. No," which opened in London in October but wasn't brought to the States until April when it began rolling up sturdy biz.

Another advantage is inventory. UA currently has one of the largest inventories around, along with Universal which also has been building up a collection of profit-potential pix for release over the year. U too is planning well ahead, with more writers and producers currently working on projects there than ever have been since the company switched to a policy of fewer releases with an emphasis on quality.

Of course there are exceptions to this hold-for-release idea like UA's $8,500,000 Stanley Kramer production "It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World" which opens in November. But a company pushes on one like this right from the start anyway. In this realm too incidentally, George Stevens' "Greatest Story Ever Told" will wind lensing by this Friday (26) and will be released in the first half of 1964.

The point remains that, once a company gets ahead of itself, there's time to do things like work on the popularizing of a musical score and other detail, yet important selling tools. Plus, with the cushion of inventory, the pressure is somewhat taken off a company to get a picture into release as soon as possible to have something playing. All of this makes execs at UA and Universal very happy these days. Even though pix don't always work out as anticipated, the execs always know there are plenty more where the last came from.

the doctrines of non-violence, of their intolerance in assuming that all Arabs yere "infidels" not fit to be trusted with Jerusalem. However, the film is never disrespectful of Christianity.

Its characters are clearly cut according to conventions, yet take on a depth of feeling and an understanding of humanity. Saladin, played by Ahmed Mazhar, is noble and wise. King Richard is mighty, vain and ambitious. He wants Jerusalem not so much for the good of the Christian people but to bring glory to himself. Oddly enough, considering the Suez affair, the French and the Spanish get the back-of-the-hand treatment while Richard is portrayed with sympathy and intelligence as a man with some doubts as to the justice of his mission, but overcome by his pride. He is excellently played by Salah Zulficar.

There is not an excessive amount of dialogue and what there is does not mince words or wasfe time. All is fire and movement, swords clash, and blood flows over the screen as the battles move from sea to desert and into castles. And the love affair? Like everything else in this picture, it's the opposite to Hollywood: an Arab Christian is in love with an English maid!

There is not much style to the direction, being a mixture of influence, but it has many clever effects and good moments. Lavagnino's score is always part of the action, expressive and lyrical. The camera work is fluent and alive. The whole is an interesting indication of things to come from other "independent countries" making films about history and their own past. Prat.

Those Who Take Risks
(AUSTRIAN)

Moscow, July 16.

A Schonbrunn Film production, Vienna. With Karl Schonbeck, Sieghard Rupp, Paul Dahlke, Ewa Kerbler, Marienne Rahn, Alvy Becker, Ingeborg Gruber. Directed by Edwin Zbonek. Screenplay, Helmut Andios, Zbonek. At Moscow Film Fest. Running time, 96 MINS.

Here is an Austrian film which criticizes the West German film industry. Young girls are lured into pix, and deliberately involved in scandalous goings on for the sake of publicity.

The story appears to want to say stern and meaningful things about moral standards, about newspapers which print sensational stories and the public which wallows in such yarns. But it seems to get lost in a peep show, emerging with a final statement that if girls didn't do this sort of thing the situation wouldn't exist.

The girls are all beautiful in face and figure. And the film, if it is to be believed, is likely to raise the question: what did they do to get into the picture? Prat.

Death Called Engelchen
(CZECH)

Moscow, July 16.

Czescoslovensky Film Export production and release. With Jan Kacer, Eva Polagova, Martin Ruzek, Blazena Holisova. Directed by Jan Kada, Elmar Klos. Screenplay, Milos Faber; camera, Rudolf Milic. At Moscow Film Fest. Running time, 160 MINS.

The obsession of the occupied countries with war films is understandable, and this Czech entry at the Moscow festival is one of the better kind. It is intelligently made, has several powerful situations, and a number of interesting characters. But this needs more editing if it is to make the grade in the West. It rates as a possible artie presentation.

The film, which is also known as "For We, Too, Do Not Forgive," is a story of the partisans fighting the Nazi occupationists, and is told in a series of flashbacks. Pic begins on the last day of the war when one of the most active and determined partisans is shot in the spine, and ends up paralyzed in hospital.

The hero's dreams and nightmares are the instrument for introducing the flashbacks, which vividly recall their more exciting and perilous experiences. There is one flashback, for example, when the partisans prepare to ambush Nazis who are accompanied by tracker dogs. First, they have to shoot the dogs, and then they annihilate the enemy.

There's another in which two Nazi deserters are picked up by the Partisans, and then voluntarily take up arms against their former comrades. In another, a female Partisan, who had been forced into prostitution by the Nazis, shoots one of the German officers in cold blood. There are many more, indeed far too many, particularly in the latter half. And this makes for some needless repetitive action.

The Engelchen of the title is the Nazi commandant, and the most hated of all the Germans. It is the thought that this officer is still alive that inspires the hero to recovery, and he leaves the hospital with only one thought in his mind —revenge.

The film is technically first-rate and the cast sustains a high all-round standard of acting. There is more shading than usual in the characterizations, which adds enormously to the acceptability of the subject. Myro.

Signs of the Zodiac
(MEXICAN)

Moscow, July 16.

A Section De Technicos del STPC production. With Kitty de Hoyos, Angelica Maria, Pilar Souza, Blanca de Castejon, Mario Garcia, Luis Bayardo, Enrique Aguilar, Eugenia Rios, Martha Zamora. Directed by Sergio Vejar. Written by Sergio Magana; camera, Augustin Jimenez; music, Carlos Jimenez. At Moscow Film Fest. Running time, 96 MINS.

A nasty piece of "social realism" from a union which talks of making better films for Mexico. Pretentious, cliche-ridden, boring and badly acted, it concerns three families in a slum all of whom come to a dismal end. The story serves no useful purpose no matter in what light it is considered. Prat.

The Boys

Moscow, July 9.

Finnish State Film Studios production. With Pentti Torkainen, Matti Louri, Um Saunio, Liisa Nevalainen. Directed, written by Mikko Niskanen. Camera (b&w) Olavi Tuomi; music, Einar Englund. At Moscow Film Fest. Running time, 96 MINS.

Niskanen's first film is a war story that is different in that it shows a country (Finland) which was occupied by the Germans as allies. The point the story tries to make, none too clearly or quickly, is that war is degrading. This is illustrated by the effect that wartime life — without discipline and guidance — has on a group of boys neglected by their parents.

Film is well photographed and naturally acted, but is only a collection of simple incidents rather than a well-told story. Prat.

The Shore of Waiting

Moscow, July 16.

A Missiquiei production. With Dzafare, Foruzan, Fardin, Tahmine. Directed and written by Siamek Yasami. Camera, Enayatolla Famin; music, Morteza Hannane. At Moscow Film Fest. Running time, 100 MINS.

This primitive melodrama from a new filmmaking country concerns a teacher whose rich father has driven the fishermen from their beaches. He has 'bought' the sea. The son leaves his father to build a school and educate the much put-upon peasants. At the same time he saves his beloved from degradation and beatings at the hands of a violent suitor.

Artificial and familiar, the best to be said is that it is a start for Iran. Perhaps the villagers will enjoy it. Prat.

Twelve Chairs
(CUBAN)

Moscow, July 16.

Margarita Alexandre production for National Institute of Cinematography. Directed by Tomas Gutierrez Alea. Screenplay, Ugo Ulive, Tomas based on novel by Ilya Ilf and Eugene Petrov; camera, Ramon F. Suarez; editor, Mario Gonzalez; music, Juan Blanco. At Moscow Film Fest. Running time, 91 MINS.

Oscar	Reinaldo Miravalles
Le Cure	Rene Sanchez
Gertrude	Pillin Vallejo
Ernesto	Idalberto Delgado

Here is a not unsuccessful attempt by Cubans to transpose the popular post-revolutionary Russian novel by Ilf and Petrov to the immediate aftermath of their own revolution. The story is a satirical study of the revolutionaries and aristocrats and how greed affects them both. To some extent it's surprising that it goes so far regarding wealthy people. In one scene the man deprived of his wealth says that he wants to get to the U. S. because "it has a truly responsible democratic government."

The story follows a greedy merchant, an artful revolutionary and a shifty priest in their desperate efforts to find an English chair in which a wealthy old woman had hidden her jewels shortly before she expired. The director uses silent comedy techniques to add to the humor of the whole, while the actors give genuine comic interpretations. Prat.

The Young Woman of Bai-Sao
(VIET-NAM)

Moscow, July 16.

Hanoi Feature Film Studio production. With Tra Giang, Tran Phuong, Ba Du, Minh Tri, Le Van Phuc, Minh Dang. Directed by Phan Ky Nam. Screenplay, Bui Duc Ai; camera, Nguyen Khanh Dzu; music, Tran Ngoc Xuong. At Moscow Film Fest. Running time, 120 MINS.

In Indonesia's "Toha, Hero of Bandung," it was the Dutch oppressors who were getting all the hate. In thie similar but better made film from Viet-Nam, a young widow changes from a shy girl into an important political figure, and it is the French who are the vile ones. These "aggressors" raped her, killed her husband, took her child and burned her village.

Although all this took place 10 years ago and the French have since gone, the film is said to be still up-to-date as U.S. Imperialists are following in the steps of the French colonialists, "turning our beautiful country into a hot-bed of war."

The events are simply told and acted with a naive charm and undeniable sincerity. Prat.

A Stranger In the City

Moscow, July 16.

A Be-Ya production. With Goksel Arsoy, Nufufer Aydan, Directed by Halit Refag. Screenplay, Vedat Turkali; camera, Cetin Gurbop. At Moscow Film Fest. Running time, 110 MINS.

An old emotional melodrama, the unbelievable plot tells of a mining engineer who returns to Turkey to work in the coal mine of his native town, and also marry his childhood sweetheart. On her parent's insistence, she has married a wealthy but black-hearted fellow who throws her dog over the cliff. Local politicos spread false rumors about the engineer and the wife having a scandalous liasion.

What with the mine caving in, the birth of a baby, a boy being run over, a few brothel scenes and the hero getting beaten, there's never a dull moment. Husband finally gets biffed on the head and thrown over the cliff, leaving loving couple to spend a more restful future together.

Quickly and poorly made, confusing and unreal, this preachment against intolerance has a gusto which sees it through. It is reported to be rather daring in subject matter for Turkish films. Prat.

Stories On A Train
(HUNGARIAN)

Moscow, July 16.

A Hunnia Film Studio producton. With Ildiko Pecsi, Adam Siptes, Imre Sinkevics, Laslo Banidi, Josef Madares, Istvan Stankos, Attila Lere, Josef Kauuki. Directed by Tomas Reni. Screenplay, Reni, camera, Otto Forgacs; music, Geza Berki. At Moscow Film Fest. Running time, 102 MINS.

This train takes a familiar track. Six workers are travelling together and they begin to tell stories about an unusual companion they once worked with on different construction projects. The narrative then flashes back to the actual events in factory life. At the end, one man doubts the existence of such a worker. He happens to be on the train and reveals himself to much rugged laughter.

Apart from being an interesting glimpse into construction work going on in Hungary, all of these anecdotes are far too long and hardly worth the telling. The players seldom emerge as definite characters; the whole is unimaginative. Prat.

Inside Stuff—Pictures

After a week in London, Frances and Sam Goldwyn head to the Kaiserhof Hotel, Bad Gastein, Germany, for the waters and thence to Paris to supervise the opening of his "Porgy and Bess". Goldwyn threw away a line, just before they sailed last week, that in all his more-than-50 years of picturemaking he "somehow managed to produce films with English moors ('Wuthering Heights'), Tahitian storms, Sahara monsoons, Continental European atmosphere in Hollywood without having to go overseas for any 'authentic' backgrounds".

John A. Goodno, Palace Theatre, Huntington, W. Va., advises he sent a contribution to the Will Rogers Hospital (c/o Buena Vista's Irving Ludwig) relative to perhaps a memorial for F. J. A. McCarthy, former Universal sales exec who died recently. Said he feels the hospital needs more support.

Wall Street conjecture is that Paramount will cover its annual $2 dividend from operating earnings—and, further, will pick up the equivalent of $2 per share in cap gains via sale of Ampex and Fairchild holdings.

He and Kamen agreed that Brando is sincere in the anti-segregation opinions voiced. Kamen thought the film star is "quite an individual." To a question by Patricia Fontaine, who had raised the interrogation of performers' speaking on social and political matters, Kamen replied that he did not see how Brando can further his career by speaking out. Filmsters Still Sold on Daily Press

Radio Rates But Considerable Resistance Continues Against TV—Those For It Charge 'Backwardness'

Changing public habits in recent years have brought tv and radio greater and greater prominence, especially as far as the media which captures the most attention of the 9-19 age bracket. Yet, although some distributors have gradually been coming around to the notion of putting more concentration on radio-tv advertising, it's been charged by distrib execs that same of the circuits and other exhibs refuse to recognize audio-video as a selling tool, much less an important one. They cling to conviction that dailies are the front line of sell.

"They'll share co-op cases in papers and to some extent on radio but its almost impossible to get cooperation for tv," is the way one distrib ad-pub exec put it. The distrib is forced to spend all of his own money, or nearly, it's charged, despite the fact that it has been rather clearly demonstrated that without this 9-19 bracket an all-out smash can't happen.

Eight to 10 times as much is spent by exhibs in paper advertising than in radio and tv, it's alleged, although the opinion is voiced that papers are the third least effective medium. This is labeled an exaggeration by some but, nonetheless, radio and video are recognized as hefty factors in many quarters.

It is also pointed out that there are some distribs that are just as guilty of this alleged backwardness as certain circuits. By tradition, the paper has always been the major place to lay on the advertising but times have changed. It's noted that it is often these tradition-steeped operations which are suffering the most currently while the more progressive companies are swinging. This advertising idea is but one example but it has been proven time and again that tv and radio are big b.o. factors.

Several execs got their eyes opened during the recent Gotham newspaper blackout when they were forced to go on tv and radio and discovered that it was a successful seller. But most wrote it off to the captive audience forced to watch because he had no papers. Others, however, stayed with the media and have been using it effectively. There was considerable speculation at the time of the strike as to what patterns advertising would take when the papers came back. But they needen't have worried, one exec commented, because the "traditions that govern these things are too strong in some places."

The question being asked by several distrib ad men around town is "when are these guys going to wake up to the fact that more people are listening to radio and watching tv by five times than are reading papers?" Particularly singled out by one exec are RKO and Loew's which, it's charged, refuse to recognize tv at all, except in a few isolated cases. Distribs claim that they are losing money with this type of situation both because they have to spend more on advertising and because they don't reach the areas they want to fully unless they step out of the coop pattern.

It has taken some distribs a while to come around to the radio-tv idea and some aren't there yet. It's hoped by the progressive distribs, some of which are now operating on a 50-50 airwave-newspaper pattern, that they will be able to get more action for the coop plans from reluctant exhibs but they don't see much hope in the immediate future. "How many losses are they going to have to sustain before they wise up," one disgruntled ad exec complained.

Technicolor Projectionists Reduced By IA Sanction

Hollywood, July 23.

Technicolor, as a result of a change in operations in processing color film, has pinkslipped nine projectionists, all members of Local 165. Total of 31 boothmen still remain on payroll to handle all projection.

Move, according to Tech spokesman, was reached with approval of Richard F. Walsh, prexy of IATSE, after it was explained that operational transition required fewer booth personnel.

'Gidget Goes Rome' Safely

National Legion of Decency has given a Class A, Section I rating (morally unobjectionable for general patronage) to Columbia's "Gidget Goes to Rome."

Getting a Class A, Section II (morally unobjectionable for adults and adolescents) were Paramount's "All the Way Home," Trans-Lux's French import "The Burning Court" and Metro's "The Day and the Hour."

Hotel Expansions Figure in Loew's 39-Week Tally

Loew's Theatres for the 39 weeks ended May 31 had net income of $971,900, equal to 38c per share of common stock, compared to a net of $1,661,900, or 62c per share, for the comparable period last year.

Gross revenues were well up in the new period, due to hotel expansion, amounting to $48,286,000, compared with $29,619,000 the previous year. Depreciation in the new period was $3,752,000 and income taxes were $606,000, compared with, in 1962, $2,273,000 and $1,706,000, respectively.

Third quarter also was off. This period, which ended May 31, brought earnings of $289,800, or 12c per share, compared with a net for the comparable period last year of $493,300, or 18c per share.

PROMO PRIME DELAYING 'PARIS WHEN IT SIZZLES'

Paramount is holding back on its release of "Paris When It Sizzles" until early 1964, rather than the originally-scheduled 1963 distribution, to provide the company with that much more additional time to plot elaborate ad-pub and sales plans.

Charles Boasberg, president of Par Film Distributing, said in a private memo to regional and branch managers that he had spent a few days with producers Richard Quine and George Axelrod and then came to the decision about delaying the release.

Film, a comedy starring Audrey Hepburn and William Holden, is looked to by Par as one of the big ones (first screening was just held) and for this reason the braintrust felt the need for Tiffany bookings and more extensive campaign.

United Artists Sells 'Irma' Away From Schine

Albany, July 23.

Playing of "Irma La Douce" at Sylvan Leff's Town Theatre in Watertown confirmed reports that United Artists had been selling away from the Schine Circuit.

Town, a first-run owned by an independent exhibitor living in Albany, and also operating two drive-ins outside Watertown, another near Amsterdam, as well as a pair of subsequent-runs in Utica, and first-run situations in Saratoga and Hudson, competes with Schine's Olympic and Avon in the Border City.

Town's date was one of the first for UA's blockbuster in the Albany exchange district. "Irma La Douce" is generally set for release in this area, during August. Incidentally, the stage version of comedy hit was presented at Colonie Summer Theatre, a fortnight ago, with Genevieve starred.

Eugene Tunick, Eastern-Canadian division sales manager for UA, and Robert Friedman, UA's Buffalo branch manager, were reported in Albany Wednesday (24), en route to Gloversville—home base of Schine Theatres—the next day.

Documentary Road To Theatrical Screen Due For Heavier Travelling

Gene Searchinger who, in partnership with Scudder Boyd heads Pendulum Productions, documentary producers, commented in New York recently that the factual-filmmakers may be looked for more and more to enter into theatrical work. The two fields no longer are so far apart. "We didn't know each other in past, and didn't eat in the same restaurants," he observed.

But television has given a new prominence (and recognition) to the documentarians and already several have turned out interesting and successful features. Documentary men have done "Hiroshima," "400 Blows" and "Mondo Cane." Searchinger himself has plans for a theatrical undertaking but must await clearances on a certain property he has in mind.

If the segue generally reaches trend proportions new cinematic techniques and approaches can be expected, according to Searchinger. This would be in the form of non-synchronous sound, three or four music themes at one time, but not drawn in all directions, and an abundance of intercutting. The sound angle, for example, as observed in one of Searchinger's recent pictures, might have heavy machinery on the screen accompanied by the trumpeting of elephants on the track. In other words the sound is not literal.

Editing is a key factor in documentary efforts. One of his half-hour films might have as many cuts as a two-hour feature, said Searchinger.

The economics are very distant from theatricals, too, stated the man who started out as a writer, then a director and then cameraman. He prefers to have money for time, rather than people, and when working abroad sans union dictates his technical crew comprises two members.

Searchinger left for Europe last week to get underway with an hour-long documentary for Philco via ABC-TV. This is to be a close-up on various festivals around the world, ranging from a wild blow-out (sports, drinking, rope swinging) in Westman Island, Iceland, to the Pamplona in Spain, Bastille Day in a small French town, an eating spree in Rome and the Film Fest in Venice. Coincidentally, his production of "The Human Element" will be a contender in the documentary sweepstakes at Venice.

Summer Adds Matinees To 'How West Was Won'

Detroit, July 23.

Extra performances of "How the West Was Won" have been scheduled at Music Hall because of increased sale of tickets from out-state Michigan and Canada. Additional matinees will be held on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 2 p.m. throughout the summer, terminating on Labor Day. These showings are in addition to regular matinees on Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday.

An accounting shows that after 19 weeks and 271 performances, 234,106 persons paid $447,000 at the boxoffice to see the Cinerama feature. Included in the total were 36,078 students who attended 32 special morning youth shows held during the period when schools were in session.

At the present time, "How the West Was Won" has grossed more in 19 weeks than "Search for Paradise" in 35 weeks and "The Wonderful World of the Brothers Grimm" in 31 weeks. It is expected to pass the 40 week total of "Windjammer" by Labor Day. Still champ, however, is "This Is Cinerama."

Garbo Still a Draw?

Minneapolis, July 23.

The name Greta Garbo may mean nothing to the present generation. However, bringing her back for the first time here within memory, the Ted Mann's Westgate did nice biz with the 1935 "Anna Karenina" (MGM).

It's one of the film oldies that MGM hasn't sold to television and in exploiting it the Westgate played up Garbo as its star.

Referee Finds For Tony Regan Slate In Disputed Screen Extras' Election

Hollywood, July 23.

Impartial referee in the disputed Screen Extras Guild election tossed out all five challenges entered by the conflicting factions, and thus in effect upheld the election of the indie slate headed by Tony Regan, who unseated Jeffrey Sayre as prexy. Regan group thus has five of six officer posts, and 12 of 34 board seats.

Nathan Cayton, retired chief judge of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, rejected two challenges from the Regan group, two from the Sayre-administration slate, and one from the board. Board challenge had to do with 89 ballots temporarily mislaid. Judge Cayton ruled there was no reason for invalidating these ballots or the election results, and they were counted during the three-day hearing. They didn't change the election outcome a bit.

Administration challenge accusing the Regan group of knowingly accepting financial support in the campaign from persons other than SEG members in good standing was tossed out, and the Regan group was completely exonerated of the charge. Judge Cayton also dismissed challenges that SEG's notice of election was proper; ruled that the Regan group's campaign handbills provided "no foundation for invalidating the election or disqualifying these candidates," and that the votes of SEG members in Frisco and Hawaii were properly counted by SEG.

As a result, certified election returns show Regan beat Sayre for a three-year term as prexy by vote of 1,178-915. Other results: First veepee: Bob Burrows, 893, Kenner G. Kemp, 858, and Guy Gifford Way, 309; Tex Brodus, with 1,651 votes, was unopposed for second veepee; Jack R. Clinton named third veepee, with 1,116, to 943 for Evelyn Ceder; John R. Albright elected recording secretary with 1,078, to 997 for Margaret Bacon; Joe Brooks chosen as treasurer, with 1,061 to 1,033 for Murray Pollack.

Directors elected for three-year terms: Brodus, 1,215 votes; Kit Carson, 1,140; Murray Pollack, 1,038; Margaret Bacon, 1,026; Chester Jones, 970; Hubert Kerns, 966; Robert Edmiston, 938; Bill Dyer, 934; Roydon Clark, 899; Tanya Somova, 873; Emile Avery, 872.

Newly-named officers and directors will take office at the next board meeting July 31. Attorney Jack Corinblit repped the Regan group, and Robert W. Gilbert, SEG, Sayre and other guild officers.

A unity plea was made following the decision, pitch coming from both Regan and Sayre.

Decor by The Mrs.

Pittsburgh, July 23.

The Forum, Pitt's newest art house, was opened last Tues. (16) before critics, civic dignitaries and tradesters. It's a 378-seat house done in Roman motif, designed by Reggie Stern, wife of Ernest Stern, who is president of Associated Theatres, operators of the house and 29 others in the Tri-State area.

There is an air of luxury and intimacy from the lectern type boxoffice, through the expensively decorated lobby, off to the modern lounge at the right of the lobby and to the theatre itself on the left of the lobby. The theatre is heavily carpeted from wall to wall and allows plenty of space between the upholstered reclining seats.

"Mouse on the Moon" (UA) is the house's opening feature film.

Shore Paying Soviet $300,000 For 'War & Peace'

Moscow, July 23.

The biggest ever single film deal between a Yank distrbutor and the Soviets under the Cultural Exchange program was wrapped up in Moscow last week during the film festival.

Sig Shore finalised negotiations, which had been in progress since the beginning of the year, for U.S. distribution rights to "War and Peace," which is now being filmed by Sergei Bondarchuk. The price, it is understood, is in the region of $300,000.

The exceptionally high price is calculated on the basis that the production will probably run to four or five episodes, each of full length proportions. The Russians, under the Exchange plan, have agreed to take one-and-a-half American pictures for each episode.

"War and Peace" has been in production since September, 1962, and is not expected to complete principal photography until February, 1964. It will be the most expensive pic in Soviet history, and is estimated to cost around $30,000,000. The Tolstoy classic has never previously been filmed by the Russians.

Shore, who was making his third visit of the year to Moscow during the film festival, will be returning here during October to resolve a few outstanding details, and will then come back in the New Year with about 20 artists to have the picture dubbed under the supervision of Bondarchuk.

The production, which is in 70m and color, has been filmed on location in various parts of the country and in the streets of Moscow, with interiors at the Mosfilm Studios.

25,934 BOOKINGS FOR UNITED ARTISTS DRIVE

United Artists registered a record tally of 25,934 special bookings during its recently-completed 1963 Sales Weeks Drive, which turned out to be the most successful such push in the company's history. The number of bookings set is particularly interesting considering that it was made in only a two-week period.

The campaign began June 30 and ran through July 13. Among the pix drawing the greatest action were "Dr. No," "West Side Story," "Love Is a Ball," "Call Me Bwana," "I Could Go On Singing," "Irma La Douce" and "The Great Escape." Following the breaking down of the final tabulation of the drive's bookings, a total of 12 cash prizes will be awarded to this year's winning exchanges, with awards divided into six for shipments and six for billings.

HOME & FLOWER SHOW PICKS FRANK MURPHY

Cleveland, July 23.

Frank Murphy is resigning from his post as midwestern manager of Loew's theatres, with headquarters here, to become managing director of Cleveland's annual Home & Flower Show. Civic sponsors of show, which draws over 200,000 visitors to civic auditorium each year, picked Murphy to succeed the former director, Ralph P. Stoddard, who died last October at age of 88.

Murphy accepted offer, he said, because the exhibition is so closely allied to show biz in problems of selling, administration and management, in which he had long experience.

For the Loew chain he supervised theatre operations ranging from Cleveland to Dayton, Columbus, Toledo, Chicago, Elkhart and South Bend, Ind., Pittsburgh, Buffalo. He was associated with the New York office as national negotiator of labor contracts for the circuit, which he joined in 1935.

Home & Flower Show backers said they also selected Murphy because he was "one of Cleveland's most popular, efficient and imaginative showmen with distinctive civic spirit." Theatre chief has been vitally active in dozens of city-boosting projects, including Euclid Ave. Merchants Assn., of which he was former prez, Cleveland Ad Club and Critics Circle. Louise Madsen, who supervised this year's H&F exhibition at Public Music Hall in March, will retain her position as executive assistant under Murphy.

For That Strutty 'Irma La Douce' UA Arranges a Golden Showcase

United Artists' plans for "Irma La Douce" in the New York area now call for the pic to initiate yet another step in the company's "premiere showcase" multi-theatre release system. When the pic leaves the DeMille Theatre Aug. 7 to make way for "The Great Escape," another UA pic, it will move into a plan which the distrib is calling "Golden Showcase."

This off-shoot of the original operation, which remains in force for a host of upcoming UA pix, will keep "Irma" in her present day-date eastside house, the Baronet Theatre, while she moves to the Broadway Victoria Theatre and into various selected houses around town and in the area. Because of the success of the Billy Wilder film, these theatres in several instances will be better ones than the standard "premiere showcase" route. In many cases, the houses will parallel those used for "West Side Story" and "The Longest Day" when they went into multiple release.

"Escape" will be daydating at the DeMille and the Coronet, the Baronet's twin, beginning Aug. 7. All three are Walter Reade-Sterling houses. Another coincidence is that the Victoria, to which "Irma" moves is the twin to the Astor, UA's regular "premiere showcase" house, both being owned by City Investing.

The "Golden Showcase" idea differs from its "premiere" dad in that it is handling a pic which had previously played firstrun in a day-date situation. "Premiere showcase" starts the pic right off in multiple situations without a two-house start. Most of UA's pix have been using the "premiere showcase" plan and now the company has even more flexibility with the adoption of this latest idea which gives it both a first run and showcase outing before going general.

LESSEN PRICE-WAIT ON HARDTICKET FILMS

Minneapolis, July 23.

That part of the filmgoing public here in no hurry to see pictures is able to catch screen fare originally presented as roadshows at much lower admission this year only a few months after the end of their hardticket runs.

On the heels of "Wonderful World of Brothers Grimm" (MGM) and "Longest Day," "Mutiny on the Bounty" (MGM) went last week into neighborhood theatres in the earliest subsequent-run clearance slot for day-and-date showings.

"Wonderful World" had a $2.50 roadshow top here; "Longest Day," $2.70, and "Mutiny," $2.65. By waiting one could have seen "Wonderful World" for $1.25 and the other two for $1.50. However, at the considerably lower prices they would have been deprived of Cinerama and 70m.

Local film circles now are making much of the fact that roadshow films now are being released much earlier than ever before — much sooner, in fact—for subsequent-run non-reserved seat showings. During the past two months it has been a case of one after another, the boys are pointing out.

For its subsequent-run at the lower admish, "Wonderful World" in seven nabe houses day and date didn't fare well. But "Longest" came through very well similarly and, it's reported, that "Mutiny," only in four of such theatres, "is doing all right."

Deals for these roadshow pictures' subsequent-runs here call for minimum two-week runs and none has ben held longer.

European preem of "Cleopatra," at the Dominion Theatre here July 31, will draw a bigger group of "Cleo" personalities than attended either the New York or Hollywood openings.

SALZBURG FILMING

Duerer's Parsch Studios Has Michel Powell Company

Salzburg, July 23.

Otto Duerer's modernly equipped studio here (three stages) is fully occupied at present. Renter is an international production, the Norman Foster Co. of Vaduz, Liechenstein. The opera, "Duke Bluebeared's Castle," with music by Bela Bartok is being filmed. Director is Michel Powell, whose credits include "Red Shoes" and "Tales of Hoffmann."

Picture is being shot in Technicolor, in German and English language, Duerer's Parsch Studios offering all facilities.

Duerer, himself, is preparing the motion picture, "The Magician."

Fatigue Talks And Jerry Lewis Suffers

Chicago, July 23.

Jerry Lewis came to Chi ahead of "The Nutty Professor" a week ago and his apparent bad humor—blamed on fatigue—turned the good will tour into a public relations nightmare that antagonized the press, exhibitors and, in some cases the fans. Lewis, exhausted from his whirlwind tour on behalf of the picture, couldn't seem to make a right move.

Highlight, or low point, of the ill-fated three-day stay was a Friday (12) press conference at the Ambassador Hotel at which the only working press present were gossip columnist Maggie Daly and film reviewer Ann Marsters, both of Chicago's American, and Richard Christiansen of the Daily News, who came late.

Not present at the press conference were the columnists and picture critics of the other three dailies and the feature writers who usually turn out. At least two of those not present said that they intended no slight to Lewis, but that Friday is a difficult day for them to get away from their desks.

As reported by an observer at the press conference, Lewis churlishly said that he was not making the tour to promote the picture but to come out in the provinces and "meet the little people." He then proceded with a lengthy lecture on international affairs, the level of which was described by one statement that there would be no international tension if President Kennedy flew to Moscow and said to Khrushchev: "I love you."

Members of the hotel staff said that he insulted the manager of the hotel by turning his back on him when he introduced himself, was rude to a doorman and was demanding in his request for accommodations and service.

In addition, Lewis sent a telegram to Chicago Trjbune columnist Herb Lyon castigating him for not attending the press conference. Lyon told VARIETY that the wire was so "appalling" that he would not repeat it, but despite it he felt no ill will toward Lewis.

Operators of the theatres at which he did his public appearances gave mixed reports. Several said that he was charming and gracious, but several said that he appeared upset and was short with them, with his retinue and with the fans. One exhibitor wrote to Chicago's American to say that Lewis's requirements for a show with musicians at each theatre were more trouble than they were worth, and that his fans wanted only to see him in the flesh and to hear a few words from him.

Lewis appeared on WBKB's "Kup Show" last weekend, and read from and made a pitch for a modest, spiral bound leaflet that he authored a few months back. The station tallied 120 calls for the book in the two days following. The title of the book is "How To Be A Human Being."

Martin Ritt and Paul Newman have acquired "The Spy Who Came in from the Cold," meller by John LaCarre, for production under their indie banner for Paramount release.

AGAIN IT HAPPENS

Editorial Page More Pro-'Cleo' Than The Critic

Buffalo, July 23.

For the first time, at least in memory, the staid and conservative Buffalo Evening News (circulation 290,000) has come out editorially with a "don't miss" message to the public regarding a picture. The News film critic covering "Cleopatra" premiere blew hot and cold as to the film's merits, with the review on balance falling rather on the thumbs-down side.

Ten days later, under the heading of "Cleopatra" the News editorialized . . .

". . . By this time pretty nearly everybody qualified and otherwise has had something to say about the spectacular film "Cleopatra" . . .

"Anyone interested in good theatre or history and reasonably mature should see this performance. It is worth the time and effort, not to mention expense . . .

". . . Those who love good theatre and don't see "Cleopatra" will miss a great deal."

It is not clear whether the News editorial department undertook to revise the estimate of its film critic or whether the picture was deemed sufficiently newsworthy by the editor to justify the editorial comment.

Sci-Fi Fest

Film Fest. Russia sent a propaganda full-length documentary on the training and orbiting of two cosmonauts last year in "The Celestial Brothers" and even had the commentary in Italian. Where was the U.S. Info Agency or a American astronaut documentaries?

Most of the scribes present were Italian with some American, English and French newspapermen. But it was still a place to focus interest on space accomplishments of this age as well as the sci-fi films.

Organization of the festival was acceptable. Some kinks will surely be ironed out next year. Outdoor projection in the courtyard of a colorful old castle on a hill was also an asset, though rained out three times in nine days.

Granted that there are obviously now too many film fests, and the FIFPA finds itself spread thin in finding enough unusual pix and personalities to go populate them, it is surprising that they, the Fed, shun a fest specializing in one type of film.

One speaker pointed out there were already important sci-fi literary organizations and a sort of symbolical background had already been worked out as well as recognition of the better efforts which could be extended to films within the festival specializing in these films.

Hence Golden Spaceship, was equally split between Czech feature "Ikarie XB 1," of Jindrich Polak, and French 30-minute short of Chris Marker "La Jetee" (The Runaway). U.S. won a Silver Spaceship for Roger Corman's "X-The Man With The X-Ray Eyes."

Czech "Ikarie" was a notable look at futuristic space travel and "La Jetee" used still photos to deal in a tale of survivors after another world war sending one of their number into the past and future via thought to finally do it actually. Both had poetic shafts to sustain them if both were a bit arch in technique.

"X" got its nod for its use of sci-fi in a film intended for mass audiences and dealt with a man who develops a serum that can have him look through things to end in madness and death for him. Another Silver Spaceship went to Russia's "The Amphibious Man," of Y. Kasancki, a naive but beguiling tale of an amphibious man in love with a land girl.

The Golden Seal went to Czechoslavakia for the Jiri Trynka short "Grandmother Cibernetica" about future technology looked at with a poetic viewpoint in deploring the humanity that could be lost, if progress was deemed necessary. Use of puppets was extraordinary.

A special Silver Seal went to an animated film "The Little Island" by Richard Williams of Great Britain. It depicted three men, embodying truth, good and beauty, driven to intolerance by contrasts of outlook on a desert isle. Its inventiveness and expert animation got it the prize.

Danger of Claiming a 'First'

TWA's recent fame-claiming via the showing of pix aboard some of its jetliners as a "first" turns out not to be completely accurate as a 1929 issue of Plane Talk, house organ of Transcontinental Air Transport, a forerunner of the modern TWA, demonstrates.

The article, noted by the Minneapolis Star's Lowell Nussbaum, talks about the showing of "current newsreels and a cartoon" aboard one of the Ford tri-motors with which the airline was started. On those first cross-country flights, Nussbaum recalls, passengers took a night Penn Railroad train from New York to Columbus, Ohio, flew in the tri-motors by daylight to Waynoka, Okla., rode all night on the Santa Fe to Clovis, N.M., and the rest of the way to California by plane.

Film Review Board Members Duck Duty

Their Social Engagements Come First—Want Reduced 'Quota' For Coverage

Columbus, O., July 23.

Reluctance of 15-member Columbus film review board to attend film showings if they conflict with private engagements was back of a proposed revision of city ordinance governing the board suggested by board chairman Victor Goodman. City Council defeated the proposal 5-2.

Goodman wanted council approval of dropping required five members viewing a picture to three. He said he's had difficulty in rounding up the five. Most pleaded "previous engagements." Board members are unsalaried but receive expenses.

Ken Prickett, executive secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, spoke against the revised ordinance, citing "harassment" of theatre operators. Prickett said costs of court actions in connection with appeals from film review board decisions would constitute heavy burdens on operators.

Councilman William Fornof told Goodman that perhaps new board members should be obtained if he cannot get five of the 15 to view a picture. Only Councilmen Tom Moody and William Hoermle voted for the amendment.

SCHOOLMAM'S SUMMER JOB

But Academic Credit For Kay Coleman Unclear

San Antonio, July 23.

Kay Coleman, an English teacher at a local junior high school, is slated to go to Hollywood to appear in Warners "Four For Texas," which up to this time had no Texans in the cast. A contest was conducted by the McLendon radio stations for four girls, one each from San Antonio, Dallas, Houston and Fort Worth.

Film concerns the early days of Galveston but will be photographed entirely in Hollywood. Heading cast are Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin, Anita Ekberg and Ursula Andress.

Not known if the Schoolmarm will get academic "credit" for her Hollywood studios.

Pry 'Em From TV With Showmanship

Again asserting his belief that there is a crying need for more showmanship on the local level in the sale of features to the public, Mel Gold, prez of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, outlined programs for the organization at its first meeting of new officers and board members yesterday (Tues.) at Van's Beau Brummel, N.Y.

"Our first job," he said, "is to get the patron out of the house and away from the television set." In this connection he stated that AMPA's plans include liaison with retail organizations and their trade publications to develop a cooperative effort. He also advised that the group's exhibitor services division, which he previously headed before becoming prez, plans a "speakers bureau" which would provide talkers for Lions Clubs, Rotary Clubs and other such local groups for the purpose of promoting films and the industry.

Also among AMPA's plans is the formation of regional "showmanship forums" for exhibitors and their managers, a press service to provide institutional publicity to local and regional publications, a celebrity service to encourage distribs to increase personal appearances by stars, directors et al. and the application of commercial theatre showmanship in the purveying of art films to the public. These programs will all be under the exhibitor services division and will be in the hands of various committee members, yet to be named.

Gold admitted that these projects would all be costly and time-consuming but he avowed the organization's intentions to carry them out. Additionally, the organization is planning a nation-wide membership drive to bring exhibs into AMPA. "For 47 years AMPA membership has stemmed essentially from New York. If we're going to help the entire industry, we must have the support of the entire industry," the prez noted.

There are also several other committees being forced under the new prez. These include an advertising committee to seek better ad methods and design, a publicity group to spread institutional propaganda, a manpower development committee to seek means for developing a pool of ad-pub talent and to evaluate the possibility of setting up a managers' school and others.

A THEATRE-LESS BURG DREAMS OF RELIGHTING

Hamlet, N.C., July 23.

Dr. Wingate Williamson has accepted appointment as chairman of a committee to study the possibilities of opening a motion picture theatre here. He was appointed by Earl Covington, president of the Hamlet Chamber of Commerce-Merchants Association, following a meeting of that group. Hamlet has not had a theatre for the last two and a half years. Merchants Assn. (the Chamber of Commerce had not been formed at that time) appointed a committee to work toward getting the theatre reopened. However, that committee apparently never took any action.

Chester A. Martin, publisher of The News-Messenger, bought the theatre building, which is next door to the news office, and has used it in recent years for storage. However, on several occasions he has expressed a willingness to help get the theatre back into operation.

The main thing needed is cash—and quite a sum of it.

A MULTI-FACETED JOB

Norm Gluck A Bridge Between Many Functions

Norman E. Gluck has been named to the newly-created post of sales coordinator of the Universal Pictures homeoffice sales cabinet. He has been working on special assignments for U prez Milton R. Rackmil since 1960.

In the new post, Gluck's activities will include supervision of the short subjects department, liaison between the sales department and the ad-pub areas and assistance in the acquisition of outside pictures for theatrical release. He'll also continue to handle duties in connection with U's tv distribution deals with Seven Arts and Screen Gems.

Originally joining Universal in 1946 after several years with circuits, including 12 years with Skouras Theatres, he left the company in 1958 to become v.p. of Screen Gems' EUE tv commercial division, rejoining U in 1960.

Stunty Ways Still Persevere As Tout-Masters Never Sleep

Some of that ole show biz razzamazztazz seems to be creeping back into the picture business. In the past week a variety of gimmicks have turned up ranging from venerable stunts like a public casting call covered by the press to the use of fortune cookies to lure a film producer-distributor into hiring a merchandiser to work on one of his pix.

The casting stunt was pulled by Jerry Hellman and George Roy Hill's Pan Arts indie filmery on behalf of their soon - to - lense "World of Henry Orient." With the help of the pic's star, Peter Sellers, the boys staged an open call for teen femmes last Wednesday (17) at the Brooks Atkinson Theatre, N. Y., where over 1,000 aspiring filmstars of the future turned up, beginning to arrive before 8 a.m. by every means from foot to chauffeur-driven car.

The event garnered lotsa attention from the press, including tv, radio and newsprint coverage. Sellers helped pick the finalists who were screened individually from the SRO house. Final selection of two femmes who'll be inked to contracts for the pic will be made this week. Sellers and Hellman also were witness at another female contest over the weekend as they attended the Miss Universe bout in Miami. Here again they demonstrated some show biz hokum by signing the seven losers for appearances in "Orient."

Pic rolls July 29 in Gotham's Central Park and will also lense in the new Long Island Studios. Hill is directing the film which will be Sellers' first Yank picture. UA is distributing.

The fortune cookie bit involves, of all people, Joseph E. Levine. The gimmick was pulled by marketing consultant Stanley Arnold who had been discussing working for the distrib on "Carpetbaggers" over a period of time. Finally, it became a case of showman against showman and so Arnold invested $10 in a batch of fortune cookies with special messages inserted. At one of the meetings between the two, he dropped a few in front of Levine and urged him to try one. No slouch in the eating department, Levine snapped one open and read "None but the one before you can make 'The Carpetbaggers' a success."

The Embassy Pictures prez then went on to read 20 similar messages with the result that Arnold has been signed to supplement the activities of Embassy's publicity department in ballyhooing the pic. He has been a gimmick man for several others in the past, developing off-beat ideas for such as Du Pont, Goodyear, Esso, Chrysler and others.

In the field of exhibition, the Interboro Circuit a few months ago hired the Cole Fischer Rogow agency to create some interesting format for its ads on behalf of its 17 houses. The agency designed a simple directory format for theatre listings and, as further eye-catching lure, started a cartoon series pegged to the film biz called "Flicker Snickers." These have featured such ideas as "If you think the movie is exciting, you should see what's going on in the balcony" and "If you ask me, the director is the one the butler should have stabbed."

At any rate, M. O. Strausberg, Interboro prez, says that the ad format has had "a clear-cut connection" with increased b.o. action, noting that patrons often mention the ads to theatre personnel. In the same area, short subject animator Ernest Pintoff recently took Gotham news ads on behalf of his short "The Critic" proclaiming "This is the biggest ad ever for such a short film."

And so it goes, Levine himself being a good example of the effectiveness of what this old-styled bazzazz can be worth, having graduated from the super-sold "Hercules" pix to the likes of "Two Women," "8-1-2" and others. He still keeps a keen eye on the bally angles too, as his deal with Paramount on "Carpetbaggers" indicates in that the studio puts up all the cash but Levine gets producer billing, an appropriate fee and controls the ad-pub work on the pic. Carroll Baker's nudie scene from the film is another recent example of attention-getting bally.

And there are others at it all the time, indicating that the film biz isn't all as uninspired in its showmanship as some have charged in recent months.

Spain Pleased, Argentina Not By Berlin Fest

Madrid, July 23.

Madrid film-makers continue to be elated with the results obtained by Spanish entries at international film fests this year and, particularly, with the showing of "Los Inocentes" at the recent Berlin gathering, where Spain walked off with the International Critics' Award.

Though a Spanish entry at Berlin, "Inocentes" is a Spain-Argentina coproduction in which the Spaniards hold a minority interest, while the Argentines met 70% of the budget. The film was shot in Buenos Aires with only two Iberian ingredients—director Juan Antonio Bardem and screen actress Paloma Valdes.

Argentinians are criticizing their National Film Institute for refusing festival status to "Inocentes." When this decision was taken, coproducer Eduardo Borras immediately informed his partner, Cesario Gonzalez, of the Film Institute decision and the pic was immediately earmarked here for Berlin.

What irks the Argentines is that their own entry at Berlin, "The Terrace," not only passed unnoticed but even had to be censored by fest authorities for an anti-Semitic sequence. What hurts most, is that Spain received honors that could have been credited to the Argentine film industry.

SAYS PR FEE UNPAID

Todd Denies Karr Contract Suit For $50,000 Services

David Karr Associates has filed suit in N.Y. Supreme Court against the Michael Todd Co. and Michael Todd Jr. seeking $50,000 for alleged breach of a 1954 agreement by which plaintiff was to receive $3,000 per week plus expenses for being defendant's public relations counsel.

The complaint charges that, from July, 1954, to November, 1955, only $4,730 was paid leaving the balance of $50,000 which is sought in the action. The suit further states that in December, 1958, Karr submitted a bill for services rendered and that Todd rejected the bill some time later.

Answering the complaint, Todd denies the allegations, claiming that Karr got the $4,770 in full satisfaction of all claims. He further states that the agreement was not to be performed within one year of the making. Dismissal is sought on the grounds that Karr neglected to proceed with the action and that he also failed to file a note of issue within six months.

tack of the Puppet People" of Bert I. Gordon.

No Eastern Bloc filmmakers showed, being busy at the Moscow tries was stretched to an incredible total of 34, and the generally accepted viewpoint is that no more than a handful merited a place in an international event of this importance. It is easy to appreciate why the Russians are anxious to please the "emergent countries" and accept their films in contest; unfortunately, little purpose is achieved as the works from these inexperienced film makers rarely rose above the amateur status. Many of them, admittedly, had worthy themes of liberation from oppressions, and so on, but their expression in cinematic terms left too much to be desired.

Vladimir Pozner, the organizing secretary of the festival, who has worked in Paris, New York and Hollywood, and who returned to his native Russia only 11 years ago, might well learn from the Venice festival, which confines in-contest pix to one a day, but provides the opportunity to show the works of others via its afternoon information section. That, at least, would relieve the jury of the arduous task of sitting through three full length features a day.

On the other hand, the Russians could offer facilities that are not within the grasp of other fest organizers. The Kremlin Palace of Congress is the showplace par excellence; and as a unique treat for the 1,000 plus fest participants, an official reception hosted by Minister of Culture Madame Ekaterina Furtseva in the Kremlin Palace—surely the most magnificent reception hall in the world. On that occasion, all delegation heads—more than 50 of them—were invited on the rostrum to toast peace and friendship.

The Russians made every effort to be good hosts, offering daily excursions to such places as museums the exhibition of Economic Development, a collective farm, the Moscow University, and a day's trip on the Moscow canal. In addition, there were screenings each morning, afternoon and evening, apart from those officially scheduled, making it an embarrassment of riches. Too much in too little time.

But as a festival, in spite of its many weaknesses, Moscow has made its international impact, and received far greater support from all the principal film nations than any other event in Europe—more stars, more delegations and, of course, more films, too.

Angles on Kaye Visit

Chances for Danny Kaye to receive a Congressional Gold Medal in the near future, based on proposal made by Senator Jacob Javits and other Washington lawmakers may be improved as a result of comedian's recent trip to Moscow. He went as a member of the American delegation to the third International Moscow Film Festival. This was incidental to a more important, though unofficial, mission which he was on at the request of U.S.I.A.'s director Edward R. Murrow.

Insiders reveal that Kaye originally turned down request to attend the Festival because of pressure of work involving his new weekly CBS-TV series which airs in the early fall. Murrow, who had previously worked closely with Kaye on latter's world tours for UNICEF, stepped in with special request for Kaye to go to Moscow to "help the American image in the Soviet Union."

At meeting with Murrow in Washington at U.S.I.A. headquarters a few weeks before his departure, it was suggested that Kaye could figure out for himself how to best handle unofficial government mission.

Kaye contacted UNICEF head Maurice Pate who alerted Professor George A. Miterev, President of Soviet Red Cross and Alliance of Red Crescent Societies about comedian's impending arrival. Ball started rolling immediately.

As a result of first meeting with Miterev, Kaye worked out a full schedule for himself during the week preceding the Film Festival. By the time other members of the American delegation had arrived, he had practically completed his own assignment, attended the opening ceremonies, on Sunday, July 7, stayed over an extra day to make a stage appearance in connection with the screening of "West Side Story," and then left further Festival appearances to other members of the Americans.

Unusual aspects of Kaye's appearances at a child consultation center (Pediatric out-patient clinic) and a Pioneer Children's Camp, forty kilometers ouside Moscow included the facts that they were covered by the Soviet Press and the American Press and that Kaye was even invited to these places. American correspondents stationed in Moscow pointed out that they had never previously been allowed to visit children's installations, and that to their knowledge no lay westerners had ever been invited either.

Excellent 'Image'

If Murrow wanted the Soviet people to get a look at Danny Kaye and regard him as a "nice Americab," he certainly got his wish. Kaye's appearance at both the child consultation center and pioneer camp was reported widely by the Soviet press, a 10-minute segment was aired on the Saturday night TV news, which not only hits Moscow but other major areas in the Soviet Union, he was interviewed by Radio Moscow and all Soviet news services, including Novesty (reported in VARIETY on July 17).

In addition to the above, Kaye chatted with First Secretary Mikoyan at a 4th of July celebration at the American Embassy, attended the Moscow Synagogue on Saturday morning, and later met with Israel Ambassador Joseph Tekoah, visited Mosfilm's Studio and offices of Association of Soviet Filmmakers, attended a rehearsal and later a performance of the Siberian Ballet at the Bolshoi Theatre, saw "Il Trovatore" at the Bolshoi, attended the famous Moscow Puppet Theatre, which opens here in October and managed to get an audience of 5,000 Russians at the screening of "West Side Story" to join him in the singing of a Russian children's song.

Whether it was planned or coincidental, government people in Washington feel that the timing of Kaye's visit to Moscow was ideal. He was there during the days when the Soviet meetings with the Chinese, were taking place, and just prior to Averill Harriman's arrival for test ban talks which are still going on—a perfect time to tell the Russians that Americans aren't such bad people after all.

TAKES OVER TRUST FUND

George L. George Quits as Directors Exec Secy

George L. George has resigned as exec secretary of the Screen Directors International Guild to become administrator of the union's trust fund. He has been exec secretary since the guild's formation in 1957. Before that he was for two years exec secretary of the N.Y. Film Directors Organizing Committee and, prior to this, had been a board member and an officer of the Screen Directors Guild which he helped form in 1946.

The SDIG trust fund has been in existence for over two years but has not been fully operational. With the recent signing of a new three-year pact with the Film Producers Assn., certain points dealing with pension and welfare payments have been clarified and it is now felt that the activities of the fund should be set up as quickly as possible to implement the guild's pension plan.

$10,404,017. Net included earnings from sale of assets of $127,056 along with other non-recurring income of $123,770. UATC stock, which is traded Over-the-Counter, has been showing a steady rise since the end of May when it was quoted at 8¼ bid. The bid price now is about 12¾.

By its action, group hopes in mailing out proxies to come up with 60% of voting power, according to spokesman, who added that they already own enough stock "to be an extremely important factor." He also noted, "We feel in the next few weeks we will be ready to make a demand upon the company."

Spokesman declared that dissatisfaction has been growing among investors for some time and "we finally got together to do something about it."

Skouras and his executives, according to dissident spokesman, have consistently refused to meet with them. "They"—Skouras et al—"won't take any steps to do anything about bettering conditions, so we intend to force the management to do something. We're sick and tired of being pushed around by Skouras." He added that the circuit is split into so many different companies, with other theatre chains, that "it is for the benefit of management, not stockholders."

Skouras, he said, "unfortunately is ill and doesn't devote much time to the company." Skouras was in San Francisco last week, but did not acknowledge call by VARIETY to the Mark Hopkins where he was staying.

Group assertedly wants to do something for the industry as well as for the stockholders, according to spokesman, and it's felt that under a new management this would be possible. Reade, experienced in exhibition through the operation of Walter Reade Theatres, Inc., and heading Continental Distributing, Inc., is mentioned as a possible likely candidate to chieftain UATC if the present management is forced out.

"Nobody likes a proxy fight," spokesman stated, "and the present management of UA probably doesn't think we would go to this expense. No sensible businessman would start one unless there is no alternative. But we're ready."

Number of houses either owned or in which UATC has financial interest could not be immediately determined. Owned directly by chain are 19 houses in various parts of the country, and Skouras Theatres of N. Y., which operates 52 houses, is a subsidiary, owned outright. UATC also has 100% interest in Rowley United Theatres, of Texas, which has an interest in over 100 houses, and has a 50% partnership with United California Theatres, which operates around 80, mostly in Northern California.

MAKING A BIZ OF IT

Oscar Doob, 'Retirement,' Became Its Laureate

Oscar A. Doob, Loew's-MGM ad-pub exec under the old Nicholas M. Schenck regime, has been signed by the North American Newspaper Alliance to do a weekly syndicated column entitled "Joys and Jolts of Retirement."

Hobby since bowing out of the cinema world has been writing about retirement and now he's to be heard from via 90 daily and Sunday papers, states Harry J. Spiess, NANA prez. The info comes from Ernest Emerling, Loew's v.p. today, who says he's "playing press agent for the World's best press agent." Doob had been Emerling's boss.

ALLIED OF MICHIGAN'S 44TH ANNUAL CONCLAVE

Allied Theatres of Michigan will hold its annual convention Aug. 14-15 at the Sheraton-Cadillac Hotel, Detroit. It will be the group's 44th annual gathering and Jack Zide, prez of Allied Film Exchange and past chief barker of Variety Tent #5, who is flying pennants for his 20th anni as an indie film distrib in the Detroit area, will be honored at the opening luncheon.

At the afternoon sessions Aug. 14, exhibs will compete for the showmanship trophy presented annually to Michigan's "Showman of the Year." There will be a concession seminar and demonstrations of new theatre equipment and in the evening there will be a film screening. The following day will see visitation of various guest speakers and the meeting will be concluded that evening with the traditional party-dinner-dance.

AB-PT Fights Lazarus Plea for $44,220 Wages

Herbert B. Lazarus has filed a breach of contract suit against American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres in N.Y. Supreme Court seeking $44,220 in severence pay he claims is due him following his resignation from the company in 1957. He's a former general counsel, v.p. and secretary of AB-PT.

He claims that Leonard H. Goldenson, AB-PT prez, reneged on a promise to get him a raise of salary and then severence pay. He was an employee of the company from 1937 to 1957 and states that Goldenson failed to recommend the pay hike and severence pay and that he had relied on the prez's promise to do so, his failure at which caused Lazarus to resign in 1957.

Lazarus was named AB-PT general counsel in February, 1956, and in March of that year became a v.p. Until resigning, he was secretary of the company. He claims that he is entitled to the severence pay of an exec, which is one year's salary. AB-PT has moved to vacate the action.

Free Tele in Bars, Hotel Lobbies, Cafes Annoys Paris Exhibs, Distribs

Paris, July 23.

Film people are again accusing the growing tele menace of unfair competition besides their intrinsic something-for-nothing aspects that have brought on pic crisis in other countries. What they are particularly irked about is the growing number of sets in public places that are being used as come-ons and also interfering with film-going.

More than 17,000 sets in bars, restaurants and hotel lobbies have been tallied, and in many places neat rows of seats are arranged for tele pix showings which, to worried film people, means a miniature pic house and one hitting cinemas below the belt. Especially is this true now with continuing dropping filmgoing, rising costs and generally limp foreign marts for French films.

It is enough that home tv is cutting into film patronage without these public tv slights, claim filmites. And they recently brought suit against anybody using tv in this way plus the nationalized set-up itself for putting on films at peak cinema attendance times and even resorting to unreleased pix at times which, under French laws, can constitute an abridgement of commercial rights of regularly licensed houses.

It is also a sore point that tv and radio pay no taxes while films are the heaviest hit among all the entertainment industries, over 30% of the gross. And a good part, to make things worse, goes into governmental video budgets. Film producers still feel they are not getting enough vidfilm work to compensate for all this.

If hardtops keep over the 5,600 level, via new houses replacing shuttered ones, a time is seen when mass hardtop closings could happen if some modus vivendi is not reached with tv while it has only one channel. With the second due next year, it looms a solid menace.

Recently, tender-hided film reps also almost had strokes when it was announced that a French-Rumanian pic "Codine," which got acclaim at the recent Cannes Film Fest and two prizes, would be shown as a one-shot tele offering. This would probably have killed the pic for houses as well as murder filmgoing for that night. Tele reps themselves finally decided against it and replaced it by an older film.

Film lawyers call the growing public tv set use to lure patrons and entertain them a sort of growing new monopoly and misuse of an instrument that is supposed to be for public welfare, culture, education, and home entertainment, too. But not as a competing device against films and other show facets by businesses that have no right to this free boost in restraint of film trade.

And it is stated that the small tv screen does not necessarily mean viewers will want to see it on big ones, too. It is basically the same thing with different means of transmission.

So film circles are clamoring for laws to tie off this growing foe and also point to the Rome Common Market Treaty which puts all nationalized industries or mediums of communication on a regular business level if they try to compete with or hamper private enterprises. So film people want some sort of say in tv use, film transmissions and vidpix work. Several court cases suing cafes that used tv as entertainment are now on to make tests of this principle. Film reps are anxious to reach an agreement on these points before it is too late.

Film Exchange Strike Threatens in Dublin

Dublin, July 23.

Staffs in film distrib offices here have asked their union to authorize strike action because of the failure of Kinematograph Renters Society to grant a wage adjustment.

Union agreement has just run out and a new one is to be negotiated. At the same time, staffs of Dublin cinemas are also discussing claims for a new agreement to be made with the Theatre and Cinemas Assn. on wages and conditions before the end of this year.

SPIO ASKS GERMAN GOVT. HELP FILM BIZ

Berlin, July 16.

At its meeting here last week, SPIO, top organization of the West German film industry, applied again to the Federal government to help struggling domestic pix business via several measures. The latter are to include the abolition of the amusement tax and the exemption of the turnover tax for at least those films which have been declared artistically worthy by the German Film Classification Board.

SPIO demands that the youth protection law, which has been imposed on films since 1957, should also be imposed on tele in this country. Another demand is that tv restrict the presentation of theatrical films to a reasonable minimum. SPIO pointed out that the cultural tasks of the film are as important as those of the press, radio, theatre and tele.

Preems Lined Up For Dublin Theatre Fest; 2 Hugh Leonard Plays

Dublin, July 16.

Eight preems have been announced for Dublin Theatre Festival, set for Sept. 23-Oct. 6, by Festival Director Brendan Smith. One Irish writer gets in with two new ones. He's Hugh Leonard whose "Stephan D" was the standout of last year's festival which is set for Broadway this fall. Both of his new plays are set for the Gate for staging by Gemini Productions, "The Poker Session" and "Dublin One." Last is based on James Joyce's work.

Joyce also gets representation by an American group, the Jean Erdman Company, which is staging "The Coach with the Six Insides," a comedy from Joyce's "Finnegan's Wake."

The Abbey is to stage Reinhard Raffalt's "The Successor," centered on the election of a Pope. It's the English-language preem. Michael MacLiammoir is to star in "Stella," a new piece by Irish actor Conor Farrington to be directed by Hilton Edwards at the Gaiety. Chloe Gibson has adapted Marcelle-Mauretteʼs tele play, "Inquiry at Lisieux," which she directed for Telefis Eireann (Irish TV). A modern Irish musical comedy, "Carrie," by Michael Coffey, Wesley Burrowes and James Douglas, is set for the Olympia.

Envoy Productions will present Samuel Beckett's "Happy Days." John Molloy is to present preems of "The Tin Soldier" by a Swede, Arthur Johansson, and William Finnan's "Once Upon Eternity." Frank Bailey, a radio producer, is to direct "The Big Finish," by Gerry Simpson, for New Theatre Productions.

TWO IRISH BALLETS MERGE; SEEKING AID

Dublin, July 23.

Directors of the Irish Theatre Ballet and the National Ballet, Joan Denise Moriarty and Patricia Ryan, have agreed on a merger of both groups which will in future be known as the Irish National Ballet.

In the past National Ballet mainly concentrated on teaching and providing a Dublin season with imported stars. Irish Theatre Ballet, based on Cork, presented a number of new works and toured Irish provincial towns.

New company, which is seeking Arts Council aid from government, starts auditioning next month and has commitment to provide dancers for Wexford Festival Operas this fall. It has also skedded a season for Dublin and Cork before the end of the year.

Tele Branch Gave ABPC Big Boost

London, July 23.

Television limb of Associated British Picture Corp. again accounted for more than half the trading profit of the group in the year ended last March 31. Of this total profit of $11,300,763 ABC-TV contributed $7,343,173. The balance of $3,957,590 came from the film side of the business, mainly from theatres.

Figures are revealed in ABPC's annual report in which group chairman Sir Philip Warter stated the company's studios at Elstree worked almost to capacity throughout the period in question during which 11 feature pix were produced.

Nonetheless, Sir Philip stated, it is "a matter of deep concern" that the ever-increasing costs of operating the studios and the high cost of film production in general rendered this branch of ABPC's business unremunerative.

"Nevertheless," he said, "the need to insure a supply of films for our cinemas and our distribution company makes it essential to continue to finance the making of British films."

Chairman also put on record the fact that, during the year, seven ABC hardtops were closed leaving ABC a circuit of 284 theatres throughout the country.

Noel Ferrier to Appear In 'Importance' in Aussie

Melbourne, July 23.

Noel Ferrier is to appear in a one-man show, "The Importance of Being Oscar," to be presented at the Assembly Hall here, opening Aug. 10. If successful, the show will go to other states.

It is understood the handling of Wilde will be different from Michael MacLiammoir's. The Irish star has been sought for an Aussie tour in his program of readings from Wilde's works, but the Ferrier booking apparently ends that prospect.

Inside Stuff—International

At a press conference in Spoleto, Italy, designed to elucidate the final weeks of the annual Festival of Two Worlds, the founder-director, Gian-Carlo Menotti was joined by Luchino Visconti, Michael Cacoyannis and Jerome Robbins. It became clear that the highbrow and esoteric items had been held to the last. These include Andre Gide's one-acter, "The 13th Tree," which has never before reached the boards, for censorship reasons. Now it will be interpreted by Romolo Valli (Don Pirrone in "The Leopard"), Rina Morelli, Vittorio Caprioli and a few young, unknown actors. Two of those will do an even shorter one-act play at the beginning of the evening, written by one of them (not clear which one).

Young, unknown actors have been somewhat the darlings of the 1963 Festival, along with their companion-stagedirectors, scene designers, composers and dancers. Each Tuesday night they get the small, experimental theatre for themselves to show their teachers, mentors and colleagues what they are working on.

Jerome Robbins will present two new ballet sketches during the last week with dancers recruited among young Americans in Rome. Cacoyannis will present Euripides'—"The Trojans" with Claire Bloom, Rod Steiger and John Arthur Kennedy in English, with a full chorus and music written by a Greek-Parisian composer, Jean Prodromides.

According to a W-German trade paper, Film-Echo Filmwoche, the Rialto production, "Der Schatz im Silbersee" (The Treasure of Silver Lake), has been the most successful German pic within the 12 months of the 1962-'63 season. "Silver Lake" is a big-scale German CinemaScope western, a filmization of the Karl May novel, starring American Lex Barker. Harald Reinl directed this Rialto (Preben Philipsen, Horst Wendlandt) production for Constantin release. Next successful German pix of the season are "Kohlhiesel's Daughters" (Kurt Ulrich), "The Inn On the Thames River" (Rialto) and "Black Panther of Ratana." In the foreign film field, "The Longest Day" (20th), "A Touch of Mink" (U), "Sergeants 3" (UA), "Achilles" (Italian pic), "West Side Story" and "Tarus Bulba" (both UA) head the list of money-makers.

Producer Georges Agiman being sued by heirs of Offenbach, Meilhac and Halevy, late authors of the music, book and lyrics of "La Vie Parisienne," for intention to use the title "Ah, La Vie Parisienne" for a situation modern comedy pic. Heirs claim it will impigne on their old title and be degrading to it even if they do not know how the pic will turn out. Agiman says it is in public domain and also has an "Ah," added. Case comes up in court this week. Meilhac and Halevy heirs have also kept Oscar Hammerstein's updated version of the Bizet opera "Carmen Jones," off local screens for same reasons, and since "Carmen" is not yet in public domain. . . . Leo Joannon says his proposed pic on the life of the late Pope John XXIII "Les Bras Ouverts" (The Open Arms) will not be a montage pic but will not show the late Pope either. Joannon, who has made three pix with religious themes, expects to get Vatican acceptance of his film and he hopes to have it out next year on the first anniversary of the late Pope's passing. . . . Of the 280 pix playing around Paris, over one half are oldies and reissues. The prewar William Wyler pic "Wuthering Heights" is racking up top biz in five firstruns. Firstrun actioner house, the Napoleon, off the Champs-Elysees, inaugurating a western-a-day, both old and new, all through July and maybe through August if the policy clicks. All are Yank pix, natch pardner, and they include "The Big Country," "The Horse Soldiers," "The Indian Fighter," "Along the Great Divide," "The Magnificent Seven" and "Comanche" in the first batch. . . . And speaking of westerns, a local actor Christian Marquand, for his first pic directorial stint, tried to emulate a French version of an oater in present day central France. It was a disarming idea but does not quite come off if Marquand shows that he has doted on Yank pix of this kind. It is called "Les Grands Chemins" (The Big Roads) and is the official French pic at the current Locarno Film Fest unspooling in Switzerland.

New production company, "Star Alliance," at long last getting down to business although of the stars who were supposed to ally themselves, Lily Palmer, Maximilian Schell, Maria Schell, and O. W. Aussie Exhibs Clamor For More Musicals: Ask Fewer War, Sex Pics

Sydney, July 16.

Aussie film showmen are urging overseas' producers to make more top musicals and to get away from so many war and problem pix pronto. Showmen aver that the Aussie populace has had its fill of shot-an'-shell, bedroom stuff a nd heavy drama problem patterns. Crime pix and Westerns are to be seen every day of the week on tele, and cinema payees don't want this type in the theatre.

Showmen here point to the record run scored by "South Pacific" (four years), and "West Side Story" 58 weeks and still running. Exhibs also cite the hit scored by "Summer Holiday" with the masses.

"It's teenage biz we are after and problem pix won't bring the young ones to the boxoffice," one key showman said.

Showmen agree that the low-budget musical—all noise and poorly done—is not the product required. They want class musicals like Metro, WB and other major companies used to produce.

"Let's put class back into musicals, the zingy, tuneful type with top stars and the teenagers will lay down their coin at the boxoffice," opined a major loop operator.

Columbia is coming right into the new payee mood with "Bye, Bye, Birdie," while Universal and other majors have similarly strong fare coming out shortly.

Former Publicity Man Makes Inexpensive Pic In France With Stars

Paris, July 16.

In response to the cries of French film producers about rising costs and exorbitant star salaries, ex-public relations man Pierre Kalfon is now bringing in a pic which cost peanuts, says he. And it has most of the top stars here in it. They are bit roles, of course, but doing it on deferment or small takes.

It is called "Dragees Au Poivre" (Pepper Candy). Pic pleased such thesps as Simone Signoret, Jean-Paul Belmondo, Jean Richard, Marina Vlady, Monica Vitti, director Roger Vadim and Francois Perier, among others, states Kalfon. Also, the producer was willing to do their scenes wherever they wanted and at the stars' conveniences.

Miss Signoret's scene was done during a stay on the Riviera. It is also a zany type film, avers Kalfon, which will incorporate American musical advances seldom tried here on either stage or screen.

Kalfon got his idea for the pic after seeing comedian Guy Bedos do a series of takeoffs on noted film personalities in a nightclub. He got director Jacques Baratier and the two concocted a script. The new literary type pix with people languidly talking or forever walking will be debunked as well as the Cinema Truth in a musical number.

Kalfon hopes its cheapness and share-the-risk costs with the names involved, plus its newness and comic aspects, will help pave the way for other reasonably-priced pix. He does not know whether this will be big or not but it will still have a reasonable budget plus names for exploitation purposes. Film likely will be finished this month.

INT'L CAST LOOMS FOR WEXFORD OPERA FEST

Dublin, July 16.

Two Americans will be among the artists at Wexford Opera Festival this year, Oct. 20-27. They are Gloria Lane, mezzosoprano, and Portugese-born conductor Antonio de Almeida. Miss Lane is in a largely Italian cast for "La Giaconda." De Almeida conducts "Don Pasquale." Peter Ebert returns to direct "La Gioconda."

Deal with Radio Eireann covering transmissions of the operas includes the provision of the Radio Eireann Symphony Orch for two major operas. Festival, now in its 10th year, is a late-season boost for tourist biz, running Oct. 20-27. Any loss is met in part by Irish Tourist Board.

Siritzkys Ankle Paris Art Film House Assn.

Paris, July 16.

Jo and Sammy Siritzky, who book several firstruns and distribute pix via Athos Films, quit the Assoc. of Art and Experimental Film Houses because a local arter released a Mexican film based on the Emily Bronte novel, "Wuthering Heights," two days before they released the pre-war U. S. version by William Wyler.

In a letter to the head of the association, the Siritzkys made clear that they feel the Mexican pic was suddenly released to cash in on the publicity drive that had been prepared for some time for the firstrun reissue in five houses of the Wyler pic. The Mexican film made by Luis Bunuel, was originally called "Abismos De Pasion" (Depths of Passion), but the French title was changed to "Wuthering Heights Seen by Bunuel." Thus it was felt that they used the other "Heights" for a boost.

Triple-Nationality Pic Shooting in Barcelona; Curd Jurgens Heads Cast

Barcelona, July 23.

French director Henri Decoin started filming last week of another tri-nation coproduction, "Los Parais de la Gloria" (Pariahs of Glory), involving French, Italian and Spanish producers.

Cast is headed by Curd Jurgens, Maurice Ronet, Folco Lulli and German Cobos. Yoko Tani plays the female lead. Costarring is Conchita Paez, Miss Calaluna is the last nation-wide beauty contest.

Camera start coincided with the inauguration of a big sound stage at the Buch-San Juan Studios where interiors of "Pariahs" will be filmed.

AUSTRALIAN BALLET FACING SOME WOES

Melbourne, July 16.

There have been murmurings in the press here over the last few weeks that things are not going well financially with Australian Ballet Co. formed last year under joint sponsorship of the Australian Elizabethan Theatre Trust and J. C. Williamson Theatres Ltd.

French ballet dancer Robert Pomie joined the company just before its Melbourne season to replace Aussie dancer Gareth Welch, absent through sickness. Pomie also is husband of leading Aussie ballerina Kathleen Gorham. He has now withdrawn from the company—which is in New Zealand—due to disagreements (not disclosed) with the management and pending reported separation from his wife.

Company has curtailed its New Zealand season. Pomie stated in the press that New Zealand attendances were terrible and artistic spirit of the company very low. He also stated losses on the Australian season were more than $225,000, for which he blamed excessive importation and overpayment of overseas ballet stars (presumably not himself).

Australian Ballet representative here in Melbourne refused to confirm or deny to VARIETY the alleged deficits and were inclined to dismiss it as teething troubles, pointing out that initial outlays for the ballet formation, staging five new productions, sets, costumes etc., had of course been tremendous.

It is stated that most productions picked up in the last weeks, but when revived in later weeks of the season did not do such good business. It is understood that the idea of having the ballets played in repertoire—as is done at Covent Garden for example — instead of replacing one ballet run with another, is under consideration.

It is expected that an official explanation about the company will be made when its artistic director, Peggy van Praagh, returns to Australia from New Zealand. But certainly plans are going ahead for another Australian tour next year.

Vienna Stagehands Ask Raise Despite Deficit

Vienna, July 16.

Because the union of stagehands asked for a pay raise (some get only $60 a month), a press campaign was launched by a local newspaper against the city of Vienna, claiming it does "nothing" for culture. Though the average Viennese knows what the city has done so far for the legit (privately owned) institutions, the city magistrate issued a report showing the subsidies go into the millions of Schillings (thousands of dollars).

While the opera, Burgtheatre, Volksopera and Academy are state-owned, their deficit is covered by the Ministry of Finance while the deficit of the privately-owned houses is more than covered by the City of Vienna.

Idle Entertainers In Germany Grow, Present Real Problem to Govt.

Frankfurt, July 16.

An unusual office is functioning in full-force here to help out-of-work entertainers get jobs. Called the Central Office for Artists, it is run by the Federal Employment Office, and cast as a sort of central casting system for entertainers.

Joe Masat, the general director of the employment office, says that while there is over-employment in many other fields in West Germany, and while workers are still being imported by the thousands from such countries as Greece, Italy and Turkey, the problem of the entertainers is becoming increasingly acute.

He has on his lists several thousand entertainers, including dancers, jugglers, magicians, fire-eaters, comedians and balancing acts. There is increasingly less work for these people and many are seeking part-time jobs out of the entertainment industry.

Variety shows have almost entirely died out, there are only a handful of circuses still functioning, and in the nightclubs operators are more eager to hire the nudie acts and strippers than the other artists.

Television is helping somewhat to fill the gap, but nonetheless the office is at a loss to keep up the needed employment for all the entertainers on its files. Office at the moment, has considerably more people on its files than it has work available, Masat noted.

60 to 94 German Films On '63-'64 Program But B.O: Quality Dubious; Main Trend to Cheap Crime Yarns

Frankfurt, July 16.

"A kiss—a shot—and then nothing," in the words of a top West German film critic, sums up what the West German filmmakers are offering to the theatre public in this country on the 1963-64 calendar. Meanwhile, the American "big seven," who are members of MPEA, will be offering 159 standout pix. So it looks as if the U. S. distributors can expect a good hold on about 40% of the film boxoffice receipts.

Competition for Yank fare comes mainly from the two German distributors who are still considered in the chips. Constantin is offering 41 films, of which 23 are German productions. Gloria is coming up with 19 films, of which 12 are German productions. A couple of the German entries are putting heavy emphasis on sex—"Erotica," and "Moral 63."

But the main approach of the German filmmakers to the new selling season seems to be via the lower-priced German "krimis" the name here for criminal stories. Of 94 German productions "announced" for the upcoming year (some experts predict only about a half will actually be turned out), there are 23 criminal pix, including seven alone from Edgar Wallace (who could apparently keep his head well above water on the German royalties alone).

Aero, a smaller distributor, for instance, is offering "The Taxi Murderer," directed by Raphael Nussbaum, and Atlas has "Police Headquarters David's Watch" on its production schedule.

Constantin (which is brave enough to bring out another remake of "Charley's Aunt") is also offering "Secret of the Black Widow" and "White Spider." Europa is coming up with a German-made murder story called, "Murder By Fog," plus another horror film, "Jack the Ripper."

Among Gloria's killer classics are "Secret of the Red Junk" and "Hangman from London," both German productions for the next season.

Lex Barker Big Favorite

Most popular actor for leads in upcoming German films is ex-Tarzan, Lex Barker. Following the tremendous click of his "western," filmed in Yugoslavia last year, ("Treasure of Silver Lake") Barker is signed to be starred in six German films next season.

Three are being distributed by Constantin, and two of them are German - made "westerns," "Old Shatterhands, Greatest Adventure" (with Carlos Thompson and Senta Berger) and "Winnetou."

In addition, Constantin is also doing a German remake of the successful American western, "Last of the Mohicans."

Following Lex Barker for the most leads in the German films on next year's schedule is Liselotte Pulver (also an actress in several Universal films) who has five leads, along with German comic Heinz Ruehmann and Goetz George.

Maria Schell in 3 German Pix

Maria Schell, who left her German picture-making to concentrate on Hollywood roles for several years, will be back with three German productions, a comedy titled, "Whiskey with Sofa," in another called "The Woman of the Year," co-starring with O. W. Fischer; and "October with Magdalena."

Apparently no sensations, no multi-million dollar productions, and no productions of the classics that once raised the standards of the German films are in tap for the next year.

Of the American distributors, 20th-Fox is offering 15 films; Columbia-Bavaria (the new merger between Columbia Films and Bavaria of Germany) has 40 films; Metro has announced 36, Paramount, 15; United Artists, 21; Universal, 16, and WB, 16.

Germany's Export Union To Close Foreign Spots

Rome, July 16.

Reports that Germany's Export Union will close down all its foreign offices the end of this year were confirmed here by E-U's Rome rep, Otto E. Rock. Export Union is a government-subsidized outfit designed to favor and publicize the expansion and circulation of the German film in foreign countries. Italy, France, Spain, Japan have similar organizations.

Quoted locally, Rock, however, said he felt that the announcement was not irrevocable, but had been made by Export Union because group has been threatened with a cutoff of its annual subsidy.

Hong Kong Govt. Bans 'Peking' Because of Its Boxer Rebellion Plot

Hong Kong, July 16.

"55 Days at Peking" picture based on the Boxer Rebellion, has been banned for public showing by the Hong Kong government. The Rank Organization, which was to have distributed the film here, intends to make an official protest against the ruling.

Banning of the film came as no surprise to exhibitors familiar with government's rigid film policy on films of a controversial and political nature.

Another film, "On the Waterfront" (Col), was banned some years ago because of the highly explosive labor overtones in it, which the government here was afraid might lead to incidents. Recently another Brando starrer, "Ugly American" (U) was shown, but speculation was high on whether the film would pass the censors.

As for "Peking," the government did not give any explanation about its banning. But it was obvious to most people that the film was barred for two reasons:

Firstly because the film was believed derogatory to the Chinese people, and so might produce local tension.

Secondly Hong Kong's political relations with Red China might be antagonized by its showing.

As evinced by the titles above, Munich's present film boom shows a definite trend towards "comedy sexploration" accomplishments of which, e.g. "The Black-White-Red Fourposter," "Confessions of a Subtenant," "Always on Weekdays" turned out clicks at the home b.o. and even good prospects for U.S. sale; a couple of more coming up, "The House in Montevideo" (Domnick production, with Heinz Ruhmann and Ruth Leuwerick) and Seitz-made "The Swedish Virgin," fall in the same category, as the "house" in the first is decidedly not a home, and the heroine of the second won't be at the end what she used to be at the beginning.

'Reef' Back on Location

Honolulu, July 23.

"Donovan's Reef" (Par), much of which was filmed on Kauai island, is having its first Hawaiian run in the Royal circuit's day-and-dating King, Palace and Waialae Drice-in theatres.

Local ads include the catchline: "All the action filmed in Kauai."

Taylor Chasing a Tainted Tomato? McDermott Says 'Nothing Breached'

Thomas McDermott, Four Star prexy, denied in a prepared statement over the weekend that his agreement with NBC for the production of the Robert Taylor tv series for next season had been breached. NBC took the Taylor series off the schedule last week and replaced it with Warner Bros.' "Temple Houston." Understood both Four Star and NBC have consulted with their attorneys on imminent legal action. With five hours already completed, some $750,000 has already gone into production of the 26-week series to which NBC was committed.

It marks the first time that a major hour entry was knocked off a network tv schedule before ever getting on the air.

"We are not in breach of our agreement and we are now as we have been in the past prepared to meet our obligations in all respects," declared McDermott. "We have always had the cooperation of the Department of Health, Education & Welfare (on which the Taylor series was based). Recently we went to Washington to improve our liaison and as a matter of fact our story editor is now in Washington discussing procedures of closer working relationship with the Department.

"We have also suggested that members of the Department come to the studio from time to time to insure proper departmental procedures in the filming of the series and the factual content of the programs. Our conversations with representatives of REW have led us to believe that they are desirous of affording the fullest cooperation in order to have a series in the public interest and of the highest possible quality."

In Washington, Harvey Bush, HEW public information director, said that the department never gave official sanction to the series. He added, "neither did we open our files to the writers."

At NBC inquiries were met with "no comment."

Budget per picture is said to be around $125,000.

WB's "Temple Houston" was on NBC-TV's docket for the '64-'65 season and marks the first network sale under the new regime of Jack Webb. New hour show is a western with a legal backdrop and costars Jeffrey Hunter and Jack Elam.

At the end of last week, none of the scatter plan advertisers in the partially-sold Taylor series had cancelled out of the time slot. Presumably, the participators would be sticking with the new entry. Bankrollers included Buick, Helena Rubinstein, S. C. Johnson, Heinz, Sherwin-Williams and Lehn & Fink.

Desilu's Thorpe Dickers Deal With Nat Hiken, But So Do All Others

Hollywood, July 23.

Producer-writer Nat Hiken, here from N.Y. on what he terms an "exploratory" trip, has received a number of offers from vidfilmeries and motion picture studios. While Hiken declined to name the companies involved it is known that Desilu Studios is negotiating for the top tv comedy writer-producer-creator, and he was in conversation with Desilu production chief Jerry Thorpe. Also reported Four Star has been talking a deal.

Hiken said a number of Hollywood studios had contacted him while he was in N.Y., that he has made no decision as yet regarding his future plans.

Hiken last season was the producer-creator of "Car 54, Where Are You?," on NBC-TV, and prior to that was producer-creator of the "Sgt. Bilko" series starring Phil Silvers on CBS-TV.

BBC-USSR Agree On Interchange Of TV Programs

London, July 23.

Following several across-the-table meetings and some in-the-field operations, BBC has landed an agreement with USSR broadcasters for an interchange of programs between the two countries and a facilities deal where under each nation can make vidshows on the other's soil.

Still in its early stages of development, it is understood that the new agreement will mean the exchange of special event programs, sports shows, music and other art shows, and certain outside broadcasts. Facility-wise, both the Russians and the British will lay on studios and more mobile equipment if either country is to shoot as guest of the partner country. Also agreed between the two broadcasting orgs is the attachment of staff to meet specialized needs.

Hugh Carleton Greene, Director General of BBC, is scheduled to visit Russia in September 1964.

ABC Flacks—No Hacks

ABC-TV's softball team, whose won-lost record has tagged them as the "Mets of the broadcast league," are on a one-game winning streak. Playing in the home of the Mets, the Polo Grounds, ABC's Flacks planted a 5-2 defeat on NBC's Flying Peacocks.

The victory was hailed by the ABC as the harbinger of a bigger and better 1963-64 schedule—baseball, that is. For the Peacocks, it was a total rout. They suggested the Polo Grounds and paid for it.

Vincent Edwards, American Broadcasting Co., James Moser, Bing Crosby Productions and Otto Clement were named co-defendants in a $5,000,000 plagiarism suit filed in L.A. Superior Court Friday (19) by author Jeanette Selez.

Miss Selez charged that "formats, situations and ideas" were lifted from her novel, "Hope Deferred" for use in "Ben Casey" series. Book, author stated, was based on her brother's medical career, and had been submitted to Moser, then with "Medic" series, but was not returned. Her attorney, Lionel Campbell, alleged Moser drew from book when creating "Ben Casey" teleseries.

The 100G 'Plot'

Here's how ABC-TV's allegedly rig-proof "100 Grand" quiz show, bowing in September, will work. The show will pit an amateur expert against a professional authority in a chosen field. The pros will be selected by Chambers of Commerce across the country. The contestants will each prepare the questions which they will fire at each other, the questions being prepared immediately prior to the show. After the first week of an amateur's appearance, viewers may also send in questions on the field of knowledge.

If the contestant defeats five successive challengers, he gets the $100,000 if he also hurdles five questions posed by the public and selected by an electronic computer. If the contestant wins in four successive weeks, he collects $40,000 if, once again, he answers five questions submitted by the public. A three-week stand gets $30,000. If the amateur is defeated on his second or third week, and fails to win against the public, he gets a $1,000 savings bond. In the try for the big jackpot, he gets $2,500 for each of the five viewer questions he answers correctly. The professional expert is paid off with $500 bond plus an additional $500 if he defeats his opponent.

Dip in Revenues Cues Bid For Major Probe of Canada B'casting

Ottawa, July 23.

In the face of annually-dipping commercial revenues, the Canadian Broadcasting Corp., in its annual report to parliament, seeks two major changes: some method of longterm financing of the corporation and a major probe of all broadcasting in Canada.

The report, signed by CBC's president, J. Alphonse Ouimet, showed CBC commercial revenues still on the downswing. This is blamed on the tv advertising squeeze by private stations and the CTV web. The report, covering the fiscal year ending March 31, 1963, listed a total outlay of $108,365,882 for all domestic tv and AM operations. The corporation had scheduled for more but the mid-year austerity program of the federal government held increases to $754,728.

Normally, CBC receives one-third of its money from commercial revenues, the rest coming from a vote of parliament. After a $4,000,000 reduction in commercial intake in 1961, the corporation's 1962 commercial revenues dropped a further $1,917,258. Ouimet claimed in the report that "the trend of decreasing revenues has been materially arrested" but added he could see no significant increase to come. CBC, he said, was selling all it could sell and there were no sizeable new sources in sight. CBC will not accept sponsorship for many of its shows and refuses to advertise certain products. The CBC directors believed more products should go on the "unacceptable" list.

Ouimet believed CBC had done well the job for which it was established. "Nothing," he said, "has done more to achieve these national purposes than has national broadcasting in the last quarter-century."

The "national purposes" outlined the CBC pres. were: to broaden the picture of Canada reflected to Canadians; to give the different parts of the country more opportunities for representation on the national networks; to link the widely-scattered parts of the country together; to help each part to understand and appreciate the

Benny Tops Irish TAMs

Dublin, July 23.

"Jack Benny Show" tops the TAM ratings for Telefilm Eireann (Irish TV) in the latest survey period. With a rating of 67 it is two points ahead of "Desilu Playhouse," and eight points ahead of the third program on the list—the locally-produced dance show "Country Style."

Of the "Top Ten" eight are American-produced shows and in addition to Benny and Desilu include "Rescue Eight," "Silents Please," "The Wide Country," "Rough Riders," "Father Knows Best" and "Bat Masterson."

$9,181,975 Net 11-Month Profit For British A-R

London, July 23.

London's weekday major commercial tv contractor, Associated Rediffusion, whose gross ad income fell 6% in 1962 compared with the previous year showed a group net profit of $9,181,975 for 11 months to March 31, 1963. The station is paying a final dividend of 17½%, making 27½% tax free for the period. That is equivalent to the 30% net paid for the previous year when group net profit was $10,170,983.

This year's depreciation accounted for $935,558 (against $1,048,569) and $9,487,013 was paid in tax which compared with $12,840,002 last year.

Results do not include those of three A-R subsidiaries apart from a dividend received amounting to $24,504 ($158,740) and proportion of the profits attributable to A-R for the year ended April 30, 1963 is $245,508 ($255,915). General reserves receives $2,800,000 ($4,200,000).

Some 50% of the company's capital is held by British Electric Traction group and 37½% by Rediffusion, and the balance by individuals.

Above results have tagged A-R in the City as the "odd man out" among the big major video stations. For although, like Associated Television, its profits are down, they are not dipped to anything like the 26% drop recorded by ATV.

And in contrast to ATV and Granada, which have both reduced their dividend this year, the London midweeker has held the equivalent of a 30% dividend. ATV cut its final from 40% to 21¼% and Granada's last interim dropped from 22½% to 20%.

Dave Schoenbrun 'Still Talking' NBC-TV Deal; DeGaulle Bio Due in Nov.

David Schoenbrun, ex-CBS, says he is still talking with NBC's William R. McAndrew on "noncompetitive" telenews coverage, and specifically two documentaries having to do with Asia and Africa. Theory is "not to interfere" with the NBC-TV newsman in territories where the network is fully serviced.

Schoenbrun has taken an apartment at the Algonquin Hotel, New York, as his business office base, and will shuttle between Washington (end-week) and Gotham (Mon.-Wed.). His family is closing up their D.C. house and will summer on Long Island.

Schoenbrun also reiterates he is not going into any public relations business; is rushing his book, "Man On A Dark Horse: The Life and Times of Charles DeGaulle" for Nov. 15 in order to make Atheneum's spring list; is talking a syndicated column, teeing off Jan. 1, either via the N.Y. Herald-Tribune-Marshall Field or the (Bob) Hall syndicate.

DOW JONES & 485 MADISON AVE.

NBC-TV's Below-the-Line Rap

Hollywood, July 23.

NBC-TV has lost out in its bid to utilize its virtually dormant Burbank studio facilities for the taping of the Danny Kaye and Judy Garland CBS shows. Up until last Thursday it appeared a tossup whether the plum (toting up to a nearly $4,000,000 per annum windfall for use of studio facilities) would go to Burbank or CBS Television City. CBS finally won out.

Both shows are on the CBS sked, but since they're outside packages, the decision where to tape did not rest with CBS. NBC, faced with an $18,000,000 white elephant, for all the fact that the Burbank facilities represent some of the finest in the world, wanted the two shows badly. With a below-the-line tab of $40,000 per week for each show and both representing a total of 90 weeks, that kind of fancy loot would have gone a long way toward putting Burbank back in business.

But the decision went against NBC, with result that Burbank will not have a single weekly nighttime network organization going for it next season. (The daytime entries are relatively unimportant in terms of amortization since it's possible to tape a whole week of shows in a day and a half and, anyway, hardly makes use of the shops, wardrobe rooms, etc.)

In sharp contrast, Television City will be operating at peak production in '63-'64 with all four major studios going full blast on behalf of Kaye, Garland, Red Skelton, Jack Benny and Art Linkletter.

Stan Freberg's Religioso Jingles

'Un-Preachy' (Yet With That Pop Music Sound) Bid For Recruits Gets A Dry Run

Stan Freberg, Hollywood recording artist (Capitol), radio commercial jingleer (he writes 'em for Chun King chowmein, Contadina tomato juice and other sponsors), himself a Baptist and son of Baptist minister, the Rev. Victor R. Freberg, 65, who now does sporadic evangelical work at the Los Angeles County Jail (about two or three times a month, says his son), is $3,700 out-of-pocket, but he did produce a set of radio jingles for the United Presbyterian Church of the United States. They are not intended to convert or even gain recruits for the church or recoup the countless "unchurched" young folk.

If, by the light approach, the Presbyterians' test program gains enough impact with the younger people, it will be sufficiently rewarding. Freberg says he approached his jingle-a-linging with the thought to make young Americans realize that sometimes it "gets a little lonely without the spiritual end in one's life." The approach "had to be with sound Christian humor" and yet not make fun about the young people's attitude about religion which, from the viewpoint of the "sponsors" (the United Presbyterian Church of the U. S.), has been that too many have too little "attitude" at all as regards religion.

The Rev. Charles Brackbill, who succeeded Robert Jeamby as head of the radio-tv department of the Ministry of UPC of the U. S., tested the jingles by taking rock 'n' roll tapes off WINS and WABC, New York pop programs, and interlarding Freberg's jingles. It was a sort of running it up on the radio pulpit and see how it swings.

The jingles "played well" on this dry run, and will be more realistically tested shortly with paid spots on midwest radio in two key Central States stations.

The jingles are not r&r but have a "smooth rhythm, something akin to show tunes," says Freberg, so that they can readily interpolate

Borg-Warner In 500G NBC Splurge

Chicago, July 23.

NBC-TV picked up another $500,000 in fourth-quarter participation coin last week when Borg-Warner, through Edward Weiss agency signed up for 18 spots concentrated in a six-week period. Sponsor is putting the bundle on a new consumer product which it will be introducing this fall.

In the scatter plan, 14 spots will go into the prime time schedule and the remaining four in "Tonight."

BBC-TV'S DEAL FOR DANNY KAYE SHOW

London, July 23.

BBC-TV has picked up "The Danny Kaye Show" from CBS. The hour-long program is slated as one of the "star attractions" which will be used to get BBC-II off the ground when it bows in April.

Only other program so far to be firmed up for the new channel is "The Great War," a documentary of 26 one-hour segments.

WALLS ST. TAKES STOCK OF CBS

BY GEORGE ROSEN

They're not saying it out loud, but some of the top brass around the 485 Madison Ave. precincts of CBS are crystal-balling the immediate future, based on recent Wall St. performance, the earnings picture and the shapeup of the '63-'64 schedule, in terms of a better than $40,000,000 profit margin in the next year's span. Since that's better than $10,000,000 over the '62 profit statement and since no matter how you cut up the Columbia corporate structure it's basically tv that spells the difference, that $40,000,000 plus target-for-tomorrow translates itself into nothing short of a "Miracle On 52d St." Yet that's what the boys are saying.

The fact remains the CBS stock, which moved into the 60s last week and representing a 10-point rise in six weeks or so, appears to be the "darling" of the Wall St. fraternity, reflecting the network's continuing round of alltime peak billings. If, as the Dow Jones saying goes, what happens on the market today anticipates the shape of things six months hence—and it's hardly a secret that the Wall St. brokerage houses are recommending CBS as a buy—it's generally concluded that the money men have been scouting the Madison Ave. and Hollywood purlieus as a forecast of what could or might happen in the intramural network sweepstakes next season. (While the market slump of the past week, affecting virtually all issues, has not escaped CBS, apparently it has in no way diminished Wall St. en-

U.S. Comedy Skeins Now Displace Westerns and Cop Shows on Brit. TV

London, July 23.

It was once Westerns and cop shows and latterly it has been courtroom dramas and hospital skeins that have attracted the British buyer of American vidfilm. But now U.S. distributors are noticing a strong swing over to comedy skeins.

Of the two networks here, the independent outlet with its 15 limbs, is proving the best customer to date. Granada Television, for instance, has stepped into the comedy buying field in a big way.

Major has picked up five Yank comedies hitherto unseen in this country. Five of these have been slotted from 6.05-6.30 pm, Mondays through Friday, an unprecedented scheduling pattern in the history of presenting U.S. product.

On Mondays, Granada screens "The Hathaways,"which it picked up from Screen Gems; Tuesdays, the station has "Life With Father" from the CBS stable; on Wednesdays it runs "The Jetsons," also from Screen Gems; Thursdays night is "Tom Ewell Show" (from Four Star) night and Friday at 6.05 p.m. is "Fasten Your Safety Belt" (MCA).

Granada policy in slotting American comedy product in this preprime time berth on weekdays, follows a series of successful dry runs of the idea with such series as "Beverley Hillbillies," "Our Man Higgins," "Holiday Lodge" and, some time earlier, "Mr. Ed."

Granada, according to some sources, has also picked up "The Danny Thomas Show" but the station has denied this. But it does confirm that it's in the market for a second series of "Beverley Hillbillies" for, screening in the fall.

"Hillbillies," says CBS, is spreading all over the commercial web here. After Granada's pioneer run with it, Associated Television has snapped it up for screening in London in the fall and, the distributor confidently expects, for the Midlands region, too. Other regions on the independent outlet which have elected to buy it include TWW, Westward Television and Tyne Tees Television.

Action at 30 Rock

In an interview last week, Mort Werner, NBC-TV program chieftain, suggested to VARIETY that the workload was such today that the networks might possibly have to consider for the future a tandem operation—one v.p. to mastermind the current schedule, another v.p. to project for the future.

In less time than he could say "maybe I shouldn't have said that," Werner was beseiged with telephone calls last Wednesday from a flock of aspirants, including some key agency people, seeking the alternate job.

It will be a joint venture between Metro and Cohen's company.

AM Spots Promoting ABC TV Shows Get Some Rival Affil Resistance —On Other Madison Ave. Fronts

By BILL GREELEY

C. J. LaRoche agency has come up with a scheme for promoting new client ABC-TV's new season that's a bold thrust by industry terms and original by any standards.

A spot radio campaign, with anywhere from 500 to 1,000 minute spots a week in top television markets to promote ABC-TV's new shows, new time slots for old shows etc. is in the works. One medium's use of another for promotion is not unusual, but, in this case, the campaign may well include radio affiliates of tv stations in direct competition with an ABC outlet, stations that are affiliates of NBC and CBS and, possibly, even a couple of stations that are NBC and CBS o&o's.

Agency prexy C. J. LaRoche says the plan has met with a modicum of resistance so far—"some won't, some will"—but, anyhow, all the markets contemplated have several radio stations to approach; and a saturation radio buy isn't that hard to come by these days.

Campaign is definitely set for the o&o's with the full month of September contemplated for at least the top 30 tv markets, then downwards by tv rank.

A spokesman in the LaRoche radio-tv department says that the campaign has been discussed with CBS and ABC o&o operators at New York headquarters with prospect of a deal not out of the question. He points out that the network-owned outlets are not the toprated in most cases, and for that reason most likely, only two or three would be used.

Hobbs' Bah Humbug

Benton & Bowles senior veepee took a sharp rap at "show-off humor" in advertising at a session of Advertising Age mag's creative workshop, saying the contrived funny stuff along with stereotyped images was keeping bright, young talents out of the business.

"The bright, serious, dedicated students we want the most are the ones that the advertising agency business is appealing to the least," declared Hobbs. "Why? Because we are presenting ourselves as the fun and games business, and these youngsters—believe me—are in no mood for fun and games . . . We are promising today's graduates what looks like big money—and what looks like a soft, easy career. And they aren't particularly impressed. The Peace Corps, on the other hand, is offering them just the opposite: long hours, rough work, lousy conditions and low pay . . . Bright kids today are looking for a challenge; they won't settle for anything less. They want to save the world. Or at least they want to do something to help improve it. They want to be sure that what they're doing is worth doing.

Hobbs drew a parallel between a superficial approach to advertising and Edward Albee's current legiter, "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" which he called, "a scathing study of cynicism and empty social values. "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? I am," said Hobbs.

Adsville: Phil Cohen, who recently switched from radio-tv director to management supervisor on the American Tobacco account at Sullivan, Stauffer, Colwell & Bayles, has been named a senior veepee. He's been with the agency since its founding in 1946 . . . Richard K. Manoff Inc. has picked up the American Home Foods' G. Washington line of instant broths and seasonings. Agency recently acquired the company's Gulden's mustards.

Ask 30-Sec. Restriction On Wine, Beer Com'ls For Ontario Stations

Toronto, July 23.

A 30-second time limit on beer and wine commercials, via tv and radio messages in Ontario, was proposed over the weekend by Alan Grossman, chief liquor commissioner. (Ontario has about one-third of Canada's population of some 18,000,000). Current regulations will insist that commercials not be designed to promote the general use of beer and wine production.

New rule will eliminate the fill portion and permit a maximum commercial of 30 seconds and also sets a schedule of the number of commercials for programs of different lengths, ranging from two for a 10-minute program to 10 for a 90-minute program on tv, but cutting the type of commercials to a maximum 10 seconds in which the name of the program and its brand-name sponsor is used.

New ruling breaks down a 60-second beer and wine commercial into two parts—a 48-second fill-in which does not permit mention of the brand-name or product and a 12-second sponsorship announcement.

CBS Preps Round Of Star Junkets

Weekend star junkets of CBS-TV program personalities kicks off Aug. 10, making the third year of this highly successful new season promotional push.

This year, the weekend tours will extend over a four-week period, with the accent on new personalities. Eight key cities in various sections of the country are included in the junket. What happens in actuality is that the city visited becomes the focal point for other CBS-TV affils and nearby newspapers, radios, etc. Thereby, by booking Atlanta, Miami, Denver, Dallas Cincinnatti, St. Louis, Boston and Washington, a good deal of the country gets saturated.

Stars, under the schedule, visit two cities per weekend. For the kickoff weekend of Aug. 10-11, for example, the cities on the agenda are Atlanta and Miami, with the following personalities tentatively slated for the junket: Keith Andes (Glynnis); Bea Benaderet (Petticoat Junction); Paul Brinegar (Rawhide); Nancy Kulp (Beverly Hillbillies); Ray Walston (My Favorite Martian) ;Elizabeth Wilson (East Side, West Side); and Ethel Winant, associate producer, (Great Adventure).

Other personalities tentatively slated, if filming dates can be juggled for the junket, include John Houseman, William Talman, Jerry Van Dyke, Bill Bixby, Glynis Johns, Rod Serling and Rose Marie.

Barbash's Sci-Fi 'ISD'

Hollywood, July 23.

NBC-TV and producer Bob Barbash have finalized a co-production deal for a sci-fi vidpix series, "ISD."

Hourlong series to be lensed by Barbash's company is aimed at the 1964-65 season.

Bob Wilson's Wall St. Melon

Bob Wilson, broadcasting's busiest newscaster who works around the clock for NBC radio and television, has discovered how to make a buck out of Wall Street. It's not that he's a bull or a bear, but that he's converted stock news into a news commodity which is very much in demand.

Wilson points out that there are now 17,000,000 owners of stock in the U.S. with the total growing at the rate of about a 100,000 a month. Of this aggregrate of stock owners, over half are women, a fact of some significance for daytime programming.

Wilson has cut a solid niche for himself on the web with his financial tidbits on NBC Radio weekends and on the tv side, he contributes a Wall Street news special as part of the 7 p.m. tv show. He not only analyzes the market, but comes up with some hot news which is credited with having quite an impact on the market some days. Wilson was among the first on the air with a financial news segment, but now has been joined by many others across the country on local stations.

Wilson's segment has clicked to the point where NBC is planning extended financial news coverage, NBC's "Monitor" is planning to have Wilson interview top celebrities on financial tips, how to save money, etc. He's lined up such names as Milton Berle, Liberace, Kim Novak, etc., for their segments which will run a couple of minutes.

SHAPE OF THINGS TO COME

The Picketing Prince & Princess

Freedom demonstrators from the Bronx to Birmingham and beyond have been creating giant headlines of late while the most persistent protest pickets of all have been virtually overlooked.

Prince Onago and Princess Muana, Negro team featuring Afro ethnic and Afro-American vocals and rhythm, have been toting protest signs around NBC's Rockefeller Center headquarters for the last 48 days, they say (at the end of last week), without a nod from network or press. They've been joined recently during their 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. stint by Negro actress Lola Lamont. CORE and NAACP members have joined in from time to time. Vet actor P. Jay Sidney has stopped by. A "Madison Avenue fellow" was among those who have stopped to sympathize. He told the couple that his agency had okayed a show with Negro couples at a party only to have the client strip the sequence out before air time.

Otherwise, it's been a long-running twosome with NBC the target instead of CBS and ABC because, the couple says, they appeared on Merv Griffith's "Play Your Hunch" in 1961, were a huge hit and were told they would do four more shows. Since, they say, they have been almost totally snubbed by the network's brass.

Couple carry reversible sandwich boards with a typical one asking NBC what ever became of the promises of fair representation for Negro talents—technical, executive and creative—made at the Adam Clayton Powell hearings re fair employment practices in entertainment.

Couple has cut a Jubilee LP, "Roots of Rhythm," and do club dates, but are unemployed at the time.

W. German TV Digs Crime Shows

Infratest Study Reveals They're at the Top Of the Rating Heap

Frankfurt, July 23.

Generally, the films that attract the most viewers to the two West German television nets are the criminal pictures, an Infratest study has just revealed here.

The criminal stories, "Detective Story," "The Television Court," were among the highest-rated shows with the audiences in April and May on the First Television Network. But sharing the top ratings of the First Net were the homespun comedy "Family Hesselbach" and "Magazine of Record Hits."

On the Second Net, the criminal pics again took the top audience pollings, with "The Criminal Museum" and "Hobby Horse," another criminal pic, and a comedy "Auf Wiedersehen on Time" also in the tops.

Documentaries on both nets, including "Negroes in North America" on the First Net and "Negroes in South America" on the Second Network were not so well received.

Highest ratings of the entire year went to a criminal series called "Tim Frazer," to the showings from the Mainz Carnival fest, and "The Family Hesselbach"—with an 80% rating of all the country's 8,000,000 sets for these shows.

For the first time in West Germany, a television net is coming out with an "actual" criminal series here.

The new Second Television Network has put Frankfurt's criminal police director Albert Kalk to work as technical adviser of a series called "Without Chin Blows and Revolver."

The series shows genuine criminal police stories from the German records, tracking down the crimi-

ABC-TV Pins Hope On Ike, Truman

ABC-TV's efforts to obtain the services of former President Harry S. Truman and Dwight D. Eisenhower as commentators during next year's Democratic and Republican national conventions are still being pressed forward. Jim Hagerty, the web's news chief, flatly refused to comment on this move, but it's known that the web has been thinking of some dramatic maneuver to get into contention for the pre-election and election night coverage.

Press secretary for Pres. Eisenhower during his eight-year administration, Hagerty has a real possibility of persuading his former boss to work with the ABC news team next summer during the political

TWW Profits Down

London, July 23.

For the half year to June 30, 1963, TWW has shown a drop in profits, but has declared an unchanged interim dividend of 35% and it has been forecast that a total dividend of 95% for the year will be maintained.

After depreciation, profits for the six months are running at $1,864,511. This compares with $2,031,307 for the corresponding period last year. The net profit is $814,511 against $939,307 after estimated tax of $1,050,000 ($1,092,000).

Chi Broadcasters' Big Breakthrough On Negro Hirings

Chicago, July 23.

Another major breakthrough of the color barrier in this longtime lily white broadcast market will occur on Aug. 26 when singer Lurlean Hunter joins the vocal staff of WBBM Radio, one of the few stations left in the U. S. which still programs live music. She becomes the fourth Negro to get a fulltime on-the-air assignment with one of the major stations here within the past year or so and the first who is not strictly a news reporter.

Just as the other stations had stated when they took their first step towards integration, WBBM noted firmly that the singer was hired on the basis of her artistic qualifications rather than for racial reasons. In this case the assertion would seem to hold water, because Miss Hunter has long been regarded the finest pop singer residing in Chicago, and she has worked steadily in jazz rooms and in Rush St. cabarets since 1952. She'll start with the CBS station when she completes a four-week engagement at the Edgewater Beach Polynesian Village, one of the Windy Citys' smart niteries.

Sister station WBBM-TV was the first of the essentially all-white stations to give a Negro a significant broadcasting role here when it hired Ben Holman from the Daily News as an on-the-street news reporter. Holman was plucked by CBS News for a spot in New York a few months later, and the tv station then grabbed Wendell Smith from the American as his replacement. As if to offset its rival's one-upmanship, NBC News (WNBQ-WMAQ) imported

CBS, ABC SET '64-'65 PATTERN

Even before the current season gets under way, the shape of network television during 1964-65 is now assuming fairly definite outlines. On top of the 39 '64-65 projected NBC-TV shows (detailed in last week's VARIETY), CBS-TV is now focusing on the development of about 10 hour shows and seven half-hours while ABC-TV has lined up 20 pilot projects for the season after next, broken down into eight hours and 12 half-hours.

Fact that CBS is projecting the fewest number of pilots for '64-65 stems from the web's star-minded orientation. Like the upcoming season, when it failed to buy a single Revue Productions show, the web is shunning studio labels in its longrange planning.

On CBS-TV's agenda for 1964-65 are these one-hour shows:

(1) A dramatic series set in the contemporary midwest written by playwright William Inge.

(2) A series written by Jerome Weidman and based on experiences of a local newspaper publisher in a semi-suburban New England town.

(3) A James Moser series about state government politics.

(4) A series with Jackie Cooper as acounty agent.

(5) A Fred Coe series about a freelance magazine writer.

(6) "The Nut House," a Jay Ward live show with a broad comedy approach.

(7) Two shows by Leslie Steven's Daystar company: an adaptation of "The Magnificent Seven" and "John Stryker."

(8) "Barbary Coast," a spinoff on "Gunsmoke" with a 19th Century setting.

(9) A new Herb Brodkin series.

(10) A series with a southeast Asia locale developed by Eugene Burdick, co-author of "Fail-Safe."

In the half-hour category, CBS-TV has the following series in mind: "Steve Hill," a comedy series by Ben Hecht; a show being written by Elaine May for Goodson-Todman; a comedy stanza by Sultan & Wirth; a comedy show, "My Son, The Witchdoctor," by Bill Manoff; "Gilligan's Island," by Sherwood Schwartz; a Devery Framer-Milt Rosen show about an absent-minded professor; and a Sy Howard comedy.

ABC-TV has unveiled only a handful of its 1964-65 projects, among them the hourly series, "Peyton Place," "Greatest Bible Stories," "Federal Investigator" and "Travels With Charlie" and a half-hour comedy series with George Burns and Dorothy Provine. Web execs prefer not to tip their hands on the rest of the shows in progress.

NISS ANKLES REVUE TO JOIN MGM-TV

Hollywood, July 23.

Producer Stanley Niss has obtained his release from Revue studios and is joining MGM-TV as a vidfilm producer. Niss' first assignment at the Metro lot will be on the pilot of the studio's "Great Stories From the Bible," being readied for ABC-TV as a 1964-65 venture.

Niss has been with Revue for several months, and was one of several producers assigned to that studio's 90-min. series, "Arrest and Trial," which stars Chuck Connors and Ben Gazzarra.

L-G-L's 4 Star Deal

Hollywood, July 23.

Production combine of Jules Levy-Arthur Gardner-Arnold Laven has signed an exclusive joint venture deal with Four Star, and will begin work immediately on preparation of three new vidpix properties.

L-G-L combination produced "The Rifleman" and "Robert Taylor's Detectives" with Four Star in the past five years.

B'casters Divided On Civil Rights Issue But Webs Aren't Ducking It

Lowering the Boone

Richard Boone, a write-your-own-ticket talent, is creating high hopes—and high blood pressure—among NBC-TV's programming brass over his hour anthology series preeming this fall.

Boone's independent stance portends sophisticated, adult drama by the medium's standard, and the web execs are prone to the format. But there are limits to what the factotums are willing to sweat out. Proposed stanzas themed to prostitution and homosexuality have been nixed.

The three television networks have not been and are not running away from the civil rights struggle, an issue which divides the broadcasters more sharply along sectional lines than any other group in the country. But despite the sensitivities of southern affiliates and their suspicion of northern-originated shows on this question, the webs are compiling a courageous record of performance under fire in reporting the current turmoil over the Negro struggle for equal rights.

The webs have not only given extensive straight news coverage to the struggle, but have devoted more time in special documentaries to this question than any other domestic issue. The network documentaries on the Negro problem were something startling a couple of years ago, but since have become almost a commonplace in their frequency. "CBS Reports," for instance, has put on four different shows since last fall on this subject.

ABC-TV, which seemed to anticipate the breaking of the storm with its "Walk in My Shoes" documentary a couple of years ago, is now coming up with five half-hour Sunday night shows on the subject starting in August. These will cover the case for integration, the side of the segregationists, the pending legislation, the March on Washington and a summation. Another hour documentary being produced by Bob Drew under the web's supervision will also focus on the President's handling of the crisis.

NBC has had about 15 documentaries shows on the racial crisis since last September. In addition, discussions about civil rights have been a regular feature on the "Today" show. Chet Huntley is slated to do an hour show about the explosive situation in Washington, D.C., early in the fall. NBC is also preparing a "White Paper" on Rev. Adam Clayton Powell, controversial Negro leader, for next season.

On CBS, "Eyewitness" devoted last week's stanza to the civil rights question and may do another show on the same subject this week.

50-Letter Protest Over Negro Judge On 'Perry Mason'

Hollywood, July 23.

A telepix series which used a Negro as a judge received an abusive mail reaction for so doing, it was revealed by Gail Patrick Jackson, exec producer of the "Perry Mason" series on CBS-TV.

Confirming reports of the negative reaction, Mrs. Jackson said the segment involved was aired the latter part of last season. As a result, about 50 letters were received from all parts of the country, ranging from San Francisco to New York and the deep south. Letter-writers were abusive not only to the show, but Negroes generally, she said. Mrs. Jackson said she believed they were part of a "concerted" campaign because of a similarity in the letters, plus the fact each was from a different city. Only three were from the south.

Mrs. Jackson wrote each complainant, telling them "Mason" had always used Negroes because the series reflects the way L.A. courts are run, and there are Negro judges in the courts here. She assured the critics she was not choosing sides, but merely seeking to present entertainment, at the same time accurately reflecting courts here.

"Mason" used a Negro as a judge earlier last season, but there were no complaints at that time. At one time or another, the series has also used Negro actors as court bailiffs, and members of the audience.

The series plans no change in policy as a result of the letter-writing campaign.

Mrs. Jackson related that some time ago she wanted to sign a beautiful Negro girl to play the role of an elevator operator who becomes a key witness in a murder. The girl she sought to sign was an elevator operator in real life. However, the NAACP stepped into the picture and nixed that on grounds the girl playing the role of an elevator operator would be seen in a menial role.

Calif. Test Case

Sacramento, July 23.

California Attorney General Stanley Mosk has been asked for an opinion on whether the NAACP can force employment of a Negro for a television series. Assemblyman Charles A. Conrad (R.-Sherman Oaks), minority leader of the body, made the request after the NAACP threatened boycott against Ford Motor Co., sponsor of the "Hazel" series, if a Negro were not hired on the crew.

Conrad contended that the NAACP demands are a "flagrant violation of State Fair Employment Practices Act which Negro group helped enact.

Goldwater Nixes CBS Rocky Debate

Dick Salant, CBS news prexy, tried to whip up a pre-Presidential race debate last week between N. Y. Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller and Sen. Barry Goldwater (R., Ariz.), but Goldwater refused to play ball. Rockefeller, however, accepted the invitation and it remains to be seen how and if he'll exploit Goldwater's decision not to tangle on television with his probable opponent for the Republican Presidential nomination next year.

Ton Smith, Goldwater's press secretary, notified Salant that the Arizona Republican "does not intend to engage in any tv programs or other activity which will have the effect of contributing to disunity in the Republican Party." The idea for the debate was sparked by Rockefeller's recent

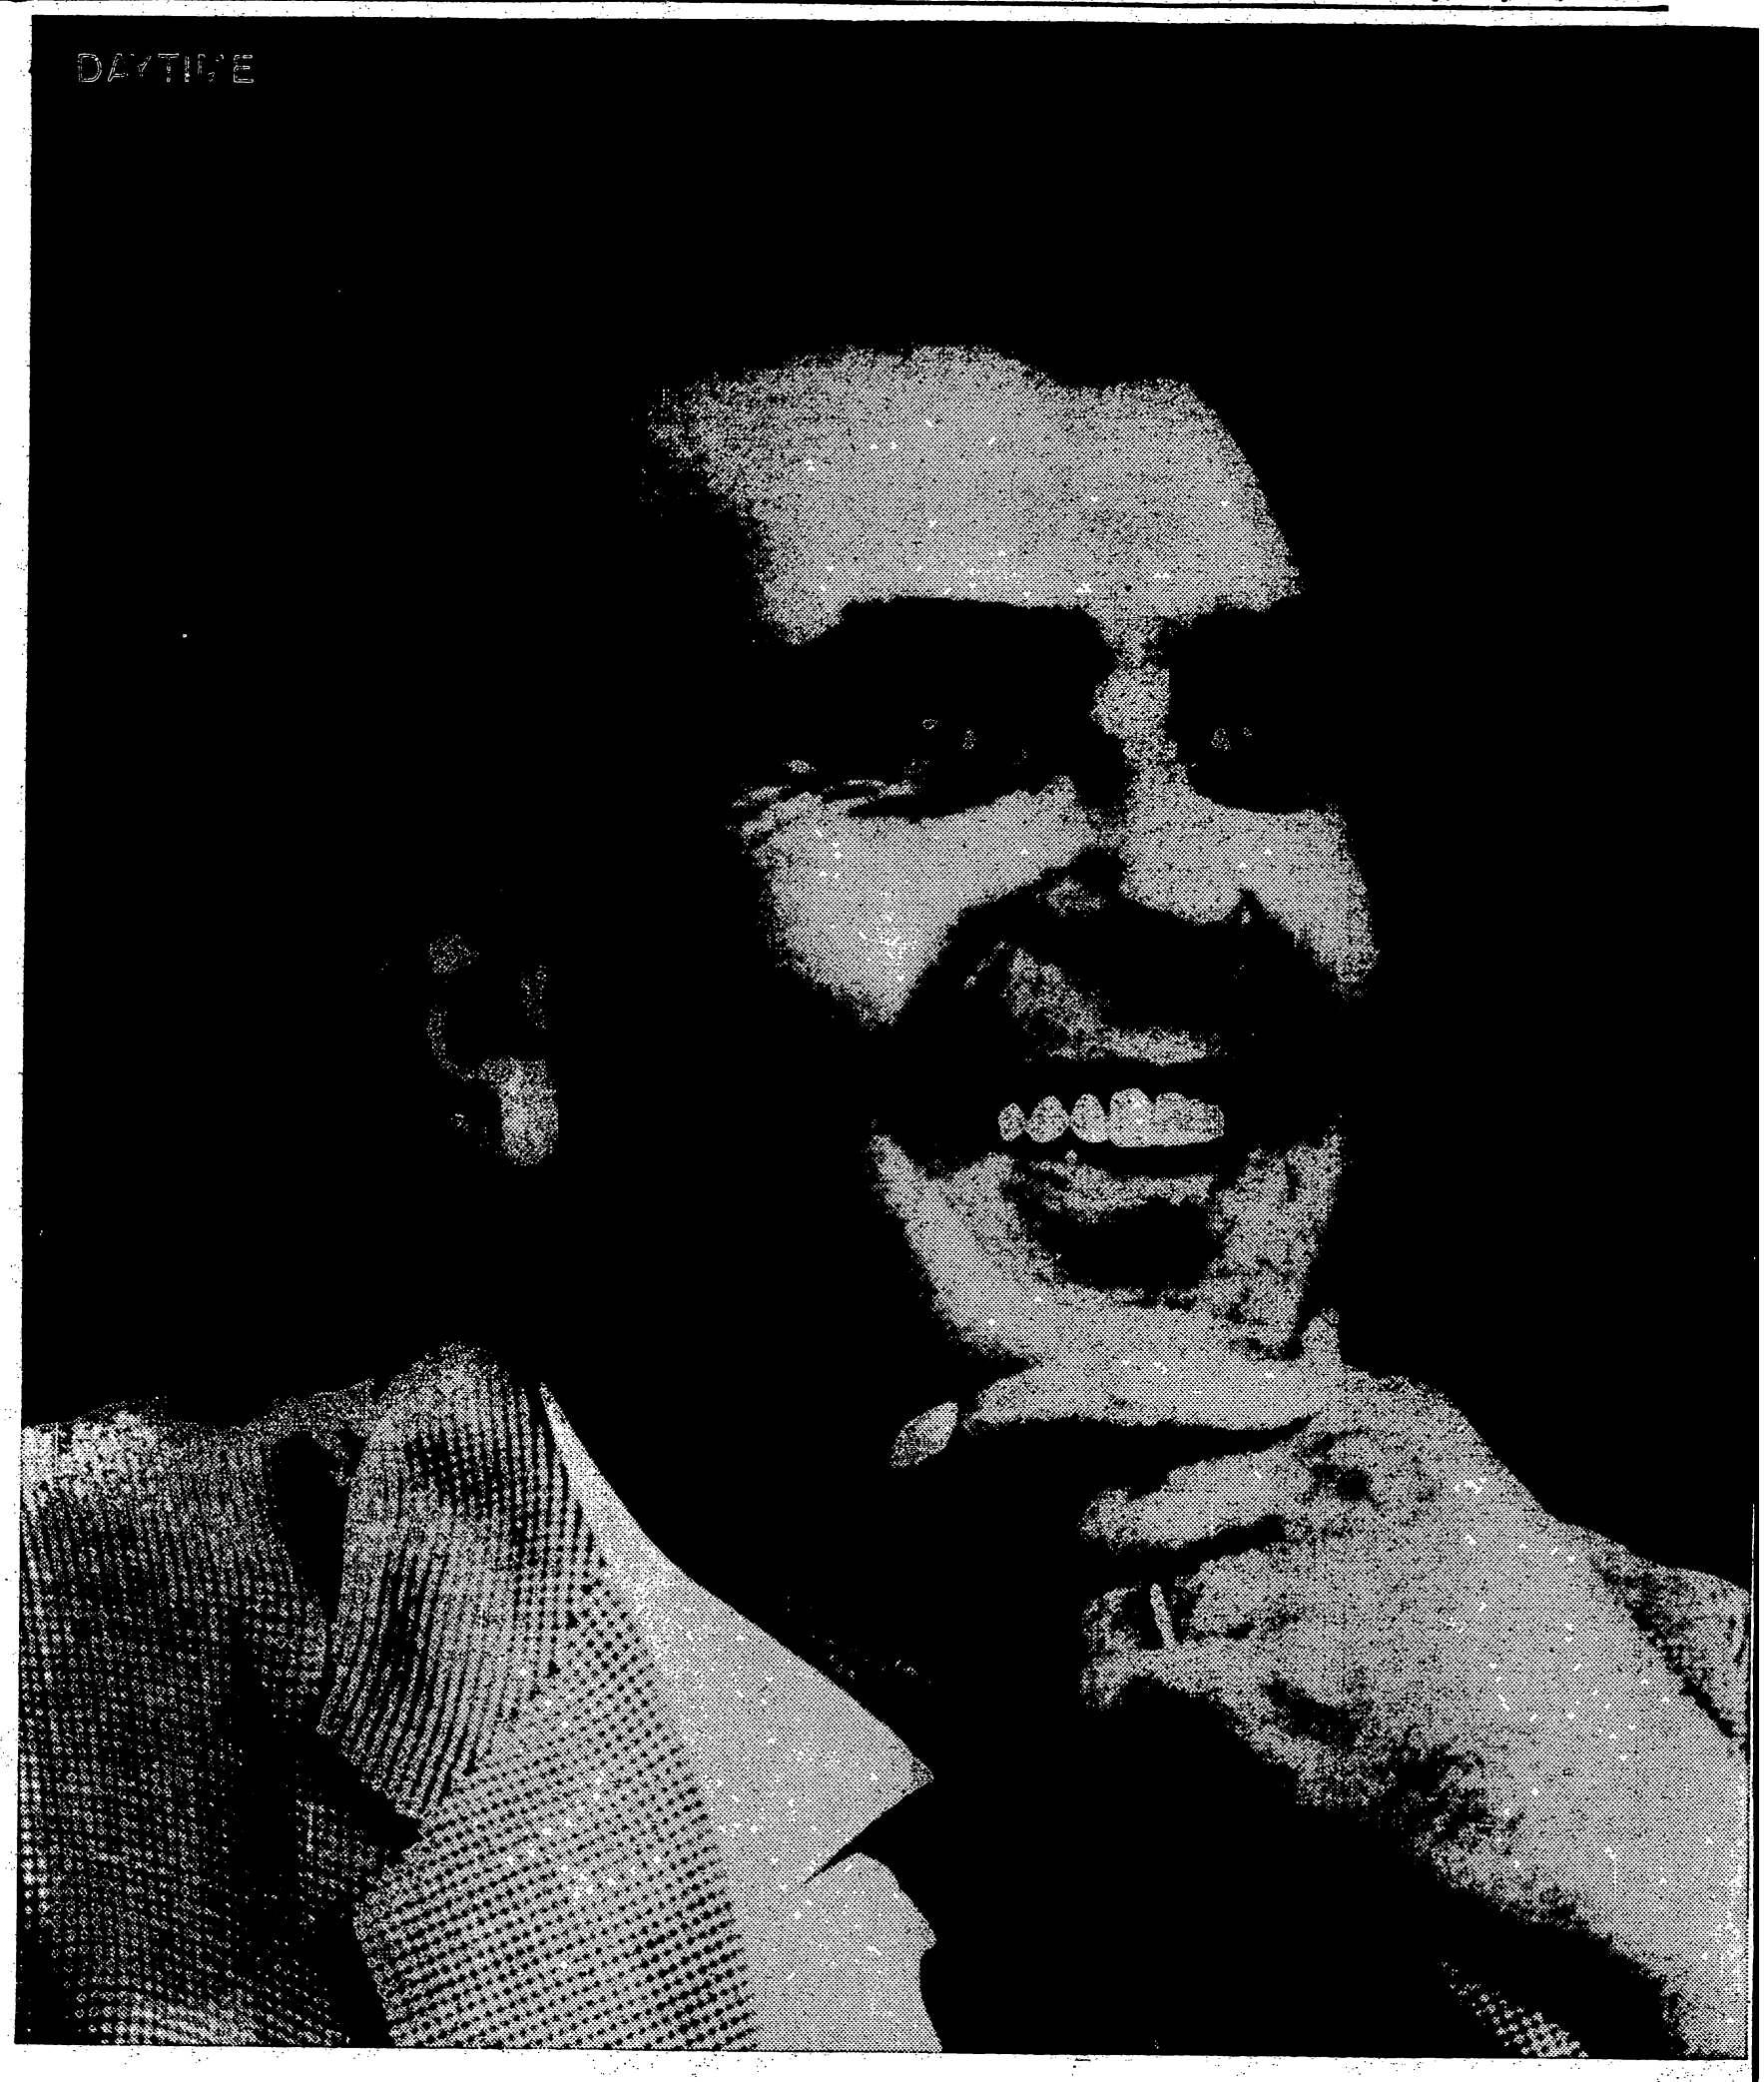
Yorkin-Lear 'Bachelors' On UA-TV '64-'65 Sked

Producer-director team of Bud Yorkin and Norman Lear ("Come Blow Your Horn" feature pic with Frank Sinatra) have been pacted by United Artists Television to produce a new half-hour tv comedy, "The Bachelors," aimed at the 1964-65 season.

Team, whose production company is Tandem Enterprises, was signed for the "Bachelor" project by Richard Dorso, UA-TV's exec veepee, programming.



Daylight Raving Time

It takes more than wishful thinking for a network to build a strong daytime schedule. "Daytime-dreaming" simply isn't enough.

It takes planning and showmanship—all of which are especially evident in NBC-TV's four newest daytime offerings. Two of the programs are already on the air, and the other pair will be seen for the first time on our Fall schedule.

Most recent of the debuts was that of "People Will Talk," in which host Dennis James moderates debates on such non-vital issues as "Are separate vacations a good idea?" and "Should a man lie about his golf score?" The debaters are chosen from man-on-the-street interviews, and vie for the votes of an on-screen panel of 15 judges (six more than the United States Supreme Court).

On "You Don't Say," which premiered earlier this year, emcee Tom Kennedy presides over an exciting game in which celebrity guests and studio contestants try to guess the names of famous persons from missing-word clues. Cary Grant, for example, might be indicated by the lines, "The package was too heavy to (carry)," and "It was an easy request to (grant)."

Both shows are proving awfully diverting, and this Fall they'll be joined by "Word for Word," a brand-new, anagram-type game hosted by the exceptionally popular Merv Griffin; as well as a non-Darwinian "Missing Links." In the latter, celebrity panelists will try to guess the key words omitted from first-person, real-life incidents being narrated by studio contestants.

Along with NBC-TV's forthcoming nighttime schedule—which embraces returnees like "The Virginian" and "Hazel" and newcomers like "Espionage" and "G-E College Bowl"—our new daytime line-up shapes up as a real winner. Night and day (as Cole Porter didn't say), NBC's the one.

Look to NBC for the best combination in news, information and entertainment.

Chi WAIT's One-Man News Dept. Turns Up With Life-Saving Scoop

Chicago, July 23.

WAIT, a daytime "good music" station that's never been famous for news, has suddenly been heard from. The 5,000-watter advertised in the local papers last Saturday (13) that it would break an important news story the following day at 2 p.m., and it fulfilled the promise with newly discovered evidence that points to the innocence of a man convicted of murder eight years ago in downstate Canton, Ill. He was dated for the electric chair this Friday (26).

On petition of the convicted man's attorney, with doubtless some help from the fuss that WAIT has stirred up, Illinois Gov. Otto Kerner last week deferred the execution date to Aug. 23 so that the Parole and Pardons Board might hear the new argument on Aug. 12 and rule on it.

So convinced is WAIT of the man's innocence that it has dedicated its new one-man news operation, in the person of veteran broadcast journalist Dick Applegate (ex-NBC), to saving his life. Applegate himself has turned up some new wrinkles in the case from the legwork he's been doing in Canton, and the station has been airing followup reports and editorials about the case every day since the initial news break.

How did a small station with a rip-and-read news concept come up with such an exclusive? It happened this way:

Maurice Rosenfield, an attorney who bought the station last year, was asked by one of his colleagues-at-law, George Leighton, to join him as co-counsel for the penniless convicted man sans fee. Rosenfield, whose specialty is corporate law and who has never stinted at defending good causes gratis, had had other commitments; but in reviewing the transcript of the original trial and in weighing the evidence just brought to light, he determined that the public should know that the state was about to execute an innocent man.

Since his station had had no formal news department to develop the story, Rosenfield immediately hired Applegate, who had been freelancing since NBC News cut him loose last spring. Four days after he came into the picture, Applegate had the first special report on the air. That consisted of narrative background on the case and a number of taped interviews from the Canton area, including one with the new key witness who had never been asked to appear at the trial. The witness was the convicted man's landlady, who could vouch for the fact that he was in her rooming house at the time the murder was committed.

According to Applegate, the original trial was a botch job by a defense counsel who was handling his first criminal case. It was also held in a highly emotional atmosphere, because the murder victim was an eight-year old girl who had been sexually molested, and the townspeople and police were hungry for a conviction. Philly WRCV In Format Overhaul

Philadelphia, July 23.

The sweeping overhaul of programming format at WRCV, NBC o & o radio outlet, was formally introduced with a cocktail session for industry today (Tues.) at the Bellevue-Stratford hosted by T. E. "Dick" Paisley, station manager.

Newly inaugurated music-and-talk format, which has been getting shakedown runs since start of month, is tabbed "Lively Sound." It succeeds "Big Band Sound" pioneered by Paisley four years ago. Although not entirely abandoned, "Big Band" sound will be augmented by quality vocals, instrumentals and standards. But rock 'n roll, rhythm and blues and country and western music are still taboo at WRCV.

Personality lineup has been completely shuffled, with several dropouts and three new personalities added—Marty McNeely, former morning man at WJR and more

Storer Earnings Down

Storer Broadcasting reports earnings for the first six months of 1963 of $1.28 per share (after taxes) compared to $1.48 a share for the same period of '62.

Net income (after taxes) for the period was $2,931,654. These profits, says the Storer report, are after deduction of a loss of $256,247, resulting from sale of the Miami Beach Sun in May.

In the same '62 period, the company reported after-tax profits of $3,618,366, including a capital gain of $912,863 from the sale of radio station WWVA, Wheeling, W. Va.

Desilu Syndie's 18-Month Gross Hits $6,500,000

Hollywood, July 23.

Desilu Sales, the syndication arm of Desilu Studios, has had an upsurge in sales of telefilms abroad the past five weeks, chalking up $1,450,000 in foreign sales in that period. Of that total, $825,000 in sales came during a global junket by DS veepee-general manager Richard W. Dinsmore, and over $600,000 last week in a record sale to Latin America.

Upturn in sales brings to $6,500,000 the gross for Desilu Sales since it was formed in January of 1962. The south-of-the-border deal was made by Desilu's Latin American rep, John Manson, prexy of Magnum in Mexico City. Vidfilms involved in that sale include "The Greatest Show on Earth," "The Untouchables," "Guestward Ho!", "Harrigan and Son" and "The Texan."

Sales in the other areas were made by Desilu's overseas reps, Peter Marriott in England, Georg von Block in Germany, Bruce Gordon in Australia. Dinsmore reported Desilu product was sold everywhere he visited on his recent trek except in India and Greece. Greece has no tv yet, while India has only one station, a New Delhi channel, which is on just two hours a day.

Dinsmore also visited England, France, Italy, Lebanon, Germany, Portugal, Spain, Singapore, Australia and Manila. Vidfilms sold in these countries included "The Greatest Show on Earth," "The Untouchables," as well as other Desilu product. Desilu has received $4,000 per seg for some of its hour shows in Japan, and as high as $4,500 for some in Australia.

Bulk of the Latin American sales transacted by Manson was in Brazil, the rest of the deals being for Mexico, Venezuela, San Salvador, Argentina and Honduras. This repped the largest single deal ever made by Desilu.

Dinsmore, who confabbed with Desilu's foreign reps during his junketing abroad, reported that there is generally a growth of tv in overseas areas, that most of the countries are going through the same growing pains experienced in U.S. tv some years ago.

A branch of the U.S. State Department has approved the sale by Desilu Sales of "The Lucy Show" and "Jazz Scene, U.S.A." behind the iron curtain. Deals are now in the works for sales of those series to Yugoslavia, Hungary and Po-

Allied TV's Quickies On 'The Presidents'

Allied Artists TV, which has been only syndicating features up to now, is moving into a new area with the distribution of a new series, "The Presidents." This is a series of 104 five-minute episodes, produced with a stop-motion and animation technique by Videocraft and concerned with the early years of the American Presidents.

Bob Morin, Allied Artists TV v.p., is in Chicago this week introducing the new series to a convention of the company's salesmen.

Bob Crane Gets a Raise

Hollywood, July 23.

Bob Crane has inked new one-year pact with KNX, calling for an increase over last year's $75,000, which makes him L.A. radio's highest paid entertainer-deejay. Contract also gives him outside rights and permits him to take a regular role in ABC-TV's "Donna Reed Show," in which he is guaranteed seven out of every 13.

On KNX he conducts his program six days weekly, four hours a day, working week of 24 hours. He has been on CBS-owned radio station seven years.

Tint Set Sales On Twin Cities Spree

Minneapolis, July 23.

The continuously increasing amount of color television going out from Twin Cities' stations is credited by the local F. C. Hayer Co., RCA distributors, for the fact that this area's color set sales currently show a four-fold gain over the corresponding period a year ago and, according to its officials, now assume major proportions for the first time.

Even the Twin Cities' lone noncommercial education station, KTCA, occasionally is televising color film over its transmitter, being one of the nation's only two among 80 such stations to be equipped for this.

KTCA, in fact, has been so equipped for this the past six years. But the station only recently started to use color extensively. For example, last week, prior to the current start of the local Aquatennial, as a plug for the summer festival, it televised a color film of last years's big parade.

While Stan Hubbard's KSTP, NBC affiliate, is the only Twin Cities' tv station fully equipped to handle color in every way, including out-of-doors origination, the other three commercial stations, as well as KTCA, are programming more and more color. Also, they are exploring plans for full equipment.

KMSP-TV, ABC affiliate, on Sundays televises two network color programs. Independent non-network WTCN-TV comes through with out-of-town big league baseball game telecasts in color.

This week, for the first time, KSTP-TV will be televising live in color the big Aquatennial parade with its sumptuous floats and other stunning features. The Hubbard station also is responsible for many live programs, including its own produced "Treasure Chest" five days a week.

WCCO-TV, CBS affiliate, was the first Twin Cities' station to go in for color equipment, having done so on Oct. 8, 1954. It now has the transmitter to carry network color programs and also can originate studio color shows, but, un-

4 Star Syndie Sales

July sales are matching the blistering hot weather, reports Four Star Distribution, which has rackel up 17 new contracts for the company's off-web properties so far this month.

"Dick Powell Theatre" heads the list with 10 new markets, including WTCN-TV, Minneapolis; KDAL-TV, Duluth; KMJ-TV, Fresno; KTNT-TV, Seattle: WINK-TV, Fort Myers; WAVY-TV, Norfolk; WHYN-TV, Holyoke; KOLN-TV, Lincoln; WTVT, Tampa; and WOOD-TV, Grand Rapids.

Rouding out sales were pacts for "The Detectives," "Stagecoach West"; "Tom Ewell Show"; and "Zane Grey Theatre."

Trans-Lux Zurich Setup

Trans-Lux Television opens an international sales office in Zurich, Switzerland, Sept. 1 with Rudi Witschi, a Swiss who's been handling o'seas sales for several companies, in charge.

Richard Carlton, veepee and general sales manager of the syndication company, says several Trans-Lux properties are available to the European market, and the Zurich office will be offering 260 cartoons in the "Felix the Cat" series; 26 episodes in "Guest Shot;" "Frontiers of Knowledge;" and 130 cartoons in the "Mighty Hercules" series.

WTCN's New Bundle of TV Features Aggravates Mpls. Exhibs' Gripes

Minneapolis, July 23.

There's more television feature film competition misery ahead for the area's exhibs.

This is because, in line with its plans to stress such programming more than ever before, in the biggest way possible and undoubtedly to a greater extent than this area's theatreowners ever have encountered before, the local non-network Time-Life tv station, WTCN, continues to move further in that direction.

Stepping out again for one more of many times in the past month, it has just acquired for its expanding film library another important movie package to start over the air next fall.

It's the seventh such film package purchase within a month and represents a station outlay in excess of $300,000 for all seven, according to station manager Arthur M. Swift.

This time the package is MGM's "30-63," numbering 30 and including such notable oldies as "Tender Trap," "Silk Stockings," "Blackboard Jungle," "I'll Cry Tomorrow" and "Any Number Can Play." They'll comprise a "Wonderful World of Movies" series scheduled for 10 o'clock nightly.

Current buy is directly on the heels of the station's purchases of Columbia's 73 "Post 50" group and two Embassy and one Medallion packages of 34 foreign reissues to be aired on prime time beginning next fall along with 30 United Artists Science Fiction and 35 Showcorporation features. With the exception of a few of the Science Fiction package all of the month's acquisitions will be video firstruns for this area.

The total purchase is the largest for any of the four Twin Cities' commercial tv stations in recent years.

Swift says movies have done so well for the station the past several years that it was deemed expedient to go in for more of them. However, the biggest WTCN-TV audience getter and moneymaker undoubtedly is the exclusive telecasting of 50 of the Minnesota Twins American League baseball games.

There was much area exhibitor lamentation when WTCN-TV a few weeks ago made its announcement regarding the Columbia and foreign films packages. There now is more of it.

'Dobie Gillis' Sales

20th Fox Television reports sales of the off-web "Dobie Gillis" series in eight new markets.

New stations for the comedy series include WLAC, Nashville; KTVK, Phoenix; KJEO, Fresno; KLAS, Las Vegas; WSBT, South Bend; WNYS, Syracuse; WHO, Des Moines; and KOTV, Tulsa.

20th's director of syndication Alan Silverbach says that several stations are planning to strip the package of 147 half hours in the afternoon.

Aussie's Malibu Preps 7 Vidseries For Global Marts

Melbourne, July 23.

An attempt to put Australia into the world tv series market is being by a newly-formed company called made here in the next few months by a newly-formed company called Malibu Productions Pty. Ltd.

Don Houghton, executive producer of the company, told VARIETY that for the first time in Australia, his organization would move to enter the global market.

Houghton said it was uneconomical today to work without an international market in view, and it would not be wise to compete against America, for example, in the sort of thing America did so well. It was up to Australia to make the sort of tv films not obtainable elsewhere.

"Also," said Houghton, "we intend to prove that it is not necessary for Australian talent to go overseas in order to make a worldwide reputation."

Malibu Productions plan to make pilot films of seven new tv series for Australian and world markets in the next four months. They have no particular link with Australian national or commercial stations. In America their associate is Rudy Bretz who has financial involvement with Malibu. In fact the name Malibu is derivative from where he dwells in the States.

Already scheduled are a half-hour weekly series presenting varied short plays to be known as "Malibu Playhouse:" "Telemagazine" a weekly news feature program which will incorporate comedy highlights and musical numbers; a situation comedy to feature Aussie actor Noel Ferrier as a gentleman beachcomber; a puppet series; "Hemisphere," an hourlong documentary series ranging over events in the southern hemisphere: "Science Magazine," a half-hour program dealing with scientific advances everywhere in the world, but with accent on Australian achievements; a thriller detective serial.

Already Malibu have an office in Melbourne where a studio is in course of construction, but actual shooting will, in the first place be done in Sydney, but later a full production unit will be in existence here in Melbourne.

'Island In the Sun' As New Burrud Series

Bill Burrud Enterprises is prepping a new syndication series, "Islands in the Sun," with Gene McCabe, company's veepee, as exec producer.

Series, to be shot in color, will be formated to emphasize islands as one of mankind's favorite means of escape and adventure. About half of the footage will be shot underwater around the islands to be featured.

Mag photographer Peter Stackpole is shooting three episodes in the Tuomotu Islands, Tahiti and Samoa. Another stanza, "Tarawa Today," is being produced by Milas Hinshaw of the Burrud staff.

SG's Quarterly Dividend

Screen Gems has declared its regular quarterly dividend of 15c on common stock.

Melon is payable Sept. 27 to stockholders of record Aug. 23.

27 More Stations Buy WB, 20th Pix

Seven Arts Associated corraled 27 more station deals last week for its Warner Bros. and 20th-Fox film packages. Six stations signing for the 50 titled in the company's volume seven of "Films of the '50s," were WGR-TV, Buffalo; WRGB-TV, Schenectady; WOOD-TV, Grand Rapids; WKTV, Utica; KSHO-TV, Las Vegas; and WQAD-TV, Davenport. This makes a total of 18 stations buying the group.

Six other stations signed for the 93 films in company's fourth and fifth volumes. These stations included WTRF, Wheeling, W. Va.; KVIQ-TV, Eureka, Cal.; KOGO-TV, San Diego; WKTV-Utica; WOW-TV, Omaha; and KMBC-TV, Kansas City.

In addition the first volume of 36 films was sold to KFBB-TV, Great Falls, Mont.; the second volume of 41 feature was sold to KRTV, Great Falls; and the third volume was sold to KMSP-TV, Minneapolis. In sales of special features. KOGO-TV acquired nine films; WKTV bought seven; and KSL-TV, Salt Lake City; KXLT-TV, Spokane; and KOLD-TV, Tucson, Arizona, each bought one film.

In non-feature deals, WCPO-TV, Cincinnati; KGMB-TV, Honolulu; WNYS-TV, Syracuse; KEYT, Santa Barbara; and KVIQ-TV, Eureka, bought the 26 half-hour "En France" series, bringing the total markets to 31. KVIQ-TV and KGMB also bought the 65 one-minute comedy sketches being syndicated by Seven Arts.

DOMESTIC LULL, O'SEAS SWINGS

Fewer Features, Higher Prices

In the way of Hollywood product from now on, television stations can expect smaller bundles of better pictures at more money per picture, says Joseph Kotler, veepee of Warner Bros. Television in announcing the initial sale of 25 new-to-video Warner Bros. features to the five CBS-o&o stations.

Titled Warner Bros. One, the package includes "Rio Bravo," "The Nun's Story," "The Sundowners," "The Dark at the Top of the Stairs," "The FBI Story," "The Hanging Tree," "The Young Philadelphians," "The Miracle," "Ice Palace," "Up Periscope," "Pete Kelly's Blues," "Look Back in Anger," "Sergeant Rutledge," "The Crowded Sky," "Cash McCall" and others. Of the 25, 19 were '59-'60 releases and 17 are in color.

Kotler says that in putting together the package, Warner tv execs were guided by talks with many stations—paricularly the "movie stations" in each market—that have big film catalogs. What they need, says the veepee, is a few blockbusters to protect their investment in the stockpile that should last for several years.

"For this reason," he says, "all future releases from our company will be small, streamlined packages, including the latest and greatest motion pictures we have to offer . . . Stations will have to adjust themselves to the fact that, while the total cost of future packages will be comparatively lower than what they have been paying for their big-volume purchases, the cost-per-picture will be considerably higher. They will have to evaluate future purchases in terms of a low-total-dollars investment in topflight features to protect their tremendous expenditures in large backlogs of pictures."

Gordon's Flip Editorial Stance In San Diego Talks Up a D. C. Flap

Washington, July 23.

A San Diego station owner's fervent assertion that he didn't have to grant his editorial opponents a chance for rebuttal caused a flap from the Coast to Congress and the FCC.

Sherwood Gordon, prexy and general manager of KSDO, San Diego, and KBUZ, Phoenix, told the House Communications subcommittee he didn't believe in watering down his "free swinging" editorials with opposing comments.

He told the subcommittee investigating broadcast editorials of an editorial on his San Diego station which criticized a mayoralty candidate in last Thursday's election for an "irresponsible" statement regarding the City Council's eviction of the United Nations Assn. from a city owned building.

On this occasion, however, Gordon told the subcommittee he offered time to the candidate he criticized.

Gordon's testimony reached San Diego and FCC Commissioner E. William Henry.

Rep. Glenn Cunningham (R-Neb.) told VARIETY he had been called from San Diego and was told Gordon hadn't offered time to the mayoralty candidate as claimed. Cunningham hassled with

Fineshriber Sets TV Units O'seas

Back from a six-week swing through Europe, William Fineshriber, veepee of the Motion Picture Export Assn. of America, reports establishment of tv committees to represent MPEAA member companies on the continent.

The European committees will be meeting regularly, says Fineshriber, under chairmanship of the following MPEAA regional directors: S. Frederick Gronich, Paris; Leo D. Hochstetter, Rome; Stephen L. Beers, Frankfurt; and A. Roland Thornton, London.

In the o'seas junket, in which the Assn. veepee huddled with government and tv officials in Italy, Switzerland, France, Monaco, Luxembourg, Belgium, Germany, Sweden, Norway and England, Fineshriber compiled a detailed report on current problems and market conditions which was scheduled to be heard by MPEAA's tv film export committee this week.

The veepee says he noted several signs pointing to accelerated market development for U. S. telefilm exporters, among them: increases in set saturation; steadily growing commercial pressures both from within and without on countries maintaining government monopolies; establishment of additional channels and rising costs of local production.

TAC's Coast Powwow

Television Affiliates Corp., the Trans-Lux Television subsidiary that collects and distributes local pubaffairs and documentary productions of member stations around the country, will follow its recent Chicago confab with a Coast programming conference at San Francisco, Aug. 26 and 27.

Robert Weisberg, TAC veepee, says the second session is being held to accommodate the doubled org membership on the Coast. Like the Chi affair, the Coast sessions will include workshops on a variety of program types, new production ideas, use of motion pix and off-web reruns, selling pubaffairs shows, etc.

Stafford Specials To Foremost For 30-Market Spread

Independent Television Corp. has sold six, one-hour Jo Stafford variety specials, produced and aired in England a couple of seasons ago by the parent ATV network, to Foremost Dairies for airing in 30 markets, beginning late this year. It's one of major regional sales of the year.

In the specials, singing star Stafford hosts show biz guests including Ella Fitzgerald, Rosemary Clooney, Mel Torme, Roy Castle, Peter Sellers, Claire Bloom, Stanley Holloway, Robert Morley, Peter Lawford, Edd Byrnes, the Westminster Abbey Choir. Shows were produced at the London Palladium.

ITC's exec veepee Abe Mandell says that eight of the Stafford-in-London specials are being made available for regional bankrolling. ITC previously sold a Jo Stafford special, with guests Bob Hope and James Darren, to Procter & Gamble for telecasting on CBS-TV, Aug. 18. Guild, Bascom & Bonfigli, San Francisco, was the Foremost agency on the regional buy.

Les Crane to N.Y.

Les Crane, KGO, San Francisco, tv personality, is moving east Sept. 15 to take over the new "Night Line" show on WABC-TV, N.Y.

The show will feature Crane and a guest answering questions phoned in by viewers. It'll be a Monday-through-Friday show roughly from 1 a.m. to 3 a.m. the starting time to be flexibly dependent on the length of another new show on the station, "Broadway," a series of nitery-type revues and one-man shows.

SELLING MARKED BY IN-FIGHTING

Frantic world of syndication, as summer sets in, seems to be divided into two vidfilm parts—one a tight domestic market and the other an expanding foreign market.

Domestically, a lull has set in on the sales front. Most stations have bought their syndicated product for the new season's lineup and sales activity isn't expected to really pick up until after Labor Day. Then, there will be a push for vidfilm product with a winter release start.

In the foreign field, there doesn't seem to be as much of a seasonal lull and more importantly, foreign markets rather than contracting are expanding. The only parallel in the U. S. would be if the end of option time took on some important meaning, in regards to syndicated product, or if UHF in the U. S. came into its own commercially.

Indicative of the growing grossing pattern of the foreign market are the changes altering the Japanese and Australian markets. Independent Television Corp. reports that it has received more dough for the sale of "Espionage" in Japan than in Canada. It's Abe Mandell's (exec v.p. of ITC) prediction that Japan one day will prove out to be a bigger market for product than Canada. Key market of Australia is currently undergoing alterations pointing to greater use and better prices for American product.

Domestically, the fortunes of syndicators vary from company to company, from program series to program series. Features - to - tv phase of the biz still is riding the crest of prosperity. Some of the kidvidseries are doing quite well. There are very few first-run properties around. Bulk of the vidfilm syndie biz currently is off-network properties and what characterizes this phase of the biz is a tight market. The approximate 20% of the stations in the U. S. which may still have time slots to fill for the fall find themselves pursued by many syndicators, each with a catalog of product to sell. Station buyers play one syndicator against another in cutting prices and securing more runs. Selling in this climate with anything but an unusual winner is tough.

It's this climate which accounts for much of the in-fighting now going on among syndicators. Competitive selling always has been a way of life among syndicators, but there are more low blows being thrown now, according to one vet observer. "If you can't sell your series on the basis of merit, knock the series being pitched by the competitor," is the slogan of today's selling—at least among some key syndicators.

Vidfilm syndicators in the main don't look toward the upsetting of option time as any bonanza for the biz. The recent FCC ruling is expected to go through a long period of litigation. Fact is, as one syndicator observed, affils want the network program feed and the feed will continue no matter if it's called option time or not. Perhaps it might strengthen affils' hands in rejecting a weak network show and opening a possibility for a syndie entry. That's a peripheral benefit, though, in terms of the large quantity of product available for station telecasting and the limited local time slots open.

Domestically, a saturation point in overall vidfilm grossing potential seems to have been reached; the foreign grossing curve has yet to reach a plateau.

Sobel Shifts to Coast

Jack Sobel is shifting to Hollywood as manager of national sales, West Coast, for Screen Gems.

An exec with SG for the past three years, Sobel's transfer was cued by the growth of network business being negotiated in Hollywood.

Film Boys Again Vote Separate Chi Convention But 'NAB Climate' Better

Although amicable meetings were held last week in New York between the syndicated program suppliers and the National Assn. of Broadcasters over plans for the annual industry meeting in Chicago next spring, two groups will again hold conventions under different roofs in 1964. The Television Film Exhibit, which proved a click for the syndicators in Chicago this year, will again be held at the Pick-Congress Hotel, nearby the Conrad Hilton, site of the NAB convention.

NAB execs have expressed a readiness to cooperate in several areas with the TFE next year. It's understood that the broadcasters have agreed to organize a panel discussion for station operators and program suppliers. The TFE cocktail party for the broadcasters, moreover, will probably be given some kind of official recognition by NAB next year.

Positive climate at last week's meeting lays the groundwork for closer collaboration between NAB and TFE in the future although no one is talking about the TFE returning to the NAB fold at this point. It's likely that TFE will continue to go it alone at this stage of the game.

Both TFE and NAB execs at last week's meeting will have to report back to their respective exec committees or memberships to report on progress and get greenlights for further exploratory powwows.

Ford's MCA Spread

Ford Motors, through J. Walter Thompson, has bought two MCA-TV half-hour shows for a dozen markets.

"M-Squad" will be sponsored on KBAK-TV, Bakersfield; WAFB-TV, Baton Rouge; WRCB, Chattanooga; KRDO-TV, Colorado Springs; WEAU-TV, Eau Claire; WSVA-TV, Harrisonburg; KOLO-TV, Teno; WNEM-TV, Saginaw; and KELO-TV, Sioux Falls.

"State Trooper" was bought on WTVD, Raleigh-Durham; WNEM-TV, Saginaw; and WFMJ-TV, Youngstown.

Susskind's WPIX 2-Yr. Deal Clinches 'Open End' Future

David Susskind finally landed a berth for his "Open End" show on WPIX, N.Y., thus assuring the continuation of the two-hour discussion show. Deal between WPIX v.p. and general manager Fred Thrower and Susskind was made last week after the station had previously indicated its interest in the show by agreeing to carry two "Open End" shows during the last couple of months, firstly the interview with Martin Luther King and then Susskind's presentation of "The Premise." The show, going into its sixth season, will be slotted from 6 to 8 p.m. on Sundays starting Oct. 6.

Susskind indicated that he plans to stage solo interviews with such names as Jack Benny, Elia Kazan, Noel Coward, British Laborite leader Harold Wilson, FCC Chairman E. William Henry and Truman Capote. Susskind will also continue to cover the controversial issues of the day.

Deal with WPIX covers a period of two years with Susskind to produce 39 shows with 13 repeats each season. As in the past, the shows will be syndicated and produced at the Videotape Center in New York. Jean Kennedy will continue as producer.

WTCN'S 'LITTLE CLEO' GRABS BIG RETURNS

Minneapolis, July 23.

The current "Cleopatra" rage here occasioned by the presence of the heavily publicized and much debated 20th-Fox picture doing blockbuster business was admittedly responsible for Time-Life's local independent WTCN-TV grabbing off the exclusive rights in this territory for what the station proclaimed to be "a little Cleopatra" movie.

This "little Cleopatra" was the 1934 movie starring Claudette Colbert, Henry Wilcoxon and Warren Williams. WTCN-TV televised it for a third time last week and, in doing so, landed much valuable gratis newspaper publicity and numerous advertising sponsors. All of which indicated it was a smart move.

The station in its publicity made no bones whatsoever of the fact that this was a minor "Cleopatra" edition, probably not wishing dialers to expect too much and not wanting to hurt the big "Cleopatra" roadshow movie.

WOR Taps Beusse

Robert B. Beusse, formerly promotion manager, has been named director of advertising and sales development for WOR radio and tv, the RKO General New York outlets.

He succeeds Martin Fliesler, who this week leaves the stations to become veepee and general manager of KHF Radio, RKO General's Los Angeles station.

$1,500,000 KNXT Feature Bundle

Hollywood, July 23.

KNXT pushed its purchase of old pictures in the last month to around $1,500,000. CBS-owned station bought 30-post-'48 MGM features at a reported cost of $550,000. Last month its library was increased by 73 films from Columbia at a reported outlay of close to $1,000,000. Each sale gives the station the privilege of 10 runs or more.

In the Metro block are such titles as "Blackboard Jungle," "I'll Cry Tomorrow," "Tender Trap," "Silk Stockings" and "Somebody Up There Likes Me." Among the stars are Frank Sinatra, Debbie Reynolds, Paul Newman, Glenn Ford, Fred Astaire and Susan Hayward.

Sold individually in compliance with a Supreme Court ruling, the Metro pictures are said to have ranged in price from $5,600 to $45,000 for an average price per picture of $18,500.

WCBS-TV's Buy

WCBS-TV, N.Y., has added to its feature film library with the acquisition of 25 post-1953 features from Warner Bros. The films will be shown starting Sept. 1 during the late evening and early morning hours in the station's around-the-clock operation.

Titles in the package include "Dark At The Top of The Stairs," "The Sundowners," "The F.B.I. Story," "So Big," and others.

52% HIKE IN NET FOR CAPITAL CITIES

Capital Cities Broadcasting Corp's net profit for the first half of 1963 jumped 52% to $961,555, compared to $633,-27 for the same period last year. Income for the group amounted to $8,281,528 for the half-year compared to $7,314,-395 in the first six months of 1962.

Frank M. Smith, Capital Cities prexy, reported that the increased operating profit before depreciation reflected the growing strength of the company's Albany radio outlet, WROW, in addition to the development of stations acquired in 1961.

WOMEN WANT OUT
With Shirl Conway
Producer-Director: George Dessart
Writer: Morton M. Hunt
60 Mins., 10 p.m. (Tues.)
FELS & CO.; PHILADELPHIA NATIONAL BANK
WCAU-TV, Philadelphia

Another of WCAU-TV's hour-long documentaries (several of which have added luster to the lagging prestige of local television), "Women Want Out" failed to achieve its ambitious promise, much like its harassed subjects. Shirl Conway ("The Nurses") as narrator and a cast of 68 local "professionals" (according to the studio) did little to help the frustrated femme soul searching for a solution to her sad lot. It added another wasted hour to her already lost life.

Session opened with the family on the lawn of substantial suburban household, joyfully welcoming father back from work. On this initial note of deception happiness ends. Inside there is a hell-hole of frustration, to quote scripter Morton M. Hunt, author of "The Natural History of Love," "Her Infinite Variety."

As evidence of the title's truth, one woman is shown at the washing machine with her college diploma hung above it. Others are depicted surrounded by crying, leaky-nosed offspring and able only to find solutions in alcoholism, adultery (cued by a shot of a motel sign) or analysis. Juxtaposed is the hausfrau of yesterday, slaving happily before the advent of electricity, suffragism, Freud and other villains of progress.

Statistics were employed: 52% were eager brides, but their enthusiasm dwindles to 6% after 20 years. Authorities were interviewed but added nothing much except words. Returning to school seemed the most approved solution and was offered as one of the more satisfactory ways of regaining lost self-esteem.

The commercials had no problems. The bank showed how easy it is to write checks; and the co-sponsor's gentle detergent seemed to make some deluded drudges content. A career woman as well as a wife, Shirl Conway came through irritatingly with a running commentary that was both efficient and officious.

The problem of the trained and educated woman stuck to the dishpan, or even the dishwasher, is as considerable as it is current. The probing of "Women Want Out," however, added little to the literature already amassed on the subject, and far from clarifying the problem, made it at times sound unreal. Gagh.

THEY'RE FIGHTING CITY HALL
Dick Straeder, narrator
Producer: Robert Cochrane
Director: Ray Douglas
Writer: George Gipe
30 Mins., Wed., 8 p.m.
WMAR-TV, Baltimore (film)

Local stations have been producing public service programs at a fast clip, improving as they go along and latest of these is "They're Fighting City Hall," a look at the minor controversy surrounding the 88-year-old City Hall building which some recommend be torn down, citing evidence that the structure is no longer safe for occupancy.

WMAR-TV took a semi-serious approach and the result was both amusing and informative.

Script began with history of the building, using antique footage to suggest the atmosphere of the times, then went into structure itself letting an engineer present fairly conclusive proof that something must be done about the dome before it comes tumbling down.

Though it bogged a bit when engineer presented his case, it picked up and moved swiftly to conclusion as man-in-the-street interviews were cleverly and neatly spliced together with one leading into the other as subjects said "tear it down—paint it—reconstruct it—we need a new one—who needs a new one—what was that you said—I'm not from Baltimore—I don't care what you do about it—what City Hall?"

Arrangement gave the program a light touch and total effect was a very pleasant one. Lucc.

UNTITLED EXPERIMENTAL SPECIAL
With Sterling C. Quinlan, Hugh Hefner, Mark Satter, Edwin C. Berry, others
Exec Producer: Dan Schuffman
Producer: Paul Hunter
Director: Richie Victor
30 Mins., Tues. (16), 9:30 p.m.
WBKB, Chicago

In quest of something profounder, WBKB appears to have stumbled upon that fresh entertainment format with wide local appeal that stations are always looking for. This untitled vox pop sampler, billed as a station experiment, was by design an attempt to "ascertain the community needs" and to serve them in one stroke—or so ABC veep Sterling (Red) Quinlan indicated in his remarks opening the program. As it turned out, the offering was far more satisfying as a divertissement than it was intellectually stimulating. Done as a regular nighttime series, it conceivably could gain a strong following for its amusing aspects rather than the ancient man-on-the-street format without interviewer and with all the chaff edited out of the video tape. Pedestrians on State St. come before the cameras to speak for about 60 seconds on a subject that concerns them, and the program, in effect becomes a video version of the letters-to-the-editor column. While nearly all the two dozen persons who appeared in the test outing were in dead earnest, their topics were sometimes worth a chuckle, their candor appealing and their verbal idiom colorful, if not charming. The 30-minute show had some of the virtues of "Candid Camera" and none of the trickery.

Principal topics were racial injustice and smut-peddling, but other free speakers let off steam on such things as education, transportation, smoking, women's rights and aid to Iran. A cab driver testified that Chicago was better when it was a wide-open town, a grade school girl froze during her discourse on cruelty to horses, a man and wife celebrating their 24th anniversary told the world that "marriage should be a 50-50 proposition" and a high school boy wished that people had a better sense of humor.

Some of the viewpoints on racial integration and censorship were set up in the studio with persons of stature who are well-versed in those issues. Although attorney Mark Satter, Urban League director Edwin C. Berry and Playboy publisher Hugh Hefner expressed themselves articulately and even provocatively, they struck a jarring note in the context of the layman orators. In its next attempt at such a program, WBKB would do well to give over the video soapbox entirely to the chance passer-by, for it's in the spontaneous statement rather than the prepared speech that the program succeeds.

Producer Paul Hunter did a good job of editing the statements to bite size without deleting details that serve to reveal character. The program moved swiftly from person to person creating a panorama of ideas, gripes and observations; but this was of secondary value to the simple pleasure of seeing the ordinary citizen speak his mind with an eloquence all his own. Les.

CLAY COLE AT THE MOON BOWL

WPIX-TV (tape)

It would be hard to imagine a more negative promotion for the Moon Bowl, open-air dance and show place of the Bronx amusement park, Freedomland, than the dismal, disarranged, rain-soaked preem of this hour hosted by deejay Clay Cole.

Show was vidtaped Friday night for Saturday airing, and a driving rain had the emcee on stage in slicker and rain hat. Smattering of kids that took part in the dance numbers looked like they were in a community shower with their clothes on. Unique setting, but not necessarily good tv.

Staged entertainment was consistently as dull as damp. Jay and the Americans, a quint of male youths, chorused a couple of tunes with no distinction, and the four Surf Singers, Philadelphia folkniks, sounded a seconding of name folk

MISS UNIVERSE BEAUTY PAGEANT
With John Daly, Arlene Francis, Gene Rayburn
Producer: Paul Levitan
Director: Vern Diamond
Writer: Richard Ellison
90 Mins.; Sat. (20), 10 p.m.
PROCTER & GAMBLE
CBS-TV, from Miami Beach

(Leo Burnett)

Once again, CBS-TV converted Miami Beach's annual answer to Atlantic City's "Miss America" contest into a television special ideally suitable for a hot summer's night. For 90 minutes, a bevy of international beauties paraded up, down, right and left across the screen until the judges designated one of the girls as the most beautiful in the universe and winner of a flock of promotional prizes.

If for any reason, a viewer should have nodded for a minute or so during the proceedings, nothing at all was lost since each of the competitors was given the spotlight some half-dozen times. First, they were shown in ordinary gowns, then in native gowns, then in their dressing rooms and finally in very modestly tailored bathing suits. On top of that, each beauty was required to display her "personality" by delivering some simple thanks and greetings to Miami Beach and America. It's par for the course that at least half of the contestants forgot their lines.

For a little change-of-pace Arlene Francis and John Daly were on hand to interview the girls, each of whom was asked what she worked at when she wasn't entering beauty contests. There were no surprising answers. Gene Rayburn was on-stage master-of-ceremonies and valiantly maintained a high-spirited tone in introducing and re-introducing the girls marching across the stage.

Miss Brazil, one of the girls who remembered her script, was rewarded with the coronation of "Miss Universe of 1963." Herm.

FOLKFEST
With Rudy Orisek, host; Phoenix Singers, Bonnie Dobson
Producer: Hal Stein
Director: Norm Nowicki
30 Mins., Sun., 5:30 p.m.
TALMAN FEDERAL SAVINGS
WGN-TV, Chicago (tape)

(Rudio)

Hal Stein and Rudy Orisek, a couple of local entrepeneurs with a lot of irons in the fire, have pointed them all at a new WGN-TV summertime opus, "Folkfest," which comes out of their packaging shop, Rudio Productions. They are also co-owners of the folksong bistro, The Gate of Horn, which serves as both the setting and the talent source for the program; and they operate an ad agency for Talman Federal, which conveniently serves as the co-sponsor.

Stein independently produces several tv shows for WGN-TV and adds this one to his skein; Orisek independently hosts a nightly radio program on WBBM and is the off-camera emcee for this series. So "Folkfest" would seem to be right up their alley, and, going by the initial outing (14), it is.

The show is realized with taste and production restraint, with the emphasis put squarely on the stock-in-trade of the performing talent. The acts are showcased in exactly the way they perform on the Gate of Horn stage before an audience. Orisek's off-camera voice introduces the artist, the backlighting adjusts itself for the number, and that's about it from a production standpoint except for the camera angles.

The Phoenix Singers and Bonnie Dobson, who comprised the bill for the opening show, were each visually and artistically satisfying in their own way. Miss Dobson, an attractive gal with a delicate air, offered English and French Canadian songs. The Phoenix Singers, who had both the opening and closing segments, were a smart contrast in the virile American Negro and Cajun idioms, issuing among other songs a beautiful version of "Yellow Bird" and a musically potent "Run Come See." Director Norm Nowicki kept the camera studies varied and unobtrusive.

With the folk genre prevailing in the current pop music climate, "Folkfest" ought to click with the mature folksong buffs and the blue jeans set alike. Les.

THE PREMISE
(Open End)
With Theodore J. Flicker, Joan Darling, James J. Frawley, Thomas Aldredge
Producer: David Susskind
Director: Flicker
120 Mins., Sat. (20), 9 p.m.
PARTICIPATING
WPIX, N.Y. (tape)

Irreverence and improvisation, the "comedy of tomorrow" to borrow producer David Susskind's words) came in far behind burlesque and parody, the comedy of yesterday, in the special two-hour comedy display presented by "The Premise" players. The set pieces were, for the most part, on firm ground, while their topical jibes and created on-the-spot routines had a hit-and-miss quality which show people try to avoid by preparation and rehearsal.

The four players, Theodore J. Flicker, Joan Darling, James J. Frawley and Thomas Aldredge, are an inventive bunch but watching them sweat out a routine places too many demands on a viewer especially when the end result falls flat. In their burlesque takeoffs, however, their lowdown comedics rank high among current offerings. The parodies of "West Side Story" and "David and Lisa," for example, are superb tomfoolery and hit the target for sustained laughs.

Their topical blackout efforts showed that they cared little for much but there's more to getting a big yock than just mentioning the Kennedys, Rockefeller, Nixon, Khrushchev, De Gaulle and other assorted biggies. Their point of view is irreverent, of course, but there's so much of these topical barbs going around these days that sharper views are needed than those displayed on their first major tv outing.

The troupe has found a happy home in New York's Greenwich Village coffee house scene but an occasional visit to videoland would serve them better right now than repeats of such lengthy shows as this one.

The program was presented with a few basic props and several unnecessary on-camera intrusions by the producer. Gros.

HEAVEN WILL PROTECT THE WORKING GIRL
With Jeanne Parr, narrator
Exec Producer: Ned Cramer
Producer-Writer: Bud Beame
30 Mins., Wed. (17); 8 p.m.
CHOCK FULL O'NUTS
CBS-TV, from N.Y. (tape)

(Peerless)

Lest any viewer be unaware of how the single working girl spends her time in New York, CBS-TV obligingly came up with a half-hour pictorial probe Wednesday evening (17) of the workaday routines of three femme toilers from out-of-town. Appropriately, Chock Full O'Nuts picked up the tab, for the subjects of this one-time special could have been almost any single gal who wanders into the company's quick-luncheries for coffee and a whole wheat doughnut.

Written and produced by Bud Beame, this documentary-styled taped production traced the moods, goals and varied activities of an ad agency secretary, a Copacabana chorine and a freelance supplier of props to photographers.

The place to better yourself is in the city, pointed out the chorine who's from Westwood, N. J., and what city should you go to but the biggest and most glamorous one. A similar note was struck by the two others. Scenes of the femmes at work, in their apartments and merely window-shopping helped provide an insight as to their varied personalities.

But judging from the off-screen commentary of Jeanne Parr, the workaday gal's romantic activities are paramount to all others. All of them had countless propositions, "dates and parties are great" and so is New York's "freedom" as the photographer's aide from Tupper Lake, N.Y., put it.

"Heaven Will Protect the Working Girl" was no absorbing, dramatic analysis of a girl on her own. But it seemed to have sufficient scope and flavor to hold the interest of most vicariously inclined viewers. Particularly striking was the jazzy background score supervised by Ethel Huber. Producer-director Beame showed a talented approach to the overall theme while Hal Seiden's camerawork and Miss Parr's narration were bright points. Gilb.

IN THIS CORNER—JOE LOUIS
With Allyn Edwards narrator; others
Executive Producer: Jack Lynn
Producer-Writer: Mel Bailey
Director: Arthur Forrest
120 Mins., Sun. (21), 9 p.m.
WNEW-TV, N.Y.

It's asking an awful lot of a viewer to sit through two hours of a tv autobiography, especially when, as in the case of this WNEW-TV presentation of life & times and Joe Louis, it happens to be so one-dimensional. Timed for heightened interest and impact as a day-&-date attraction with the Liston-Patterson fight on all Metromedia stations Monday night (22), after a previous exposure the night before (and with Screen Gems putting it into subsequent syndication for all stations), this ambitous undertaking by an indie station, while absorbing in nostalgic values, left much to be desired. Technically and stylistically it had little new to offer and considering the limited scope of the presentation, it could have been more sharply defined as a 60-minute documentary since there were too many needless lapses and variations on a fight theme.

Pictorially and text-wise the story of the Brown Bomber as one of the alltime greats of the prize ring was all there, detail piled on detail with twice-told footage and commentary to match. But sadly lacking was any kind of in-depth portrait of Louis the man and the legend; failure to grasp and give proper definition to perhaps one of the most fascinating stories of the era as spelled out in the Horatio Alger rise of a sharecropper's son to the pinnacle of his profession to amass some $5,000,000 only to wind up broke. Superficial at best was the delineation of the forces at work that were to hound Louis as a bad tax risk; the slicing up of the thrice-married hero's annual take as alimony raps; the bad investments; the "Good Time Charley" of the 100 suits at $180 per; the camp leeches and the guys who were to play him for a sucker. And in the end just a debt-ridden guy forced to resort to the humiliating buffooneries of the wrestling ring, yet emerging as a man with dignity and a nobility of sorts.

Here was drama about a man unique to his time, to which unfortunately the documentary paid but casual lip service. Some of the "lip service" was good (as with Allyn Edwards narrating and the ring-flavored commentaries of referee Ruby Goldstein which gave the whole an authentic aura.) There was a Tony Galento "primer for boxers" that offered a wonderful bit of interpolated showmanship. Louis' own running commentaries in halting, sometimes inarticulate tones unfortunately lacked a necessary conviction.

It traced the Brown Bomber's beginnings, from his discovery in a Detroit gymnasium by John Roxborough and Jack Blackburn, his way-back-when mentors and supporters, following his career through the '30's and 40's under Mike Jacobs as one by one he left behind the Carneras, the Levinskys, the Baers (a $1,000,000 gate), the Galentos the Braddocks the Walcotts, the Pastors etc. There was the quick knockout of Max Schmeling (to avenge the previous unexpected defeat and the cracks of a Hitler which pitted a non-Aryan against an Aryan).

There were the years of triumph as champion, a successful 25-times defense of the title, his retirement and Army career as he circuited the GI global camps and put on benefits for the Army Relief Fund, his postwar return to the ring, the spark soon gone, the ultimate defeat at the hands of Rocky Marciano.

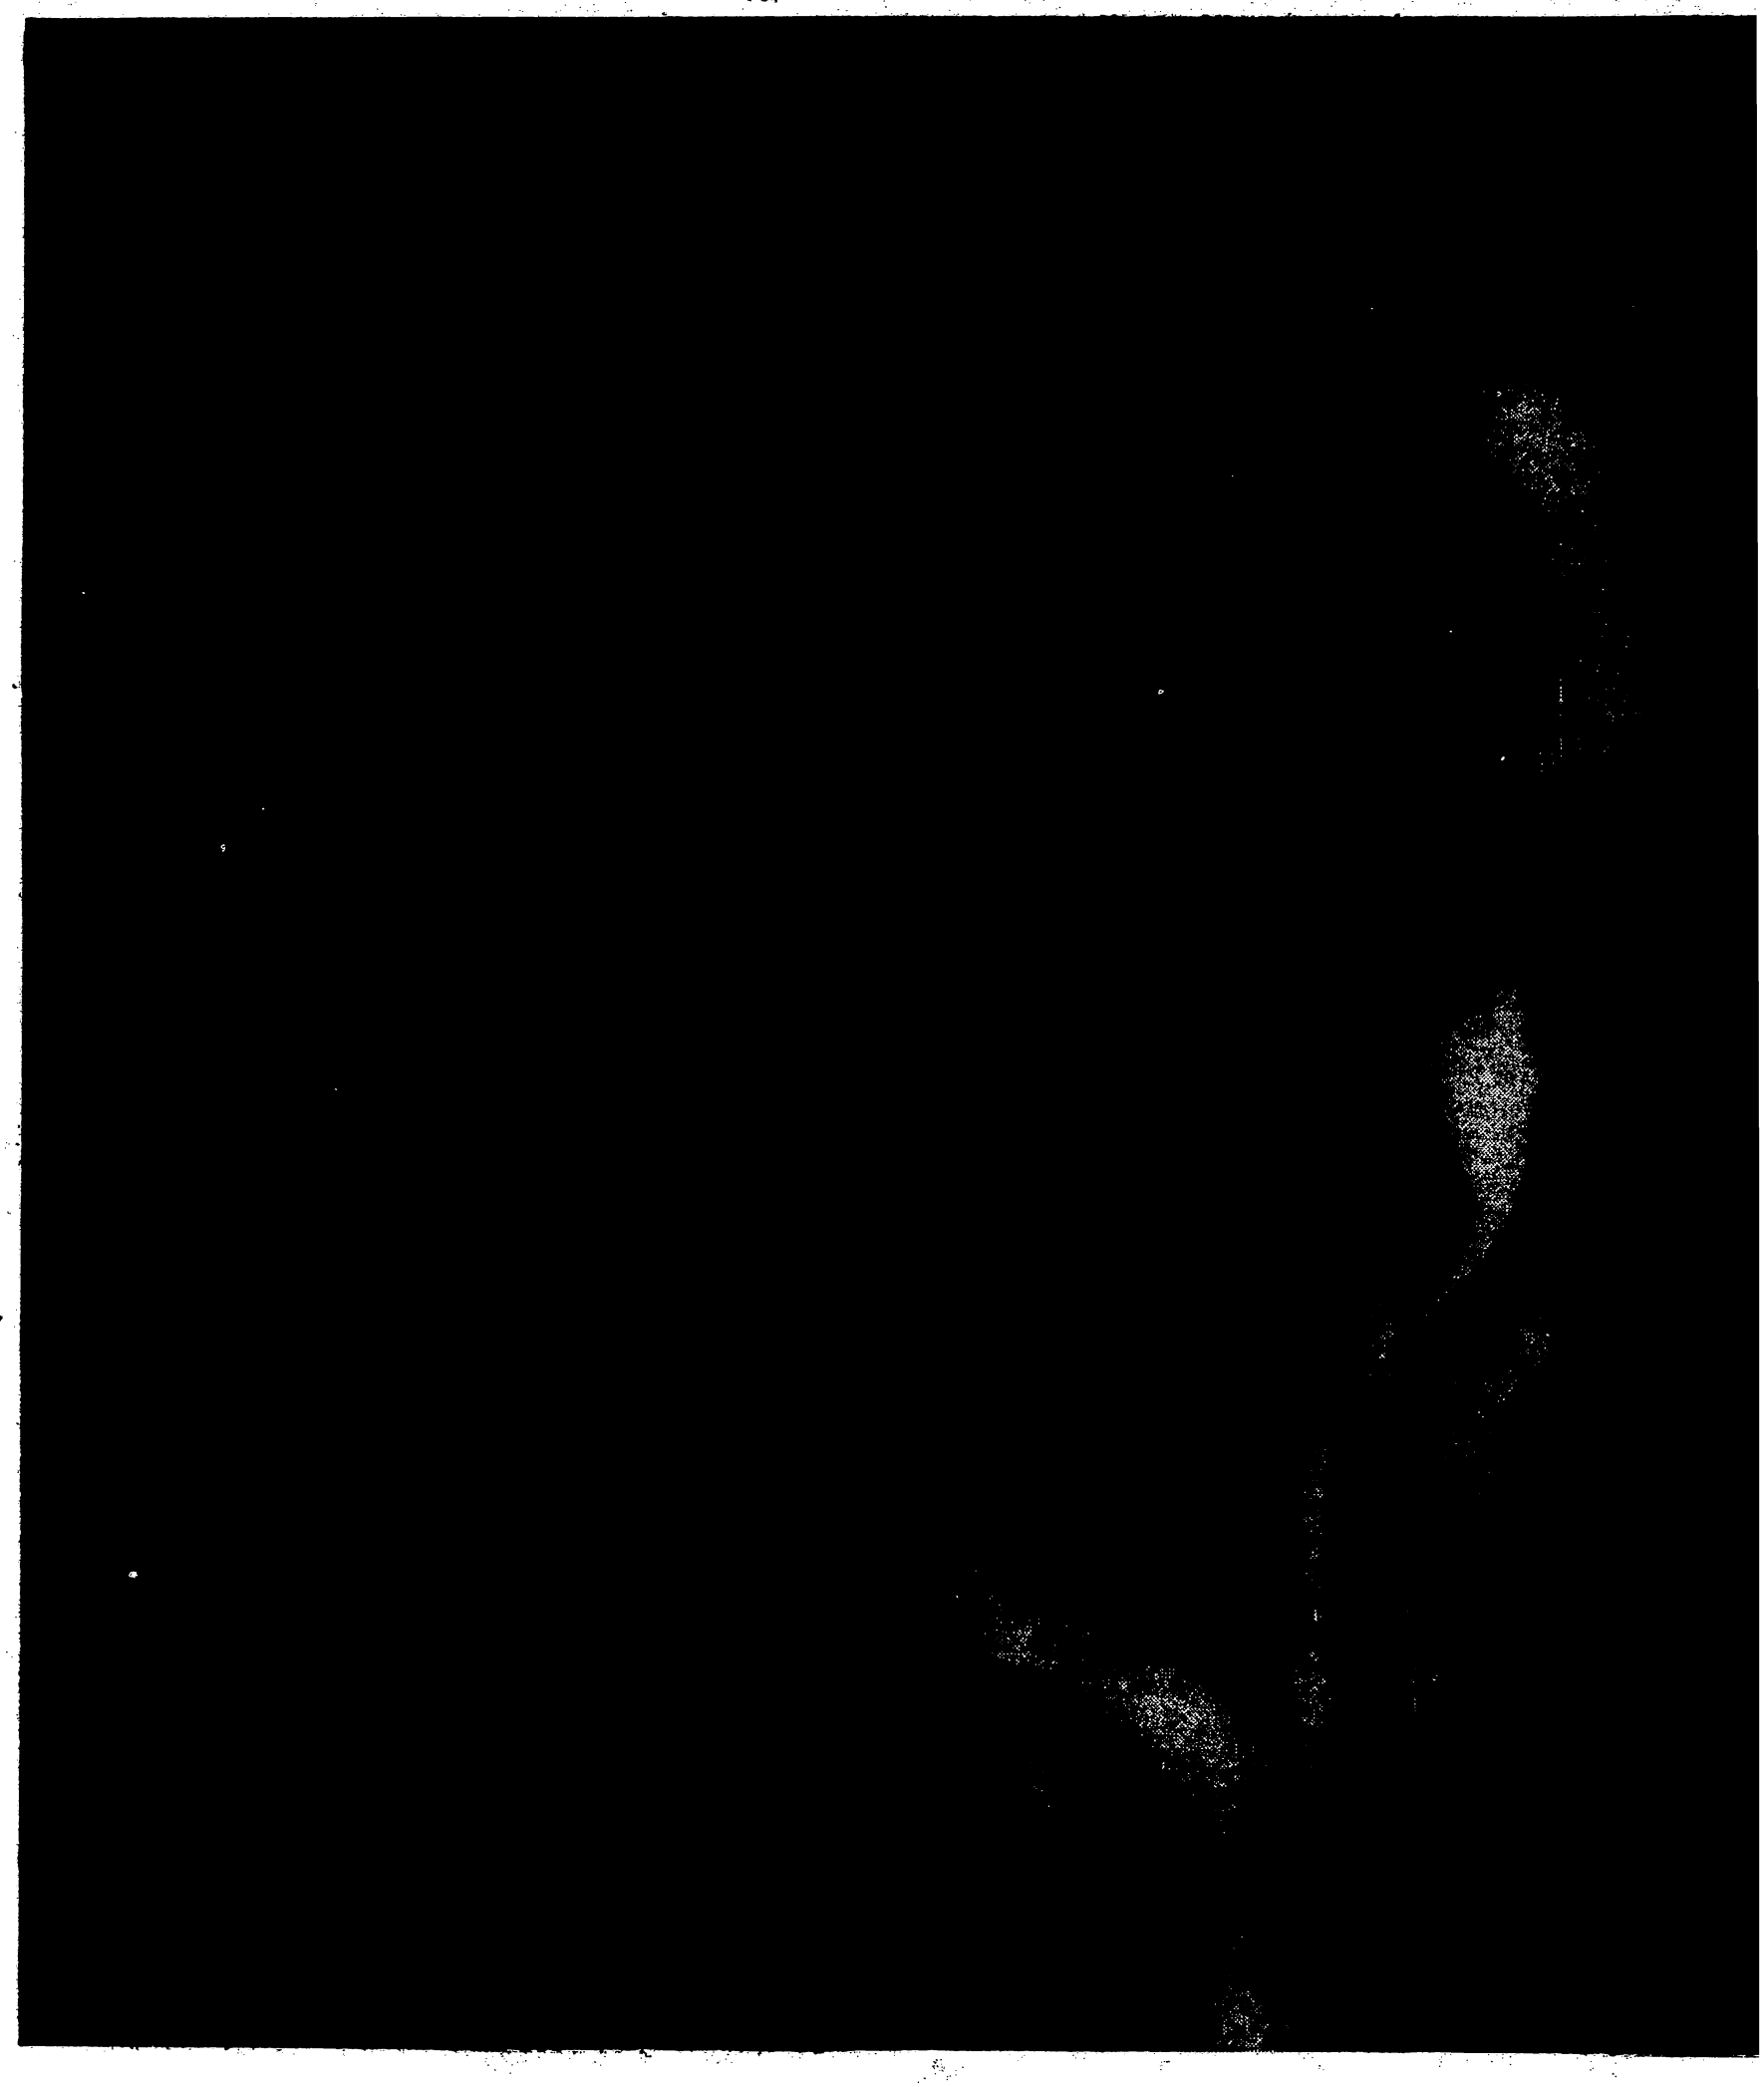
These aspects of the program were good. But as a larger-than-life canvas of Louis the man it was more myth than reality. Rose.

John O'Hara Story For Chrysler Series

Rod Serling has been signed for a second script in the NBC-TV "Bob Hope Presents the Chrysler Theatre" series preeming this fall.

This one will be an adaptation of the John O'Hara story, "It's Mental Work," a short story originally published in the New Yorker mag dealing with efforts of a bartender and hatcheck girl to take over a shabby New York bar after death of the owner.

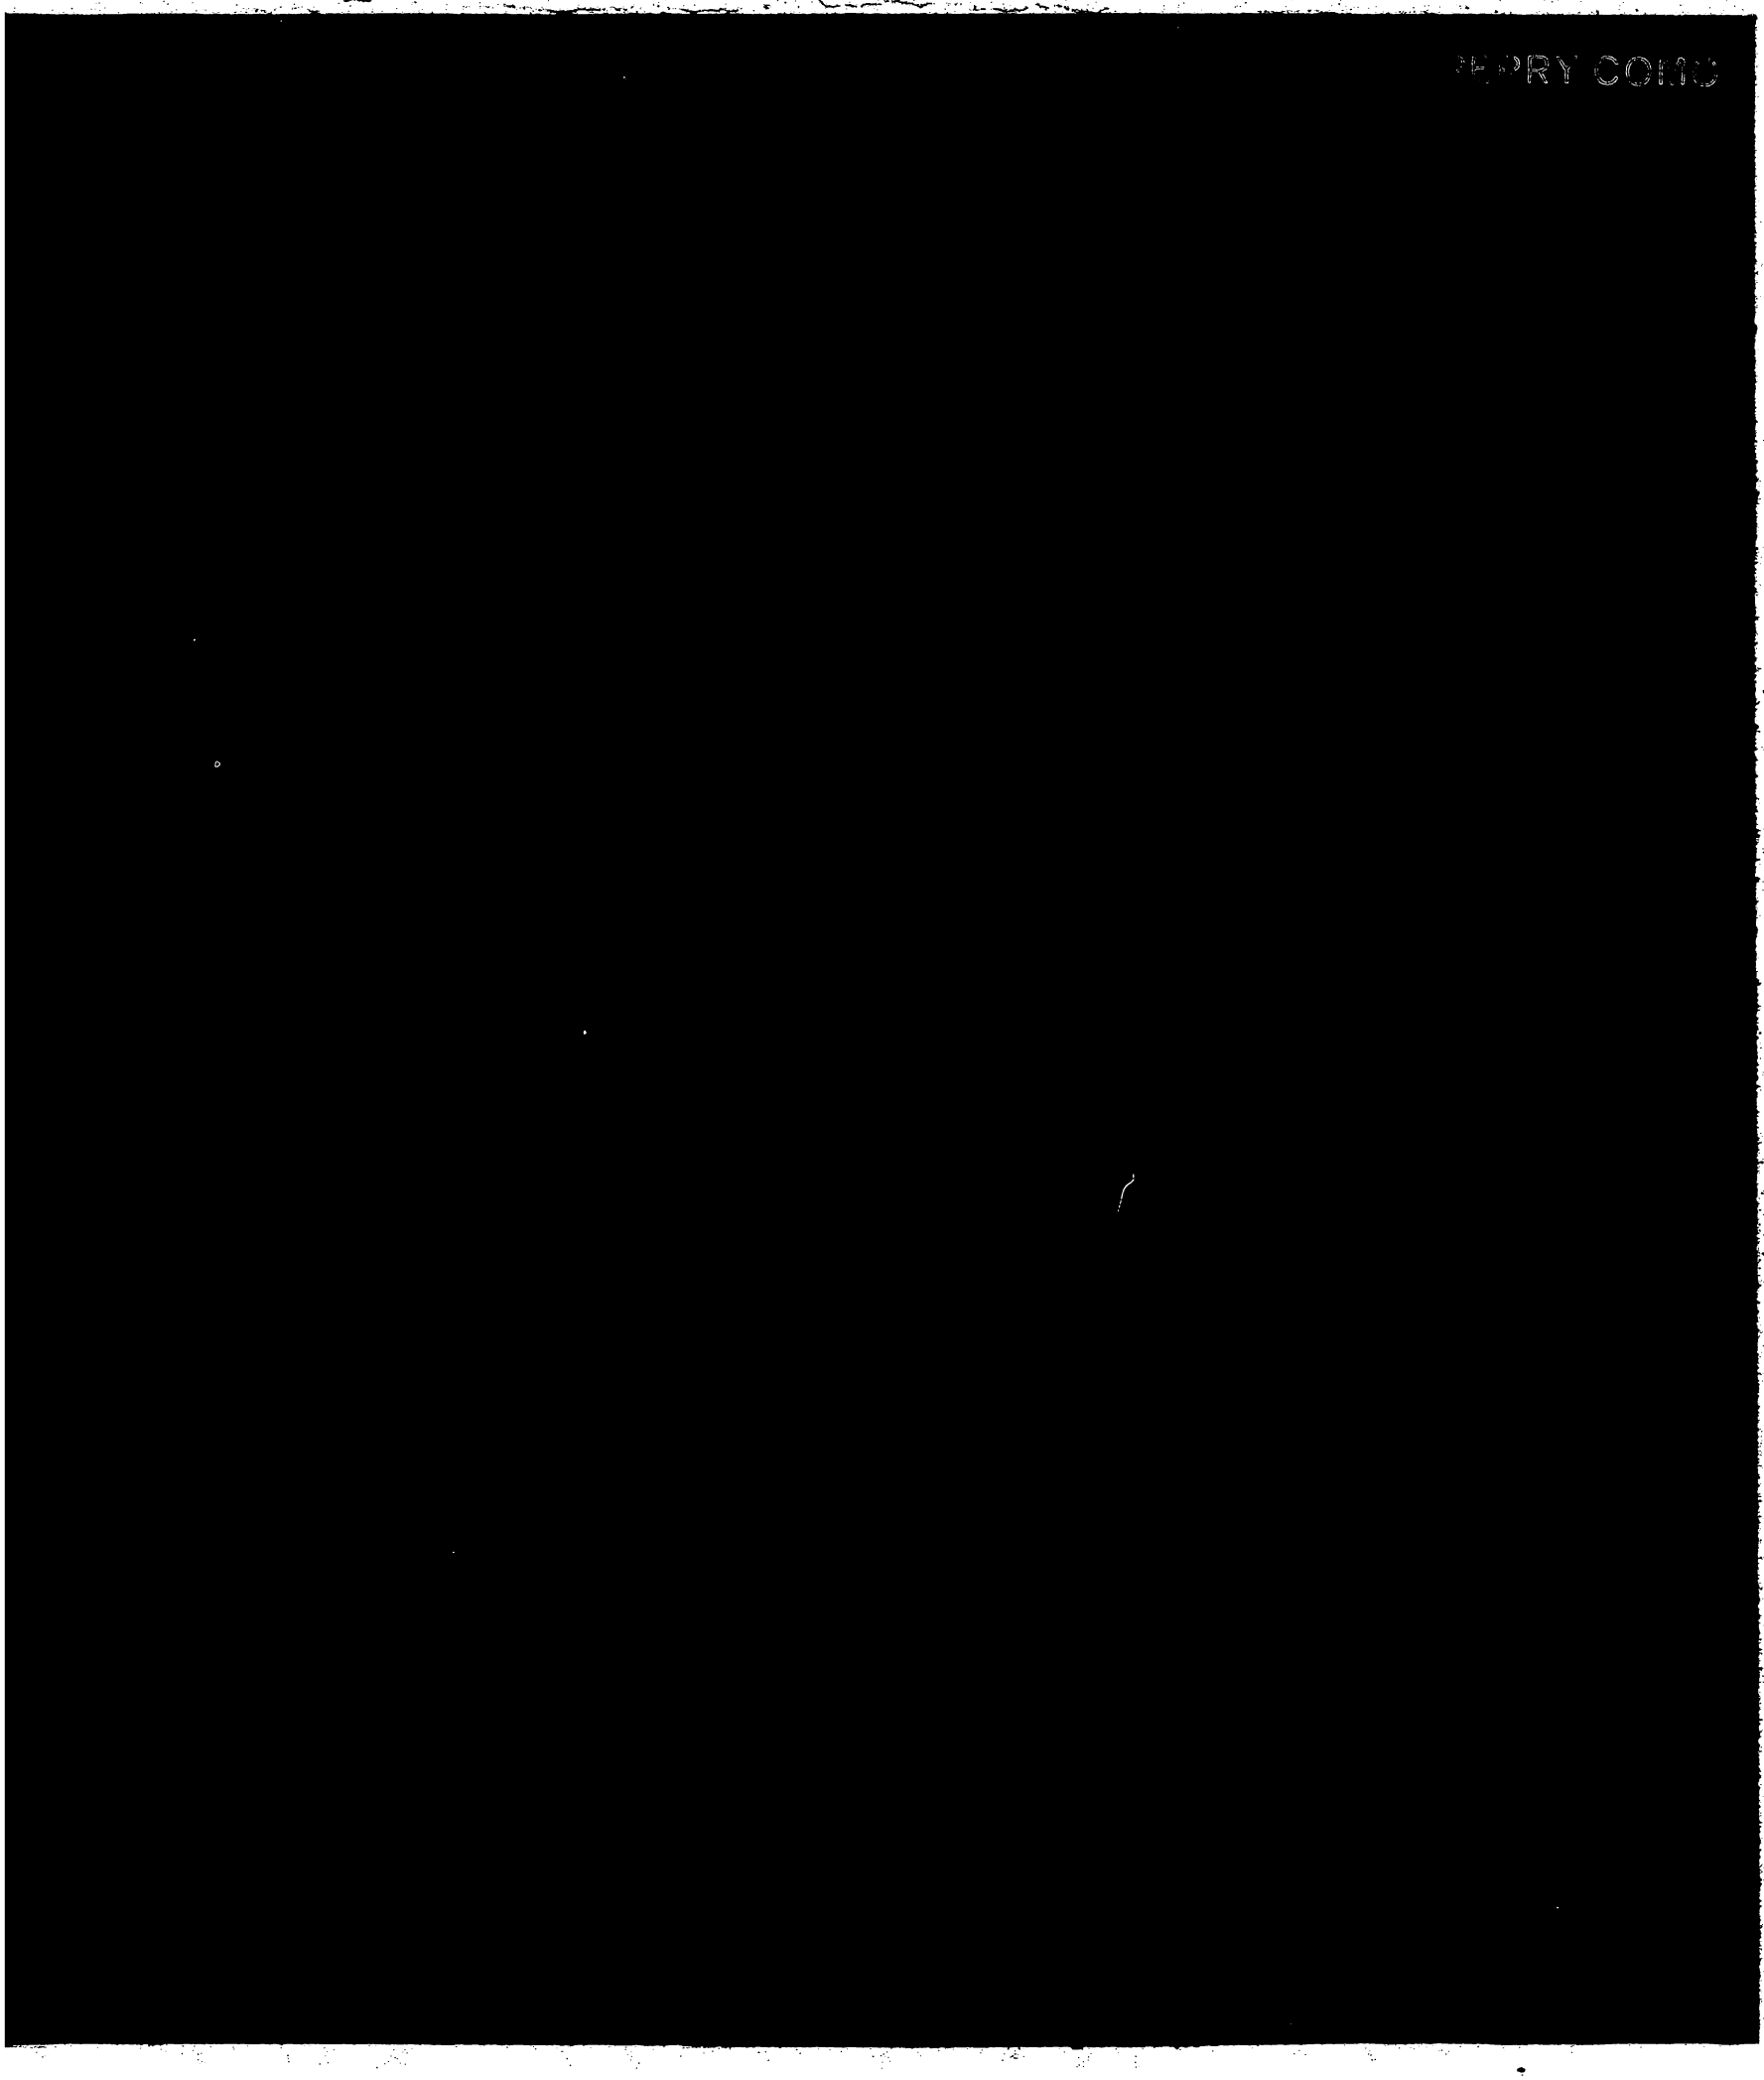
Serlings other stint for the show will be "A Killing at Sundial."



Songs and Suspense

What does Perry Como think about when he's facing the cameras? "Well, I'm thinking about lying down," he's confided to interviewers, "but there's no place to lie, so I stand up."

No television singer, we might add, has ever stood up so well. For 14 years now, Perry's been one of the medium's greatest attractions. And next season his seven, full-hour specials will be among the highlights of NBC-TV's '63-'64 line-up.



The color broadcasts of "Perry Como's Kraft Music Hall" will premiere Thursday, October 3. The same time slot on the following week will bring the first performance of the color series, "Kraft Suspense Theatre."

Thus, on the Thursday nights when viewers aren't getting comfy with Como, they'll be getting duck-bumps with drama. That's Kraftsmanship.

Properties under development in the suspense series include "The Fox Hunt," a tale of a jailer who permits prisoners to escape just so he can track them down; and "Only One Day Left Before Tomorrow," the problem of a girl who must choose between marriage to a man she loathes and her possible conviction as a murderess.

Between the two types of television offerings—songs and suspense—the new Kraft time period (Thursdays 10-11 p.m. NYT) looks especially promising. What's more, the entertainment gamut of these programs represents a range that typifies the diversity of our 1963-64 schedule.

Look to NBC for the best combination of news, information and entertainment.

Dow Jones-CBS

thusiasm over what's been happening to Bill Paley's network.)

There's no doubt that, at least on paper, the CBS schedule carries a promissory tag for everything to come up roses and Nielsens. Chiefly, the extra added ingredients—and there's a $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 swing either way on each hour depending on success or failure—include the new Danny Kaye Wednesday night show, the new Judy Garland Sunday night show, the Friday night "Great Adventure" series (all are 60 minutes and will originate on the Coast, with the web's Television City returning for the first time in years to a peak production status), plus the Monday night "East Side West Side" George C. Scott hour entry and the Saturday night half-hour Phil Silvers show.

There's little doubt but that the Wall St. stock performance (with time out for the current general jitters) is predicated in large part on the potentials of these key "extra added ingredients" and the SROs registered on most of them, with Kaye and Garland going at the unprecedented rate of $90,000 per commercial minute (six to the hour).

On the other hand it's no guaranty that CBS "has it made" on any or all of these new attractions. As a matter of fact the network has its fingers crossed. Kaye and Garland, in particular, represent back-breaking investments. Delivering an hour show every week takes a bit of doing, no matter what amount of coddling it entails. Thus far Judy's been punching in the best tradition of a vet trouper, her first two shows under the belt. Two shows don't make a season (she's still got 30 to go), but the initial behavior pattern has given heart to everyone concerned. Kaye, just back from Russia, starts work in the next few weeks.

criticism of Goldwater for appealing to sectionalism and white supremacists in trying to capture the Republican nomination. Salant made an hour available on either July 24, Aug. 7 or 21 for simultaneous tv and radio network coverage of the debate.

Goldwater's refusal to participate in a debate sets no precedent for the 1964 campaign procedure when President Kennedy, running for a second term, will undoubtedly be challenged to a debate with the Republican nominee. President Kennedy, whose television encounters with Richard M. Nixon are widely credited to be responsible for his victory in 1960, has already stated that he will meet the 1964 Republican nominee in debate. Goldwater's explanation for not engaging Rockefeller will have no application to the 1964 Presidential contest.

The local Appliance Dealers League, comprising tv set dealers, has launched a project that would have tv set distributors largely finance and sponsor zooming tv color programming for the area as a means of further stimulating color set sales. This contemplates KMSP-TV alone showing 72 shows in color a year. This, of course, would be a considerable inducement for the purchase of color sets, it's pointed out.

VARIETY-ARB's weekly chart offers a day-by-day analysis of the top feature evening slots in a particular market. On Saturdays and Sundays, daytime feature slots compete with nighttime pix periods for designation as the top feature slot of the day. Chi WAIT

thermore, Applegate says, the confession that the murder suspect had signed (presumably under pressure) is riddled with flaws and inconsistencies that, if anything, tend to prove him innocent rather than guilty

WAIT's review of the case seems to show that the man was convicted chiefly on the testimony of a disreputable woman, who had had a history of mental illness, and on that of another woman who said she saw him with blood on his clothes but earlier had been unable to pick him out of a police lineup. "Everything proves he didn't do it," Applegate says.

He's been trying to get other people and other media interested in the case, largely through a volunteer publicist who has been sending releases to the papers, but it has received very little attention in Chi outside of a few gossip column mentions and on Alex Dreier's newscasts on WBKB-TV. Dreier not only credited Applegate with breaking the story but commended him for his one-man campaign.

"I'm not interested in publicizing myself or WAIT with this," Applegate told VARIETY, "I'm only concerned with getting this innocent man off, and so is the station. The whole case against him doesn't make any sense at all, but everpbody's mind seems to be closed to it. The point is this, even if he did commit the murder, a Chicago radio station says he didn't, and that's news in itself." The Windy City papers may have ignored it all during the first week of WAIT's broadcasts, but the downstate papers—and especially those in and around Canton—have picked it up.

Applegate is a veteran of 16 years with United Press and 12 with NBC. He was the network's first Hong Kong correspondent, and in decent years he had worked out of its Chi news shop.

Gordon's Editorials

Gordon during the hearing and his remarks were given prominent play in San Diego papers. After the stories appeared, Gordon decided to give the candidate time —one day before the election— for rebuttal, Cunningham said.

When Henry testified before the subcommittee, four members related Gordon's assertions of not giving time to opponents' views.

Henry promised a quick investigation saying FCC will ask Gordon "if he is aware of our policies and if so why not."

The Chairman told Rep. Arthur Younger (R-Calif.) he was sure Gordon's policy doesn't conform to FCC fairness rules and averred the station owner was "dead wrong" in saying he doesn't have to offer rebuttal time.

Gordon also told the subcommittee he has a once-a-week hourly show when listeners can call and argue the station's editorial policy with him.

Subcommittee chairman Rep. Walter Rogers (D-Texas) said he received post cards from San Diego protesting that Gordon hangs up on callers who want to challenge his editorials.

Weekend Shows May Start in Jan. On French TV II

Paris, July 23.

To hasten that long promised second tv channel, Albert Ollivier, video program director, says that next season's entries on the current station will try to maintain quality but also instigate some economic brakes to allow more funds to bring in the second web as soon as possible. In fact, he envisages weekend shows for the new channel as of Jan. 4, '64.

On Saturdays there will be news at 8:30 p.m. followed by a vidgame, essay show and vaude. Sunday afternoon will have a film, vaude, news and an evening detective pic that will be of the type to allow moppet as well as adult viewing. All new sets, and those with the special new conversion units, will be able to get the new beamings.

For the present state-run setup, he has said that there will be more attempts to balance information, educational and cultural aspects with more entertainment and light fodder. Important contemporary writers are to be used as well as noted film directors.

There will be special theatrical ventures and pix for moppets as well as original adult plays for tv by such playwrights as J. L. Curtis, J. L. Roncoroni, Eugene Ionesco and others. More series will be used and made, many with regular film producers, including co-productions with Italy.

News will be freer and live documentary news events will also be stepped up. Plenty of proven live plays, both old and new, are also being pencilled in. Ollivier did not intimate whether ads and commercial licensing would be allowed on the coming channel.

There is also the internal problem of new tv statutes. Present unions want to keep it closed and as a nationalized industry while the Ministry of Information is ready to bring in outsiders of note even if oldtimers feel they have the seniority. Present staffers also want to control production as well as execution.

But the coming second station will probably need private production to fill its wants and this might change the whole aspect of tv and do away with the closed shop aspects. It remains to be seen how new statutes are formed and whether the French system will end up with some private intercessions or remain a complete monopoly.

Italo TV Testing Elektronic Cam

Rome, July 23.

RAI-TV, Italy's radio-video net, is experimenting with a new recording process called Elektronic Cam. Ostensibly, system would permit RAI to reproduce its programs and especially to dub them for vital foreign sales and release. This is not always possible with Ampexed items.

Elektronik Cam is described as a system permitting monitoring of three 35m cameras using movie film. Use of one or another of cameras is commanded from central booth as with live and taped shows, but length of film is rated a handicap: each can only run 10 minutes before reel changes.

Other bugs and disadvantages remain to be worked out before a decision is reached on practicality and related cost factors of new system. Initial experiment will be filming by director Sandro Bolchi of "The Golden Door," an American original for which Lilla Brignone, Giulia Lazzarini, Bianca Toccafondia, Lauro Gazzolo, Renato DeCarmine, and Tino Bianchi have been cast. Play will be shot in RAI's Milan Studios.

NAB's Shortwave Station

NAB signed into membership its first commercial shortwave radio station.

Ralf Brent, prexy of WRUL, New York, the new NAB station, asked other stations to submit programs for WRUL's broadcasts to 109 nations.

Radio-TV's Editorial Whee

By MIKE MOSETTIG

Washington, July 23.

Soliloquies substituted for inquisition, and digressions on philosophy and constitutional law replaced pungent probing as the House Communications subcommittee ended the first round of its "fact - finding" hearing on broadcast editorials.

Meaningful dialog was largely lost in the celestial atmosphere of the committee room, perhaps not to the complete regret of the Congressional fact finders.

When most Congressional investigating units open a probe, they have a definite tack or angle to pursue and do so without wasting an exorbitant number of words.

The Communications subcommittee, however, has to take a different approach. Obviously the members as politicians are worried about the effect of broadcast editorials in a heated campaign. Several influential Congressmen have been gutted by stations. Generally, the politicians would like some kind of curb on broadcast endorsements and attacks of candidates.

Unable to come right out and say this, they conduct instead a "fact-finding survey on the whole scope of broadcast editorials." The approach is via the high ground and the plane of discussion is lofty.

Stanton A Click

Best suited to this rarefied atmosphere was CBS prexy Frank Stanton. By pegging his prepared statement to an eloquent explanation of democracy, Stanton easily slipped into the subcommittee's good graces.

Stanton proved equally adept in off the cuff colloquy with the subcommittee, even reaching a verbal detente with Rep. John Moss (D-Calif.) in contrast to their previous sharp clashes on equal time.

Moss introduced legislation requiring stations to give time to candidates they editorially oppose or attack and prohibiting airwave opinion two days before elections.

Until Stanton testified, every other witness had agreed with Moss' bill but for one reason or another didn't want Congress to put it into law. In his questioning of the earlier witnesses, Moss made it known he didn't appreciate or understand this half measure of support.

Stanton was smoother. In his prepared statement he opposed editorial legislation as "inappropriate," saying the fairness doctrine is adequate for political and other airwave opinion problems.

But as he and Moss gently felt out each other's positions, the Congressman said his bill would make clear the intent that Sec. 315 shouldn't apply when a station offers time to a candidate it editorially opposes.

Stanton replied such a bill would be "appropriate." "I could go along with it," he said.

What Moss and Stanton cleared in one exchange as the question of how to handle equal time rules when legislating "fairness doctrine" guidelines.

Such wasn't the case with FCC Chairman E. William Henry who spent his most gruelling day to date before a Congressional Committee trying to explain the possible imbroglios Congress could create if it tried to legislate editorial or fairness doctrine guidelines.

Henry said almost the same thing as Stanton in warning if a station were required to give one candidate time to respond to an editorial, it would have to make the same offer to all other candidates, creating a "merry - go-round."

While endorsing the principles of Moss' editorial bill, Henry warned that Congressional action along those lines "would stifle programming of public issues."

After five hours on the stand, the Chairman was no closer to agreement with the subcommittee than when he began testifying.

It seemed as if he and the subcommittee members were talking in two different languages and the frustration of both sides was probably summed up best by Moss who termed Henry's reasoning "the most far fetched I have ever heard."

What griped the Congressmen about the fairness doctrine, especially as interpreted in the Times-Mirror case, is that the station has the final say in who can respond to its editorials.

Moss and Rep. John Bennett (R-Mich.) haggled with Henry for almost an hour over the legalistic interpretation of the doctrine and Times - Mirror ruling. The Congressmen said they should be allowed to go on the air if editorially attacked and that a spokesman can't speak for them. Henry tried to explain that under most circumstances the candidate who be the one to respond but that the fairness doctrine language also had to cover exceptional cases where a candidate couldn't appear.

In contrast to that exercise in frustration, Stanton merely heartily endorsed Moss' premise that a man (be he politician or broadcast exec) can only speak for himself and should not have to rely on a spokesman.

Another witness who might have best stayed at home was Daniel W. Kops, chairman of the NAB Committee on Editorializing. He opposed Moss' bill warning it would discourage the growth and development of broadcast editorializing.

He advised against trying to set legislative standards for fairness and said "there are no rules, nor are any necessary" to make a broadcaster seek differing community voices.

Having a far easier time were Theodore Shaker, prexy of the ABC o & o tv stations; Mutual Broadcasting prexy Robert Hurleigh and Westinghouse Broadcasting topper Donald McGannon.

Shaker and Hurleigh described their editorial policies.

McGannon implored against curing editorial "headaches by amputating the head or by applying a tourniquet about the neck."

He urged the subcommittee to encourage responsible editorializing rather than write legislation, rules, restrictions or policies to hamper it.

NBC submitted a statement saying no regulatory or legislative rule should be imposed either requiring or prohibiting editorials.

The hearings will likely resume around the first week of August to hear from station owners.

2d Educ'l TV Ch. For Twin Cities

Minneapolis, July 23.

The Twin Cities with their four commercial and one educational television stations are now in line for a second educational tv channel, the FCC having reserved for it a UHF channel hitherto set aside for commercial video.

In taking such action the FCC complied with the request of the Twin City Area Educational TV Corp., a private non-profit group which launched the present noncommercial educational station, KTCA, with its one channel in 1957 and has been operating it ever since.

Dr. J. C. Schwarzwalder, KTCA-TV general manager, says the reason for the request was that "we are about out of daytime now." The present plan is to utilize the second channel starting next fall, he announced.

KTCA-TV wants to expand its programming and such expansion necessitates another channel, according to Dr. Schwarzwalder. The new programs in mind, he says, are a science series, a junior college course and ones for parochial schools. Among the present programs regularly are those for the Minneapolis and St. Paul public schools, Spanish and French lessons and an expanding nursing education.

He also announced that KTCA-TV will apply to Washington for $140,000 in federal matching funds to permit alterations in the station's antenna tower and a new transmitter. The present St. Paul KTCA-TV studios will be used for the new channel, he says.

Columbus — Nancy Dwan, until this spring a regular on WLW television's Midwestern Hayride, will join the staff at WLW-C here soon. Miss Dwan quit the program to prepare for her marriage last month. Her husband, Tom Fields, has accepted a position at Starling Junior High School here.

Brit. Com'l Big Four Reach an Agreement On Networking Formula

London, July 23.

An under-wraps agreement, which the concerned contractors are keeping tightly buttoned up, has been reached between Associated TeleVision, Associated-Rediffusion, Granada and ABC-TV concerning the networking of programs.

Fact that there has been a new deal between these four kingpins of the British commercial network system emerged late last week when it was revealed that ABC-TV dropped its $1,500,000 High Court claim on Granada-TV. Claim, made in May, was foregone on the "basis of a new agreement" between the companies.

German Stage Biz Raps TV Inroads

Frankfurt, July 23.

West German television, long accustomed to attack from German cinemas, has just been hit from another quarter. The provincial stages are being harmed and practically driven into bankruptcy because so many stage productions are being filmed for television, it has just been charged.

West Germany's Freie Deutsche Partei, the third ranking political party in this country, has complained that there are too many city, state and federal supports being given to the local stages to keep them in business. And main reason for the need for these additional subsidies is the decrease of audiences, since the people can watch these same plays on the two German television nets.

Every week there are at least two films on the German television nets of productions from leading German stages, the political party added.

Lotsa Mileage In BBC-TV's Reruns

London, July 23.

Apart from the economic virtues of reruns, BBC-TV is now saying that its policy of "screening 'em again only if they are good" is paying off in audiences, too.

Corporation audience research surveys show, for instance, that initially the "Here's Harry" yock series racked up audiences on a Monday night of around 13,250,000. The repeats, which were transmitted in Thursday prime time garnered a further 9,750,000 viewers.

When top BBC shows are rerun out of peak hours, the Corp. states, they still haul in respectable audiences, even though faced with fresh product on the indie channel. "Z Cars," for example, has an average first time out following of 15,000,000 in its Wednesday night berth while repeats of the show in the "barren lands" of Sunday afternoons attract between 3,000,000 and 5,500,000 viewers.

Further example of the "virtue" of the re-screening is the fact that at least one seg of the "Steptoe and Son" comedy series currently being rerun by BBC, exceeded an audience of 15,000,000 second time around.

Comparatively high audience pulling power of top BBC repeats does not, however, tempt BBC into such prime rerun fare. Percentage of such material used between 7:30 and 10 p.m. between April and September in 1961 was 4.8%; in '62 it fell to 3.5% and this year is expected to dip still more to 3.4% of prime time programming.

Taking all transmission hours, proportion of the BBC schedule devoted to repeats during the April-June quarter this year was just over 8% or 64 hours out of some 780 hours.

'Maximum Boys' Cheer Drop-In Nix, Cox Given 'Desist'

Washington, July 23.

Assn. of Maximum Telecasters Inc. and the Electronic Industries Assn. filed petitions supporting FCC's recent decision to deny VHF drop-ins for seven markets.

The "Maximum Boys" at the same time urged that FCC Commissioner Kenneth Cox not participate in any reconsideration of the case.

The group said Cox, as Broadcast Bureau chief, had been an "investigator, prosecutor and proponent" in earlier action in the drop-in case, creating "inherent" conflict with any future action. The Telecasters said they did not question his integrity but were arguing for his abstention on legal and procedural grounds.

Cox issued a long dissent to Commission's 4-3 decision denying VHF short spacings in Johnstown, Pa.; Baton Rouge, La.; Dayton; Jacksonville; Birmingham; Knoxville and Charlotte. FCC allowed a drop-in for Oklahoma City.

In urging FCC to turn down requests for reconsideration, the Telecasters said VHF short spacing would run counter to Commission's efforts to develop a competitive UHF system.

Electronic Industries Assn. also pitched its opposition to reconsideration on grounds the drop-ins would discourage further investment in UHF station construction.

TV set manufacturers feel purchasers of all channel receivers would be penalized if there were no UHF stations in tuning range, EIA argued.

VARIETY - ARB SYNDICATION CHART

VARIETY's weekly tabulation based on ratings furnished by American Research Bureau, highlights the top 10 network shows on a local level and offers a rating study of the top 10 syndicated shows in the same particular markets. This week six different markets are covered.

Both the network and syndication study features the total area homes reached and the metro area ratings on each show. The total area homes reached reflects the audiences on the basis of the total market area examined. The metro area ratings are based on the metropolitan markets within the total area examined. Top 10 shows, both network and syndicated, are listed on the basis of their showing in the total area homes barometer.

Various branches of the industry, ranging from media buyers to local stations to syndicators will find the charts valuable.

Over the course of a year, ARB will tabulate a minimum of 247 markets. The results of that tabulation will be found weekly in VARIETY Coupled with the rating performance of the top 10 network shows, on the local level, the VARIETY-ARB charts are designed to reflect the rating tastes of virtually every market in the U.S.

TV Networks As Tomorrow's Major Studios with 2-Hr. Features Moving From Theatres to Homes: Fennelly

Hollywood, July 23.

Filmed television will eventually replace theatrical motion pictures, as we know them, Vincent M. Fennelly, exec producer of CBS-TV's "Rawhide," predicts.

"We are at the stage now where networks are developing talent and building up a reserve of technically experienced people just as the major studios, in their heyday, did," he said. "I believe that, with the growth of the longer television programs—the two-hour feature is assured!—that motion pictures will move from theatres into the home, almost entirely.

"There's a tremendous future, also, in educational films for television," Fennelly stated. "I hope to get into this field myself within the next few years. I'd like, particularly, to film historical features. However, support for educational television must come primarily from foundations, such as the Rockefeller Foundation, and not from government subsidies.

"The length of the segments of some series has been growing steadily, and several programs are already filming 90-minute episodes. We will be watching them with interest and will very likely increase the length of future "Rawhide" segments if the public goes for the longer shows, which I believe they will.

"With the demise of the single sponsor, the control of a program's material will be less and less dictated by the sponsors, which should give those filmakers who tackle the two-hour features greater freedom of expression. There will always be a certain amount of commercials, we must have them, but they are limited in total programming time by the FCC and will, I believe, not interfere with the enjoyment of future shows. And the foreign market will expand with these longer features, suited for both their theatrical and television outlets."

Prior to taking over production reins on "Rawhide," Fennelly, who entered the tv field in 1956, had produced—for Four Star—the "Trackdown," "Wanted—Dead or Alive," "David Niven Show," "Richard Diamond," "Alcoa-Goodyear Show," and "Stagecoach West" series. His initial contract for "Rawhide," for two years was rewritten to add a year, including the present season.

Some of his most valuable training in the production of tv westerns (and their emphasis on both action and economy) was received during a five-year period as producer at Monogram and later at Allied Artists. He did not foresee, however, the effect his and other Monogram product would have on French filmakers, becoming a "fad" that formed the basis for that country's "new wave."

Fennelly believes that the more ambitious television gets, the more its programs will improve. "We won't try to replace the wide, wide screen spectaculars which, along with the adult-slanted foreign films, will eventually be the only motion pictures shown theatrically, but television is already making some films, such as the less-technical western, better. And very soon the studios are going to run out of old features to sell the networks. Hence, we must make features directly for television use."

He believes that there will always be a demand and use for live tv and some half-hour shows but that the eventual "evening at home" will be built by the networks, "who are tomorrow's major studios," into the type of program "we used to go but to the movies for—a newsreel, a cartoon, a short subject, and a feature."

Fennelly does not have too much faith at present in the future of pay television, putting it into the realm of unproven experimenting.

'Joe Sent Me' Back On Desilu Schedule

Hollywood, July 23.

Desilu Studios and exec producer Cy Howard have reactivated "Joe Sent Me," half-hour situation comedy which was initially developed last year.

Project is being pitched to Jonathan Winters to star in the 1964-65 series.

20G Libel Suit Versus Leslie Roberts in Can. Labor Controversy

Montreal, July 23.

Leslie Roberts, w.k. commentator on CJAD locally, who's billed daily as "Canada's most controversial writer," is facing a $20,000 libel suit filed by Hal C. Banks, controversial labor leader, and the Seafarers' International Union.

Banks is head of the SIU, and in recent years both he and the union have been the subject of a number of charges and investigations over alleged violence, blacklisting, and general terror tactics.

Action, taken last week in Superior Court, asks $10,000 for Banks and $10,000 for the union because of what the plaintiffs claimed were "outrageous, unlawful, false and slanderous" remarks, particularly in the matter of the long-drawn and bitter inter-union jurisdictional dispute on the Great Lakes.

Declaration by Banks and the union even claimed that Roberts was given opportunity to make "a clear and specific public retraction," but instead he "continued and intensified" the attacks.

Case is unique in local radio, particularly since the editorialists began flourishing, with surprising freedom, on the Montreal outlets.

Roberts himself, a onetime editorial staffer at the now defunct Montreal Herald, is a controversial figure because his targets range over the widest area possible in public affairs.

He's been the subject of considerable criticism, because of his frequently placing himself in the position of being accused of one-sidedness—such as his recent attack on the local World's Fair officials, and the reported—and confirmed — dissension between the World's Fair officials and Montreal's Mayor, Jean Drapeau.

Roberts attacked the "Anglo-Saxons" and praised Drapeau, which made this particular outburst seem odd in view of the fact that the commentator is the regular weekly "interviewer" of the mayor, on CJAD's "The Mayor Speaks."

Following this particular broadcast, question was asked if this did not place Roberts in a "conflict of interest" position, particularly in view of his known friendliness with the mayor.

Knoxville—Stanley R. Hagan has been appointed general manager of WNOX, Scripps-Howard station. He had served as assistant manager for two years. Hagan replaces Richard B. Westergaard who has taken an extended leave of absence, but who will remain a v.p. of Scripps-Howard Broadcasting Co. O. L. Smith will remain as station director.

FINE & FRIEDKIN'S 'GRAND HOTEL' PILOT

Hollywood, July 23.

Producer-director-writer team of Mort Fine and David Friedkin have been signed by MGM-TV to develop a pilot based on "Grand Hotel," studio's 1932 release which starred Greta Garbo, John and Lionel Barrymore, Joan Crawford and Wallace Beery.

NBC-TV has already shown interest in the vehicle, and is reported involved on a co-production basis.

Studio hasn't decided whether to telefilm "Hotel" as a 60-min. or 90-min. series. It's projected at the 1964-65 season, of course.

Ed Allen's O'seas Syndication Route

Ed Allen, host of the exercise show, "Ed Allen Time" is heading for Europe with his wife Kay, planning to expand his syndicated show to encompass foreign markets.

Prior to leaving, he held an exercise class at the Chicago White Sox park last weeks. It was a Ladies Day event which brought femmes out to the field for a special Ed Allen program of exercises prior to the Detroit Tigers game.

If Ed Allen hasn't invented a "perpetual motion" machine, he's almost proved the human body can be one. His own, at least. At 35, Allen is six-foot-two, has a 30-inch waist. Besides taping his half-hour "Ed Allen Time," for syndication, he does a show locally in Detroit, emceeing a 90-minute "Morning Movie" daily, and produces a children's show in Toledo, emceed by his wife Kay. He designs exercise equipment, is president of two corporations and flew 3,000 miles last year for personal appearances.

U.S. Comedy Skeins

reports that "Hennesey," a yock show that the distrib has so far sold only to Anglia Television, has garnered some "strong nibbles" from four other stations. Additionally, Anglia has placed its third order for the show, taking 39 episodes in all. NBC here is also prepping to play the trend towards comedy buying with its newie, the Bill Dana comedy series, which bows in the U.S. in September.

Elsewhere around the indie web, U.S. distributors have such offerings playing as "Comedy Hour," "Huckleberry Hound," "I Love Lucy," "Yogi Bear" and two others.

BBC, which recently moved swiftly to snatch "The Lucy Show" from under the indies noses, is also now screening a new comedy acquisition from William Monis, "The Dick Van Dyke Show." Corporation has also scheduled some of the "Mr. Magoo" cartoons and has bought the "Deputy Dawg" from CBS. This is in addition to its own healthy lineup of home produced laugh shows.

British TV's Period Pieces

London, July 23.

In the gentle way in which video program trends ease into being in this country, it is being noticed that there is a leaning in some tv circles towards period and costume pieces.

Granada-TV, in seeking new avenues of drama, has networked two such period series in the past few weeks. They are "The Victorians," a 60-minute show which has proved its worth both critically and from the Friday night ratings point of view, and "Maupassant," a series of short stories which are telescoped into a one-hour format for Thursdays drama spot, a practice the station started with its "Saki" stories.

In addition, Associated TeleVision is also feeding the indie outlet with a Saturday night skein called "Sergeant Cork," another hour-long show. It deals with the adventures of a Victorian detective. Also on the commercial web are such costume reruns as "Sir Francis Drake," "Richard The Lionheart" and "Robin Hood," each of which run at 30 minutes.

BBC which this summer seems to be doing somewhat less period dramatizations and serializations, nevertheless, is still running a Sunday p.m. serial "Lorna Doone." On top, the Corporation's vidoutlet also screens a monthly vaude show, "The Good Old Days," a heavily costumed item which showcases the old vaude days when British musical halls were in their prime.

Slotting of the costume-period shows on the tv channels as it currently stands is having the effect of exposing one or more period productions in prime time on four days of the week. And it might be an indication of the way things are going that "The Victorians," "Maupassant" and "Sergeant Cork" have all secured regular places in the network top 20 ratings list.

groups that wasn't even a good imitation. Norma Macmillan, the girl who did the Caroline Kennedy bits on the comedy disk, "The First Family," mimed a recent recording of hers aimed at cashing in on the takeoff. The thing was totally aside from the mood of the original and has little chance of scoring.

There were brief interviews with band leader Peter Palmer, Freedomland director Art Moss and singer Bobby Darin, who is appearing at the park this week. Darin didn't perform, but twister Joey Dee appeared for a desultory mime of one of his current disks. Host Cole's liveliest bit was leaping around the floor trying to round up dancers for the cameras to mug. There seemed to be more security guards standing around than audience. Unless this summer trifle shapes up, it's a safe bet N.Y. teens will be otherwise occupied Saturday night. Bill.

DIALOG
With Ed Thilenius, Robert Tyre Jones Jr.
Producer: Ed Thilenius
Director: Bob Doty
30 Mins., Mon. (15), 10:30 p.m.
WAGA-TV, Atlanta (tape)

Robert Tyre Jones Jr., is the square name of the greatest amateur golfer of all time, who won the "grand slam" at 28.

A resident of Atlanta, Jones, an Atlanta attorney, has been in semi-retirement.

In his golfing heyday he won 13 open and amateur championships in the United States and Great Britain in eight years, a record never even approached by any other golfer. No wonder he still is referred to as "Mr. Golf."

Jones, considered unapproachable for tete-a-tete interviews, proved receptive to the invitation of Ed Thilenius, WAGA-TV's director of sports, and this excellent program camé as a result.

Thilenius, privy to the common knowledge that Jones does not like to be called "Bobby," addresses him as "Mr. Bob," throughout the interview, which is meaty and full of the Jones reminiscences.

Jones is known as the "Father of the Masters," a title he disclaims. He admits that he was a prime mover in the organization of the Augusta National Golf Club, but the idea of a tournament came later and developed into the Masters as we know it today.

Jones discusses with Thilenius the Augusta course at length and gives his opinion on the toughest holes (11 and 13), which give the best golfers in the world plenty of trouble.

This program is filled with golfing anecdotes, information and nostalgia, not to mention some golfing tips that would improve the game of any golfer, duffer or pro.

Thilenius confesses on the air, that as a result of the program, he has shaved five strokes off his game score.

Jones is positive about a few things pertaining to golf.

He would like to see the adoption of one standard golf ball and would like to see the Professional Golf Assn. and United States Golf Assn. rules standardized.

And, in closing the interview, he gives this advice:

"A golfer must learn his limitations as well as his capabilities and must always remember that 'you (the golfer) are your most effective adversary.'"

WAGA-TV presented this segment of "Dialog," produced by the Storer chain station's news department, in a week of outstanding programs of interest to golf fans with the station, longtime CBS affiliate, carrying the 45th annual PGA Golf Championship tournament played in Dallas. Lucc.

THE SEAT OF YOUR PANTS
With Don Riggs
Producer-Writer: Riggs
Director: Tom Rose
60 Mins., Fri. 7:30 p.m.
KDKA-TV, Pittsburgh (film)

Don Riggs, one of the top KDKA-TV personalities, has produced an oddly fascinating documentary on old planes and old pilots who learned to fly, literally, by the seat of their pants. He has been painstaking in his research and has come up with some sparkling new film on 73-year-old pilots who fly without instruments and with World War I crates with holes in its wings and practically every safety device missing.

He has enlisted the efforts of every cameramen in Pitt's Group W base and has come up with excellent scenes. He explains the loyalty the men have for their old planes which they have reconstructed and are constantly repairing. Young men are also engaged in this effort, including Riggs himself, and this rarely explored hobby makes for an interesting hour. Most of the film was done at Clarion, Pa., airport which was founded in 1919 and became the world's first municipally owned air field. Viewers learned that there are 88 homemade planes now under construction in the Pitt area and of all the problems a man has to go through to run down the right parts to get and keep the plane in the air.

Helping Riggs were two other pilots—newsman Paul Long and sometime commentator on the station, Phil Cochran, the legendary war hero who received added fame as Flip Corkin in the "Steve Canyon" comic strip. But their entrance added to the only disappointing factor on the show—the spotty dialog which became overbearingly cute at times. Since Riggs is listed in the credits as the writer, he should delete some of these coy lines before he submits for viewing on other stations. With slight variations this could be an entertaining hour on any station in the country. Lit.

MPLS. AQUATENNIAL
With Jim Hutton, Al Tighe, Pamela Albinson, others Producer: Ken Barry
Director: Bob Sears
180 Mins.: Sat. (20), 1:30 p.m.
HENNEPIN FEDERAL SAVINGS & LOAN
KSTP-TV, Mpls.-St. Paul

In televising 180 minutes of the local 24th annual Aquatennial opening day's doings, including the important spectacular daytime parade, Stan Hubbard's NBC affiliated KSTP-TV gave the well-established civic summer festival probably the best airlane break and territory-spread publicity that it ever has had.

Utilizing a trio of narrating "hosts," two of them highly capable staffers Jim Hutton and Al Tighe and the other Pamela Albinson, last year's Aqua queen, along with two cameras, the station brought many hundreds of thousands of area setowners a three hours' visual and entertainment treat. Its audience, of course, comprised dialers who saw an event, the parade, which holds an enormous amount of interest for much of this territory's populace and even for a considerable number of out-staters.

These dialers witnessed the fascinating parade closeup without having to brave terrific downtown traffic and crowds in order to line the curbs and watch. Moreover, they undoubtedly enjoyed comfort and garnered a better look than they'd have had if they weren't in the curbs' front rows. KSTP-TV therefore performed an appreciated service for them.

Via the cameras dialers also had closeup views and introductions to 38 glamorous 1963 Aqua queen candidates, the Aqua commodore, Jester clowns, many cute kid participants and film star Tippi Hedren, a Minnesotan and Aqua guest. Some of the aforementioned were interestingly interviewed by very able Hutton.

This was the first time any of the Aquatennial ever was televised in color, KSTP-TV being the only one of the Twin Cities' five video stations equipped to do it live out of the studio. And this in itself must have been a source of satisfaction to the Aquatennial committee, lending added parade appeal for color setowners. Rees.

conventions. Hagerty is also understood to have a good relationship with Pres. Truman, despite their diverse political loyalties. If the former Presidents accept the web's bid, it's expected that they will confine themselves to the broad historical survey rather than comment on the partisan in-fighting that goes on at national conventions.

Xerox is one of the sponsors approached by ABC-TV to pick up part of the $3,500,000 tab which coverage of the elections is slated to cost the web. The company indicated that it would buy into ABC's convention coverage if the former Presidents were connected with it. Other sponsors have also shown interests in ABC's plans.

Fees to the former Presidents for their tv services would undoubtedly be made in the form of substantial contributions to some designated institution. Both Truman and Eisenhower, incidentally, are veteran tv performers, having appeared on a number of interview shows.

Bill Matney from Detroit shortly afterwards.

WBKB had used Sid McCoy as a summer replacement, off-camera announcer a few years back and has a liberal sprinkling of colored secretarial and office help, plus frequent guests who appear on Marty Faye's "Apt. 7-A" and "Kup's Show," but it does not have a single Negro regularly doing creative, administrative or on-the-air work. WGN-AM-TV has fewest Negro personnel of all the major shops, and such leading radio stations as WIND and WLS are very much on the pure white side.

It's a fairly safe prediction, however, that Negroes will be used more prominently at all stations here in time, not only because of the current racial uprising but because it simply will be a matter of good business in a city whose population is now one-fourth Negro.

Incidentally, if it seems that Lurlean Hunter will be heard but not seen when she goes with WBBM Radio, that will not be exactly the case. The station intends to increase the roadshowing of its "Music Wagon" stanzas, having enjoyed success with its origination from the International Trade Fair last month. Tomorrow (Wed.), the shows will be broadcast from the Oakbrook Shopping Center and on Aug. 1 it will be done from the shopping complex at Old Orchard.

When Miss Hunter joins the station, replacing Carole March who is pregnant, WBBM's staff of vocalists will have undergone a complete turnover since last spring. The lineup now includes Bill Lawrence, Penny Pryor, a new vocal group known as The Arbors, and a folksinger from the U. of Indiana name, Bob Glaze. Billy Leach, a veteran of WBBM's live music shows, now no longer sings on the air but has moved into the position of exec producer of the two "Music Wagon" strips.

Meanwhile, in an amusing sidelight, the television network has just received a request from the powerful Association of German Workers, asking that criminal shows not be done on German tv on Friday nights—that is the night when the workers' union ordinarily holds its meetings, and if it has to compete with a popular "krimi," it loses a large bulk of its members.

Inside Stuff—Radio-TV

The N.Y. Herald Tribune will make a total revamp of its Sunday complete tv listing insert this fall. Scrapping this feature as a separate entity, the paper is creating a new tabloid-type magazine supplement in which the tv listings will be included. It's part of the Trib's strategy to boost Sunday circulation figures. No editor for the supplement has been named as yet, but Herbert Kupferberg, who's been covering the entertainment and arts beats, is understood to be in line for the post.

An editorial opinion by Harold C. Lund, v.p. of Group W stations in Pitt, was written into the July 1 issue of the Congressional Record by Congressman Jim Fulton who praised KDKA-TV and KDKA for a series of editorials entitled "A New Era in Conservation."

The stations have been instrumental in getting a tough strip mining bill passed in Pennsylvania and the editorial dealt with the value of the new bill in safeguarding the woods, water and wildlife from "haphazard strip mining operations."

A group of Chicago agency execs met informally over lunch last week at the behest of the American College of Radio Arts, Crafts & Sciences to discuss the problem of radio ratings. The consensus seemed to be that the radio industry and advertisers alike were better off with a bad measurement of pertinent facts than with no measurement at all. It was noted, as a word of warning, that the outdoor advertising industry has suffered severely because it could never measure itself.

One adman observed that the television industry will soon be in the same boat with radio where the measurement of out-of-home tunein is concerned. If the portable Sony sets ever come down substantially in price, he said, the tv industry is going to have a brand new headache.

Richard Chapin, KFOR, Lincoln, Neb., was named chairman of NAB's 1964 convention committee. Cochairman is Glenn Marshall Jr., WJXT, Jacksonville.

Other members are: Otto Brandt, KING-TV, Seattle; George Frechette, WFHR, Wisconsin Rapids; Gordon Gray, WKTV Utica, N.Y.; Julian Haas, KAGH, Crossett, Ark.; Willard Schroeder, WOOD, Grand Rapids; Mike Shapiro, WFAA-TV, Dallas; Loyd Sigmon, KMPC, Hollywood; Lester Spencer, WKBV, Richmond, Ind. and Eugene Thomas, KETV, Omaha.

ABC-TV news woman Lisa Howard took her recent trip to Cuba with the complete underwriting of the network and not as the guest of the Castro government as part of an all-expenses junket of the Island offered American newsman as implied in a VARIETY story last week. The story concerned the recent invitation to Negro newsmen of the New York area to visit Cuba for the July 26 10th anni celebration.

Miss Howard says, in fact, that she first applied for a Cuban visa March 11 of last year, finally getting it more than a year later on March 16, '63.

into any pop program, be it swing or sweet music.

Freberg was approached about two years ago with a $10,000 budget which the church people thought was "already too high even at show business standards." It developed that Freberg felt he couldn't do it "right" without 30 musicians and 15 singers under Ralph Carmichael's baton. Latter is Nat King Cole's maestro.

The jingles were cut in the Capitol Tower, the Hollywood hq of Cap Records, and Freberg took plenty of time to achieve "that 'pop music sound' that I wanted," he says, if the religioso jingles were to have any value. "I was rewriting all the time and walking on eggs because I wanted it to be very 'un-preachy' and yet decorous.

"We ran 16 hours in the studio and when the bills came in I was $3,700 over budget. I told the UPC that I would waive my fee—I guess you'd call that a new way of titheing, eh?"

A sample jingle. "Doesn't it get a little lonely sometimes, Out on that limb without Him? Why try and go it alone, The blessings you lose may be your own."

He added that CBC's role in broadcasting was clear, but the role of other components of the broadcasting system was not. For this chief reason he asked for a thorough probing of Canada's broadcasting. With Don Jamieson, president of the Canadian Assn. of Broadcasters, and Dr. Andrew Stewart, chairman of the Board of Broadcast Governors, Ouimet is involved in a survey of that field of activity. Main purpose of the three-man probe is to try to discover main areas of agreement and disagreement among the three organizations represented.

JEZEBEL, EX U. K.
With Heather Sears, Pete Murray, Mark Dignam, John Bonney, Patrick Holt, Margaret Courtenay, Reg Lye, Emrys Jones, Alan Browning, Patrick Bedford, Ernest Hare, Cavan Kendall, Keith Anderson, Jeffrey Ashby, David Webb, Walter Sparrow, Fredric Abbott
Producer: Guy Verney
Director: Jonathan Alwyn
Writer: Rex Rienits
50 Mins., Sat., 6:45 p.m.
ABC TV, from Manchester

"Jezebel" is a ship with a regular complement of officers on a commercial run; and the lot provides a nucleus for this skein of self-contained tales which, judging by the sample caught, might just as well have taken place in an aircraft, a garage, or a tv studio. Chief lack, transparently apparent, was the absence of atmosphere, and the whole format was an excuse for the kind of shenanigans familiar on any other series. The regular thesps had little chance to register, and their connection with main strand of plot was strictly impertinent.

Maxine (Heather Sears), newly wed to Larry Scott (Pete Murray), was aboard on a honeymoon trip from Australia. He seemed to be provided with large quantities of money from an inexplicable source, and Maxine got fixated with the improbable idea that her brash husband was implicated in a child kidnap case. He knew the grieving father, he was pretty evasive about the source of his funds, and he spoke a wild sort of Australian whilst she stemmed from a higher social stratum.

Maxine's suspicion steadily, and predictably, mounted, and Rex Rienits's script deftly deployed a mechanical sort of tension, which might have stretched the nerves of newcomers to the medium. But the cops arrived to pin the job on another passenger, who looked suitably stunned at being found out.

Jonathan Alwyn's direction was competent, and thus fitted the script. Heather Sears made something of the fearful wife, although she could hardly surmount the inherent unlikelihood of matrimony with the uncouth Larry, portrayed by Pete Murray with a dashing disregard of the right down-under vowels. Thesp support was adequate, and largely irrelevant to a plot that concentrated on a couple of people and merely littered itself with side issues. Otta.

THE DICK EMERY SHOW
With Dick Emery, Joan Sims, Gary Miller, the Springfields, Una Stubbs, Mary Millar, Victor Duret, the Cliff Adams Singers, orch under Harry Rabinowitz
Producer: David Croft
45 Mins., Sat., 7:50 p.m.
BBC-TV, from London

Postponed from the Spring schedules because Dick Emery tiffed with BBC-TV over his availability for rehearsals, this show arrived for six fortnightly sessions with some of its anticipation punctured. In fact, BBC-TV erred mightily in having used exactly the same supporting cast in a substitute show for the first-planned "Emery Show"—and this lent much familiarity to this opener. But, in any case, Emery, a volatile comic who has made his mark in a "goon" context with Michael Bentine, does not ease himself cozily into the conventional star-show format. And the thinking behind this one was nothing if not conventional.

Emery's forte is for extravagant impersonation, and it launched the show well in a series of thumbnail sketches about the man-in-the-street's view of escapism, which served as the loose theme for the entire show. Here he scored in zany snatches of caricature, ranging from affluent society dame to workman. The rest of his material gave less scope to his explosive talent, seeming to put it in the straitjacket of the routine revue sketch. But he had his moments in a clever item in which he played the reluctant male fencing with an aggressive female, thus reversing the usual dialog of wolf and victim.

He was partnered by Joan Sims, a gusty comedienne with an earthy touch that did not quite jell with Emery's fantastication. In fact, Emery is far better without a comic foil in most situations. An offbeat dance routine inside a whale was performed by Una Stubbs and Victor Duret, but was too contrived to please. The Springfields purveyed lustily their latest waxing, "Come On Down," and Gary Miller and Mary Millar suavely warbled on occasion.

David Croft's production hovered uneasily between the informality of the normal star show, and the impersonality of the satiric approach. Upshot was that the intention, and the outcome, was confused, being neither crazy nor uninhibited enough to give full rein to Dick Emery, nor warm enough to kindle the usual genial response to a comic. Otta.

Foreign TV Followup

Play of The Week

Shaping up as one of the best whodunit tales to beam from commercial tv screens for many a moon, Associated-Rediffusion's "Touch Of A Dead Hand" by Robert Urquhart (from a novel by Van Siller) unfortunately did not realize its promise and reverted to the ranks of the "brave trys."

Notwithstanding its strong storyline, professionally boiled down from paperback to 90 minutes of screentime, the neat and tidy plot which had no loose ends and the rapid pace at which the yarn unfurled, the play missed out on a couple of counts.

First off, the American setting handed the thesps the always unwelcome chore of impersonating Yank accents which can often undermine performances.

For this reviewer, this particular hazard slightly spoiled otherwise sterling portrayals by Alexander Knox, Hugh McDermott, Alan Gifford and Jerry Stovin. In every other direction these artists turned in up-to-par featured characterizations which could not be faulted.

Principals in the cast, William Sylvester and Samantha Eggar, handled the dialect more easily—or, at least, it was less noticeable on them—and their respective performances were topnotch.

Second misfire was that the story whipped along so speedily, jumping from one situation to another, that characters involved and, more important, their inter-relationship, which was vital to the plot, was not sufficiently established for at least the first half of the production.

Nevertheless, the strength of the story managed to hold the whole works together and director Cyril Coke handled the tale superbly extracting from it great suspense and tension which added impact to the surprise twist at the end.

Story dealt with a clique of professional writers, one of whom turns murderer in order to plagiarize another's work. Twist came when the hero's wife turns out to be in league with the murderer. Watt.

Fitzpatrick-Saucier Travelogs for TV

Ted Saucier, who was responsible for the production of Metro's "Weekend At The Waldorf," is in Beverly Hills to confer with James A. Fitzpatrick on a series of color film shorts for television.

The first in the series, "Knowing Norway," produced by Fitzpatrick-Saucier, was recently sold to Australian television network. Fitzpatrick-Saucier will edit four additional films to be included in the series.

Saucier was the Waldorf's p.a. when he made the MGM deal.

Alan Carter Directs USIA Tele Service

Washington, July 23.

Alan Carter, career foreign service officer and former broadcaster, was appointed director of the U.S. Information Agency Television Service. He succeeds Charles N. Hill who joins Paul Rosen Associates in New York to develop tv installations in the midwest and produce programs.

Carter said he hopes to follow Hill's precedent in using industry talent in producing USIA broadcasts. The project is temporarily in limbo awaiting final Congressional determination of USIA's budget. The House cut the agency's appropriation by $15,000,000.

'Rhinestone' Jay Ward's Coney Island Cotillion For 'Fractured Flickers'

Jay Ward, producer of the tv cartoon strips, "Bullwinkle" and "Rocky & His Friends," is now promoting a "Coney Island Film Festival" to coincide with the CBS-TV premiere of his "Fractured Flickers." Party, to be held Sept. 12, will be attended by 1,200; guests will be transported by special BMT subway trains to Coney Island, one of them being an original 1920 model dug up by the NYC Transit Authority for the event.

To greet the celebs, Ward hopes to get a batch of Brooklynites dressed in native costumes who will conduct them to Astro-Land, one of the newer amusement parks in the area, located on the site of the late Feltman's restaurants.

The salami safari will have bathtub gin served from genuine bathtubs, and attendees will be given a dufflebag filled with goodies of the 1920 vintage, such as costume jewelry of the era, as well as headache bands, long cigaret holders and other paraphernalia indigenous to the flapper era.

Ward, in the past, has taken coffeehouses as well as the grand ballroom of the Hotel Plaza for various parties. The Coney Island event is a new departure. Alan Foshko is handling the festival for the latterday counterpart of Diamond Jim Brady—Rhinestone Jay Ward.

Durante's 'Song,' Edwards' 'Vegas,' 'Surf Nut,' Bob Dylan Top LPs

JIMMY DURANTE: "SEPTEMBER SONG" (Warner Bros.). The quiet and sentimental side of Jimmy Durante gets a fine showcasing in his debut package for the Warner Bros. label. The raucous piano-crashing and the flamboyant vocalistics of trademarks like "Inka Dinka Doo" have been put aside in favor of the more mellow mood that's set up by songs like "Young at Heart," "Count Your Blessings Instead of Sheep," "You'll Never Walk Alone," "Bluebird of Happiness" and the title song. It is a "New Durante" as the album cover heralds but it's still his old-fashioned balledeering style that will pull the sales and spinning interest. Roy Bargy's arranging-conducting give him a full-blown musical backing as do the John Rarig Singers.

VINCENT EDWARDS: "AT THE RIVIERA, LAS VEGAS" (Decca). With two good-selling LP's already in the Decca hopper, Vincent Edwards now has a surefire entry in the disking of his "in person" turn at Las Vegas' Riviera earlier this year. The "Ben Casey" tie will help sales, of course, but Edwards could stand alone as a personable performer with winning vocal ways. He has a well-conceived act that comes over exceptionally well in the grooves. His song turn has a neat mixture of standards ("You And The Night And The Music," "How Deep Is The Ocean," "As Time Goes By," "They Didn't Believe Me"), some comparatively new items like "Put On A Happy Face" and "Gonna Build A Mountain," and special material by Sid Kuller and Sidney Miller. Edwards' Las Vegas score is good for a repeat on turntables all over the country.

"MY SON, THE SURF-NUT" (Capitol). Although it's not always easy to tell whether the surfing music-makers are kidding or not, there's no doubt about this being a comedy album. In fact, it's a solid laugh entry created by Jack Marshall. On one side, there are some clever interviews with various surfing personalities, such as "The World's Richest Surfer," "The Teenage Surfing Vampire" and "The Hodad of the Year," all very good. On the flip, there are some samples of surfing music, good for laughs but, in a pinch, also can serve for dancing.

BOB DYLAN: "THE FREEWHEELIN' BOB DYLAN" (Epic). Bob Dylan's impact on the mushrooming folk field is two-fold. He's been scoring as a singer and composer, and each effort gives him a firmer grip on folknik loyalties. In this package his two-pronged talents are again on display for excellent results. His songs, for the most part, are pertinent comments on the times and he delivers them in a style that hits hard and is quite meaningful. "I Shall Be Free," "Masters Of War" and "Blowin' In The Wind" are turntable pickouts. In fact, "Blowin' In The Wind" is already getting top pop coverage by other artists.

THELMA CARPENTER: "THINKING OF YOU TONIGHT" (Coral). Thelma Carpenter has been singing for some time now but seldom has she been shown to better advantage on records. The accent is on romance, which she's best at, and with a smooth rhythmic backing in support, she pours out the ballad sentiments in warmly effective terms. The tunes, all out of the standard repertoire, include many spinnable delights. Among them are Rodgers & Hart's "It's Easy To Remember," Hoagy Carmichael's "I Get Along Without You Very Well," Irving Berlin's "All Alone" and Irving Gordon's "Unforgettable." The orch's appropriate shadings are deftly handled by Henry Jerome.

LES BROWN ORCH: "THE EXPLOSIVE SOUND OF LES BROWN" (Columbia). Les Brown resorts to the old band gimmick of popping up the classics. But he pushes his band through them with such enthusiasm and drive that the package becomes a standout display of that form. The title's adjectivial boast of "Explosive" is well taken for Brown really knows how to pound out the beat with instrumental pyrotechnics that take hold. Coming in for his swinging spree are the works of Bizet, Grieg, Borodin, Liszt, Prokofiev, Khachaturian, Liszt, Debussy, Rachmaninoff and Rimsky-Korsakov. They all fare well under Brown's beat.

MR. ACKER BILK: "CALL ME MISTER" (Atco). Acker Bilk made a lasting impact on the U.S. pop scene with his "Stranger On The Shore" single a couple of seasons ago and his fans will find plenty to their liking in this new package. The repertoire is pegged mainly on tunes of standard stature, and his clarineting, backed by The Leon Young String Chorale, gives them all added luster. There's plenty of promming material available here including "Missouri Waltz," "Tangerine" and "Shenandoah."" The programmers will also find some delights in the newer material especially a fine bossa nova item titled "Diamantina."

"THE NATIONAL GOSPEL QUARTET CONVENTION" (RCA Victor). In the curent upsurge of Negro gospel music, this LP is an arresting showcase of a different gospel style used by white groups. A very popular musical idiom in the south, this music is a more countrified type of religioso music which never reaches the crescendos of the Negro gospel music. Featured on this set are numbers by the Blackwood Bros., the Stamps Quartet, The Oak Ridge Quartet, Statesmen Quartet with Hovie Lister, the Kingsman and the Speer Family.

THE OSMOND BROS.: "SONGS WE SANG ON THE ANDY WILLIAMS SHOW" (MGM). The Osmond Bros. (four boys ranging in age from seven to 12 made a big splash on tv this past season via Andy Williams' NBC show. They're now set for a new tv series, "The Travels Of Jamie McPheeters," which bows on ABC-TV this fall so they've apparently got a firm foothold on the video field. Their grip on the disk field should be pretty firm too on the basis of their debut package. The boys have an eager way with a song that's completely charming. George Wylie has given them some nifty arrangements to work with and several oldies ("By The Light Of The Silvery Moon," "Aura Lee," "In The Good Old Summertime," "Just A Song At Twilight," "Be My Little Baby Bumble Bee" and "Bye Bye Blues") come over extremely well in their young hands.

"BEST-LOVED FRENCH FOLK SONGS" (Monitor). This is a collection, as the title suggests, of several French ditties. Sung by Andre Claveau, Mathe Altery, Christian Borel and Claire Vallin, under the baton of Pierre Guillermin, the array comes off as a pleasant outing with a simple, entertaining feel. There is the added element of the inclusion of the French lyrics to each tune and, on the album's jacket, the English translations. Disk could have values as a teaching aid both in schools and homes. The session often has the atmosphere of a sing along collection.

ADRIANO CELENTANO: "FURORE" (Vesuvius). An Italian import, this LP showcases the talents of a Mediterranean answer to Elvis Presley. Adriano Celentano handles the rocking idiom with a powerful belting style which compares to the best of the U.S. practitioners. This repertory is geared more for the Italian market, although the novelty angles in the foreign language lyrics could have commercial values.

GRANDPA JONES . . . . . MY LITTLE LADY

"Here Comes A Million Memories" (Sure Fire†) is a neatly delineated ballad, also out of the c&w school, and the alfalfa jukes should eat it up.

LP LOAD ROLLS INTO MARKET

RCA Victor Tag All Over Europe Via New Longterm Teldec Deal

In a new longterm agreement with Teldec, RCA Victor took another major step in establishing its own imprint on a global scale. With the Teldec tie, which calls for the handling of Victor product in West Germany, Scandinavia, the Benelux countries, Austria and Switzerland, the RCA Victor label now has a universal appearance throughout Europe.

In New York from Germany last week to wrap up the final details of the new arrangement were Hans Lieber, general manager of Teldec, and Arthur Waizenegger, Teldec's sales manager. As spelled out by the Teldec execs, the new deal calls for the firm to press and peddle the Victor disks in W. Germany and to manufacture the records for the Victor licensees in the other countries.

They claim that Victor is the largest American label on the W. German market now with Van Cliburn leading the pack for the longhairs and Elvis Presley, Paul Anka, Neil Sedaka, Floyd Cramer and Al Hirt running up big scores in the pop field.

Teldec is a contraction of Telefunken (Berlin) and Decca (London). The firms merged in 1950 and own Teldec on a 50-50 basis. Teldec first began its association with Victor in 1957.

During their stay in the U.S., Lieber and Waizenegger visited Victor's plant operations in Indianapolis and attended the label's annual sales meet being held in White Sulphur Springs, West Va., this week.

Monterey (Cal.) Jazz Fest Cuts Talent Budget Back to Original $38,000

Hollywood, July 23.

The Sept. 20-22 jazz festival at Monterey, Cal., sixth annual to be staged by general manager Jimmy Lyons, is back to $38,000 budget. Last year talent outlay went $10,000 over that figure, and the fest committee which reins event had to call a special meet to allocate the additional coin. This year boundaries have been firmly laid out for Lyons.

Possibly that is the reason Lyons is buying somewhat slowly. Of the five programs to be held only the Sept. 22 evening show is rounded out, at this point. That bash will feature Harry James band, Carmen McRae, Dave Brubeck quartet and Dizzy Gillespie Quintet.

Deals are on, but nothing yet firmed, for Miles Davis, Mel Torme, Gerry Mulligan combo, Thelonious Monk, Laurindo Almeida, Peewee Russell, Jack and Charlie Teagarden, Oscar Peterson and Gerald Wilson band — among others.

John Lewis, leader of Modern Jazz Quartet, this year returns after two-year absence, as musical director of the bashes.

Valley Dale (O.) Terpery Ends 40-Yr. Public Run

Columbus, July 23.

Four decades of providing dance music for the Central Ohio public has ended with the closing of Valley Dale ballroom. The indoor and outdoor dancery will operate henceforth as a private ballroom. In recent years the weekly Saturday night public dance lacked attendance while private party business was on the upbeat.

Owner Lou Peppe and bandleader Chuck Selby call it a new ballroom trend. "There are only a few public ballrooms still operating across the country," said Selby. Peppe is in his 25th year of ownership of Valley Dale. He took over management with his late brother, James V. Peppe, in 1935 and three years later exercised an option to buy the ballroom. Just about every name band in the nation played one-nighters at Valley Dale.

The concerts will be conducted by Eddy Manson, who'll be leading a 25-piece orch.

Cap Sets Rady As Director Of Creative Services

Si Rady has been set as director of creative services at Capitol Records. Rady, who joined Capitol last April, will handle all of Cap's creative activities in the east.

Among Rady's primary responsibilities will be all east coast artists & repertoire activities, investigation and negotiation for Broadway show properties and original cast albums, contact with talent agencies and personal managers, lining up new talent and contract negotiations with artists. He'll also devote time to working with indie producers and auditioning masters for purchase and release by Capitol.

Although Rady will be responsible to Cap president Alan W. Livingston for all his activities in the creative area, scheduling and release for recordings produced or purchased by Rady will be handled by Voyle Gilmore for singles and the label's album committee for LP product.

Rady's activities will be apart from those of Brown Meggs, Cap's director of eastern operations, who remains in charge of the company's administrative and public relations activities in the east. Both Meggs and Rady headquarter in Cap's exec offices in New York.

Rady, who has had diskery hitches with Decca and RCA Victor, left Victor in 1959 and cofounded with Bing Crosby Project Records.

COSNAT WINS $2,000,000 GOVT. DISK CONTRACT

The Cosnat Corp. has been awarded a Government contract to supply the General Services Administration with records for all federal installations in the continental U.S. The contract will run until July, 1964.

According to Jerry Blaine, president of Cosnat, which also produces and manufactures records through subsidiary firms, the contract should add an estimated $2,000,000 in annual sales for the company, which showed sales of $8,877,115 during the year ended Sept., 1962.

Under the terms of the agreement, Cosnat will supply records to the GSA as the government agency requisitions them. The GSA will distribute them to both military and civilian installations for use in hospitals, libraries, recreation halls, service clubs, etc. The records are for use on phonographs only, and not for resale.

CAP UPS ROGER KUNZ

Roger Kunz has been set as administrative services manager for Capitol Records Distributing Corp. He replaces Gil Matthies who resigned.

FALL PROGRAMS IN HIGH GEAR

Responding to an upbeat industry take for 1962 of $427,000,000 on album sales, the record manufacturers are aiming for a peak '63 with an unparalleled push on new LP product. Most of the companies have already wound up their annual sales meeting and the factories are ready to ship the merchandise in anticipation of a hefty end-of-summer buying spree.

RCA Victor is at The Greenbriar, White Sulphur Springs, West Va., this week to unveil its 11th annual "Best Buy" program. The conclave, which opened July 21, winds up tomorrow (Thurs.). The Columbia forces, however, are back from San Juan, Puerto Rico; the Capitol execs are working on plans laid out in Mexico City a couple of weeks ago; the Decca bunch has returned from regional meets in San Francisco, St. Louis and Albany; MGM and its affiliate labels, Verve, Ava, DGG, Charter, Vesuvius and Parker, displayed their new product to distributors at a three-day meet in New York last week; the Epic crowd has concluded its round-robin display in N.Y., Las Vegas and Miami Beach; diskeries like ABC-Paramount and United Artists, Cadence and Atlantic showed their wares at meetings in Miami Beach during the latter part of June, and virtually everybody else is ready to roll for the big fall drive.

The biggest product load shown by one company is the 68 new releases due from Columbia in August and September. In the lineup are 26 pop albums, 14 Masterworks, four Latin American albums, 23 four-track stereo tapes and a new addition to Col's series, "Pasaporte Al Ingles."

Top Pop Release

Highlighting the pop releases are packages by Tony Bennett, Barbra Streisand, Percy Faith, The New Christy Minstrels, Ray Conniff, Lester Flatt & Earl Scruggs, Bill Doggett, Andre Kostelanetz, Mahalia Jackson, Miles Davis, Thelonious Monk, Mitch Miller, Bill Pursell, Duke Ellington, The Brothers Four, Andre Previn, Jerry Vale, the debut Columbia LP's of Patti Page and Bruce Johnston, and the first joint recordings of The Dukes Of Dixieland and The Clara Ward Singers.

The highlights of the Masterworks releases are "Oedipus Rex" conducted by the composer Igor Stravinsky, Brahms' "A German Requiem Op. 45" by The Philadelphia Orchestra conducted by Eugene Ormandy, and Beethoven's "Symphony No. 5 in C Minor, Op. 67" conducted by Leonard Bernstein and the N.Y. Philharmonic. Other new Masterworks include recordings by E. Power Biggs, The Budapest String Quartet, Rudolf Serkin, Zino Francesscatti, Andre Kostelanetz, Bernard Krainis and others.

The Decca and Coral labels are continuing the "Marquee '63" theme with the release of 29 pop and five classical albums, carrying the tag "The Main Attraction," which will spearhead the company's August promotion. The fall merchandising program went into effect Monday (22) and will run through Sept. 13.

On the Decca schedule are packages by Guy Lombardo, Sammy Kaye, Bert Kaempfert, Burl Ives, Gordon Jenkins, Vincent Edwards, George Feyer, Alfred Apaka, Ted Weems, Vincente Gomez, The Texas Boys Choir, and a special package by Louis Armstrong covering the years from 1928 through early 1930. Also included are two-record sets by Kitty Wells and Judy Garland. There's also a special release titled "They Stopped The Show," which includes Ray Bolger singing "Once In Love With Amy," Walter Huston singing "September Song" and Mary Martin singing "My Heart Belongs To Daddy." Also set are packages by Sam "The Man" Taylor, "Whoopee John" Wilfahrt, The Band of The Plaza de Toros and Ethel Smith.

Col Moves to Stabilize Industry Sales Pattern Via Cut in Dealer LP Price

In a breakaway from the controversial diskery marketing programs offered several times during the course of a year, Columbia Records has come up with a constant year-round plan with a drop in dealer price on its LP catalog. The new merchandising program was unveiled by Col's execs last week in San Juan, Puerto Rico, during the label's annual sales meeting.

Beginning this week, merchandise with a suggested list price of $3.98 will be offered at the dealer cost of $2.25. (Previous dealer price had been $2.47.) Merchandise at a suggested list price of $4.98 will be available to dealers at a cost of $2.81. (The previous price was $3.09.)

The early industry view of the Columbia price drop is mixed. Some say it will put the orthodox dealer on an equal footing with the discounter and rack jobbers while others contend that it may give the discounters impetus to peddle their disks to consumers at a still lower price.

However, Col feels that the new lower cost for all of its LP and pre-recorded tape product and the concept of year-round merchandising will bring "profitable year-round sales." Col's concentration will be on balanced monthly releases in place of twice-a-year blockbusters, along with coordinated artists & repertoire planning and ad-promotion campaigns to contribute to the stabilization of the industry's sales pattern.

Program's Goal

According to William P. Gallagher, Col's marketing veep, the new merchandising program will eliminate the hazard of anticipation-buying by distributors and retailers and will result in an increase in inventory turnover and an increase in return on investment.

"The Columbia distributors," he said, "will be urged to reappraise the role of the sub-distributor and retailer in his market place and will be given programs designed to restore a level of healthy competition at the point-of-sale." In summing up, Gallagher said, "The record industry has come of age. It will be, we hope, an age of reason."

Kenneth Glancy, v.p. of Columbia Records Sales Corp., followed the call for an "age of reason" with a call for an "era of salesmanship." "The challenge of salesmanship," he said, "is now in the hands of the record dealers and sub-distributors, and they must now take the time to know their new prod-

Basil Bova Group Rolls Legend, Rivoli Diskeries

The Legend and Rivoli labels are the latest entries in the diskery field. The firms have been set up in New York with Basil Bova, who formerly topped the 20th-Fox label, as president.

In addition to naming Bova prexy last week, the Legend-Rivoli board of directors set Mack Wolfson as veepee; Morty Jay, musical director; Sandy Sina, technical director, and Al Jacobs, head of sales and promotion.

The diskeries are kicking off operations with three single releases and 20 distributors around the country.

Tooters Win 5% Pay Hike From Toronto Symph

Toronto, July 23.

A new two-year contract signed last week by the Toronto Musicians Assn. and the Toronto Symphony Orchestra will give the tooters a 5% pay increase and a pension plan. One-week touring extension was also included, this embracing a concert at Carnegie Hall, N. Y.

Deal was closed by Alan Wood, prexy of the musicians union, and Edward Pickering of the Toronto Symphony. Latter said that the TSO, based in Massey Hall, Toronto, is facing its critical period at present, with costs in excess of $500,000—and likely to rise if quality is to be maintained.

Under the new agreement, the TSO will contribute 5% of salaries to the pension fund of the American Federation of Musicians on behalf of all orch members, although TSO members, at the present time, will not make direct contributions to the fund. In exchange, they will give their services gratis for two special concerts to raise extra funds to help offset these costs.

Members of the TSO, whose previous basic wage for a 26-week season was $110, will receive a 2-1/2% increase during the 1963-64 season and a further 2-1/2% salary hike in the 1964-65 season. This will be extended to 27 weeks, including a tour of not more than three weeks.

Out-of-town tour will include Montreal, Hamilton, Ottawa and Sudbury. American visits—a total of 21 concerts—will include New York City, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Massachusettes, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Ohio and Iowa. American tours are skedded from Nov. 29-Dec. 7 and from April 6-19.

The TSO, last season, had an operating budget of $458,000, resulting in a deficit of $28,000 which left the symphony with an accumulated deficit of $51,000. The forthcoming season's budget will be $540,000. Out of this, $352,000 will go to the musicians and $35,000 to visiting artists. Expenses will be defrayed by $260,000 from subscriptions and the b.o., with the remaining $280,000 to come from grants and special fundraising.

RIAA Okays Gold Disk Awards for 10 Albums, 1 Single for 1st Half '63

The Record Industry Assn. of America certified gold record awards for 10 albums and one single for the first half of 1963.

The only single record certified was "Hey Paula" recorded by Paul & Paula for Philips Records. The LP's certified for gold records were: "West Side Story," original soundtrack (Columbia); "Glorious Sound of Christmas," Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra (Columbia); "1812 Overture," Antal Dorati and the Minneapolis Symphony (Mercury); "Exodus," original soundtrack (RCA Victor); "Calypso," Harry Belafonte (RCA Victor); "G.I. To qualify for an RIAA certification, which entails an audit of sales figures by an independent firm of certified public accountants, an LP must have amassed a minimum of $1,000,000 in factory billing; a single must have sold a minimum of 1,000,000 pieces.

WB Peru Deal Builds Its South American Market

Warner Bros. Records has set a deal for distribution of its catalog under the WB trademark in Peru with IEMPSA-Lima. Marketing plans call for album and single production, with releases being skedded for Peter, Paul & Mary, the Everly Bros., the Routers and soundtrack LPs.

Initial releases are now in Peru with "Al Di La" by Emilio Pericoli heading the list. Deal gives WB a strong South American spread. The diskery, via EMI, is already repped in Argentina, Brazil, Uruguay and Chile.

packages by The Abbey Singers, Musica Aeterna, The Don Cossack Chorus, Guiomar Novaes, and The Orchestra San Pietro.

Coral is coming up with Pete Fountain, Gene Wood, Stanley Paul, Wild Bill Davis, Georgia Brown, Thelma Carpenter, Lionel Hampton & Charlie Teagarden, Steve Lawrence and Steve Allen.

Epic will hit the fall market with 15 new albums, five classical, eight pop, one release on the Okeh label and one addition to its International series. Three new tapes are also on tap. Represented in Epic's release are Bobby Hackett, George Maharis, Max Morath, Adam Wade, Buddy Greco, Georgia Gibbs, Bessie Griffin & The Gospel Pearls, The Halifax Three and Andy Stewart. Ted Taylor will be on the Okeh release.

On Epic's classical schedule wil be The Cleveland Orchestra under the direction of George Szell, Leon Fleisher and an album of Bach flute sonatas performed by Jean-Pierre Rampal, flautist, and Robert Veyron-Lacroix, harpsichordist.

Liberty, which wound up its meetings in Hollywood last week, has 30 LP's in its fall program including albums in its Premiere and Dolton lines as well.

The 20th Century-Fox Records operation, which has been revamped by Norman Weiser, veepee-manager, will join in the fall push with five new albums. Included in the release are LP's by Little Richard, The Tear Drops, Al Martino, Ricky Alan Orch, and the soundtrack from the just-released "Marilyn" motion picture. In addition plans are being completed to release two new soundtrack albums from 20th Century-Fox films early in September. These are the Merle Oberon starrer, "Of Love And Desire," and "The Leopard" starring Burt Lancaster.

Fall Market Plans

As previously announced, United Artists Records is hitting the fall market with 24 new albums and ABC-Paramount with 12 packages and nine for its jazz line, Impulse Records. Capitol is keeping its fall plans under wraps and MGM didn't reveal its fall total.

Meanwhile, back at White Sulphur Springs, the Victor conclave is being spearheaded by George R. Marek, veepee-general manager. On hand, too, from RCA are group exec veepee Charles Odorizzi; Martin F. Bennett, veepee of distributor and commercial relation; and staff veepee of ad-sales promotion, Ralston H. Coffin. RCA Victor execs participating in the product presentation are Robert L. Yorke, Irwin J. Tarr, Alan Kayes and H. Ray Clark. William I. Alexander will present the "Best Buy" ad-promotion campaign.

In attendance at The Greenbriar are approximately 350 key personnel including officals from RCA affiliates in Canada, Argentina, Mexico, Germany, France, Switzerland, Italy and Venezuela as well as RCA Victor distributors representing every state in America.

The all-out industry drive on new LP product is understandable in view of the recent report from the Record Industry Assn. of America that albums now constitute about 75% of the industry's total sales volume.

Not 'Gone' Enough

Pro singer Bobby Colt reports he completed a platter audition only to hear the verdict that he was too orthodox.

He rebutted, "Maybe I should have done it offkey."

BRITAIN'S INDIE PUB BLUES

Teri Thornton Switches to Col; Kapp Gets Rose Marie; Other Deals

Teri Thornton, who broke into the record field several months ago on the Dauntless label, has been tapped by Columbia Records. The 27-year-old vocalist was brought to Col by artists & repertoire producer Tom Wilson, himself a new addition to the diskery's a&r staff. Wilson produced Miss Thornton's disks while she was at Dauntless, a subsid of Audio Fidelity. He'll now be in charge of her singles and album releases for Col.

Kapp: Rose Marie

Rose Marie, costar of tv's "The Dick Van Dyke Show," has been signed by Kapp Records to cut her first comedy album, "Sex Songs For Single Girls." Mort Greene will write the material and will produce the package with Dave Kapp, diskery's president. Bill Loeb, Rose Marie's personal manager, packaged and set the deal.

Mercury: Gaslight Singers

The Gaslight Singers, a folk singing trio presented on the July 9 "Talent Scouts" show (CBS-TV), were signed to the Mercury label as a result of the tv showcasing. The group was also booked for a one-weeker at Chicago's Gate of Horn nitery.

Marjay: Jean Martin

Songstress Jean Martin has been signed to a longterm record deal by Marjay Records, New York indie. The initial single push will be on "Tanto Tanto." Milton Karle is handling the disk promotion.

Nat King Cole Fans Jam Astoria, London, as Singer Opens Brit. Concert Tour

Nat King Cole is scoring a triumph in these parts. His arrival follows a couple of his disclicks which may be the main reason he jampacked the Astoria, Finsbury Park, London when he opened a 10-day concert trek on Saturday (13).

But for whatever reason the kids came — accompanied, incidentally, by a healthy sample of more mature sections of showgoers—they were handed a swinging, sentimental and beautifully controlled songalog which glued them to their seats until it was time for applause.

Nat King Cole

London, July 17.

Nat Cole with Ted Heath and his Orch. A William Victor Productions presentation; musical director, Joe Zito; accompanists, Charles Harris. Rennald Jones, Leon Pettis, John E. Colins. At Astoria, Finsbury Park, London, July 13, '63; $2.95 top.

Cole, one of the most professional singers to play this area since Frank Sinatra, caters not to the kids. Sure, he sings the "Rambling Rose" bit but this is just moulded into a 26-number, 70-minute long performance which he gets across with relaxed poise and fluent ease. One notable feature of Cole's performance that outshines his other talents is his ability to put over sincerity. Combined with this true touch of artistry, the smooth quality of his pipes adds distinctiion and new taste to such standards as "Unforgettable," "Mona Lisa" and "Stardust." It is easy to see why Cole is tabbed here as the man who never yet made a bad record.

On the piano, too, Cole is standout. Particularly so on "Laura" which he coats with a heavy layer of jazz feeling. Of the five numbers he rattles out, this tune adds the most spice to the warm and friendly aura he builds through his act.

Earlier, the Ted Heath Band, which accompanies Cole on some numbers in robust style, blows and blasts away in the orch's somewhat aging style but is nevertheless a rousing show opener.

Pickwick Int'l Nets 180G in Fiscal '63

Pickwick International, low price disk combine, has reported an increase in earnings of 25%, or 60c. per share, in fiscal 1963 (ended April 30, 1963) as compared with 48c during the corresponding period a year ago.

Net income after taxes rose to $180,794 compared with $143,133. Total gross sales were $5,034,460, a 24% rise over Pickwick's $4,159,441 volume in fiscal '62.

During fiscal '63, Pickwick introduced economy-priced country & western albums and opened an English subsidiary which now handles distribution of its record lines in the British Isles, Holland, Belgium and West Germany. Negotiations are under way to extend this distribution to all of Europe and the British Commonwealth, with the exception of Canada which is serviced from the U.S.

Pickwick also introduced popular-priced stereo, pre-recorded tapes and opened offices and warehouses in key areas around the U.S. in addition, it acquired Kimberly Records Corp., which owned the inventory and certain assets of Tops Records, formerly a Pickwick competitor.

FD&H Charges 'Foul' On Vogel O'seas 'Ball' Take

Francis Day & Hunter Ltd. filed suit in N.Y. Federal Court last week for moneys collected by Jerry Vogel Music on the foreign rights to the tune, "Take Me Out To The Ball Game."

The plaintiffs seek a total of $13,526 which Vogel allegedly received from users of the tune outside the U.S. Vogel is claimed to have pocketed the coin since 1936 unlawfully.

The suit contends that since 1925, plaintiffs have been the owners of all rights outside the U.S. and recently learned that Vogel has been collecting the moneys.

HAZARDS MANY, REWARDS FEW

By ROGER WATKINS

London, July 23.

State of the British music business today is such that the small, unaffiliated publisher—a mushroom breed that came in on the wave which swept the trade into its current, kid-orientated idiom—has found himself faced with a hazardous existence from which he has little hope of graduating to safer pastures.

One hard fact of a publisher's life nowadays, for example, is that present tastes in pop music—or at least the lucrative, hot selling sector of it—do not auguer well as catalog material. This particularly affects the incoming pub who finds the majority of today's big hits are "dead" in a matter of weeks and are unlikely bets for revival in the future.

Of necessity, the new man to the publishing game is out after hit songs and he inevitably picks up the potential fast selling "one shot" items. But one of his main worries is that although he may have a string of clicks over a period of a few years, the amount of material he has amassed which will still be raking in royalties in about 10 years time is negligible.

Resultantly, chances are that the young pub today will be no nearer becoming an "established" publishing house than when he started, despite any fiscal high-riding.

Stiff Competition

It does not help that the bread and butter of the music business, the prospects for perennial status like show tunes, film music and other soundtrack recordings, in some way or another accrue to one of the established pubberies, leaving the newcomers out in the cold.

Chappell's, for example, through its financing of many of the London musicals, naturally publishes the music. And other big show tunes "automatically" fly to the Chappell nest.

The big film companies, which nowadays almost without exception have tieups with a publishing com-

UA Gets Penguin 'Pop Out' Kidisks

Andy Miele, general manager of subsidiary labels for United Artists Records, has secured distribution rights for the newly formed Peter Penguin line of children's recordings. The new kidisk line is packaged with album covers which "pop-out" to become decorator items for a child's room or den, suitable for usage with or without frames.

Henry La Pidus, veteran in the kidisk field, will serve as exec producer for Peter Penguin on this project which will feature all new recordings, songs, stories and games. Actors and actress from Broadway and Hollywood will be used on the recordings.

Six albums will be included in the initial release now being readied for a Christmas push. They are: "Peter and the Wolf," "Nursery Rhymes," "God Bless Us All," "Mother Goose," "Cowboy Songs" and 'Happy Birthday Party Time."

Much has been written in past years about young American singers who must, of necessity, take permanent positions in German opera houses in order to gain necessary artistic experience and reputation. The intention of most of these singers is to establish a career in the United States, which still has numerically few opportunities to offer in opera and concert. A current example would be soprano Arlene Saunders, who despite notable successes at City Center, and other U. S. opera companies, and an offer from the Metropolitan Opera, decided to establish her career first in Europe, and as of this coming Fall becomes the leading lyric soprano at the Hamburg Opera. Or, again, a singer such as Reri Grist, who left the U. S. three years ago in order to become a permanent member of the Zurich Opera is now the "toast" of Covent Garden, the Vienna Opera and La Scala. When she returns this Fall to make her debut with the San Francisco Opera, it will be as a "star" who has been acclaimed by many of the world's great opera houses.

Instrumentalists are still in demand, especially if they have interesting repertoires to offer. The pianists Eugene List, Kenneth Amada, and Marjorie Mitchell have just completed very successful tours through practically every country in central Europe, giving performances with orchestra as well as public and radio recitals. The same holds true for the violinists Roman Totenberg and Hyman Bress. Specially acclaimed were the Kroll Quartet and the New York Brass Quartet—American chamber music groups who have recently appeared in Europe for the first time.

In regard to the placing of American conductors in Europe, the situation has changed drastically within the past few years. There is now a tremendous surge of young European conductors—many from the satellite countries. In Germany alone, there are over 100 such promising conductors, and some have already been promoted to directorships of important opera houses and orchestras. American conductors, however, do appear in guest engagements, and of particular interest to the European public are performances by American composer-conductors like Lukas Foss, Carlos Chavez, and Aaron Copland. Copland, for example, will conduct a ballet specially commissioned by the Munich Opera for the opening of their new Opera House this Fall.

Inside Stuff—Music

On Sept. 22, Peerce has a recital scheduled in Oslo, Norway, which will be broadcast to all Scandinavian countries, and on Sept. 23, "An Evening With Jan Peerce" will be shown on Norwegian tv. On Sept. 26, he'll be soloist with the Stavanger Symphony in Stavanger, Norway, and on Oct. 7, will be featured at the Konzerthaus in Vienna in an evening of folk songs entitled "Jan Peerce Sings Songs of 16 Countries."

It will be given its world premiere by the Philadelphia Orchestra under the baton of Eugene Ormandy. This new work will also be published by Mills.

In conjunction with the release of the U. S. Amelia Earhart 8c Air Mail Commemorative Stamp this week, Stasny Music is reissuing its standard folk song, "Amelia Earhart's Last Flight," written by Dave McEnery, when the aviatrix was lost over the Pacific in 1937. Recently, Vanguard Records recorded the tune by the Greenbriar Boys. McEnery is also planning to do a new recording of his song.

London Sales Shuffle Ups Warner, Welfield

In a shift of sales responsibilities at London Records Sy Warner has taken charge of the American Group Division and Jack Welfield will be in charge of London and London International pop singles.

Warner, who's been with London nine years, was active in the New York market for six years and the last three years has been in charge of the record merchandising division. He'll continue in the merchandising post. Welfield, a 14-year veteran with London has been in charge of all internal sales controls.

Schroeder's Cleffer Deals

Aaron Schroder has bolstered his A. Schroder Music Corp. with several exclusive writer deals. Among writers recently pacted to Schroder are Johnny Gluck Jr., Mel Mandel, Norman Sachs and Carl Spencer.

Gluck is the writer of the current click, "It's My Party," and Spencer penned "My Block" and "Deep In The Night of Harlem." Mandel and Sachs will be mainly involved in the Broadway musical score area.

Britain's Indie

pany, have adopted a practice whereby they let the publisher seek the cleffers for feature scores. Pubs thus involved understandably exert pressure on writers selected to publish the scores through them, on a "backscratching" basis.

Another sphere of show biz which could produce more durable tunes than the current pop idiom is tv. But this medium, too, has rapidly become wrapped up from the musical point of view.

TV's Own Pubs

A case in point is Associated-Rediffusion, the London station, Monday to Friday, which publishes all its musical material through Keith Prowse Music, a firm the vid-station bought out a couple of years ago.

Again, Associated TeleVision owns its own publishing business and it is only rare exceptions, such as with "Supercar" and "Fireball XL5," tunes which are being put out by David Toff Music, that slip out onto the open market.

Notwithstanding their near-impossible task of building a durable and financially rewarding catalog, it should be pointed out that more than a handful of the new and independent pubs have built up from hole-in-the-wall operations to plushier businesses when and where business acumen and, to some extent, luck paid off.

But one factor which allows the small pubs to stay alive, whether it be on a day-to-day or somewhat sounder basis is the phenomenon of the day—the great turnover is artists, spawned by the fickle switchings and swayings of teenagers' musical tastes.

High Morale

Trend, which cues at least one new name into the high selling disk bracket every week, tends to keep the independent publisher's morale high (he is just as likely to come up with the next click as any competitor, big or small) and even invites other contenders into the over-crowded publishing arena.

According to Eddie Rogers, an industryite for more than 20 years who has finally set himself up as an independent pubber, the British publisher today has to have an operation which extends beyond the conception of music publishing activities of, say, 10 years ago, he wants to survive.

Typical of the small indie today, Rogers, through his Mediant Music and its associated companies, has moved to tie-in certain artists. Under the agreement, Rogers and the performers jointly publish any numbers the artist writes, each taking a 50-50 split of any proceeds.

Lotsa Tieups

In addition, Rogers' Mediant Music has a link with Aral Records, probably one of the company's most important ties. Access to the small label gives the pub an easier path to producing demo disks or completed platters which can be offered to one of the major diskeries.

The latter operation, of actual record production, is yet another aspect of what "stay-alive publishing" entails these days. And an indie pub often finds it profitable to make a pub-writer-performer tie-up then put forthcoming numbers on wax—which are sold to a big distrib for a percentage of the gross.

Also involved with Rogers' company, is Audio Ads Ltd., an enterprise dealing with jingle writing for commercials for tv and theatre outlets which, as a sideline for the new pub outfit, can provide some tasty gravy.

Berlin Salute Pulls 8,500 To Lewisohn Stadium, N.Y.

Despite threatening weather Saturday (20), the musical tribute to Irving Berlin at New York's Lewisohn Stadium drew 8,500 patrons. The second half of the program was washed out by rain, though, and knocked out the preem performance of "A Berlin Portrait," especially written for the program by conductor Skitch Henderson.

The salute at Lewishohn was the first for Berlin. Richard Rodgers and George Gershwin have already had a series of "Evenings" there. The Berlin program was arranged to commemorate his 75th birthday which was celebrated last May. There's some talk that there will be another Berlin concert on Lewisohn Stadium's schedule next season.

Richard Lionetti has been reassigned as manager of special products in the merchandising department of Columbia Record Sales Corp. In the post he is responsible to William Farr, the division's merchandising director, for handling the Columbia magnetic tape cartridges, four-track stereo tapes, the diskery's modern language course and other special projects as assigned.

Lionetti joined Col in 1958 in the phonograph sales department, became a salesman. His last post prior to the new job was district sales manager in the Detroit and Milwaukee area.

Pluggers Watch Fest

Benidorm, July 23.

Spanish songwriters will be watching results at the Benidorm Film Festival this week in the hope that one or more of the 20 competing title entries will repeat the popular success of past winners.

In a move to give the Spanish pop tune an indigenous rhyme and rhythm, radio network sponsors urged native tunesmiths who submitted a total of 577 originals to provide a national flavor.

Meli Laiz, Tony Vilaplana, Federico Jover, Angeles Hortelano, Fina Galicia, Rafael Mendoza, Rosalia, Alberto and Franceska, a total of nine vocal artists, will present the 20 tunes during the 3-day fest, backed by the R. E. M. radio network orchestra. In for guest appearances, are Jose Guardiola and the Latin Quartet, Carlos Acuna, Paquita Rico and Rocia Durcal.

'Greater Profits'

"In eliminating traditional restocking deals and in developing year-round merchandising we have designed a program to assist the distributor, the salesman and the dealer in making intelligent anticipations of monthly requirements. It is a program designed to restore sound business principles to the record industry, to eliminate financial strain at the retail level which is inherent in speculative buying and to make inventories with greater profits and greater returns on investment."

In laying out the new price structure for retailers, Jack Loetz, general manager of Columbia Record Distributors, also stated that there now would be a 10% exchange privilege on all album product. The adoption of this straight 10% exchange program automatically terminates all existing exchange policies including the "Bonus-to-Sell" program.

On the Puerto Rican end, it was pointed out that record sales are booming and are expected to top the $1,000,000 sales mark this year —an alltime high. Interest in records is "big" in Puerto Rico as reflected in the three independent record-pressing plants currently operating there. Gallagher pointed out that rack-jobbing is also "becoming a problem in Puerto Rico" as evidenced by record racks now seen in service stations, supermarkets, novelty shops and discount houses.

Big 3's 'V.I.P.' Score

The Big 3 (Robbins, Feist & Miller) has acquired the rights to the music from the upcoming MGM film, "The V.I.P.s." The score was composed by Miklos Rozsa and will be assigned to the Robbins wing of the publishing combine.

The original soundtrack album is set for release on the MGM label, and the instrumental theme will be hypoed as the major exploitation piece in the music drive.

Pic, which stars Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton, is scheduled for September release.

AGVA's Chi Unit, Which Long Winked At Cafe Bond Rule, Now Enforcing It

Chicago, July 23.

In its zeal to clean house per the admonitions of the U. S. Senate subcommittee headed by Sen. John McClellan (D.-Ark.), the Chi office of the American Guild of Variety Artists is beginning to rigidly enforce the requirement that all niteries and club date producers post a bond guaranteening fees paid to acts.

The rule has been in effect for about eight years, but has been only randomly enforced, and Sen. McClellan reported complaints that it was being used as a discriminatory weapon by the union in the Chi area.

Until the present crackdown, most of the niteries (particularly the big ones) and producers who objected strenuously to the bond requirement were let off. (The original Artists Representatives Assn. agreement, okayed by McClellan, gave a waiver of the bond requirement to producers who were members of the ARA at that time. They are still exempt.)

Now, however, the Government says that either all of the clubs and producers not exempt must post a bond or none of them, thus showing no favoritism. AGVA has chosen to enforce the requirement across the board.

The crackdown has resulted in resistance, some of it bitter. The talent buyer for one of the hotel chains has been reported as saying that he would pull all of the entertainment out of his show rooms before he would enter into any agreement with AGVA. "I just don't want to have anything to do with that union," he is quoted as saying.

Too, club date producers who have established good credit with the acts over the years say that they see no particular reason for tying up their cash in bond deposits. (The ruling permits them to deposit an interest-bearing Government bond in lieu of cash.)

Tangible resentment at the bond requirement has been expressed by vet Chi booker Al Dvorin, who has filed several complaints with the National Labor Relations Board.

Dvorin, apparently an early test case of the more stringent bond requirements, was placed on the AGVA "unfair list" for refusing to put up the security. He has accused AGVA of violations of the Landrum-Griffith Bill through a secondary boycott, and also charges it with restraint of trade.

Most bookers feel that the die has been cast, and that for its own sake AGVA must put the pressure on those clubs and producers not in the fold. However, it's apparent that a lot of latent ill will toward the union will come to the surface during the crackdown.

Frankfurt Nitery Books Names to Lure Patrons Who Eschew Nude Shows

Frankfurt, July 23.

A local nightclub, the Imperial, is taking a new tack to help stimulate business. While Frankfurt is generally considered a town where only nude shows and strippers can attract patrons and nightclubs are generally shabby and second-rate, the Imperial has started a top name policy.

First act is Josephine Baker, doing a three-night stint for $1,500 per evening with a program of French and American songs. On its upcoming schedule the club has booked Marika Roekk, Zarah Leander, Charles Aznavour and the Hiller Girls. It's dickering to bring in Sammy Davis Jr. and Frank Sinatra if the policy proves profitable.

Meanwhile, the appearance of the big names have given a whole new approach to the city's tawdry Mosel Street nightclubs. For the one "respectable" floor show has been attracting solid business people who would ordinarily shy away from this neon-lit lesser club section.

Dan Regan New Ad-Pub Chief for 'Ice Capades'

Dan Regan has been named ad-pub director for "Ice Capades" according to Phil Cowan, v.p. and public relations director for Metropolitan Broadcasting and Metromedia Inc. Latter firm, which controls various tv and radio stations, recently bought the ice show from a group of arena operators who formed it more than 20 years ago.

Regan, formerly with NBC, CBS and Warner Bros., and a v.p. at Jospephson, Cuffari Inc., a pub-relations firm, will headquarter in Los Angeles starting in September.

Fla. Bottle Club Exit Gives Cafes New Loopholes

St. Petersburg, Fla., July 23.

Efforts of the Florida state legislature to enact a law which will virtually annihilate all bottle clubs in Pinellas County have apparently succeeded. But in legislating to prohibit the late late bistros from operating during the hours which justify their existence, ambiguities in the wordage of the new bill lower the bars for all taverns and bars in the City of St. Petersburg.

For many months bottle clubs in curfew conscious Pinellas have waged a more or less winning battle to keep open house to all hours, due to muddled immediate past law which was repeatedly interpreted by Circuit Court judges as excluding bottle clubs—establishments not selling liquor and therefore free from jurisdiction imposed on licensed liquor dispensaries.

The new law, which went into effect July 10, specifically names bottle clubs as being included in establishments dealing in alcoholic beverages which shall remain closed from two a.m. to eight a.m. on each week day and from two a.m. to one p.m. each Sunday.

The legislation, automatically passed without the autograph of Florida's Gov. Farris Bryant, repeals all previous laws relating to closing hours for alcoholic dealing industries, including most of the bars in St. Pete. These, by city ordinance, have been permitted to remain open until midnight only on week days and not at all on Sunday, except through the three-month winter tourist season.

However, the new enactment leaves the door open for individual municipal restrictions, and St. Pete's City Council has set Thursday (25) as the date for discussion and possible action on an ordinance re-establishing the hours in effect before the new bill became law.

Meanwhile, many bars in the city are taking advantage of the curfew easement, exuberant owners

NLRB to Hear Waiters' Beefs Vs. Porto-O-Call

St. Petersburg, Fla., July 23.

The National Labor Relations Board will hear union complaints against the management of Port-O-Call next Monday (29) at its Tampa office. The plush nitery on nearby Tierra Verde is owned jointly by Guy Lombardo and the firm of Berlanti-Murchison, owners and developers of the island compound.

Hearing on complaints filed by Hotel, Motel, Restaurant Employes Union, Local 894, AFL-CIO, was originally slated for July 15. The unfair labor practices charges arose last February and were revealed March 28 when bartenders and waiters pulled a walk-out minutes before the lavish Governor's Ball got underway.

LEGITS & REVUES CURB BOOKINGS

It's becoming increasingly difficult for new talent to get into headline spots in the Las Vegas hotels. For innkeepers, need for names has been lessened by the shift of three hotels to a legit policy and a reliance on French imports by two other hotels.

Only four major Strip hotels now depend strictly on the upper-crust performers. The roster of name spots is sometimes amplified by two other inns, the Riviera and the Dunes, which shift between legit and names.

In addition, the practice of several name buyers of pacting headliners on multiple deals has taken the pressure off the frantic search for top talent. It is now virtually accepted practice for any of the hotelmen to have attractions lined up a year in advance.

This situation makes it difficult for accepted headliners to break present salary barriers. There are token increases, but generally the level of pay has been virtually static for some time. Agencies, which used to be able to pit one boniface against another now find it difficult to do so. Schedules are fairly well filled, and new acts which might have been grabbed up in the past, now must take a moderate (by Las Vegas standards)

Shep Fields Ends Band, Joins CMA

Houston, July 23.

Shep Fields will disband his "Rippling Rhythm" Orchestra which he has led for more than 30 years, at the conclusion of his present four-week engagement here at the Shamrock Hilton's International Club. The date winds up Aug. 8. He will move to Los Angeles, where he will join Creative Management Associates as an executive-agent. He's the brother of CMA prexy Freddie Fields.

Fields' activities have not been limited to band leading in the past few years. He successfully operated the Artists Corp. of Texas in Houston. His experience with ACT led to his new post with CMA.

At CMA Fields will head the agency's personal appearance department on the Coast. CMA represents such stars as Judy Garland, Shelley Berman, Jo Ann Woodward, Phil Silvers, Angela Lansbury, Paul Newman, Peter Sellers, the McGuire Sisters, Jack Paar, Henry Fonda, Richard Burton, Robert Goulet, Robert Horton, Jason Robards, Patricia Neal and Jack Carter.

Fields' band was one of the few major orchestras to survive the "big band" era of the 1930s. He brought his orch to Houston with the idea of settling down and staying off the road. However, demands on the band, with its distinctive sound, remained great, and there were still many one-nighters and tours.

He has just completed a tour of the Far East, and an appearance in Reno. Giving up the band will mean cancellation of about $100,000 in contracts, Fields said.

Belafonte Racks Up Wow 53G in St. Paul Muni Aud

St. Paul, July 23.

Playing its Twin Cities' engagement exclusively here, the Harry Belafonte show last week garnered a smash $53,000 gross for five nights and one matinee in the 2,695-seat Municipal Auditorium. Top was $6.50 and several of the performances were capacity.

Belafonte brought a company of 32. The show was booked by a pair of Chicago promoters and played on a straight rental arangement.

GAC Tightening Staff Following UTM Takeover; Shakeup Hits Chi Branch

General Artists Corp. is tightening its organization after attempting to digest additional personnel who came into the office with its acquisition of UTM Artists Ltd. Jimmy Arnold, of its one-nighter dept., has resigned to go with Shaw Artists and will not be replaced immediately, Arthur Treiffessen, who had been in the concert dept., has exited the organization.

The Treiffessen move made way for Jerry Perrenchio, who reported Monday (22) to the New York office, where he will work in concerts and one-nighters. He had been a UTM veepee and former MCAnik who went over to GAC when it absorbed UTM.

GAC is apparently streamlining its personnel in New York and will probably trim staffers in its out of town offices as well. During the previous week, Judy Kyle, of its club date dept., and Jesse Strum, who worked one-nighters, exited. Another change was in the Coast sector, where Ira Okun resigned the cafe dept. to go with the William Morris Agency.

Larry Barnett, GAC board chairman, is now in Europe surveying the GAC setup. With him was GAC president Herbert J. Siegel, who returned late last week.

Two Quit in Chi

Chicago, July 23.

The shakeup in General Artists Corp., following the takeover of the board chairmanship by former MCA-er Larry Barnett, has reached the midwest office of the talent agency.

Marvin Josephson, who handled niteries (also ex-MCA), and Mignon Hickman, who was in charge of club dates, resigned from the Chi GAC office last week following a meeting between the agency's personal appearance prexy Buddy Howe and Chi GAC chief Lee Wolfberg. Wolfberg said that he and Howe are currently considering replacements for the resignees.

E. O. Stacey recently joined the Chi GAC office to handle outdoor events, and T. B. Scarning has been hired to cover one-nighters.

Ben Goffstein to Vegas Pioneer as Gen. Mgr.

Las Vegas, July 23.

Ben Goffstein, who resigned as Riviera Hotel prexy in January, last week was named general manager of the downtown Pioneer Club.

Tommy Callahan, Pioneer prexy, and majority stockholder Al Parvin who made the announcement, said Goffstein would assume his duties immediately. Goffstein has been given an option to buy shares, which he says he will do as soon as he gets approval from the State Gaming Control Board. Other stockholders are Harry Goldman and Harvey Morse.

The move marks a return to the downtown area for Goffstein, who came here 18 years ago to be associated with the Las Vegas Club. After that he went to the Flamingo, then to the Riviera.

Talent Rides Again In Gene Autry's Sahara Inn, Chi

Chicago, July 23.

The Sahara Inn, recently purchased by the Gene Autry Hotel Corp., will resume entertainment in its Celebrity Lounge and posh Sultan's Table dining room in about two weeks. It will not, for the time being, reopen the Club Gigi, its largest show room and previously a top name talent showcase.

Autry has retained Merriel Abbott, longtime talent coordinator for the Hilton hotels, to book acts for the Sahara. Only a short time on the job, she has run across a serious problem in that the musicians' union wants the Autry management to pay some $54,000 owed to musicians by the previous owner, Manny Skar. Skar was forced into bankruptcy after building and owning the motel slightly over a year.)

Negotiations between Local 10, Chicago Federation of Musicians, and Miss Abbott were at an impasse last week. Music tradesters say that previous court decisions have generally took the line that the new owners are not responsible for such debts unless it can be shown that the sale of the club was specifically to avoid payment.

Miss Abbott told VARIETY that the Celebrity Lounge would return to the sort of lounge acts it had featured before. The Sultan's Table, which had a violin sextet, will have a "show policy," according to Miss Abbott, but the type of entertainment has not yet been determined.

Employment Hike Cheers Twin Cities' Cafe Owners

Minneapoils, July 23.

Twin Cities' exhibs and nitery owners find rising local employment figures one of the probable reasons for a current biz pickup they're experiencing. The figures also are generating optimism among entertainment purveyors generally.

During June, according to a just released Minnesota Employment Security Department report, Twin Cities metropolitan area employment soared to a new all-time high for the month. In the five-county area total non-agricultural employment zoomed to 603,472, representing a 10,000 gain over the corresponding month a year ago.

Most of the job growth was in retail trade, services and government. Manufacturing employment is remaining stable, but construction is showing unusual strength. Average weekly earnings also are up and this, of course, undoubtedly is beneficial for amusements.

Separate Casts to Glide Fair's 'Ice-Travaganza' Into 38 Shows Weekly

"Ice-Travaganza," to be produced in the New York City Bldg. at the N. Y. World's Fair, will be populated by two separate casts which will enable producers Dick Button & Paul Feigay to offer 38 shows weekly.

The show will be presented on 12 individual stages and six revolving stages. It will also have an indoor ski run on an endless moveable belt. Special equipment will permit entrances from the ceiling. Will Steven Armstrong will design the sets, and Winn Morton will do the costumes.

The building to house the show is one of the holdovers from the 1939-40 World's Fair. One half will contain a scale model of New York City, and the other half will have the icer.

McPherson, Ace Figure Skater, to 'Holiday on Ice'

Knoxville, Tenn., July 23.

Don McPherson, a world champ figure skater, has been signed for a six-week guest star appearance with "Holiday On Ice" which has its 1964 world preem at Knoxville Civic Coliseum Aug. 14. The troupe is now rehearsing here.

Ruth Tyson, executive producer of the show, says McPherson will do his Olympic Championship routine. The 18-year-old Canadian star recently signed with Dick Button and Paul Feigay to play in the New York World's Fair Ice Show during 1964-65.

Catholic Censor an Extra Hazard For Mgt. of Ottawa's 1st Cabaret Theatre

By PAUL A. GARDNER

Ottawa, July 23.

This capital's first cabaret theatre is strictly French lingo and faces the possibility of a conflict with the district Roman Catholic censor.

Le Theatre du Pont Neuf, run by 25-year-old director Gilles Provost, is in its third ten-night run in la Salle Alfred de Musset of Raoul Landriault's new, artistically decorated Motel de Ville. It's in largely French-speaking Eastview, a town surrounded by Ottawa, on which it draws as well on trans-river Hull, Que. A French version (by Pol Quentin) of William Diner & William Morum's "The Late "Edwina Black," closed Saturday (20).

After Andre Roussin's "Nina," which opens tomorrow (Wednesday), and Pierre Barillet's "Le Don d'Adele" (which was musicalized as "The Amazing Adele" and flopped on Broadway), Provost will do "La Lune est Bleue," with his comely wife Loise Provost in the lead. "The Moon is Blue" long elicited hierarchical frowns and Otto Preminger's screen version, released sans Code seal, was condemned by the Legion of Decency.

Provost has had no complaints about "Moon" yet, but has been told by another director that he was warned by the church's area censor not to do "Mort Sans Sepulture" (Death Without Burial) or Jean-Paul Sartre's "Respectful Prostitute" and "No Exit"—both of which Provost plans to do next season. Beginning in September, he'll do Wed.-Sat. performances only for four weeks—16 performances each May.

Stage in Motel de Ville's downstairs cabaret theatre is only 20 x 12, 8-1/2 feet high, and four inches above the floor; but Provost is used to tiny acting areas. He previously did shows at le Grenier Theatre (now condemned as a firetrap) in Hull, where if anyone in the front row crossed his legs he was liable to kick an actor.

In his second show here he had eight people on stage at once, all acting in lively Gallic fashion, and it didn't seem crowded. Lighting is all from room rear, but dimmers have now been moved backstage, where there are two small dressing rooms.

Room holds 80 comfortably, but has jammed in 125 (at $1.25 admish, tall drinks 95c up, cheese and crackers on the house) on weekends. It's gently air-conditioned.

Opener "Quand le Chat N'est Pas La" by Paul Vendenberghe, drew 600 for the run (excluding Sunday, when liquor can't be served); second — "Les Jours Heureux" by Claude Andre Puget —550; "Edwina Black" drew lighter. Acting level is considerably higher than off-Broadway average. There's a pool of experienced actors here, with French-language tv station CBOT originating some shows; but all have other jobs.

The Bear, Chi Folk Cafe, Folds; Future Uncertain

Chicago, July 23.

The Bear, the folk nitery that opened a few months ago in the building that once housed the old L'Aiglon Restaurant, has folded. An attorney for the club said that it may reopen under new management, but that its future was uncertain at this point.

The shuttering occurred a week before an ex post facto hearing at which the spot's liquor license was revoked by the city for alleged soliciting for prostitution in the club. The girl was never tried, but Chicago law permits the License Commissioner to make his own determination. Owners of the club were Howard Aulk, John Brent and Walter Reilly.

Goulet-Lawrence Rack Up 82½G in Det. Stand

Detroit, July 23.

The Robert Goulet-Carol Lawrence Show grossed a capacity $82,500 in its one-week run at the Fisher Theatre here, ending Sunday (21). Miss Lawrence missed the last four of the eight performances because of laryngitis. There were no refunds.

Layout moved to the State Fair, Dallas, for a two-week run.

Israeli Exhibit Set for N.Y. Fair Despite Gov't Exit

There will be an Israeli exhibit at the New York World's Fair even though Israel itself bowed out as an official participant sometime ago. The American-Israel World's Fair Corp., a group formed specifically to participate in the event, has signed to construct a pavilion at the Fair which will depict the history and culture of the Jewish people as well as display the products and services of Israel. Pavilion will be built on a site of 14,450 sq. ft. in the International section.

Israel and the Soviet Union were the two major withdrawals from World's Fair participation. However, no private concern has yet been formed to sponsor a Soviet exhibit as has been done in the case of Israel.

The sponsorship for the Israeli pavilion is chairmanned by Nathan Straus 3d, chairman of Straus-Duparquet, a firm of restaurant outfitters. The Pavilion's board includes William Ruder (& Finn), Maxwell Rabb, former White House aide; Theodore R. McKeldin, former governor of Maryland; Label Katz, national president of B'nai B'rith; attorney Phillip Willkie, Joseph McGoldrick, former Comptroller of the City of New York, and Rabbi Irving Miller, president of the American Zionist Council.

The Israeli setup is similar to an abortive one tried for France. A private corporation was formed to erect a pavilion to be underwritten, without official French government participation, by various individuals and concerns. France cannot participate in the N.Y. Fair because it isn't sanctioned by the Bureau of International Exhibits headquartered in Paris. The private group failed to raise the necessary cash and project had to be abandoned.

TODD JR. MULLS ARENA DATES FOR '80 DAYS'

Mike Todd Jr. is mulling presentation of his "Around the World in 80 Days" in arenas and auditoriums when it completes its current run at the Amphitheatre, Jones Beach, N.Y. He's now talking to various arena operators about the project.

However, a lot of problems are still to be ironed out because of the scope of the show. Whether it will have water sequences is still to be determined, although Todd is studying the possibility of carrying a huge tank for the marine sequences.

Opus is based on the film made by the late Todd Sr., which was a top moneymaker on a hardticket policy.

Yank Circus SRO in Moscow Debut, Black Market Peddles Scarce Seats

By HAROLD MYERS

For the first time, an American circus is playing in Moscow, and though the Moscow State circus is probably the best show of its kind in the world, the Yank contingent is enjoying a resounding success. The 2,100-seat, one ring circus theatre has been a sellout from the start, and there is a black market for tickets. This reviewer was invited to sell his ducats while entering the theatre.

The show, mainly comprising acts recruited from Ringling Bros., was packaged by Morris Chalfen, who will present the Moscow State Circus in the U. S. in the fall. It is a private enterprise arrangement, with the full approval and blessing of the U. S. State Dept. Harry Hirsch, who has been associated with State Dept. tours for the past four years is company manager, and Wayne Larey is production manager.

The American company does not collect a share of the gross, but receives a nominal per diem fee from Soviet authorities. Chalfen hopes to recoup when the Moscow company goes to the U. S.

The engagement in the Russian capital, which started July 4, continues until July 24. The show then moves to Leningrad for a month, and will wind its tour in Kiev on Sept. 15. The 50-strong company, which was transported to the Soviet Union in a U. S. charter plane, will fly back under Russian auspices.

American Circus in Moscow

Tenners (4), Hammond's Birds, Kinko Clowns, Wells & Four Fays, Cesar, Galla Shawn, Robert de Vasconcellos, Ferroni duo, Gerard Soule, Palacios (4), Shyrettos & Joe Jackson Jr., Fredonias (5), Bob Top; Konyot & His Chimps, Unus, Kossmayer, Harold Alzana, Moscow State Circus Orch (37). A Moscow State Circus Theatre, July 14, '63. One rouble, 90 kopecs top (about $2).

Muscovites are enthusiastic supporters of the arts from vaude to ballet and the mere novelty of a circus from the U. S. is guaranteed to intrigue them. On night caught, the audience was a little slow in getting warmed up, but soon were unrestrained in their enthusiasm. They were particularly enthralled by the fact that, with one exception, the high wire acts don't use a safety net—something the Moscow circus never does.

One of the high wire artists, Miss Ilona, was unable to do her act because of a minor back injury. But Galla Shawn does a sensational look ma, no hands, head balancing routine on the trapeze. Gerard Soule draws gasps from the audience as he catches himself with his heel on the trapeze. The Palacios—three men and a girl—do some fancy mid-air acrobatics. Harold Alzana closes the show with an exciting high wire routine, including a skipping bit which won tremendous applause.

For comedy and novelty, there are Miss Hammond's performing cockatoos; Roberto de Vasconcellos and his educated, fox-trotting horse; rola bola balancing by the Ferroni duo; a superb piece of mime by Joe Jackson Jr. on a bicycle that keeps falling apart; some nifty roller skating on a miniature rink about 30 feet above the stage by Bob Top; fantastic contortionism by Kinko in a midget car, and an extremely funny item provided by Kossmayer and his obstinate mules. Although stooges obviously respond to the challenge to ride the mules, this act amuses the Muscovites more than any other.

Also okay, though following a more conventional pattern, is Cesar's juggling act on the slack wire. At one time he balances a candelabra on his head, and manipulates three clubs, five spinning balls and several hoops. The Tenners score in the tough opening slot with their display of whip cracking and rope spinning, in which one of the girls knocks the top off a Coke bottle with one crack of the whip.

Shyrettos' dancing on bicycle and unicycle routines are effective. The acrobatic tumbling by the Fredonias' family act, and the one finger balancing by Unus also garners plenty applause.

The audience demonstrated its enthusiasm by greeting the finale with prolonged rhythmic handclapping, which was quickly followed by more persistent applause as one of the artists expressed the hope that the troupe had made its contribution towards better understanding between the two countries. And indeed, the average Russian man in the street is a firm believer in the values of the cultural exchanges between the Soviet Union and the countries in the West.

Paris Vaude Houses Press for Govt. Subsidy as Summer Withers Boxoffice

Paris, July 23.

With summer hardly a season for vaude, most houses staying open have turned to revues to entice visitors. Last summer, which was only fair, was saved a bit by the draw of local rock & rollers. But reps of most vaude theatres now insist they need government help to keep going.

They point out that besides state subsidized legit and lyric offerings, there are government schools, aid to films and training of technicians in these fields. But not a cent to music hall and circuses, despite the heavy taxes they pay.

It is felt a little of this money poured back could keep up these key show biz facets. Circuses are in a bad state, and it is disk names' popularity that keeps vaude houses going. The public seems inclined to see platter personalities in the flesh. But too often these voices fail on the boards.

Too many are still mainly amateurs and have no true stage presence and knowhow. This may alienate many vaudegoers, it is felt. Some schooling, provided the talent is there, could help give the record names poise and some measure of stage knowledge, it is thought. A school backed by the government, like the Conservatoire for Comedie - Francaise actors, could assist in this sphere.

Moscow Circus' Click

The Moscow Circus was a wow here recently and proved the efficacy of thorough preparation. Directors, of course, know that no amount of training can replace talent and roadwork with audiences, but it would help. They also feel they can use subsidies for refurbishing houses and procuring bigger and better international acts.

Vauders and circus people also chafe at Culture Minister Andre Malraux having referred to them as "minor arts." They feel that theirs is a true, direct public entertainment and art which have spawned most of the great names in other show biz areas. With Malraux's insistence on bringing art to the masses, they wonder why he frowns on the most popular entertainment media.

Paris is probably still the top vaude centre in the world with four regular houses and several parttimers. The Olympia, considered the flagship, brought vaude back with a bang in 1953 when Bruno Coquatrix converted it from films back to its original house status. Stars got public contact and many new ones were launched.

But names later feared overexposure and soft-pedaled house stints or turned to one-man shows. Record companies realized the importance of in-person dates and helped with lobby sales kickbacks and advertising. However, vaude's revival began to ebb. Sometimes a big Yank name helped but the fees were stiff.

Names Come Back

Over the past season local rockers began to get audiences and bigger names began to return. Besides the Olympia, the nabe Bobino and Europeen fared okay while the weekend Concert Pacra was mainly a tryout spot and oldtime monument. The Alhambra devoted itself to a musical all year.

The Olympia also has side jazz concerts and was able to get Ray Charles for a few weeks. It also has a promise for a two-week stay by Sammy Davis Jr. next season after his sock one-nighter benefit last May.

Coquatrix has his '63-'64 season lined up which will have some names, top rockers and a few U.S. stars. Olympia will have youthful r'n'r draws Johnny Hallyday, Richard Anthony, Francoise Hardy and Sheila French.

Also due are straight and dramatic singers like Edith Piaf, Colette Dereal, Leny Escudero, Charles Aznavour, Les Compagnon De La Chanson (9), Gilbert Becaud, Yanks Ray Charles and Sammy Davis Jr., Canadian Paul Anka and British singer Petula Clark.

Alhambra may have one-man shows and revues, the Bobino, Europeen and Concert Pacra their seconds on the Olympia and trying out newcomers, while several one-man shows, namely Maurice Chevalier, will also liven the vaude picture.

But a school or better source for local and foreign stars and acts are needed. On the other hand Paris can still give an act plenty of playing time via its houses and boites. Coquatrix seems bullish and vaude remains an integral part of the Paris show biz scene.

San Juan, P.R., Cracks Down on Prosties—Calls Them a Bar to Culture

San Juan, July 23.

A thorough crackdown on prostitution in San Juan was announced last week by the Commonwealth Justice Dept. Legal steps have already been taken to close down several houses of ill repute in the metropolitan area on the island's "public nuisance" Law.

The action will undoubtedly affect the city's nightlife. Many of the bar nightclubs, particularly around the dock area, are in the same building with shabby hotels. After the "little guys" are closed down, the Justice Dept. will probably focus its efforts on several of the "plush" operations in the heart of the city.

One of the chief problems in combating centres of prostitution is the great variety of legal dodges by which the businesses manage to continue operating in spite of being charged as disorderly establishments.

Details of the campaign were discussed at a meeting of top department officials and a representative from the Police Dept. A spokesman reported that the department is already acting to enforce a law through which houses of prostitution can be legally declared "public nuisances.,,

The crackdown will focus first on Old San Juan, "where cheap houses of prostitution abound." The horde of pay for play girls has been one of the chief obstacles to the efforts of the Institute of Puerto Rican Culture to restore the attractions of San Juan as a residential area.

One of the principal houses of ill repute, located on Cristo St., Old San Juan, closed down recently through the action of Fomento (The Government's Economic Development Agency), which bought the building several years ago for the double purpose of restoring it and eliminating the combination bar-hotel business. The bar has since moved to a new location on the waterfront.

Billy Daniels Bows New Honolulu Supper Club

Honolulu, July 23.

Hutch's Supper Club, housed in a new building near Honolulu airport and major military bases, opened Saturday (20) with Billy Daniels as initial headliner.

Art and Dotty Todd have been booked in as "regulars" on the entertainment roster put together by Wilson J. Hutcheson, who recently retired from the Air Force after several years of operating military clubs.

Allan Sherman's Wow 38G

Hollywood, July 23.

Allan Sherman and friends set a Friday (19) night record at the Hollywood Bowl.

Comic with New Christy Minstrels played to 16,076 (virtual capacity) attendance and clocked wow $37,931 b.o.

Cincy's Surf Club Mgr. Drops 50G Pact Breach Suit Vs. Frank Fontaine

Cincinnati, July 23.

Erwin C. Hoinke Jr., manager of the Surf Club, has withdrawn a $50,000 suit in Federal District Court here against Frank Fontaine for alleged breach of contract and revenue loss. The comic cancelled a $4,000 agreement for an engagement early last June at the 300-seat nitery in Western Bowl. The contract contained the AGVA play or pay clause.

Hoinke said it would be difficult to have personal service of summons on Fontaine in Ohio and to establish any amount of profit if the engagement had been played. Also, he added, he expects a $4,000 payment from Fontaine.

Presently, Hoinke said, he is undecided about continuing the nitery operation or converting the room into a billiards parlor.

After signing the Surf contract, Fontaine's increasing popularity via the Jackie Gleason tv show hiked his weekly figure to $12,500.

Closing of the Surf Club would leave Greater Cincinnati without a nightclub offering top names.

A long darkened deluxe cafe, the Lookout House, near Covington, Ky., reopened last week in glamorous $1,500,000 transformation as the No. 1 dining spot in this area. Now the New Lookout House, it has nine dining rooms and two cocktail lounges. Owners are Robert and Richard Schilling, longtime Kentucky restauranteurs.

Original spot, operated for years by the late Jimmy Brink as a casino, gave way to Beverly Hills, in nearby Newport, Ky., which continued with bigtime floorshows until closed for gaming in 1961.

sum, and more often the second place on a bill.

In addition, the bonifaces have learned to accept the situation that some topliners belong to a particular hotel. They feel that it would be a breach of faith and friendship to start stealing names. Headliners still shift, of course, but generally with the implied or actual consent of the hotelier who may be anxious to get the star to play elsewhere.

The Sands Hotel still has the most solid lineup of names and operator Jack Entratter rarely has to worry where his next attraction is coming from. With a permanent roster which includes Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin, Jerry Lewis, Sammy Davis Jr., Red Skelton, Danny Thomas, Nat King Cole and a few others Entratter's sole problem is to slot them properly.

The other hotels have also developed their own set of names who do well for them. El Rancho, which burned down a couple of years ago, stayed in business with only a few faves. Most have gone over to the Flamingo which does well with them.

Stan Irwin, talent buyer for the Sahara, has also developed his own roster of talent which returns annually. The Desert Inn, with headliners such as Jimmy Durante returning yearly, still scouts around for new names but has any number of suitable topliners to call upon.

The Thunderbird is permanently bound to the legit policy. The Dunes, current with "Guys & Dolls," alternates with names as does the Riviera, now playing names, but which will install "My Fair Lady" Oct. 22. The Tropicana, with The Folies Bergere, and the Stardust, with "Le Lido de Paris," do well with the French imports.

The net result is a static Vegas situation which is good for the hotelmen, but not too good for agencyites. However, the agents count on the natural erosion of names plus shifts in tastes to ultimately break the stranglehold of the present roster of headliners.

are voicing the opinion that relaxing the time hobble will constitute a hypo for the city's liquor industry, and even establishments with more than 4,000 square feet of floor space and 200 seats, previously permitted to stay open from one to 11 p.m.

Many factions consider the restricted hours for dispensing alcoholic beverages a definite detriment to promoting the Sunshine City as a convention site and the area as an entertainment mecca, pointing out the availability of liquor in neighboring Hillsborough County's Tampa, where any reveler in Pinellas County still capable of negotiating one of the two bridges spanning Tampa Bay can continue bar imbibing to three a.m.

Cocoanut Grove, L. A.

Los Angeles, July 17.

Tony Martin, The Martones, Freddy Martin Orch, Rhythmic Strings of Allyn Ferguson; $3-$3.50 cover.

Althogh Tony Martin still sings many of the numbers in his current stint at the Grove that he has on previous visits, it's unlikely that his audience at Tuesday night's opening (16) would have let him go without including them. On this trip, Martin carries the entire show, supported only by The Martones, a sharp vocal quartet well suited to the master and capable of holding attention on their own merits.

From Freddy Martin's intro medley—"Cavalcade of Bands"—it was evident that nostalgia would be the keynote of the evening, a mood well suited to the star, who added to it with songs and comments. Although he didn't take listeners back into his past as far as 20th-Fox's 1936 "Sing, Baby, Sing," which introduced him and a song, "When Did You Leave Heaven?," his alternating oldies with current hits, climaxing with a sock medley of 11 Jimmy McHugh tunes, gave the customers what they came to hear.

The celeb-studded opening night crowd, which included everyone from "La Cyd" to "El Cid," was strongly responsive, even when Martin interspersed his vocal offerings with occasional chatter. His best remarks centered on a discussion with studie heads on a proposed film version of his life and his rejection of their suggestions as to who should play him—Bobby Rydell, Fabian, Sammy Davis Jr., Bobby Darin, and Eddie Fisher ("I'd like to play his life!").

Whether planned or accidental, Martin's troubles with the lyrics of "Call Me Irresponsible" provide a running gag for the rest of the evening.

Besides musical support of the singers, Freddy Martin and his orchestra also play for dancing, alternating with the Rhythmic Strings of Ailyn Ferguson, to provide almost constant music during the evening.

Show, in though July 28, will be followed by Pearl Bailey on July 30. Robe.

Suttmiller's, Dayton

Dayton, O., July 15.

Jennifer Marshal, Ricki Dunn; Danny Martin Orch; no cover or minimum.

Sexy song stylist Jennifer Marshal and magi Ricki Dunn provide a real swinging variety show.

A whistle-bait figure enhances the pleasing voice displayed by Miss Marshal on some unusual song material, particularly "Daddy, Surprise Me" and a new arrangement of "As Long As He Needs Me." Much of the rapport she gets with her audience is due to her ability to carry on a running gag, working the first names of male customers into some of the words of the songs.

Dunn's knack for sleight-of-hand was gained on the carnival circuits. Later he gets men up from the audience on stage to help put over his act. He lifts all sorts of valuables, while carrying on a humorous line of chatter, including the shirt-off-the-back bit with a stooge. He has the ability to josh the customers without being offensive. Plat

Blue Angel, N.Y.

Meg Myles, Len Maxwell, Wayfarers (4), Frank Owen, Dudley Moore Trio; $6 minimum.

Max Gordon has provided an interesting bill for the dog days of the year. This layout will catch whatever stray business there is in the intime belt, and the bill's longevity will depend largely on those who haven't gone off to the Hamptons.

Gordon has tried a new angle with this card. Two of its members are doubling from legiters. Meg Myles, headlining, is on duty earlier in the evening at "Enter Laughing" while lounge pianist Dudley Moore is moonlighting from "Beyond the Fringe."

The amply built Miss Myles seems to be aiming for hotel work rather than labors in the Blue Angel type rooms. Her repertoire and her arrangements are a bit too slick for this environment. However, she does develop a head of steam in this spot.

She has some special material bits that work out well here and her rendition of "West Side Story" tunes is an applause getter. Miss Myles shows a greater potential for the posh rooms and indications are that this category will be her next stop.

Len Maxwell, one of the avant garde comics, has material that is bright and fresh. He has some outrageous comment on accepted mores of this era and he takes a humorous, if sometimes somewhat bitter, viewpoint of the status quo.

However, there are times when Maxwell underplays far too much. He counts on his material far more than he counts on himself, which seems a pity. At times when he had to force himself over a noisy party, he was far more potent and it showed that there's nothing wrong with his performance that a little more vigor wouldn't cure.

Frank Owen plays the piano for the acts effectively and performs pleasantly during the intermissions. Pianist Dudley Moore, aided by bass and drums, maintains interest for those in the lounge. The Wayfarers are under New Acts. Jose.

Hotel Roosevelt, N. O.

New Orleans, July 19.

Ella Logan, Herkie Styles, Leon Kelner Orch (11); $2.50 week-night minimum; $4 Sats.

Songstress Ella Logan, in her first local nitery date, is ideal for the Hotel Roosevelt's Blue Room, where she's booked for a two-week stand. Perky thrush has vocal and visual assets, plus poise and charm.

In her 40-minute stint, Miss Logan attempts no "act," merely sock vocal selling with well-known tunes, standards and material with special lyrics. These include the now classic "How Are Things in Glocca Morra?" which she sang in "Finian's Rainbow"; "It Happened In Monterey," "Cottage For Sale," "Let's Fall In Love" and others.

Miss Logan, who displays fine phrasing and vocal shading throughout, won an ovation at begoff. Her opening night Thursday (18) click will undoubtedly generate business throughout her date.

Teeing off new layout is comic Herkie Styles. His gab is fast, clever and fresh, and encompasses topical stories that work well for him. He's brash and sophisticated, and his lines hit hard and frequent for hefty yocks.

Leon Kelner and his musical crew contribute topdrawer backing and keep tables empty during terp sessions between performances.

Show runs two weeks until July 31. Liuz.

Harrah's, Lake Tahoe

Lake Tahoe, July 15.

Sammy Davis Jr., Pat Henry, Moro-Landis Singers & Dancers (18), Leighton Noble Orch (23); presented by Bob Vincent, produced for Harrah's by Art Barkow.

There's a many-membered cult that classifies Sammy Davis Jr. as one of the most versatile performers in show biz. The classification is accurate. And in this annual Harrah's Tahoe playback he's again proving his multi-faceted talents as singer, dancer, mimic, story-teller. He's also proficient in the area of racial humor, with the lines directed to himself, ergo, no offense or shock to tablers.

His recent London trek is reflected in current act, what with much emphasis to limey accent and in both conversation and song. It's highly effective on British version of "Me and My Shadow," embellished with soft shoe and tap routine. Davis takes the stage with no intro, swings into "Once in My Lifetime," and never lets up for the 45 minutes he holds tablers at full attention.

Proving his mimic abilities, he carbons, and highly effectively, Nat Cole, Eckstine, Cagney, Stewart, Brando, Martin, Lewis, et al. Exit is to "What Kind of Fool Am I?" On the uptempo or the slower things, Davis is equally at home and knows how to sell for full advantage.

Pat Henry takes the warm-up spot with lines re kids in the audience, income taxes, traffic signs, wives and home life. Comic has a good way of delivery but much of the material is dated and too familiar to inspire top readings on the laugh meter.

The Moro-Landis Singers & Dancers part the curtain in a new production, "Salute to Hollywood." Smart use is made of stairway props, central revolving stage, and auxiliary stages on each side of room. Special lyrics, with Ray Vasquez handling in capable manner the vocal chores, rate good mention. Ditto for staging, costuming. The Leighton Noble orch superbly backstops.

Dinah Shore in Aug. 5. Long.

Holiday House, Pitt

Pittsburgh, July 19.

Georgia Gibbs (Tommy Goodman, pianist-conductor), Del Ray, Hamilton Twins, Ralph DiStefano's Orch (10), Al Morell Organ Trio; $1 cover.

While Georgia Gibbs has never played this room before, it developed that so many of her songs, with the exception of her platter hits (Tweedle Dee Dee" and "Kiss of Fire") have such a familiar ring that efforts to get the Friday night (19) supper crowd with her were very tough on her opening night. One of the better chirps in the biz, Miss Gibbs' most contemporary tune was "What Kind of Fool Am I" and the rest was a collection of familiar, albeit well-arranged standards.

In the second spot, Del Ray presents his exciting layout of magic tricks with the biggest mitt coming from his bird disappearance and drinking tricks. Later in the dining room the magico puts on his display of amazing table tricks. His dexterity with cards, dice and a mechanical bird could be spotted on any network tv show.

The bouncing enthusiasm and talent of the Hamilton Twins are on display in the first spot and they get the show off fast. The girls from Brighton, England, dance, sing, do aud participation and wind up with room rocking example of the Can-Can.

Ralph DiStefano's Orch (10) plays the show deftly as usual and is excellent for the dansapation. Al Morell Organ Trio plays the lulls.

Layout is in until July 27. Lit.

Theatre in Dell, Toronto

Toronto, July 10.

"Village Revue" (4), with Barrie Baldaro, Carol Robinson, Warren Wilson, David Harriman; producer, Sylvia Shawn; $1.75 cover.

Producer Sylvia Shawn, who got her early experience with the Neighborhood Theatre, N. Y., has raided the Bohemian Embassy, a present java cafe, given the members of the "Village Revue" Equity pay and introduced new material in toto.

A palpable copy of "The Second City" out of Chicago, but with Anglo-Canadian overtones, the satirical quartet has notable futures in nitery or theatrical ventures in blackouts and sketches.

Revue's once-nightly appearance is in three acts (22 scenes), with 10-minute intermissions permitting waiters to fill the liquor, wine and/or beer orders. Hard stuff is 90c-$1, beer or ale, 50c a pint; wine up to $12 a quart bottle—plus that $1.75 cover charge per person. Show itself runs about 75 minutes.

Jamming 'em into 108-capacity Theatre in the Dell opening night were up-to-date lampoons of the picture versions on "Cleopatra" and "Lawrence of Arabia," takeoffs on the Royal Family, the recent Teresa Stratas incident in Moscow, along with the clergy and the separatist movement in Quebec. All are biting satire, overshadowed by caramel effects.

Highlights are the takeoffs on folk singing by Carol Robinson, her 'phone call in Bunny costume; and the pith-helmeted "His Excellency," performed and written by Barrie Baldaro. All four entertainers are excellent and only the writing falls down in certain cases.

With the standouts from the present show and the infusion of more new material, Miss Shawn has a property that should last through the summer months. "Village Revue" is the only local satire that can be enjoyed with drinks in hand. McStay.

French Qtr., Houston

Houston, July 19.

Gene Sheldon, Trudy Stabile, Don Cannon Orch (6); $2 entertainment charge.

Top pantomimist Gene Sheldon has revised his act little through the years and it hasn't been necessary, for he can still draw top returns with the old format: The little banjo player who is either highly pleased or completely baffled and whose fingers are always getting stuck in a chair or in his banjo.

Sheldon, a good banjoist, gets heavy palming for "Four Leaf Clover," "Tea For Two," "Hallelujah," "Whispering" and "Alabama Bound." Trudy Stabile, thrush who opens bill, comes on midway in Sheldon's act to take over show, and this seg also plays well.

Miss Stabile makes most of pipes with good phrasing and feeling for lyrics. She uses 10 minutes of 40-minute show with "Almost Like Being In Love," "Make Someone Happy," "S'posin'", and "Kiss The Good Life Goodby."

Don Cannon Orch again turns in excellent backing job.

Show plays two frames. Skip.

Pier 66, Ft. Lauderdale

Ft. Lauderdale, July 16.

Wee Bonnie Baker & Billy Rogers, Ray Paul; no cover, no minimum.

Apparently completely recovered from a heart attack suffered some six months ago, Wee Bonnie Baker has started her comeback trail in the Gilded Cage of the Pier 66 hotel-motel resort here.

The doll-like figure, lilting voice, big-eyed stare and breathless delivery remain her trademarks and still score with her local fans. They demand "Oh, Johnny" her top recording, at every performance.

Miss Baker is spelled by husband Billy Rogers, who should get equal billing in the act. When the wee one goes off, he convulses the aud with original ditties, sung in a gravelly baritone. His humor is sure and subtle and has a sly spontaneity.

Occasionally Rogers lapses into low comedy parodies and jibes at current news personalities. The best of these are his "Perfumo, Perfumo, Perfumo" sung to the tune of "Tit-Willow." Room is awkward for a standup act, but admiring crowd smothers the podium.

Ray Paul continues his long stint of organ lullabies to drowsy sippers in the Panorama Room. Clum.

Crescendo, L.A.

Los Angeles, July 23.

Mary Kaye Trio, Bob Smale Combo (5); $2.50 cover, two-drink minimum.

Success hasn't spoiled the Mary Kaye Trio. They seem in better form than ever this time around. With their patented blend of wild comedy and solid musicianship, traditional routines and a smattering of new material, they deliver an act certain to generate a profitable and appreciative response at this club in their two-week tenure through July 27.

A show-stopper is their smash specialty, "To Be a Performer," a rousing routine that contains everything from a striptease impression to the apparent swallowing of a live goldfish by the trio's ace funnyman, Frank Ross.

Nucleus of the act, however, remains the accomplished, jazz-motivated warbling of Mary and Norman Kaye. Brother Norman hits his solo peak on a swinging rendition of "When Your Lover Has Gone," characterized by his frenetic body English in belting out the tune.

Sister Mary, always the heart of the act, scores with a version of "Fly Me To The Moon" loaded with the vocal swoops or glissandos that are her trademark. Together they hit the top of their harmonic form of their now classic execution of "My Funny Valentine."

Strong instrumental and occasionally even choral support is provided by a quintet consisting of pianist-conductor-arranger Bob Smale, trumpeter Buck Monari, trombonist Dick Hyde, drummer Gus Gustafson and bassist Ernie McDaniels. Tube.

Tidelands, Houston

Houston, July 16.

Jerry Colonna Show, with The Petites (3), Marv Blue Four; $1.50 entertainment charge.

Jerry Colonna, longtime showman with the big mustache, pop eyes and the long, high note, is backed by young and lively entertainers that make his unit ideal for top lounges or intime clubs.

The Petites (Mary and Patti Petitt, Judy Gardner) are comely and active, harmonize well. Marv Blue Four (Blue on tenor sax, Bill Whited at 88s, Denny Harbaugh on bass and Dave Harbaugh at skins) are talented musicians, and lively.

Colonna is generous in sharing mike with supporting cast, and the 42 minutes pass quickly. Most of tunes have fast tempo, and entertainers never dwell on any one song overlong.

Best received are "Gonna Build a Mountain," and a show business medley. Mary Petitt could qualify for Miss Vitamin of 1963, as her vitality is astounding.

Bernie Hatch combo (4) plays for dancing during the Colonna engagement. Skip.

Hotel Plaza, N. Y.

Kaye Ballard (with Arthur Siegel), Milt Shaw Orch, Mark Monte Continentals; $2.50-$3 cover.

The Persian Room of the Plaza, like many spots operating throughout the summer, is playing many performers whose talents are untested in the major rooms. The hope is that many will take root and flower to become part of the regular family of attractions. This is a summer of probing for the Sonnabend hospice and ingredients being discovered during this era of experimentation are entertainment and variety.

Kaye Ballard is no stranger to virtually any field in entertainment. She has been around the supper clubs, has labored in legit and seemingly has done well in these areas. Her talents seem best appreciated in the uppercrust rooms, where despite lowdown japeries, she has an appeal for the chi chi set.

One of her major assets is a sense of the unexpected and a knowledge of utilizing the outrageous. For example, her opener is a languid start, then into a raucous "What's a Nice Girl Like Me Doing Workin' in a Place Like This." It's a special material opening gambit that's been effective around the circuits. The Persian Room, naturally, is not a joint, but this opener leveled the assemblage.

There are also such gems as a rock 'n' roll rib and a satire on Sophie Tucker as her other major comedics. In addition, there is a bright line of chatter threaded throughout her efforts, and the act is bright and vivid.

Miss Ballard doesn't do as well in the straight song department despite a well-trained voice and an evident feeling for her numbers. It could be that her comedy overshadows any of her straight renditions. There is an Italian tune, plus some oldies, but they somehow become stagewaits for her zanyisms.

Miss Ballard's costume is highly unusual for the Persian Room or any other hospice. She wore a gray formless gown with Peter Pan collar and cuffs, and came on with an overlong cigaret holder between her teeth. Few straight efforts could get by in a getup like that. She now sports bright red coiff.

She's accompanied by pianist Arthur Siegel and Milt Shaw conducting the regular house band. Per usual, Mark Monte's Continentals supply the interlude dansapation and John Fossati presides at the tape. Jose.

Crystal Palace, St. L.

St. Louis, July 9.

"The Raspberry Queen," comic opera produced by Jay Landesman; with Carole Mann, Lynn Colby, Henry Thomas, James Paul; based on book by Martin Quigley; music, Ada Reif-Anderson; lyrics, Fran Landesman.

The Crystal Palace in Gaslight Square has come up with a light and frothy confection for the summer trade, a comic opera, "The Raspberry Queen." It's dubious as an "opera" but is fine as a comedy.

Based on a book by St. Louis publicist Martin Quigley, with lyrics by Fran Landesman and music by Ada Reif-Anderson, the "Queen" spins the lighthearted tale of a shapely teenage baton-twirling champ who is spotted by a glib pressagent who wants to pack her off to the big city as a candidate for "The Raspberry Queen of the U.S.A." title.

The girl and her mother are all for it. But Dad is ag'in it because he figures "if she becomes Raspberry Queen she may become a raspberry tart."

The cast of four features Carole Mann, a well stacked blond, as the "Queen"; Lynn Colby as her mother. Henry Thomas as the pressagent and James Paul as the father. All make a fetching job of lampooning the "queen business" and the frills and foibles of high-powered publicity men.

Fran Landesman's lyrics are full of zip, and Miss Reif-Anderson's tunes are a perky earful, including "The Girl With the Raspberry Lips," "All Expenses Paid" and "I'm An All-Girl American." Jay Landesman, as producer, has set a lilting pace.

"Raspberry Queen" is in for five weeks. Bob.

New Acts

GEORGE BURNS & DOROTHY PROVINE
With Barrett Lewis & Howard Parker, Robert Hunter
Comedy-Songs-Dance
85 Mins.
Cave, Vancouver, B.C.

They don't employ "This Could Be The Start Of Something Big" as an opening theme but this new coupling of George Burns and Dorothy Provine lives up to every ultimate meaning implicit in that title tune. Whether working solo or in duo, this fresh partnership emerges as a natural combination of talent and showmanship that, for sheer entertainment value, is hard to match on today's nitery scene.

For Burns, of course, a new partner is no longer a novelty. Over the years his relaxed and easy style has effectively complemented the work of a host of gifted performers, most durable and notable of whom has been wife Gracie Allen, and more latterly, since her retirement, a bevy of new faces such as Bobby Darin, Ann-Margret, Bobby Rydell, Carol Channing and groups lige The Lettermen, who are part of this show. All have benefited from the experience in going on to success as singles.

In Dorothy Provine, Burns renews his uncanny ability to reveal new and glittering facets of a partner's latent talent. Miss Provine's potential, obvious from her featured role in Warner Bros.' "Roaring Twenties" tv entry but limited, of necessity, by the exigencies of series scripting, has been under wraps till now. What comes out of the wrapping is a bright new star, whose assurance, poise and professional performance in her first night club appearance mark her ready for the big time.

Burns, complete with customary cigar, opens singing and solo, like all the other top singers. As he explains, "I like to sing and smoke a good cigar, and at my age two out of three isn't bad." He brings on Miss Provine, compliments Vancouver as a great city for girls inclined to nervous habits like hitching up their skirts, and plays the straight man to perfection for the ensuing innocent repartee thus elicited from his new partner. Exit Provine, and Burns resumes with a sock opening stint of standup comedy that includes comment on why he's always been a straight man plus observations on current tv medico heroes, film stars and fellow performers.

It's all casual and explosively funny, delivered with the superb timing that characterizes Burns so completely. His cigar, in effect, is a baton with which he shades his performance, controls his delivery, conducts his material, and helps enhance the wonderful aura of empathy with his audience that is created while he is on stage. For 20 minutes Burns regales auditors with stories about personalities like Mickey Rooney, Benny, Dean Martin, Sinatra, Burton, Liz Taylor, Tony Martin and Gary Grant. It's used by other entertainers to good effect; Burns makes it fresh and hilarious with the intimacy of his personality and good humor. He ends, as he started, with an unfinished song.

In her solo session, Miss Provine opens singing too. She sings an up-tempo medley of "Get Happy," "Yes, Indeed" and "Hallelujah" to get things started, then uses a little girl voice to match her wide-eyed platinum look for an appealing "It All Depends On You." She can belt 'em as well and does with a torchy "I Love The Boy I'm Near," gets tender with the simplicity of "Motherless Child" and closes her 15-minute segment with a sizzling demonstration of song salesmanship via "76 Trombones." Great Billy May arrangements and solid Chris Gage orch backing help.

Pair romp home the rest of the way. In tandem they duet "Ain't Got Nobody," change tempo with same tune for a softshoe which Burns makes look easy by strewing sand from his pockets, then recharge batteries while The Lettermen take over with a stylish vocal session. Miss Provine returns for a "Roaring Twenties" song-and-dance routine, aided and abetted by male dancers Barrett Lewis and Howard Parker, alumni of the Red Skelton show. Clever staging by Tom Hansen highlights this portion and Miss Provine plays her tv image to the hilt. In this quick saga of the flapper era she sings and terps "Rose Of Washington Square," "Chicago," "Do The Raccoon," "Freddie The Freshman," "I Want To Be In Pictures," "That Certain Thing" and "Charleston." It's a great period piece and audience loves it.

Just to prove it all over again, Burns' finale opens with a medley of his hit and closes with entire ensemble reprising same number, "I'll Buy A Ring And Change Your Name To Mine." In between he wows 'em with the great songs of entertainers, complete with reminiscences to go with each name recalled. Jolson, Tucker, Honeyboy Evans, Bayes, Cohan and Jessel provide a background of show biz history and legend around which Burns weaves a magic spell of nostalgia as the stories spin off. If nothing else, he has given blackjack a greater social status than anyone before or since Vegas made it a profitable pastime. And he makes his own talent unforgettably vivid when he notes that all the performers he talks about had great talent but "I had to marry mine. And Gracie really has retired . . . she's thinking of getting twin beds." He admits that he starts a lot of songs but never finishes one—"This way I get to sing a lot"—and he demonstrates indubitably that age hasn't withered or custom staled. He's a perennial and durable.

Robert Hunter conducts impeccably from the 88 and the Chris Gage orch was never better. Headed for Sparks, Nevada, before a Vegas preem, the Burns-Provine package is an entertainment spectacular. It will go anywhere, in any room. Shaw.

THE WAYFARERS (4)
Songs, Instrumental
20 Mins.
Blue Angel, N.Y.

The practitioners of the folk arts seem to be moving closer to commercial presentation. Many are discovering that the tunes of yore when given modern dress are far more effective than when done merely by the notes. In following this style, they also widen their employment horizons and become acceptable to more types of audiences.

The Wayfarers have seemingly discovered that trick. While they do not stray too far from the folk beat, as far as tune selections are concerned, they have evolved a commercial style which gives them a vigorous and spirited mode of presentation. The foursome are equipped with two guitars, bass and banjo to provide further roundness to full-bodied voices. Their sound and their tune selection are generally good and they seemingly aim to work for mature as well as younger audiences.

The lads have also learned how to use humor to point up values. Much of it, while fairly basic, is artfully done and it provides their turn with a change of pace. As in most groups patterned along folk lines, The Wayfarers dwell largely on early Americana, but they insert tunes of other nationalities as well. The boys are youthful and work hard at projecting their material. Apparently they take no chances anywhere along the line and they work up to rewarding mitts. Jose.

THE IRISH RAMBLERS (3)
Songs, Instrumental
27 Mins.
Gate of Horn, Chicago

Three good-looking lads from Erin, county of Tyrone, are making their formal U. S. debut at the Gate of Horn, one of the nation's first folk niteries and a club that has spawned many of the top names in the folk field since it opened in 1956.

It is to a degree unfortunate that the boys are named Clancy, for the surname (now in use by the established acts, Clancy Bros. & Tommy Makem) would have suited them far better than the group name they've chosen. The handle, Irish Ramblers, seems to suggest brashness and raucousness; actually the fellows are quite subdued in their presentation and refined in their deportment.

Vocally they are excellent, and musically they are astute. They have, if anything, too much integrity for the widest acceptance in show biz for they do nothing that's hokey or stylized, and they deliver their songs in dead earnest — though not without charm. Undoubtedly some seasoning in stateside clubs will help them to loosen up, and hopefully their exposure to U. S. show biz will guide them in matters of stagecraft, in strategy of repertoire, and perhaps also in patter between numbers.

As of now, they're a trifle on the diffident side but eager to please and apparently game enough for the show biz challenge here. They do a memorable version of the "Patriot Hame," a moving rendition of "Risin' of the Moon," a direct and acid "Johnny I Never Knew Ya," an appealing "Roddy McCaughley," and a number of comic ballads plus some effective instrumentals of Irish airs. They come equipped with guitar, accordion, banjo and occasionally harmonica, and their musical blendings show taste.

If they can pick up some Yankee stage savvy without sacrificing their present virtues, they could be winners here. Les.

TOMMY AMBROSE
Songs
34 Mins.
Gatineau, Ottawa

W.k. on Canadian televisIon as star of his own "Tommy Ambrose Show" for the past two seasons, Ambrose guested on tv from 1957, had his own stint first as a summer replacement and then as one of the toprated Canadian Broadcasting Corp. stanzas. But his nitery debut at the Gatineau Club reveals considerably more ability in both the chant and staging slots than any of his video chores.

Ambrose is a young Canadian with plenty savvy. While staging could still use some building, he gets close to the customers from kickoff, moves around and in with warmth and lilt in his warble. Lad exhibits enough homespun, not unlike some of the old-time chanters, but enough modernity to sell the younger mob.

Gabbing is okay, in tune with the stint format, and backing arrangements are clicko. They're by Norman Amadio, who handles 88s and batoning for the stanza. Freshness tinged with savvy even had the waiters mitting when caught at the Gatineau. His tv acceptance has been proven here, but he is big for niteries and lounges. He could sell records if handled properly. Gorm.

Unit Review

Aqua Follies of 1963

Minneapolis, July 18.

Al Sheehan presentation of "Aqua Follies of 1963" with Johnny Matson, Becky Collins, West & Maza, Joe Sodja, singers Lorraine Bruno, Burt Hanson, Hervey Hicks, Mario Tanzi; divers Orwin Harvey, Hobie Billingsley, Joaquin Capilla, Pete Cox, Ron Jaco, Dick Kimball, Ron O'Brien; Aqua Dears (20), Aqua Darlings (16), Mischa Bregmann Orch (16) water ballet director, Marie Kuhlman, music-director-arranger, James McLeod. At Theodore Wirth Pool, Minneapolis; July 17-28; $5 top.

Through choice or necessity, format of this midsummer water spectacular remains virtually the same from year to year. The diving, synchronized swimming, stage dancing and vaudeville acts, all sans name stars, change very little. Even many of the stock gags and staging gimmicks carry over, and this year most of the principals are repeaters. Hence, longtime fans needn't buy a program to get the lineup. As with the circus and ice shows, common beef among patrons is: "If you've seen it once, you've seen 'em all."

Still, Al Sheehan's "Aqua Follies," a leading attraction of Minneapolis' annual Aquatennial celebration, has been a perennial b.o. coinmaker, and this 24th edition should emulate its predecessors. So perhaps there's no good reason to rewrite a winner.

Two and a half hour show does have lotsa pretty girls, pageantry, laffs and exotic costumes, a neat bundle which is attractive family fare. But is suffers from a slow start, and the show never really gets going until it nears the midway point. Curtainraiser is a bland medley of Oscar winning tunes with the Aqua Darlings, on stage, doing a series of uninspired chorus dances. Joe Sodja, ex-soloist with Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians, does several okay numbers on electric guitar. The opening water ballet rountines are ordinary.

Pace picks up considerably when the "Aqua Follies" corps of seven champion divers, of whom Ron O'Brien is the only newcomer, go to the high board, offering a variety of spectacular jumps and winding up with seven simultaneous swan dives. As usual in these shows, the aquatics are more intriguing than the rather pedestrian stage doings.

An exception is the build-a-band act of West & Maza Follies' first-timers. Husband-wife team enlist volunteers from the audience, dress them in wacky costumes, give them musical instruments and have them fake solos while a hidden phonograph provides the music.

At preem show, "volunteers" included Minneapolis Mayor Arthur Naftalin and Hennepin county Sheriff Ed Ryan. Showstopping act is long on yocks and spontaneitywith West showing a deft hand at baiting the VIPs.

Headline swimmer this outing is Becky Collins, world butterfly stroke champ. It's her pro debut, and she gives a fine demonstration of topnotch aqua form. Ensemble numbers in the second half of the show are much more entertaining and novel, boasting kooky routines and costumes as well as funny sight gags. Following the usual pattern, best is saved for last, including riotous clown diving and a fireworks finale.

"Aqua Follies" vocalists Lorraine Bruno, Burt Hanson, Hervey Hicks and Mario Tanzi keep busy on the chorus and water ballet numbers; generally they do a nice job. Foursome sounds good on both solos and harmony. Mischa Bregmann's band also does well in backing the show. Johnny Matson handles the emcee chores in good taste and with enthusiasm, as he has in the past. Staging is competent throughout, but here, again, there's a feeling of sameness.

"Aqua Follies" runs through July 28. From here it moves to Seattle, where it will be making its 14th stand Aug. 1-14 in conjunction with the Pacific Coast city's Seafair. Rees.

Forest Hills Music Festival

(Forest Hills Tennis Stadium, N. Y.)

"Hootenanny 63" with Lou Gottlieb, Bud & Travis, New Lost City Ramblers (3), Tarriers (3), Odetta, The Caravans (4); $5.50 top.

The strength of the folk movement around New York is indicated by the exceedingly strong attendance at the Forest Hills (N.Y.) Tennis Stadium with the third program in the Festival series. The presentation of "Hootenanny 63," comprising folk and bluegrass singers, brought on a nearly full stadium Saturday (20) despite threatening skies.

However, those attending under circumstances deserved a far better shake for their money. Much of the proceedings was from majorbowesville, starting with the presentation of amateur groups prior to the regular bash, and continuing with the unexplained stagewaits between acts.

Most of the trouble was occasioned by the failure of one advertised to show (Judy Henske) and the non-appearance of an unadvertised act. No explanations were made to the audience, and the extremely lengthy blank periods on stage ultimately brought on rhythmic handclapping from the audience.

The openers, the New Lost City Ramblers, a bluegrass group, seemed to be wrong starters. They were set for later in the program, but happened to come in at starting time and were hurriedly rushed into the breach. The unit should have appeared when the audience was warmed up. They're not starting acts. The hillbilly twang of this trio is reminiscent of inexpert rustic ribbers.

Things went better with Bud & Travis who seemingly scored more with their talking comedy than with their tunes. However, they showed strength in the Latin dept. with some rousing Mexican songs. In the same vein, The Tarriers, now down from a quartet to a trio, were also whoopping it up at comedy time, but their ultimate reception was spoiled by the first drops of what was to be a deluge. Even the hardy sport-shirt and sneakers crowd was uneasy. The Caravans, a gospel outfit, were rained out of the show shortly after their start.

The major strength of the bill was in Odetta, who has an overwhelming contralto and sings with power and conviction. She did a minimum of gabbing, an improvement since she tends to sound like a lecturer during these moments. Her "Freedom Trilogy" was a top effort.

The proceedings were emceed by Lou Gottlieb, of the Limeliters, who are now in hiatus until January. Gottlieb, the comedy mainstay of the group, gave little indication of his capabilities, although he'd get a good one in now and then. Pressed for time, he couldn't develop any theme that would show his solo capabilities. His introductions were necessarily hurried.

This Hootenanny bit seems like an ideal kind of show for a promoter. Aside from the aggregate draw of the folk bashes, each act presented was self-contained musically. There was no need for orchestras to back them. Each performer played an instrument and the promoters have minimum music expense. Jose.

King's, Edinburgh

Edinburgh, July 16.

Stewart Cruikshank presentation starring Rikki Fulton, Jack Milroy; with Joanna Rigby, Bob & Jack Young, Madge Stevens, Jim Hawthorne, Alexandra Kirsta, Glen Michael, Ethel Scott, Clem Ashby, Bruce McClure Dancers (12), Geraldo orch, directed by Derek Hudson.

After dinner layout, geared for summertime tastes of local vaudegoers, strikes a fairly high standard, and is notable for tasteful decor and costuming. Comedy, while weak in parts in first segment, livens up when the headliners, Rikki Fulton and Jack Milroy, offer their w.k. characterizations. Pair score with brisk humor, Fulton with his toothy inanity, Milroy with a sort of Jerry Lewis pace and zaniness that establishes him high in favor.

Fulton shows artistry in portrayal of femme types, such as in his "Whistler's Mother" sketch, and Milroy registers strongest in a travesty of British railways. Fulton is again solid with his skit on "Peter Pan."

In the song dept., Madge Stevens and Jim Hawthorne sustain the light music offerings with pleasant effect, while Alexandra Kirsta is a promising looker in the principal dance slotting. Bob and Jack Young offer breezy tunes and instrumentalism to exit to good palming.

Joanna Rigby, tall and svelte, returning to Auld Lang Syne terrain from London revue and legit, shows herself a talented and long-limbed performer who only requires the right medium and material to establish herself. She is best in the sexy numbers and seems more suited to cabaret than summer revue.

The comedy foils include Fulton's own femme, Ethel Scott, plus versatile actor Glen Michael and Clem Ashby. Dance line is under the Bruce McClure direction and is okay; McClure, already known in the U. S., is essaying with success his first chore of overall production. Derek Hudson batons the resident Geraldo orch. Gord.

scores of others who have become saleable properties in many fields.

Even the gospel movement, which the youngsters have latched onto recently, is starting to produce its share of standard performers. The Clara Ward Singers, who have been staples in Las Vegas, will now be joined by the Herman Stevens Singers who start at the Flamingo Hotel, Las Vegas, in September and it's likely that the same kind of groups will go elsewhere.

Time was when the agencies felt satisfied to wait for developments at spots such as the Blue Angel, N. Y., which was a barometer of advanced tastes. However, the Angel itself now scouts the Village coffeehouses. Therefore the talent agencies have to follow suit and case the acts before they hit the uptown rooms.

At any rate, the agencies have found the kid talent areas extremely profitable and the surest barometer of coming boxoffice. In many instances, the selections made by the youngsters have graduated to adult ranks and also have had long tenures in the field of foreign bookings.

Once an act achieves an adult rating, the agencies have found it to be no longer dependent on disks and it can even be booked in spots which do not cater to youngsters. Johnny Mathis, for example, is set in locations which kids cannot afford, even though he still has a hold on the juves.

The offices' credo of having a little child lead them seemingly has paid off in rock 'n' roll and its offshoots. It's only lately that they have come up on the age scale with the folk bookings in college-oriented shots. And all of it has contributed greatly to agency prosperity during the past few years.

with the late music—and also keep listening for the late news.

The station now operates with 450 employees, relatively few considering its broadcasting time and reach, and this group includes 15 officers plus 190 soldiers and airmen, and the rest civilian staff.

The station continues to get many of its programs from the Armed Forces Radio & TV Service in the States, but since the radio programs in the States are becoming less profuse than in former years before the accent turned to television, it is becoming increasingly difficult to get a supply of new shows from the U.S.

Hence, AFN has set up its own cooperation system with European radio stations, for documentary and background material, to prepare its own local shows informing the Americans about their European neighbors. A representative of Radiodiffusion Francaise and from the local German radio outlet of Hessischer Rundfunk work constantly with the AFN centre.

Costs of AFN run around $1,500,000 annually, and about half is supplied through the profits from the PX, the rest coming from the government's non-appropriated funds.

OBITUARIES

ROBERT SPARKS

Robert Sparks, 63, whose experiences spanned 35 years, died of heart attack when stricken in car he was driving in Hollywood, July 22. Sparks entry into show biz came after a brief schooling in law in Cincinnati and as newspaper reporter in New Bedford, Mass. Moving to Boston he did theatre publicity and later worked with Howard Lindsay of Lakewood Players at Skowhegan, Me., second oldest summer theatre in country.

Sparks moved to Broadway as rep of Actors Theatre and aided in production of "Candida" with Katharine Cornell, Ibsen plays with Eva Le Galliene. He organized Philadelphia Theatre Assn. for which he produced "Lysistrata" which later went to N.Y. for long run.

In 1932 Sparks transferred to Hollywood to begin long career in theatrical pictures, radio and television productions. He first joined Paramount as a writer and among his early credits were one of segments in "If I Had a Million." His next move was to RKO-Radio first as a writer and later as story editor. Joining Columbia in 1938 he produced "Blondie" features and married star of the comedy series, Penny Singleton.

After three-year hitch in the Marines as a Major in last war, Sparks moved into Universal as coordinator of all writing activities. In 1946 he moved back to RKO as an executive producer and after a span of nine years made his first move into television. As executive producer with CBS in charge of Hollywood-produced shows he was credited with creative development and supervision of "Rawhide," "Gunsmoke," "Perry Mason," "Have Gun, Will Travel" and the filmed "Playhouse 90." In 1961 he followed Harry Ackerman over to Screen Gems to develop pilots but later returned to CBS and produced 32 episodes of "Have Gun" before joining MGM-TV as producer of "The Travels of Jamie McPheeters" an hour series airing on ABC-TV next fall of which he had completed six.

Surviving beside widow Penny Singleton are two daughters, Mrs. David Sykes of Costa Mesa and Robin Susan, student at USC and two granddaughters.

HARRY ANGER SR.

Harry Anger Sr., 67, longtime agent and former veepee of General Artists Corp., died in New York July 22 of a heart attack believed to have been induced by listening to the Liston-Patterson fight on radio. At the time of his death he was doing independent television production and packaging.

Anger started his show biz career as a Dutch comic with Mary Kerry in an act billed as Anger & Fair. He later married his partner and subsequently did another act with Neddie Packer. Following his career in vaudeville, he produced stage units with John Hickey, who is now a top executive with Arena Managers Assn. After this stint, he became stage producer at the Earle Theatre, Washington.

Anger joined General Artists Corp.'s theatre section nearly 20 years ago. He later shifted to television production, where he was instrumental in getting Perry Como into video. He supervised that show for many years and ultimately became a veepee and a member of the GAC planning board. He was at that agency until a few years ago, when he left to go on his own.

Survived by his wife, a son Harry Jr., formerly with Warner Bros. and RCA Victor, and a daughter.

BRETT RANDALL

Brett Randall, 79, noted actor and director of the Australian theatre, died July 3 in Melbourne. He was founder-director of Melbourne's St. Martin's Theatre (formerly the Little Theatre).

Randall, who made his stage debut in Gilbert & Sullivan at the age of seven, was a member of an English theatrical family. His father was Herbert Rallands, actor and onetime manager for George Edwards; his stepmother was actress Henrietta Cavendish.

He acted under the name of Bertie Rallands. But upon coming to Australia in 1925 to appear in Ian Hay's "The Sport of Kings," he changed his handle to Brett Randall (latter being the original family name). He trouped for as well as directed for most Aussie managements.

For the last 30 years Randall represented a number of British literary agents and at various times also repped such playwrights Down Under as Eugene O'Neill, George Bernard Shaw, John van Druten and Maxwell Anderson.

His son, Peter, who survives, is a director of St. Martin's Theatre.

JOSEPH S. HUMMEL

Joseph Stewart Hummel, 64, retired continental sales manager for Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., died July 18 in Palma on the Spanish Island of Majorca.

He launched his career in the film industry as a messenger boy in a Brooklyn studio in 1916. In 1917, he became auditor of Vitagraph, a forerunner of the Warner Bros. organization. He rose to be assistant to the general sales manager and foreign sales manager. In 1944, before the end of World War II, he returned to liberated France and Italy to revive the distribuition of U.S. films.

In recent years, following Hummel's retirement as active director of WB's Continental distribution activities, he and his wife, Leona, divided their time between a showplace mansion they built in Majorca, Spain, and visits to New York and Paris. Their George V apartment, where Hummel was based in the French capital, was also a showplace meeting-greeting place for visitors from all over the world.

His wife survives.

'Take Her' Earned 65G Net on 150G

"Take Her, She's Mine," which closed July 13 in Chicago, had an estimated $65,000 profit on a $150,000 investment. Included in that amount is around $20,000 still due the Harold Prince venture on the sale of film, as well as stock and amateur rights, to the Phoebe and Henry Ephron comedy.

Picture rights to the play were sold to 20th-Fox for $150,000 down, plus 10% of the show's gross on profitable weeks, up to a ceiling of $350,000. The stock and amateur rights were sold to Samuel French. The legit operation's cut of that subsidiary income is a standard 40%, less 10% commissions.

The comedy, with Tom Ewell starring in the role played on Broadway by Art Carney, had been on the road since ending a 51-week Main Stem stand last Dec. 8.

PARIS CRITICS SELECT BRECHT 'JUNGLE' BEST

Paris, July 23.

The Syndicate of French Legit Critics has tagged Antoine Bourseiller's production of the late Bertolt Brecht's "In the Jungle of the Cities," at the Studio des Champs-Elysees, as the best theatrical presentation of the season. It starred Sami Frey and had a limited but good run.

The best French entry was Jacques Fabbri for his playing and directing of P. A. Breal's "La Grande Oreille" ("The Big Ear"), a satire of religious tolerance and bigotry. It ran all season at the Theatre De Paris.

Pierre Fresnay was named top male thesp for his role in the stage adaptation of Diderot's 18th century book about a canny anarchist "Le Neveu De Rameau" ("Rameau's Nephew"). It was adapted by Fresnay and J. Duval, and staged by both. It ran the season at the Michodiere and will relight the house in September.

Lead actress was Monique Lejeune for a successful French revival of Tennessee Williams' "The Glass Menagerie." Done by a young company, it had a nice run at the Theatre De La Bruyere. Best set designer was Le Marquet for the state-subsidized Theatre National Populaire's version of Valle Inclan's Hispano play, "Bohemian Lights," and top music was by Jean Pomerides for the aforementioned Brecht play "Jungle."

Salome Jens will appear as Hermione in the N.Y. Shakespeare Festival production of "The Winter's Tale," which will run from Aug. 3-31 at the Delacorte Theatre in Central Park as the third and final play of the festival's free Shakespeare program this summer.

Legit Critics' B'way 'Bests'

a musical. Each pulled four votes. It's the first time that Miss Leigh, a veteran British actress, has been represented in the VARIETY poll. Jerry Bock, with seven votes, and Sheldon Harnick, with eight, were far ahead of the competition in being adjudged best composer and lyricist, respectively, for "She Loves Me."

Alan Arkin got the most votes, three each, in the categories of best performance by an actor in a supporting part and most promising new actor for his key role in "Enter Laughing." He was elevated to star billing shortly after preeming in the comedy as a featured player with four other cast members headlining.

Since Arkin wasn't starred when the show opened, his designation as a supporting player is understandable. But critics who voted for him as most promising newcomer were either forgetful or chose to ignore his Broadway appearance last season in "From the Second City."

Six votes for the winning spot as best supporting actress went to Zorah Lampert for her role in "Mother Courage and Her Children." Had the play marked her debut, she would not have qualified in a narrow-technical sense as most promising actress, which is limited to "debut performance in a speaking part." Miss Lampert played a mute in "Mother Courage."

In the category of most promising actress, the winner was Melinda Dillon for her performance in "Woolf." She won with three votes in a field that included veteran film actress, Maureen O'Sullivan, making her Broadway debut in "Never Too Late." Four of the critics did not vote for the most promising actress. Three of them also failed to make a most promising actor selection.

British scenic designer Sean Kenny was accoladed with seven winning votes as best scenic designer and another Englishman, Anthony Powell, was the winner with three votes in the competition for best costume designer. The heavy influx of London-originated productions during the season is reflected in the large number of Britishers cited in the poll. As usual, some of the critics differed on category designations for their performer selections, with some choices appearing in as many as three places.

Anent the citations already received by "Woolf," they include the N. Y. Drama Critics Circle Award and the Tony Award. The play was also this year's selection by the Columbia Univ. two-man Pulitzer Prize drama jury, but the recommendation was rejected by the advisory board.

Say Lerner May Persist on 'Daisy', Seeks Bernstein?

"I Picked a Daisy" may eventually reach Broadway with a composer other than Richard Rodgers as Alan Jay Lerner's collaborator. It's understood that Lerner, as author of the book to the proposed musical which was to have marked the debut of Rodgers and Lerner as a new team, controls the property for which he was also supposed to write the lyrics.

The venture was cancelled the week before last when booking contracts had to be signed. Lerner's failure to finish the lyrics for the musical was the generally accepted reason for the scrapping of the project. It's understood that the librettist-lyricist has already begun his search for another collaborator, and has approached Leonard Bernstein on the project.

Edinburgh to Get Big Fest Theatre

Edinburgh, July 23.

A modern Festival Theatre on the present site of the Synod Hall is to be built here within the next three years, according to a forecast by Duncan Weatherstone, civic topper of the city. Agreement has been reached with Meyer Oppenheim, the prospective developer of the site, for erection of a block of offices and a theatre "which will be worthy of Edinburgh as a festival city."

The theatre will become the property of Edinburgh Civic Council. Details of its design will be worked out between the city and other architectural experts.

Local hopes are that this will be not only a new theatre but also a new cultural center in Edinburgh. Development of the area is estimated to cost between $3,000,000 and $4,500,000. It will involve the demolition of the existing Lyceum Theatre, a leading U.K. legit house (already owned by Meyer Oppenheim), and of the Synod Hall. It would provide for a multi-story office block and restaurant. New theatre will be designed to house the Festival opera on the largest scale.

WIS. UNIV. HARESFOOT FOLDS AFTER 65 YRS.

The Univ. of Wisconsin's 65-year-old Haresfoot Club has suspended production activity because of financial difficulties. The closing was recommended by a committee of faculty, Haresfoot alumni and students, following a study of the dramatic club's operations. The Haresfoot presentations, which also leave the Madison, Wis., campus for brief tours, have been playing to sagging business in recent years.

Along with the recommendation for suspension, the committee also asked that the club be continued as a student organization. In regard to the suspension, the Student Life & Interests Committee has agreed to pay the club's debts of $5,000 if it would refrain from producing during the 1963-64 academic year. Founded in 1898 as a co-educational venture, the club became a male troupe in 1909.

Its alumni include actors Fredric March and Tom Ewell, playwright Howard Teichmann and composer Jerry Boch. Teichmann intends forming a committee, to help reactivate the club.

1963-64 Season Starts Next Week; 'Jennie,' 'Here's Love' Begin Tryouts

By JESSE GROSS

The new season gets its first Broadway-bound entries next Monday (29) with the out-of-town opening of two musicals on which the combined investment could hit $1,000,000. The tuners are "Jennie" and "Here's Love" which debut, respectively, at the Colonial Theatre, Boston, and the Fisher Theatre, Detroit.

"Jennie," costarring Mary Martin, Dennis O'Keefe and Robin Bailey, is capitalized at $500,000, with provision for 10% overcall. If exercised, that would raise the stake in the production to $550,000. The musical, dealing with Laurette Tayor's early stage career, is being produced by Cheryl Crawford and Miss Martin's manager-husband, Richard Halliday.

Besides their 50% ownership of the presentation as producers, Miss Crawford and Halliday are credited in the published limited partnership certificate as having another 29½% interest in the venture for putting up $295,000 of the basic $500,000 capitalization. As backers, Miss Crawford is down for $100,000 (10%) and Halliday $195,000 (19½%). Whether their investments were personal or involved contributions from others is not disclosed.

"Jennie," adapted by Arnold Schulman from Marguerite Courtney's book about Miss Taylor (her mother), has lyrics by Howard Dietz and music by Arthur Schwartz. The Colonial booking is to continue for five weeks. From there the musical, which opens Oct. 17 at the Majestic Theatre, N.Y., moves to the Fisher, where it'll play for four-and-a-half weeks starting Sept. 5.

"Here's Love," costarring Janis Paige and Craig Stevens, is capitalized at $375,000 with provision for 20% overcall which, if exercised, would boost the investment in the show to $450,000. Columbia Records is the sole backer of the Stuart Ostrow production, which Ostrow is now directing, having replaced Norman Jewison last week. Michael Kidd is director of the musical numbers for the Meredith Willson tuner, based on the film, "Miracle on 34th Street."

"Love" is to remain at the Fisher for four weeks, moving next to the National Theatre, Washington, for a three-week stand beginning Aug. 27. It's then scheduled to play two weeks at the Shubert Theatre, Philadelphia, starting Sept. 16, prior to opening Oct. 3 at the Shubert Theatre, N.Y.

New 'Billy Barnes' Revue Opening for H'wood Run

Los Angeles, July 23.

"The Best of Billy Barnes," culled from the various Billy Barnes revues seen over the past few years locally, will follow "Billy Barnes' L.A.," into the Coronet Theatre, opening Aug. 5 for a four-week stand.

George Eckstein and Bill Watters will produce new show, as they did "L.A.," which shutters July 28 after 10-month run. Barnes and co-writer Bob Rodgers will be featured in new revue, with Joyce Jameson, Ken Berry and Patty Regan, all Barnes alumni.

Plan 2d Touring Cast of 'Fringe'

Alexander H. Cohen is planning two companies of "Beyond the Fringe" on the road, in addition to his New York presentation. One touring unit has already been put together for an Aug. 5 opening at the Hartford Theatre, Los Angeles. That troupe is currently breaking in at the Golden Theatre, N.Y., having opened last Monday (22) for a two-week period while the original British company vacations.

Warren McClane, of Cohen's office, is scheduled to plane Aug. 4 to the Coast, to scout talent for the second touring troupe which, will play areas not covered by the other road company. The original British company of "Fringe," now vacationing, consists of Alan Bennett, Peter Cook, Dudley Moore and Jonathan Miller. They're also the writers of the revue. A replacement troupe is continuing the show at the Fortune Theatre, London.

The cast now at the Golden consists of Patrick Carter, William Christopher, Patrick Horgan and Paxton Whitehead.

'STRINGS' TO RELIGHT PITT'S NIXON THEATRE

Pittsburgh, July 23.

The refurbished Nixon, closed for several months following a fire next door that caused smoke and water damage, will reopen with "No Strings." It will be under sponsorship of the Theatre Guild-American Theatre Society.

The TG-ATS will also sponsor seven other shows during the Nixon seasons. They will include "Camelot," Stop the World—I Want to Get Off," "A Man for All Seasons," "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf," "Never Too Late" and "A Thousand Clowns."

New Haven C. of C. Gives Yale Bowl Pop Concerts

New Haven, July 23.

The New Haven Junior Chamber of Commerce is again presenting a pop concert series at Yale Bowl. To date, a four-concert schedule is in progress, with Peter, Paul and Mary and Peter Nero having already appeared June 30 and Gorden and Sheila MacRae and the Brandywine Singers last Saturday (20). Ray Charles is set for July 27, and Connie Francis for Aug. 17.

As previously, the concerts are presented on a sponsorship basis, with local firms guaranteeing any slack that might materialize. Burton Zempsky is Junior Chamber chairman of the series and Pete Villana Associates is thumping the tub this year.

Julian's Montparnasse

Paris, July 23.

A. M. Julian, head of the Theatre des Nations, is taking over direction of the Theatre Montparnasse, as of next season.

This will be a personal sideline venture, in partnership with Lars Schmidt, and nothing to do with Theatre des Nations which he will continue to operate at his Theatre Sarah Bernhardt.

Delay London 'Camelot'; 'Lady' to Rack Up 2,281; 'Syracuse' Drury's Next

London, July 23.

H. M. Tennent Ltd., which has been planning a London production of "Camelot," has postponed the project for at least a year. The firm had originally intended opening the musical at the Drury Lane Theatre here following the withdrawal from the house of the long-running "My Fair Lady." However, with the Oct. 19 exit of "Lady" the theatre will get "The Boys from Syracuse."

Tennent had hoped to get Julie Andrews and Richard Burton to their original Broadway repeat co-starring roles in the London production of "Camelot." Burton is a doubtful prospect now and although Miss Andrews is reportedly interested she has other commitments to consider. Revisions and additions are also required for the Alan Jay Lerner-Frederick Loewe musical adaptation of T. H. White's book, "The Once and Future King."

Anent "Lady," which Lerner and Loewe adapted from Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion," two members of the British production have been with the musical since its opening April 30, 1958, at the Drury Lane. They're Elaine Garreau, who plays Mrs. Hopkins, and Mrs. Eynsford Hill, and Zena Dare, who's giving her farewell legit performance as Mrs. Higgins.

"Lady," which will have registered a record run of 2,281 performances for the 300-year-old Drury Lane, will move to the Opera House, Manchester, for a 16-week run starting Oct. 31.

Barrault Will Accent Oldies

Mostly Familiar Productions at Theatre De France—Plan U.S. and Canada Tour

Paris, July 23.

Jean-Louis Barrault, head of the state-backed legit company Theatre De France, will stress revivals, with only a few new productions, in his repertory setup here next fall. He and the troupe will leave Feb. 1 for a tour of the U.S. and Canada.

The director-producer-star will open the new season with a relight of "Hamlet," adapted by the late Andre Gide. Also brought back will be such past hits as "The Cherry Orchard" and the Offenbach operetta, "La Vie Parisienne." Then will come another round for Paul Claudel's "Le Soulier De Satin" ("The Satin Slipper"), with Genevieve Page and Sami Frey coming in especially for it.

New items will be Samuel Beckett's "Happy Days," Francois Billetdoux's "Il Faut Passer par les Nuages" ("One Must Go by the Clouds") and a musical version of Labiche's comedy, "Tricoche Et Cacolet," to be staged by Comedie Francaise actor-director Jacques Charon. This again underlines the closer ties between the three state legiters, the Theatre National Populaire, the C-F and Barrault's group.

In February, Barrault will hand over his Odeon Theatre to a provincial company headed by Roger Planchon from Lyon. This also marks the increasing decentralization of the French theatre, with Planchon getting government as well as municipal funds.

Protect French Show Biz Moppets

Paris, July 23.

From now on, moppets engaged in any part of show business will be protected by the federal government, according to a new law passed by the French National Assembly this week under the instigation of a commission of social affairs. All under 16 will need a special governmental authorization to work. Idea is to safeguard the health, morality and future of show business kids. Also to do away with any exploitation by employers.

During the debate before it was passed, one member pointed out that a 13-year-old minor had made some daring scenes in a film which was later forbidden to those under 18. This was considered deplorable and leading to a corruption of minors.

Others felt that worthy films should not be hampered but only studied to see that the children involved were getting their proper schooling, care, remuneration, etc.

Henceforth, any show division wishing to employ boys or girs under 16 will need special permits from the Ministry of Culture or from local prefects in the hinterlands. Officials also will set the division of the moppet wages to parents or guardians or setting up of trust funds for them.

Also part of the law is a segment forbidding any press, tv, radio or literary sources to treat any part of the lives of the show children except that pertaining to their actual work. And there are strong sanctions against anyone who uses children for perilous acts, performances or those who pay them more than the legal split. Law was passed unanimously and is expected to curtail misuse of youngsters and assure them their rightful education, protection and benefits.

Madrid May Have An Opera at Last

Madrid, July 23.

The multimillion-dollar Juan March Foundation, in cooperation with the Director General of Beaux Arts and the Director General of Architecture, both within the Ministry of National Education, officially opened an International contest for the architectural plans to construct a National Opera House in Madrid. Having allotted a maximum of 400,000,000 pesetas (close to $7,000,000) for the new lyric hardtop, the March Foundation sent a committee of experts to the opera capitals of Europe before deciding on opera house basics for the competing designers.

Conditions to be incorporated in the plans and models submitted, include a seating capacity of 2,400, of which 1,800 will be permanently earmarked at moderate and popular prices. The grounds will encompass 25,000 square meters in the new Chamartin area almost facing the 125,000-seat soccer stadium.

Competition will run for six months, projects will be exhibited publicly for one month and a final selection will take place in February of next year. First prize is $50,000 and contract rights for complete edification. However, considerable secondary prizes will also be offered for the right to incorporate ideas from runner-up competitors into the winning project.

Opera house will be two years in construction and will become the centerpiece of a vast, city-planned development to include gardens, terraces and underground garages all surrounded by a svelte shopping area. Enthusiasm is high in music and cultural circles. The Spanish capital city is quickly shedding the ignominy of a major European city sans opera.

For a comfortable summer evening of outdoor playgoing, "As You Like It" is a pleasant choice. Even the silliness of the love scenes between the ardent, obtuse Orlando and the boy-posing Rosalind are bearable when the weather is right in Central Park, where Joseph Papp has brought this excellent revival as the season's second offering of the N. Y. Shakespeare Festival in the Delacorte Theatre.

The production scheme for the show is imaginative, tasteful and effective, though tending toward archness and a sort of skittish whimsy. Ming Cho Lee's simple scenery suggests the proper locales clearly, and several of the prop gimmicks designed by William Stockwell are ingenious and helpful. The costumes by Theoni V. Aldredge are also generally colorful, but the special bras and low, tight necklines on several of the femme outfits are ridiculously exaggerated.

Under the somewhat restless direction of Gerald Freedman, the performance is plausible and amusing or touching to suit the mood of the play, although there is excessive movement, as if the company mistrusted the quality of the Shakespeare text or the alertness of the audience.

In the key role of the smitten but canny Rosalind, film actress Paula Prentiss gives a believable, occasionally affecting, somewhat mannered, always interesting performance. She is an attractive looker, a bit taller than average but not too tall for leading stage roles, and with admirable presence and projection. Her voice is fascinating, somewhat reminiscent of Jessica Tandy. Perhaps because of limited experience in legit, the actress lacks the sense of pacing her performance, and of variation, particularly vocally.

Richard Jordan is engaging in the slightly sappy role of Orlando, Penny Fuller is appealing in the second femme part of the spirited Celia, and there are acceptable portrays by Frank Schofield as the loquacious Jacques, Mitchell Ryan as the worthy Duke, Stan Dworkin as Duke Frederick, Bert Conway as the faithful Adam, Don Moore as the pushover wrestler, John Heffernan as the clown and K. C. Townsend as the woodland hussy, Audrey.

It's an entertaining edition of a minor Shakespeare comedy, and of course a natural for the special admission-free audiences of Central Park. Hobe.

National Theatre, D.C., Not to Be Replaced

Washington, July 23.

The prospect that the National Theatre, key Washington legit house would be torn down and a much larger theatre built in its place has ended. The new owner of the building (there are several floors of offices above the theatre) has formally notified Scott Kirkpatrick, National manager, that the structure will be modernized rather than replaced and that the National's lease will be extended. There will be no interruptions in the National's schedule. The theatre is seldom dark more than two weeks in 12 months.

When the building changed hands a few months ago, the new landlord announced that the site would be razed, with a bigger theatre and taller building to be built on the land.

Linguistics & Logistics of a Foreign Concert

Tel Aviv, July 23.

Phyliss Curtin, the American soprano, is completing here a five-concert windup of a European concert tour begun in England in May. She is travelling with her husband, photographer Gene Cook, their two-year-old daughter, a nurse and 17 pieces of luggage. She sang in Finland at the Sibelius Festival, also in Denmark and Norway. All involved plenty of translation work on the reviews.

Her appearance here with the Israel Philharmonic was with Richard Tucker, who set it up. They have had a big impact, exceptional curtain calls and encores. Only flaw in the occasion for Gene Cook: the reviews are all in Hebrew and "I can't even find her name in the captions."

Tusker and Miss Curtin donated their services at a special Jaifa concert to raise money for a new concert hall there.

Miss Curtin sings July 27 at the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood, Mass., and in the fall will sing the soprano lead in the N.Y. City Opera's American premiere of Benjamin Britten's "War Requiem."

Receipts were up again last week for the Stratford Shakespeare festivals in Connecticut and Ontario. Most of the other stock operations covered below played to so-so business. At some spots, though, boxoffice activity was down.

A substantial increase in business at the Oakdale Musical Theatre, Wallingford, Conn., was registered last week by Genevieve in "Irma La Douce."

Dear Me, the Sky Is Falling, Music Box (C) ($6.90-$7.50; 1,101; $40,190) (Gertrude Berg). Previous week, $9,072 for four performances.

The comedy, which suspended following the July 10 evening performance due to Miss Berg's inability to go on because of a virus that affected her back and neck, will not reopen next Monday (29) as had been planned. The Theatre Guild, producer of the show, has decided to make the closing permanent, reportedly because Miss Berg has not been recovering from her illness as rapidly as expected. The production, for which business had been declining prior to its suspension, is figured to have lost most of its production cost of around $80,000. As of its suspension, the presentation had registered a 29-week run of 145 performances.

'Night of 100 Stars' Nets Over $35,000 for British Charity; Show a Smash

London, July 23.

"The Night of 100 Stars," Britain's biggest annual legit benefit show, netted well over $35,000 at the Palladium last Thursday (18). It could have been slightly more but a batch of programs, which were selling for an average of $3 apiece, were mislaid in a locked dressing room. It could account for a lot of people not being able to get their charitable mitts on one.

Show itself, staged as usual by Charles Russell and Lance Hamilton, was a smasheroo, with well over 100 stars letting down their hair and having themselves a ball. Top personal successes were Jessie Matthews, looking not a day older than when she was the musicomedy darling of the '20s, Anna Neagle doing a lively Charleston with John Neville, and Shirley Bassey.

Showpiece was a takeoff of the BBC's "Come Dancing" program and Wilfrid Hyde White, disguised as a juve pop singer, being introduced by his "agent" Robert Morley. The John Mills' family brilliantly stooging for Beryl Reid as a cynical air hostess also copped the yocks.

Only slightly sour note was Elizabeth Taylor who, with Sir Laurence Olivier, emceed the second half. She figured that he had been given most of the funny lines. So some more comedy stuff was pumped in for Miss Taylor. Frankly, the effort wasn't worth it.

Inside Stuff—Legit

Joseph Beruh, operator of the Sheridan Square Playhouse, N.Y., offers the following background information in regard to the current picketing of the theatre by Theatrical Protective Union, Local 1, the New York stagehands union: (The local is demanding the employment at $137.50 weekly of an electrician for the house's current tenant, "Brecht on Brecht." That's in addition to one non-union electrician now employed on the operation.)

Beruh, who's also general manager of the "Brecht" presentation, claims he entered into an oral agreement in 1959 with the union, whereby he agreed to employ a member of the local at the theatre at $100 weekly. A union member was then hired and, according to Beruh, continued to work at the house until 1961. Then, he says, the union told him it did not have anybody who wanted the job and that he could assign it to someone else, providing he continued paying the union a $4 weekly "assessment" for the man.

That same deal, Beruh says, had applied when a union member was employed. Beruh claims he's willing to pay $137.50 to the non-union employee who's been with him for two years, provided he's permitted to join the union. The employee, Dominick Cascio, has made approximately 20 trips to the union's headquarters in effort to become a member and has thus far been unable to get even an application. Beruh asserts. He also argues on Cascio's behalf that Cascio did supervisory work last season for Kermit Bloomgarden on the Broadway production of "Nowhere to Go But Up."

In regard to a story in VARIETY last week, Beruh says that when "Brecht on Brecht" was originally presented at the Theatre de Lys, N.Y., it did have three union stagehands, as stated, but that there were no non-union members on the payroll.

Insider's Newsletter (Cowles) captioned it "Religious Storm Coming" and reports in a recent issue of the weekly communique: "The present harmony between America's religious groups will be badly strained this fall, when the controversial play 'The Deputy' opens in New York. Originally produced in Berlin as 'Der Stellvertreter,' the drama accused Pope Pius XII of responsibility for the mass murder of Jews by the Nazis. According to the German author, Rolf Hochhuth, who is identified as a Protestant, the Pope could have prevented the Nazi atrocity but chose to remain silent. Performances of the play in Germany set off angry Catholic-Protestant exchanges, and churchmen who have seen it in Europe fear the worst when it opens in New York and—as 'The Vicar'—simultaneously in London. The attack on the late pontiff may set off anti-Catholic feelings and is sure to cause resentment among Roman Catholics. Because the author is a Protestant, anti-Protestant feelings will be excited. Because the play concerns the Nazis' atrocities against Jews, Jewish emotions will be roused, and anti-Jewish feelings in turn. Because the author is a German accusing non-Germans of major responsibility for Nazism, anti-German reactions too will probably follow. All in all, religious leaders in the U.S. fear the furor over the play may bring a real setback to the flourishing ecumenical and interfaith movements."

(Billy Rose has announced production plans for "The Deputy" on Broadway this fall. There have been references of regret as to that decision from several quarters, dominantly Catholic, but notably also Presbyterian along the lines, "Hasn't he enough money-"—Ed.).

Lillian Lipman, of the Univ. of Washington, and Ann Flagg, of Northwestern Univ., are the winners of the 11th annual National Collegiate Playwriting Contest, sponsored by Samuel French Inc. Miss Lipman won first prize of $350 in the full-length competition with "Time of Darkness" and second award of $100 in the short play field with "The Old Man." Miss Flagg's "Great Gettin' up Mornin'" won first prize of $200 in the short play division and will be published and leased in the fall by French for production in the fall.

In the full-length category, second prize of $100 was awarded to Richard Castrodale, of Yale Univ., for his play, "Because a Good Man Nowadays Is Hard to Find." A third prize of $50 was awarded in the short play competition to Ralph S. Arzoomanian, of the State Univ. of Iowa, for "The Roadbird." Judges for this year's contest were producers H. Clay Blaney and Caroline B. Swann, as well as Dr. Mildred Kuner, of Hunter College, and Dr. Robert L. Hilliard, of the Univ. of North Carolina. Competing in the contest were 225 entrants from 93 colleges.

The 1964 contest, on which the deadline is next May 1, covers the current summer session and continues through the spring term.

The Ford Foundation last week awarded 27 persons a total of $160,650 in one-year fellowships to prepare through on-the-job training for managerial and other administrative careers with a symphony orchestra or a theatre, opera, or ballet company. The fellowships are for $5,000, plus $1,000 for married men with children, as well as $500 for each dependent child.

Of the fellowships, 11 are renewals of awards made in 1962, the first year of the foundation's three-year program for administrative internships in the performing arts. Those who've had fellowships renewed are Charles L. Burns, Bryan E. Clark, David Tausig Frank, Robert Eugene Gustavson, Edward C. Hankenson, Ruth Marie Hider, Ellen C. Kaplan, H. G. McNally Jr., Styrk Orwoll, Ian Strasfogel and J. Wesley Zeigler.

Also awarded fellowships were William Fred Boughton, Douglas L. Buck, William Bushnell, Carole Deschamps, Noel S. Dowling, John E. Gibbens, Norman R. Gregory, Douglas B. Koss, Ronald C. Lipka, John M. Ludwig, David Luney, Patrick B. McGinnis, Kenneth R. Meine, John R. Reel, Stephen Sell and Frederick G. Sliter.

The theatre being built at the New York World's Fair site to house Morton Da Costa's "history of Broadway musicals" will be one of the world's most unusual, with a stage 180 feet wide and equipped with every electronic staging device known, according to Da Costa, who'll conceive and stage show.

"In fact, if something hasn't been invented yet and I'll need it, they'll invent it for me," Da Costa said. The spectacular, which will be only 90 minutes long but will review Broadway musical history for past 100 years, will be produced by George Schaefer and Angus G. Wynne Jr. for Compass Productions. Compass is also building theatre, to be known as the Music Hall. Rehearsals will start in March, for a planned April 22 opening.

Extensive research on project is now under way in N. Y. Schaefer, currently directing "Zenda" here for Civic Light Opera, will join Da Costa at earliest possible date.

Herb Caen in the Frisco Chronicle: "How Small The World: 'Dangerfield,'" the play based on Barnaby Conrad's novel about Sinclair Lewis, now has a star (Franchot Tone), a warm-up date in New Haven (Sept. 16), an opening date on Broadway (one week later)—but no title. In the story, Winston Dangerfield, the fictional name for Lewis, is a Pulitzer Prizewinning author on the skids. In Santa Barbara lives a real, live Dangerfield—historian George Dangerfield—who won a Pulitzer Prize for 'The Era of Good Feelings,' and this Dangerfield has bad feelings about the coincidental use of his name. He has refused permission."

Austin Pendleton, who was the male lead in the off-Broadway production of "Oh Dad, Poor Dad, Mama's Hung You in the Closet and I'm Feelin' So Bad," is the author of the book for the musical, "Mister Booth," to be preemed Aug. 27-31 as the season finale at the Williamstown (Mass.) Summer Theatre. The tuner, an adaptation of "Prince of Players," the Eleanor Ruggles bigraphical novel about Edwin Booth, has music by Arthur Rubinstein and lyrics by Peter Bergman.

Death of a Salesman

Minneapolis, July 17.

Minnesota Theatre Co. revival of drama in two acts by Arthur Miller. Staged by Douglas Campbell; setting, Randy Echols; costumes, Carolyn Parker. Features Hume Cronyn, Jessica Tandy. Opened July 16, '63, at the Tyrone Guthrie Theatre, Minneapolis; $5 top.

Arthur Miller's "Death of a Salesman," an American stage classic, is a worthy entry in the Tyrone Guthrie repertory theatre's preem season. But Douglas Campbell's production of "Salesman" is not of classic stature, failing to communicate thoroughly the pathos and utter despair which permeate Miller's lines.

Part of the trouble appears to lie in the Guthrie Theatre's stark layout. The open arena stage, with its impressionistic scaffold setting, makes the plays many flashbacks difficult to carry out. They rely for effect almost entirely on lighting. Instead of the transitions flowing smoothly, the flashbacks seem gimmicky and tend to distract. Overshadowing the play itself, the staging engrosses the audience, missing the intended simplicity, softening the story's punch and diminishing the gripping agony of the character.

But the staging is not "Salesman's" only drawback. The casting also leaves something to be desired. Hume Cronyn, a brilliant actor in prior offerings here this season as well as often in the past, is not at his best in the title part. The rigorous rehearsals for this demanding role added to two nonstop months of playing lengthy parts in "The Miser" and "Three Sisters" might have conditioned Cronyn to Willy's weariness.

Or perhaps the strain has been an oppressive handicap. At any rate, Cronyn doesn't always come through as the worn out, disillusioned, traveling salesman reaching the end of his rope. Occasionally some of his mannerisms and postures as Harpagon in "The Miser" carry over to Willy Loman, an indication of the problems of repertory acting.

Jessica Tandy, closer in physical appearance, 28-year-old Olga in "The Three Sisters" than to the near-60ish Linda Loman, is superlative as the devoted, understanding wife. Her youthful good looks and voice are two strikes against her in this role, but she still plays the part to perfection. Lee Richardson and Nicolas Coster, the sons, are more like caricatures than real people.

In lesser roles, Paul Ballantyne, John Cromwell, Ken Ruta and Janet MacLaghlan stand out. Michael Levin, one of 12 McKnight Foundation fellows in the Guthrie company, is the only member of "Salesman's" cast who imparts a New Yorker accent. Randy Echols' two-story, jungle gym setting is strictly functional, unattractive and, at times, a bit confusing to viewers. Carolyn Parker's costumes are appropriately seedy.

The opening performance, after an abrieviated rehearsal period, was marred by several fluffs and was generally less polished than the Guthrie Theatre's three previous openings. Nevertheless, the capacity house was even more wildly enthusiastic, particularly for Cronyn, than previous opening night crowds had been. "Salesman" will alternate with "Miser," "Three Sisters" and "Hamlet" until Sept. 22, when the playhouse's initial season concludes. Rees.

Drama Dominates Spoleto, 1963

Sixth Year of Menotti's Festival Sees Changes of Policy and Offbeat Items

By TRUDY GOTH

Spoleto, Italy, July 23.

Gian-Carlo Menotti has completed the sixth season of his Festival of Two Worlds in this Italian mountain town. In many respects it is the most successful season of all. The drama side has been notably impressive. Included was Andre Gide's "The 13th Chair," a one-acter now seen since Paris, 1935. It was staged at Spoleto by Luchino Visconti. A first here was Henry Miller's play "Just Wild About Harry." Eugene Ionesvo's "Teacher" was presented, despite its flop in Paris.

This season it appeared that attendance at the festival was divided between the rich jet set and hitchhikers with an artsy-craftsy side. Many came for one day only others for a single night's lodging and two days show-going. Those who are intent upon cramming began at the noontime apertif concert, follow with a matinee, then a night performance. Last year, but not this, there was also a midnight "Tent Theatre" and the same faces would be there, too.

This season Menotti altered the former "Album Leaves" a melange of short divertissments, plays, vaude turns and ballets, into "the Theatre at Seven" located in the cellar extending under the 17th Century Caio Melisso Theatre and Cathedral Square. Area had previously been used as a restaurant and still served food after the performance and prior to the 9 p.m. performance elsewhere.

Outstanding event was an English version by Michael Cacoyannis of "The Trojan Women" by Euripides with Rod Steiger as Poseidon, Claire Bloom as Andromachae and Mildred Dunnock as Hecuba (see separate review).

Opera was represented by a former Menotti student of Curtis Institute days, Stanley Hollingswirth whose one-act "The Mother" on a fairy tale by Andersen was given in Philadelphia at the Curtis in 1954 together with Menotti's "Thief and the Old Maid." The music is pleasant but lacks personality. Remarkably lovely set by Livia de Nobili captured the fairtale atmosphere perfectly. Mietta Sighele—a Spoleto discovery—was ideally cast for the lead. Second part of this program contained a small but precious gem of a Rossini-one act "Il Signor Bruschino," first given in Venice in 1813. Both operas were staged remarkably well by Sandro Sequi and conducted by Julius Rudel from the N.Y. City Opera. While his interpretation of the contemporary work was as exact and faultless as we are used from this conscientious conductor, the Rossini might have benefited from a lighter, more playful and Italianized vein. Both operas were well accepted by the public.

Gospel singers replaced last year's interest for a colored group ("Black Nativity") with almost equal success. Sam Barber's latest piano concerto (commissioned by Lincoln Center but new to a European audience) had a success with the piano part played competently by John Browning (who performed it at Lincoln Center). One would have wished for a better orchestral accompaniment and mainly for a more experienced and better prepared conductor. Young Dietfried Bernet from Vienna did not as yet deserve the distinction to premiere such significant a work than a new Barber-composition to a high-brow audience like the Spoleto one was on this occasion.

Chorus of Trojan Women: Jamie Bauer, Elaine Kerr, Sally Kirkland, Rhoda Levine, Erin Martin, Wendy Mackenzie, Fiddle Viracola.

Having given ample proof of his understanding of Euripides in his admirable filmed version of "Electra" in Greek, director Michael Cacoyannis showed that it was no fluke in preparing an American company with only two weeks of rehearsal in an outstanding production of "The Trojan Women" as the closing event of Gian-Carlo Menotti's Festival of Two Worlds. It well-deserved the cheers and repeated encores it won at its opening from a capacity audience at the midnight opening.

The late Edith Hamilton's translation points up the anti-war message contained in the story of the annihilation of the males of the conquered city down to the last child and the dispersal of its women to every corner of the world. Instead of following the original three acts she has compressed it into a single act which runs 85 minutes and enables the director and the player to provide unbroken tension in the narration of the events.

Greek drama often hinges on the successful use of the chorus and in this respect Cacoyannis has worked in American acting and dancing talent on hand for other festival events and turning them into a properly-drilled chorus which moves, speaks and works in every scene with remarkable expertise. They more than made up for the fact that only a few steps and a white backdrop plus excellent lighting serve instead of scenery.

The casting was an inspiration. Mildred Dunnock, as Hecuba, gives a vibrant performance of the suffering and vindictive mother in the manner for which she has established her theatrical reputation. Outstanding is the acting of Claire Bloom, both for its restraint and its vehemence, in playing the widow of the Trojan commander who sees her young son taken from her arms and flung from the walls. Like Miss Dunnock, she won applause which interrupted play several times. A nod is due Carol McGroder who plays, Helen with just the right degree of coldness to abet her beauty. Sondra Lee's Cassandra, a difficult role, was less satisfactory.

While no plans have been made for further presentation, it would be no surprise if someone in the star-studded audience which included many show biz personalities tagged director Cacoyannis to repeat the production for Broadway showing. It might well be the best Greek classic the White Way has seen in many a year. Slam.

Another Paris Sheet?

Arthur Rubine, son of late Columbia Pictures publicist Irving Rubine, and himself a former film touter, is mulling a new Paris weekly, Sunday edition, in English. This is deemed not without merit since neither the Paris editions of the N. Y. Herald Tribune nor the N. Y. Times publish on Sunday. Rubine is currently powwowing with Charles Torem of Coudett Bros., in the French capital.

Incidentally, there are local rumors about a new tack in the Paris (N. Y.) Times' publication approach now that the problem of the late Orvil Dryfoos' successor has been settled. The Paris rumors range from change of technique to a different "editorial approach."

Separately, Rubine plans to concentrate on news of the American colony in Paris, a sector pretty much totally ignored by the Times and the Paris edition of the New York Herald.

There have been attempts ot start American and-or English newspapers in Paris over the years, dailies, weeklies and monthlies. The only one that has stuck and is continuing successfully (though even it had a number of rough years financially) is the Herald. At one time (about 1925) there were four such daily papers published.

Both the Herald and the more recent Times are edited on the principle that their readers are not interested very much in Parisian affairs. Concentration is on news coverage of international or back home in America scope once the American Embassy, the American churches, American "society," etc., were assiduously covered. Now, not at all, or rarely. The Herald prints occasional interviews with American "celeb" visitors; the Times never. The Herald makes a once-over-lightly attempt to cover Parisian amusements, the Times rarely. Paradoxically, the Times prints more coverage of Paris amusements in its New York paper than in its Paris edition.

Herald has Tom Curtiss doing a fulltime coverage of drama, films, niteries and music and Jan Maguire on a once-weekly music go-over. Times ignores music but covers plays when they have an "American" slant, using Jean-Pierre Lenoir (an Englishman whose square handle is Gordon Kinghma) for this coverage. The Herald makes a strong bid for "women's page" coverage, with four femmes on fulltime; a field neglected by the Times, except for strong femme coverage from New York. Both papers make a daily must of crossword and bridge columns. The Herald prints a full page of cartoons, the Times none. Both papers ignore what used to be a "must," society coverage.

Rubine and his principals have apparently studied all this and propose to fill in the holes, via concentration on interviews, full coverage of entertainment, full coverage of American churches, clubs, schools, etc., as well as "society." They'll depend on a UPI news ticker, hope to have a full line of comics and "think" they have lined up the New York Times giant crossword puzzle from the Times' New York Sunday paper. Latter would be surprising, of course, if true.

Rushing Lomax Book

World's editor-in-chief William H. Targ is rushing Louis E. Lomax's new book, "When the Word Is Given," to press for earliest publication. Negro author's book is an inside report on Malcolm X, Elijah Muhammad and the Black Muslim world. Lomax is one of several authors who accepted Castro's invitation to "see Cuba for himself" at the Havana government's expense. Lomax is author also of "Negro Revolt" and has been in frequent attendance at Black Muslim rallies.

Targ also signed N. Y. Senator Kenneth Keating's book, "Problems of Government," for publication next spring.

Hula Windfalls for Others

Month-long strike of seven unions against the Honolulu Star-Bulletin and Honolulu Advertiser and the joint-production Hawaii Newspaper Agency has been a bonanza for the city's radio and TV stations.

It's also boosted circulation of the city's two Japanese-American dailies, the Hochi and Times, and the Hilo Tribune-Herald, the latter carrying two columns of Honolulu news in the edition which is flown in for Honolulu street sales. Businessmen line up at newsstands to await the arrival of jet-freighted Los Angeles and San Francisco dailies.

Radio and TV stations have stepped up news coverage and one station has started a daily obituaries program. Even the striking Hawaii Newspaper Guild has been distributing a mimeographed sheet carrying tv logs.

Strike, unprecedented in Hawaii newspaper history, revolves over wages and a sick pay "waiting period."

Joe Lapid's VIP's

One hundred VIPs, interviewed by Joseph Lapid are included in his new book, "Amania Rashuvib Meod" (which in Hebrew means: "Very Important People"), published by Massada in Tel Aviv. Among the profiles in the book are Danny Kaye, Juliette Greco, Simo Signoret, Yves Montand, Pablo Casale, Artur Rubinstein, Yanudi Menuthis, Van Cliburn, Isac Stern, Richard Tucker, Manalia Jackson, Herman Mouk, Irving Stone, Harry Golden.

They have all visited at some time or other in Israel and have been interviewed by columnist Lapid whose weekly column appears in seven different languages. He is a staffer on Nearly, Israel's biggest daily, and is Israel correspondent for VARIETY.

The Profumo Influence

Der Stern, top German weekly, is doing a global series on l'amour a la U.S., England, France, Italy and Germany, as result of the Cliveden set's doings, and accordingly has commissioned N.Y. World-Telegram & Sun columnist Norton Mockridge to do the three-parter on the American standards. Malcolm Muggeridge will cover the British concept—John Profumo et al. notwithstanding—and journalists in the other countries have been so commissioned. Der Stern (The Star) will translate all into German. All will run three chapters of 5,000 words each.

It's intended to be a study, in depth, on whither are we going sex-wise, country club pecadilloes, divorce ratios, standards of fidelity, etc. Accent is on hard fact and writing on "high plane," skirting the sordid or sensational unless pertinent to the finding.

Incidentally, Mockridge is talking with CBS' Sam Slate and Joe Cooke on an afternoon across-the-board interview tv show, expounding personal philosophy, chatter, guests, etc.

S. (Longmans, Green) now becomes a Reader's Digest Book of the Month selection.

Book has now been published in 17 countries. The London Sunday Express also ran it as a 17-week serial but only scratched the surface since the book runs 200,000 words. Fishman is due back in the U. S. for a lecture tour as result of his smash bestseller.

Today Darryl Shayne, their daughter, is the front row right cutie in the Copa line. Proser, of course is in Las Vegas and Jules Podell bosses the Copa.

1939 Vs. 1964 N.Y. World's Fair

land where it was at the old 1939 Fair.

I spent two wonderful, nonsensical years in 1939-40 helping Mike Todd make a big noise at the old Fair, and no one in this whole world is looking forward more anxiously to tottering back to the scene of the crime.

Last time out (first year) the major midway attractions were Todd's "Hot Mikado," George Jessel's Old New York, Billy Rose's Aquacade, John Ringling North's Circus, masquerading under the fancy name of "Cavalcade of Centaurs," "American Jubilee" and the Parachute Jump.

Shows

At this time the Big Show lineup is more than comparable and still nine months to go—an eternity in show business. Topping the list is the still untitled Amphitheatre spec being produced by Meyer Davis, (the band tycoon) and Leon (Music Hall) Leonidoff. By virtue of a readymade 12,000 seating capacity on the site of the old Aquacade, this can well be the world's biggest stageshow with 6,000 seats retailing for an old fashioned dollar. Leonidoff will have only one water number and otherwise will lean heavily on massive scenic effects.

The one-ring version of the Ringling show in a modern tent will have only centre-ring acts, many of which are now with Morris Chalfen's Great American Circus, currently a sellout in its State Dept. exchange tour of Russia. Oh yes, Art Concello is dusting off the old Ringling circus wagons for a daily parade, replete with calliope.

A big new one will be the Century Showcase Theatre housed in a 2,400-seat structure presenting "Bright Lights of Broadway," a full-scale musical with a cast of 150 to be staged by George Schaefer and Morton daCosta. Along with this goes a plush restaurant which will convert into a night spot with top names billed for 9:30-2 a.m. festivities.

Also firm are Lawrence Vineburgh's Santa Maria replica, now abuilding in a Spanish shipyard; Harold Steinman & Sam Shayon's Dancing Waters; the American Circus Museum, a waxworks, and American Indian Village. All manner of craft, from gondolas to glass-bottom boats and fringe-topped water surreys, will be available for lake excursions. There'll be a Polynesian stageshow in a 1,000-seat arena under a 75-foot waterfall at the Hawaii Pavilion and, in the nearby Florida Bldg., there will be a Performing Porpoise Show, for which equipment for the manufacture of salt water is already being installed.

Rides

In the ride department, already set, is BFE's vertical lift which ascends to a height of 150 feet, and a Swiss Sky Ride which crosses the International area at a height of 112 feet. A suspension-type monorail system will make two 8,000 feet loops at a helght of 50 feet around the amusement section. There'll be much more to come before the April 22 opening date.

On the other side of the tracks in the exhibit area will be more top show biz events. Notably, Paul Feigay-Dick (Olympic champ) Button will install 3,500 molded plastic seats in one-half of the N.Y. City Bldg. for their "Ice-Travaganza." This will feature 100 skaters and novelty performers and will highlight trick scenery and effects. Examples: a 60-foot expanding puppet, a movie screen from which live skaters emerge, and a daring escape from a cable ski lift high over the ice surface.

Allan Gottlieb and Bill Lippert have already started work on the 8,000-seat stadium with a banked, figure-eight, racing track for their Hell Drivers Show. They'll bring in three crack Jack Kochman units from the fair circuit to build up their cast of daredevils. They have full sponsorship from Dodge and other automotive firms, and figure not too many city slickers have ever been exposed to this type of thrill show.

Mercantile Showmanship

Those who predict a thud from the "industrial" side of the Fairgrounds are not reckoning with the fact that since the last Fair a whole new breed of pro showmen have emerged from the mercantile world, and they will be putting their best foot forward at the Fair.

Hence, there will be a magic show and elaborate fun house at the Festival of Gas, a big Mark Wilson magic show at the General Cigar Bldg., General Motors has practically completed the building which will house its Futurama ride; the Argus Photo Funland will provide 10 unusual free rides for the kiddies; and a man named Walt Disney will produce the shows for three pavilions. He'll have rides into the past and the future, an exhibit of animated, life-sized, prehistoric monsters, and a show featuring his highly touted mechanical figures out of history.

Add to this all of the foreign pavilions, with live shows and ethnic talent on view, myriad restaurants with food from many lands, and you've got what just has to be the biggest Fair ever.

Ticket Sales

Another new facet, almost nonexistent at the last Fair, has been the development of group and industrial block ticket sales on a national basis. Credit this to the big touring arena shows and blockbuster motion pictures which have cashed in on group selling in late years.

Already, both the Dick Button show and the Leonidoff-Davis spectacle have advance sales hovering around the $100,000 mark. Dick Spittel, from my office, is reorganizing the local salesmen coast-to-coast who rocketed the advance sales on "Around the World in 80 Days," Nick Matsoukas has come up with a coupon bonus book with contracts already signed for a million distribution—he says it will hit 5,000,000 by October. Dick Caspar is using the out-of-town salesmen, originally organized for the annual Ringling tour, and other pros like Michael Gifford and George Alexander, who have sold millions of dollars worth of tickets for road-show movie attractions, are getting in on the act. A newcomer is Louis d'Almeida who has been tackling top industries with a coupon book good for Fair admission and numerous attractions. His sales are already over the 500,000 mark.

its first hardcover publication, and World already has published some NAL books, but the literary agents feel that World ultimately will publish all NAL hardcover editions.

Dial Press-Dell Books merger report is another regarded as "imminent," especially among some of the literary agents.

'Latter's concern is because any additional paperback hookups with major hardcover firms could minimize the competitive bidding for reprint rights.

Ernst The Incessant

Morris L. Ernst, the N.Y. attorney and gadabout, is already 16 times a book author (often as collaborator) which is an occasion of no surprise at all to those aware of his lifelong gift of superabundant vitality. The interest in his most recent volume (Luce, $4.95) arises from the man and not the diary form, which is frequently teasingly cryptic and not always clear as to who's involved, despite many footnotes to identify people. And yet a book with the dead-serve title of "Untitled: The Diary of My 72nd Year" remains surprisingly readable, faceless though many of the characters mentioned must seem.

Family stuff, bedside readings, nostalgia, his curious failure to interest himself in science during a lifetime of being interested in everything are typical of the diary jottings. His comments on politics and public figures have bite. If he offers villains they are William S. Paley, Frank Stanton, David Sarnoff and Leonard Goldenson, all for their Ernst-charged responsibility for the low estate of television programming.

A major, and added frustration, to the volume is the absence of an index but then an index to the faceless (to the reader) friends of a rambling journal-keeper probably seemed an impossible labor. The book can also be read as testimony, and presumed thanksgiving, for a heaping measure of health and a superbly tolerant wife. Advocates of toleration always need tolerant wives. Land.

Anti-Yellow Culture

Thirteen American publishers will suffer bad business to a degree because some books by them have now been banned in Singapore. The 13 listed in the State Government Gazette are (with the publications in brackets):

All Star Books (All Star), Fabian Books Ltd. (Fabian), Private Editor Books and All Star Classic Books (Private Edition), Saber Books (Saber), Le Stag Shoppe and Blake Pharmaceutical Corp. (Midnight Reader), Tower Publication Inc. (Midwood), and Nightstand Books (Nightstand), Universal Publishing & Distributing (Chariot), Kozy Books (Kozy), Camerarts Publishing Co. (Merit), Novel Books (Novel). Titles include "Naked Passion," "Lonely Flesh," "The Crest Inn Rape," "Sex Market" and "Naked Flesh."

The ban, made by the Ministry for Home Affairs, is part of the Government's drive against "yellow culture." The books banned have been considered "morally objectionable" by the government religious leaders and educationists.

The ban order embraces all editions whose covers are usually adorned with pictures or photographs of woman in suggestive poses in various stages of undress.

Six months ago, 30 editions, majority from the same publishing houses, were banned for the same reason.

The present government, headed by the Peoples' Action Party, is so anti-"yellow culture," it has even banned films depicting the twist. For example, "Hey, Let's Twist" (Paramount) can't be shown here.

Pickets March on Georgia

door entrance and refused to budge.

Three policemen were forced to carry youths, 10 Negroes and two white boys, to waiting Black Marias.

Crowd of 300 persons gathered across street in front of new Martin's Rialto Theatre to watch goings-on and many cheered as demonstrators were dumped, one atop the other like cordwood, into the wagons.

Two pickets, one the Rev. Ashton Jones of San Gabriel, Calif., a white minister who has been arrested four times for participation in demonstrations, marched in front of the restaurant with signs attacking the segregation "guarded-door policy" of the restaurant.

Saturday (20) Fulton County Superior Court Judge Durwood T. Pye ordered Solicitor General William Boyd to prepare and present to the grand jury indictments on 101 arrests made on antitrespass charges dating back to November, 1961.

Judge Pye's order listed names of persons arrested, places where alleged violations occurred and arresting officers. Many of the cases involved the same defendants.

Judge, in his charge to present grand jury July 3, told them to indict violators of state's antitrespass law passed in 1960. Violation of this law is classified as a misdemeanor, which a grand jury does not normally handle. Cases could be tried in Superior Court of Criminal Court, but Judge Pye said his court would handle them if necessary.

Grand jury last Tuesday (16) returned against the Rev. Mr. Jones (Leb's Restaurant picketeer) charging him with disturbing Sunday worship services at the First Baptist Church (Atlanta's largest) and with assault and battery on a police officer by biting him on the hand.

Atlanta's theatres are integrated and so are lunch counters in department stores and five-&-dimes and some restaurants (not Leb's) have dropped race barriers. Swim pools in public parks were integrated at the beginning of this season, public parks and golf courses were integrated years ago, ditto for library and public transportation.

All of this was accomplished without violence, a record for which the city is proud and the consensus seems to be that additional agitation, in view of the gains already made, is merely keeping alive echoes of something already 99.4 per cent accomplished.

Some fear continued activities along these lines will boomerang.

Taking It Easier

Roanoke, Va., July 23.

Although only one Roanoke theatre — the Shenandoah Drive-In — has desegregated, the Roanoke branch of the NAACP has reaffirmed a previous decision not to resort to demonstrations in the immediate future against others that still refuse to seat Negroes.

At a recent meeting, the branch voted to give a voluntary bi-racial committee "ample time" to negotiate with theatre managers concerning long established segregation policies. The branch, headed by the Rev. W. W. Wilkinson, has consistently followed a conservative policy. It is known to be pleased with the bi-racial committee's success in obtaining agreement from about a score of Roanoke business houses to hire workers hereafter on a merit basis without regard to color.

Members of an NAACP committee tried last week to buy tickets at Roanoke's largest cinema, the American, but were turned down. A spokesman said most other theatres in the city and on its outskirts were tested with negative results. Theatre operators, cued by Commonwealth's Attorney Leroy Moran, contend that a Federal court decision holding Virginia's compulsory theatre segregation law invalid merely means that amusement house owners are free to admit or reject customers as they prefer.

Operators have said, however, they will integrate if the law is interpreted to mean they must. And the Rev. Mr. Wilkinson, in announcing the decision to rely on the bi-racial committee's negotiations, added: "If all efforts fail, we have no alternative than to demonstrate in protest against this policy of discrimination."

Rex on 'MFL' & Actors' Politics

press conference arranged by Carl Schaefer of Warners' foreign press department at the Beverly Hills Hotel.

In response to questions, Harrison discussed everything from "What kind of a cook is your wife, Rachel Roberts?" ("An excellent cook. She has her own kitchen, in which she prepares English dishes") to "Were you a personal friend of George Bernard Shaw's?" (Answer: "Yes, I first met him when I made 'Major Barbara.' He was a wonderful man.")

Many of the questions were on "My Fair Lady." He said, "I shall keep my performance as close to the stage performance as possible. I don't want to make any changes, except what the difference in media requires. On the stage you have to paint with a broader brush. A few bits of business in the original Pygmalion, like the scene between Higgins and his mother, omitted from the stage version, will be put back for the screen. We'll use the musical numbers as climaxes to the scenes. There will be a few changes in the order of the songs, but the screen version will have all the songs that appeared in the stage version.

"There will be some changes in the costumes. In the play we created a bit on the period in the suits for Professor Higgins. They weren't completely in accord with the wardrobe worn by men in 1912. Cecil Beaton feels that it is better to bring Higgins suits closer to the 1912 period in the picture, so I'll be wearing three button and high button suits."

Asked about "Cleopatra," he said that he had not read Wanger's reminiscences, that Caesar had become his favorite role because it was his most difficult ones that he was very pleased with the reception he'd received from the critics; and that he felt that Liz Taylor is a very talented actress who had done wonders with an immensely difficult part.

When asked about David Susskind's remark that Liz was overweight and undertalented, Harrison said, "I thought he was off the air. Wasn't 'Open End' stopped?" When one foreign correspondent said, "Yes. But Mr. Susskind wasn't stopped," Harrison said, "I have no comment to make."

Gallant

He also ducked a question as to whether he'd be willing to name the fairest (in temperament as well as looks) of the fair ladies he's played opposite on the screen, but praised both Julie Andrews and Audrey Hepburn.

On the personal side he reported that his eldest boy, Noel, had become successful as an entertainer in London in tv and in night clubs, that Noel would substitute for him in attending the opening of "Cleopatra" in London, and that his other son by a previous marriage is studying archeology at Cambridge. He expressed admiration for his wife's performance in "The Sporting Life" and said they would like to make a film together, but faced the nightmare of trying to find the right material.

As for audiences, "When you're in a good play, audiences in New York and London are marvelous. When you're in a bad play, they're lousy."

Lincoln Center

and one of the major factors to be considered is that the people who are attracted by this level of entertainment generally have many more discretionary dollars to spend than would the average midway patron.

I would like to add also that the decision to use Lincoln Center as the entertainment section of the Fair, possibly in lieu of a midway, reflects the growth of America since the N. Y. World's Fair of 1939. Since that time, there has been an explosion in the cultural interests of our country. (For example, more money is spent for attendance at concerts and opera than at sporting events in recent years.) The N. Y. World's Fair's decision to replace Philip H. Lord's "Gangbusters" with Guiseppe Verdi's "Macbeth" seems an intelligent recognition of this change.

I sincerely feel that neither the country nor the businessmen of this city will suffer as a result.

Racial Beacons, a Kleiman Idea; Exhib Heads Race-Film Prod. Co.

Philadelphia, July 30.

White House press secretary Andrew T. Hatcher has written Paul Kleiman, 47, head of Reo Amusement Co. of Philadelphia, that President John F. Kennedy cannot endorse but noted with interest Kleiman's proposal for a chain of brotherhood beacons across the nation to symbolize the American conscience operating in race relations.

Kleiman's own initial eight-light beacon tower will be raised on Independence Mall, Philadelphia, and will be linked with similar beacons in other cities by rays of light to be known as the "Golden Beacons of Brotherhood."

Kleiman who operates nine theatres in Philadelphia area, recently launched a film production venture, to make pics devoted to inter-racial subjects. The first of four to get under way will be a biography of former heavyweight champion Jack Johnson.

Exhibitor said the idea for a beacon, whose lights would radiate through the night and reach for the beacons of other communities, germinated three years ago, when a rash of swastikas defaced church and synagogue doors. Recent racial strife revived it.

The first tower will face Independence Hall and its eight beacon lights would be dedicated to the Four Freedoms and peace, love, tolerance and truth. Lighted at night the beacons are to revolve once every 24 hours.

Racial 'Protest' Songs Tabu, Martha Schlamme Cancels So. Afr. Dates

Folksinger Martha Schlamme has cancelled a concert tour of South Africa rather than adjust her repertoire to the requirements of apartheid.

Miss Schlamme had planned to perform her usual concert program, which includes a number of "protest songs." However, a recent change of laws in South Africa made such material illegal, with a charge of conspiracy and possible death sentence looming for anyone performing or promoting such a program.

Although, to the best of her recollection, she had never sung before a segregated audience, Miss Schlamme did agree to the provision that she do so in South Africa, in the hope of being able to Anti-Cig Films On British Com'l TV?

London, July 30.

Latest move in the continuing wrangle over the use of ciggie tv commercials is that the Ministry of Health is seriously considering "sponsorship" of anti-smoking commercials.

While no firm decision has been taken yet, reports are coming through that not only BBC but also the Independent Television Authority will run the anti-smoking filmlets.

Major problem facing the indies, of course, is that a large percentage of their revenue comes from tobacco manufacturers ad campaigns—estimated to be worth around $14,000,000 a year—and they fear the anti-smoking commercials may deter cigaret clients.

Meantime, the Advertising Inquiry Council is conducting a campaign for the absolute abolition of tobacco commercials from the commercial channel. AIC states that since publication of the "explosive" Royal College of Physicians report which linked lung cancer with smoking there has been a rise in the volume of ciggie advertising.

Yank Vocal Stars Big B.O. for Beyreuth Fest

Bayreuth, July 30.

Extent to which American vocal talent has become important in the world's top music echelons is clearly indicated at the opening of the annual Bayreuth Festival, with three top roles of the Beethoven Ninth Symphony sung this year by Americans, Grace Bumbry, Jess Thomas and George London. The Beethoven Ninth performance is traditional for opening night of the Fest, which, hereafter, concentrates on Wagnerian opera. Karl Boehm conducted the symphony, which was broadcast in full on

DUCKING ROLE IN CULTURE-EDUC'N?

By GEORGE ROSEN

As the 1963-64 season approaches, there is deep concern that the tv opportunities in both the cultural and educational fields are being aborted by the inherent commercialism of a medium which in the eyes of many, has turned prime time viewing on the major networks into a veritable midway of shallow shows and fluffy frivolity.

The adverse criticism of network tv programming, while lacking in the notoriety and fanfare of a year or two ago, is now made of sterner, more fundamental strains. Indeed, these mounting criticisms—now far more basic and all-embracing — are also coming from more strategic and significant sources.

For the sporadic attacks of the Minows, the Dodds, the Henrys, et al., have now proved to be the mere advance scouting probes of a massive, frontal onslaught which may well change the form and

Have $15 Million Pledged for D.C. Cultural Center

Washington, July 30.

Roger L. Stevens, giving President Kennedy a briefing on the National Cultural Center, told him $15,000,000 (of the necessary $30,000,000) is in sight and predicted that construction can start next spring. The $15,000,000 is not in the bank. But Stevens was quoted as saying he had "pledges and other prospective offers" which would bring the cash to that figure.

Stevens said he expects donations by the end of 1963 to reach $20,000,000. A fund-raising campaign, with President Kennedy forcefully behind it, is now underway among all Federal employes. Stevens, chairman of the board of trustees for the Center, arrived in Washington from Miami Beach, where he had hoped to line up the backing of participants at the National Governors' Conference.

Stevens had a resolution plugging the Center, which he wanted the state executives to adopt. The Show Folk Resent Keeler, Rice-Davies Trying to Make Character as 'Talent'

By DICK RICHARDS

London, July 30.

The sordid sex drama at Old Bailey, starring the naughty 50-year old boy, Stephen Ward, and his housemates, Christine Keeler and Mandy Rice-Davies, has produced cynical gags in taverns, cynical interviews in the press, various exploitation deals for television and feature film appearances and a general disclosure of widespread English decadence. One curious, little-remarked aspect is the resentment of professional entertainers as these two soon fated-to-bore-everybody babes negotiate for status as "actresses". They will never make it in Britain because the talent unions won't issue them credentials. The performers in one night club threatened to walk en masse if Christine Keeler was presented as "headliner".

Show business itself may be more sensitive to the "shame" factor than British high society seems. And this is a high society stench, or it would never have commanded national newspaper and world attention.

While on bail Ward has made a television film of "a typical day in his life" though there is no definite news of who is going to buy it, or how, if typical, it could be publicly shown. He also staged

A Paris Break-In

Paris, July 30.

Curious switch here, Paris Opera will be doing a couple of performances of Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet" at the Orange Festival.

So, since the opera is not on the Opera's regular sked, boss Georges Auric decided to play it in Paris a couple of times first—a Paris break-in for an out-of-town date.

Minn. Bids For '70 World's Fair

St. Paul, July 30.

An interim commission comprising 1963 state legislature members was organized here last week in an effort to obtain anywhere from $10,000,000 to $25,000,000 Federal funds to finance a 1970 world's fair in Minnesota. The state fair grounds, midway between the Twin Cities, looms as probable site.

The goal will be priority in what is expected to be stiff competish from elsewhere in the nation for such funds. A longrange program in this respect had been authorized by the 1963 legislature with formation of a 10-man Minnesota World's Fair Commission. A $10,000 grant was voted for a study of the matter.

The new interim committee immediately put its bid for the fair "on record" with the U. S. Commerce Department. Another step under way is to bring here a Seattle World's Fair representative to explain that operation.

Cassius For the Record: 'I Am the Greatest'

Cassius Clay, contender for the heavyweight boxing title, will crack into show biz via Columbia Records. He's been signed to do a comedy album which he'll also write and direct.

The disk package, which is being prepared for release in late August, will be titled "I Am The Greatest." It will consist of sketches (with other performers) and monologs.

Clay's heavyweight bout with champion Sonny Liston is scheduled for Sept. 30 but it's understood that it may be postponed until January or February so Liston can put his earnings into another tax year.

New Year's Eve Posh Charity Ball in N.Y.'s Grand Central Station

A show biz first will take place New Year's Eve when the upper level of Grand Central Station, in New York, is converted into a kingsize ballroom for charity-Eve hoopla for benefit of Mental Health. The impressive social-industrial auspices will have achieved routing all train departures and arrivals to the lower level, and regulating traffic in the same manner, so as to keep the giant railroad terminal upstairs private for the party.

Guy Lombardo and his orchestra will be the attraction, with Chanel underwriting the broadcasting tab (CBS network), although Chock-full O' Nuts, his longtime New York sponsor, may have the local Gotham tie-in as heretofore.

Last year Lombardo achieved a first for the new Americana Hotel by originating his marathon annual New Year's Eve broadcast from the new Loew's-Tisch hostelry's Imperial Ballroom.

Too Much of 'Negro Problem' Put At Films' Doorstep? Wonders Bette Davis

Hollywood, July 30.

In betwixt pledges from most every industry quarter to actively champion the civil rights cause in Hollywood, Bette Davis last week asked, "What do we owe anybody? Just what is our responsibility to the rest of the world?"

Referring to the manifold pressures being applied to Hollywood by various civil rights groups, Miss Davis opined that "if our primary concern becomes the protection of every race, every creed instead of producing entertainment — there won't be time left to even make pictures."

Actress declared that "there is no prejudice among people in the arts—though I can't speak for the unions." She acknowledged that the Negro has had legitimate complaint about being presented as a stereotype, but added that "the industry is now making a definite effort to improve upon this image."

She also noted that Hollywood did, at one time, similarly type the Italian "with a vegetable cart" and

A U. S. Cure for Cockney Speech

Minneapolis, July 30.

"Sparrows Can't Sing" (Janus) is a British film having much of its talk in cockney English. This has led the local Suburban World to announce that next month, when the feature has its Twin Cities' firstrun here, the theatre will hand out glossaries of cockney phrases for patrons' enlightenment.

When initially released in this country "Sparrows" encountered viewers' complaints that much of what was being said by the characters couldn't be understood. That was principally blamed for many unsatisfactory boxoffice performances. It also led the American distributor to put in English subtitles.

On present tactics the release has been doing improved biz, leading to its local booking by circuit owner Ted Mann.

Art Imitates Politics; 300 Actors Make Like Mob Day After Bang-Ban Talk

Washington, July 30.

By a quirk of timing, Hollywood got in on the test ban act.

One day after President Kennedy spoke to the nation on the Anglo-American nuclear test ban treaty with Russia, director John Frankenheimer assembled 300 extras to picket and brawl in front of the White House for a scene in the upcoming Paramount film "Seven Days In May."

It was almost too true to be funny and as far as Washington police were concerned they would have rather seen genuine demonstrators than handle the confusion inherent in one camera and hundreds of tourists.

Frankenheimer and producer Edward Lewis rounded up 300 local amateur theatre group actors and 20 retired wrestlers as extras for the scene. Some genuine ban-the-bombers were shunted further down the street.

The picketing scene was taken from the Fletcher Kneble-Charles Bailey book about an attempted military takeover of the U.S. Government. In the novel, the President had entered into a disarmament treaty with the Soviet Union.

Film company staffers and Washington police spent a good part of their time making sure some from the hundreds of tourists didn't try to sneak on the scene.

Police also advised the director to finish the shooting quickly for a large civil rights group had reserved White House sidewalk space for a demonstration later in the day.

Good Pictures Offset Big League Baseball

Minneapolis, July 30.

Exhibitors in this territory have been shedding copious tears over the alleged disproportionately large slice of the entertainment dollar taken by big league baseball since its arival in the Twin Cities in 1961. But last week there was evidence that the American League's Minnesota Twins' competish isn't that harmful. At any rate, not if a theatre has "good" product, it's pointed out now in local film circles.

The Yankess where here for two night and one day games. On the first night, with more than 40,000 at $3 top in the stands, the game had to be called off after the first inning because of rain. But this was too late to help the theatres. The second night's crowd numbered 42,034, a record high for any one game here. And on Wednesday afternoon there were 39,029 in the stands, considered

Israel Fest Flop; Culture & Fees Quarrel Raging

By JOSEPH LAPID

Tel Aviv, July 30.

Third Israel Music and Drama Festival, which opened in Jerusalem on July 16, will probably end up with loss of Israeli pounds 250,000 ($80,000), thus sharing fate of most Festivals conducted this summer in Europe. Festival is sponsored by Government Tourist Corp., but tourists seem to be more interested in Holy Places and in kibbutzin, while the local audience was not sufficiently attracted.

This, however, does not reflect on quality of program, which includes the Stern-Istomin-Rose trio, pianists Rosalin Tureck and Geza Anda, Sir William Walton conducting own "Belshazzar's Feast" with Hales said they were approached by the four carrying clubs, chains and pipes. He was struck while attempting to move his group away from the youths and "beg off trouble," he said.

One of the Latin youths also was hit about the head and chest. The assailants fled.

Ustinov's Moscow Quips

Moscow, July 30.

Two cracks by Peter Ustinov during the Moscow film festival: He was being introduced after a Cuban had been presented as a representative of "that heroic little island, Cuba." Before the emcee had a chance to make with the intros, Ustinov commented, "and I'm a representative of that heroic little island, Great Britain."

On another occasion, he commented privately: "After playing Nero in 'Quo Vadis' I feel absolutely at home in the Moscow Metro."

Kramer On Use of Film 'As Weapon'; Russians Train Fledgling Nations

Moscow, July 30.

During the war, when he was engaged in making films for the armed forces, Stanley Kramer was once told: the film is a weapon. During his two weeks at the Moscow film festival, where he served on the jury, he had learned how true was that opinion.

Speaking at an American press conference presided over by U.S. delegation leader George Stevens Jr. on the final day of the fest here (21) Kramer said the Soviets used the motion picture as a powerful propaganda weapon, citing the way in which technicians of the emergent countries had been trained in the Russian film school, and then invited back to Moscow to show the fruits of their training in the competition.

Kramer, who said he had seen nothing of Moscow during his stay, but had viewed 34 competitive pictures in 12 days, said the Russians were most involved in problems, and had never got over the fact that the war took place in their country. They were preoccupied with showing how they had to resist.

Speaking while the jury was still

From Germany will be a pair of entries, one about Hitler's former headquarters in Bavaria, called "It Must Be a Bit About Hitler," and a documentary about Max Ernst.

The U.S. is entering "The Flower Thief." Other new entries include the Indian documentary, "The Householder," and "The Trap," from Japan.

Members of the jury include Gordon Hitchens from the U.S., Lindsay Anderson from England, Edgar Morin of France, Guenter Anders of Austria and Tadeusx Makarczyhski of Poland.

CANADIANS SNIPE SEVEN ARTS

Velaise, Swiss Financier, Finds Film Biz 'Amusing' But Not Actor Peter Sellers' Changing Attitudes

Swiss financier Robert Velaise, who produces films in Britain and France, most recently the Peter Sellers starrer, "The Wrong Arm of the Law," has an array of projects for production in the near future. These range from a British version, on a smaller scale, of a comedy styled along the lines of the upcoming "It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World" to a remake of "Jane Eyre."

One Velaise project will involve Yank exhibitor-distributor Walter Reade. This is a property called "Memoirs of a Cross-eyed Man," a comedy which originally was to have been produced by Sellers and Wolf Mankowitz, starring Sellers with Reade distributing in the U.S. When the Sellers-Mankowitz plan collapsed last year, Velaise took over the property which is actually a novel by James Wellard and inked Sellers to a contract to star in it.

There are presently six writers working on the project, as per Velaise's idea that there should be several writers used on a film "otherwise it's like buying a lottery ticket and you have only one choice." He figures the film will go into production next summer and is working with Reade according to the distrib's original deal, giving him U.S. distribution.

Loss of Interest

But there is also a hitch in his plans. It seems that, since signing the contract with Velaise, Sellers has lost interest in the film and doesn't want to do it now. The producer plans to hold the actor to his agreement whether he has lost interest or not, he said during a visit to New York recently on his way to Montreal and a tv film deal. "I would hate to sue him," the producer said, "but I would hate him not to do the picture even more." He mentioned that he had a similar difficulty with Sellers with "Wrong Arm" in that the

'Cleo' Advance $160,000 In London; 20th Buying Charity Ducats for Guests

London, July 30.

By the time "Cleopatra" opens for its London preem tomorrow night (Wed.) at the Dominion, it is predicted that its advance will top $160,000, giving it an easy lead over any other picture of record in Britain. That total excludes the charity gala presentation, which will yield over $73,000 to the Newspaper Press Fund.

Ironically, the Press Fund paid less than $4,000 for the entire house, but the distribution company has paid back to the charity considerably more than that sum to purchase tickets for its own executives and guests. With a top of $150 for the opening show, 20th was out of pocket after it had bought its first 30 seats. To accommodate stars and other personalities they have had to shell out considerably more than that total.

According to a 20th-Fox exec, every weekend performance of "Cleo" has been sold in advance until next March, and party bookings account for a total of 10,000 admissions. One advertisement in The Director, the official organ of the Institute of Directors, yielded 73 major party bookings.

Ever since 20th started its mail order advertising campaign, seven weeks ago, advance bookings have been coming in at the rate of about $15,000 a week, and additionally, the ticket brokers have taken up more than $50,000 worth of seats.

The Dominion, which has a capacity of 1,704 seats, will run "Cleo" for 13 performances weekly, with two shows on weekdays and a single performance on Sundays. With the price range of $1.50 to $4.30, potential capacity per performance is $4,502.

Italo 'Women' Gets 'C'

Embassy Pictures' Italo documentary, "Women of The World," has been given a C (condemned) rating by the Legion of Decency.

Legion says the film, "which makes a pretense at being a documentary," is unacceptable because "camera angles and editing pruriently concentrate wherever possible upon nudity." Additionally, "erotic dancing is sensationally exploited for the purpose of audience titillation and its accompanying narration is frequently suggestive and even occasionally socially irresponsible."

Film Cooperation Now Prerogative Of the Pentagon

Washington, July 30.

Film company officials will hold a final discussion with Defense Dept. information chief Arthur Sylvester Aug. 12 before a new directive on military cooperation on motion pictures goes into effect. The essential change in the new Pentagon order is that decisions on use of troops and military facilities for films will be made by the Pentagon and not by field commanders.

Sylvester, Asst. Secretary of Defense for Public Affairs, said his office, which will be responsible for troop use decisions, is readying the final details of the directive.

Pentagon officials tried to play down reports of objections to the directive from the film and television industries and the individual services, asserting they were only of a technical nature. Likewise, spokesmen for the Motion Picture Assn. of America declined to give details of what MPAA will be asking for in its Aug. 12 meet with Sylvester.

The new directive, Pentagon spokesmen said, will enforce requirements already on the books that requests for military cooperation be channeled through the Defense Dept. instead of the individual services.

Sylvester told reporters last week that in the past film producers made arrangements for military cooperation and presented them to the Defense Dept. as an accomplished fact.

As reported earlier the new directive will require advance detailed information from producers before any military help is approved.

Sexsational Ads Often Kill Possible Patronage

Columbus, July 30.

Sexsational advertising, while it may hypo business, also can discourage patronage of certain features, said Samuel T. Wilson, theatre editor of the Columbus Dispatch. Wilson said "a lot of people of unquestionable intelligence and taste are kept at home by the false impression of product sometimes given by ads."

Wilson's remarks were prompted by a letter from Mrs. Nancy B. Underwood, New Lexington, Ohio, who said she is "becoming increasingly disturbed by the stress on sex of the most suggestive type displayed in movie blurbs." She says "I heartily agree that sex is here to stay and neither the automobile or the airplane will ever replace it. But I don't think that everything hangs on it and I'd just as soon my impressionable children didn't grow up convinced that it does, because they are going to be disappointed."

BUT PROXY WAR NOT ANTICIPATED

Toronto, July 30.

Financial observers think it unlikely that a group of Canadian and U. S. businessmen, currently soliciting Seven Arts proxies, will present any serious problems to management at the company's annual meeting in Toronto tomorrow (Wed.). The group, which is seeking to put three men on 7A's board of directors, sent out letters to stockholders last week expressing dissatisfaction with a number of 7A fiscal policies, though it has no intention of trying to unseat management headed by chairman Louis Chesler and president Eliot Hyman.

According to Toronto lawyer J. M. Wainberg, a sponsor for the group, they are seeking a "fuller disclosure" of all the negotiations which led to 7A's acquisition (for $5,000,000) of its 20.8% interest in the Grand Bahama Development Co. Also they are dissatisfied with the policy whereby 284,614—5½% debenture are convertible into 7A capital stock a $7.50 per share until January, 1965. They feel this is keeping the price of the stock down unnecessarily and would prefer to see the company buy in the debentures.

According to Wainberg, group itself reps 40,000 (of 7A's approximately 1,500,000 outstanding shares), but will have proxies for "much more than that" by meeting time.

In addition to Wainberg, group includes Joseph A. Pesenti, of the Colonial Asphalt Co., White Plains, N. Y., and James Adonizio, a road building contractor of Pittston, Pa. Efforts of the group to get these three men on the board, which now number 13, would mean that one of the present board members would have to resign, since by-laws limit the 7A board to 15.

Seven Arts stock is traded on the Toronto exchange, and group would like to see management get the shares listed on the American Exchange here.

Lester Zucker's Post

Lester Zucker has been named east-central district manager for Embassy Pictures. Headquartering in Cleveland, he'll supervise the Cleveland, Cincinnati and Indianapolis territories for the distrib.

Zucker most recently was Chicago branch manager for Universal before joining Embassy. Previously, among other assignments, he was Cleveland branch manager for Columbia Pictures.

Tough for Columbia Pics in Spain Until Officials See 'A Pale Horse'; Peck Underestimated Touchiness

Madrid, July 30.

Hot weather exodus of ministers and government officials to the Spanish summer capital in San Sebastian will probably delay for several more months any change in the silent outlawing of Columbia film product in this country.

In what appears to be a reprisal for production across the border in France of producer-director Fred Zinnemann's "Behold a Pale Horse," Columbia has been stymied since January of this year in its effort to get distrib clearance for product regularly covered by eight bona fide import licenses.

Despite Zinnemann's denial (see VARIETY, July 10) that "Pale Horse" is anti-Spanish and despite submission of the final shooting script to at least the Spanish Minister of Foreign Affairs, and reportedly to the Minister of Information as well, the official attitude here is to quietly keep Columbia from doing business in Spain until a final print is screened for the powers-that-be.

In the meantime, Columbia manager Emilio Lopez is caught in the middle. He cannot get his material prepared for release and, consequently, can make no deals for exhib time in the 1963-64 season, nor has he any assurance of getting his big programer next season, "Lawrence of Arabia," into exploitation.

Ironically, Columbia disbursed $6,000,000 in pesetas and pounds sterling during the nine-odd months that the Spiegel-Lean modern desert epic was being prepared and filmed in southern Spanish provinces.

According to reliable sources, the situation has become even more critical as more and more Spanish distributors feel compelled to scrap tentative commitments to release Columbia product either via Spain Cuts 'Cleo' 3 Mins.

Madrid, July 30.

"Cleopatra" got past Spanish censors with only three cuts, totaling three minutes of screen time, but received the "For Adults Only" rating, limiting admission to Spaniards 18 years old and over.

Here the film will have a running time of four hours and nine minutes when it is premiered on Oct. 15, at the new Jose Garcia Ramos circuit flagship, the Palafox.

Janus Majority Investor in Film; Rolling on Island

Janus Films, the Cy Harvey-Bryant Halliday company which began as an exhibition operation (at Cambridge, Mass. Brattle Theatre), and later branched out to become one of the most successful of the small indie distribs, now is entering the New York feature production scene via "The Troublemaker," which started shooting in Hempstead L.I., Monday (29).

This is not Janus' first production venture—the company had a minority interest in the British-made "Sparrows Can't Sing." With "Troublemaker," however, Janus is the majority investor in the $250,000 picture. The film is an original comedy by Theodore Flicker and Buck Henry, who gained local fame as king pins of the off-Broadway "The Premise." Flicker is directing and along with Henry, and three other Premise members, will also appear in the film.

Coproducing the film with Janus are Flicker's Ozymandias company and Seneca Productions, another local indie firm whose Bob Gaffney will act as director of production. Shooting is being done at Seneca's studios.

Screenplay, described officially as "a madcap, satiric view of life," concerns a country boy who comes to New York with the big ambition of opening a coffee house, and how innocence is disenchanted by the wayward ways of the big city.

Hochstetter Believes Spain's Climate for U.S. License Pact Favorable

Madrid, July 30.

Léo Hochstetter, Mediterranean director for the Motion Picture Export Assn., spent several days in Madrid last week on a scent-taking visit to prepare the groundwork for negotiations in late September.

During his brief stay, the MPEA rep talked to the Commerce Ministry film chief Jesus Orfila, to the entertainment sindicato head, Fierre de Calzadilla, and to the American ambassador. In informal talks, Hochstetter found a friendly climate—warranting a return visit to negotiate with film toppers in the Ministry of Information, Ministry of Commerce and the Sindicato, several proposals of mutual benefit both to Yank interests here and to the Spanish film industry. Among these, are the allocation of incentive licenses to U. S. distribs releasing Spanish product in part or in all of the world markets; a bonus license to each Hollywood major coming to Spain for partial or total film production and, finally, an amelioration in the present conversion formula that still blocks 70% of the Yank distrib net.

Hochstetter expressed satisfaction with the increase of the American import quota from 88 to 105, despite the almost intangible benefit the boost brought to Yank operating and franchise companies in this market. According to Hochstetter, the Baremo point system is still the villian, limiting allocation of licenses for Yank product to MPEA member companies in Spain, but he foresaw no changes in the system during the next season or beyond. What he found encouraging was the over-all quota increase of 17 extra licenses over what was formally considered to be a sacred maximum of 88.

Seven Months in Production-A Secret

Unusual Russian - Italian - U. S. Film for Embassy Release—Traces Italo Invasion & Retreat From USSR

It now turns out that the U.S.-Italian-Russian $3,000,000-$4,000,000 coproduction, for which Embassy Pictures is holding up the Yank end, has been lensing in Russia for the past seven months, very quietly it might be added. The film is still untitled, but, if things continue as they have been going, it is expected to be completed by November.

Some of the details of the production are now had. It is to be lensed mostly in Russia, with some footage in Italy. The cast includes actors from the three countries involved, with Arthur Kennedy and Peter Falk being the Yank participants. Story concerns Italian troops invasion of Russia during World War II and their subsequent retreat.

The Russians are picking up the tab on all the below the line costs and the Americans and Italians are splitting the rest 50-50. Embassy has the distribution rights for the U.S., Canada, South America, Japan and the U.K. The Italo producers have distribution rights elsewhere in the world beside the Iron Curtain countries where Russian distribs will handle the pic.

It is being lensed in CinemaScope in black & white. Leonard Lightstone, Embassy exec v.p. recently saw some battle scene footage while on a European trip and reports impressive work done, with masses of troops (probably recruited from the Russian army) and lotsa equipment on display.

Some other more elusive Embassy projects which haven't been heard too much of recently are "Tropic of Cancer" and "Imperial Woman." In the case of the latter, it's reported that Sophia Loren has been signed although this hasn't been specifically confirmed or denied. Script for "Tropic" is finished and it is planned to film it in France in coproduction with an Italian and French filmaker. "Imperial" will be an all-Embassy production. No starting date has yet been set for either, however.

Moscow Fest, Sans Airconditioning, Pro Ordeal But Worth While To Americans

By HAROLD MYERS

Moscow, July 30.

With the mercury climbing into the 90s and with humidity on the New York level—but without the luxury of air conditioning in the Moscow Hotel hq—the recent Moscow Film Festival became a gruelling experience for all actively engaged in the proceedings.

With all its faults—and there were many—it was also the most exciting and representative festival of the year, the only absentees being the Chinese, whose film, earlier scheduled for inclusion were later withdrawn. Otherwise, there were impressive delegations from most countries. The Eastern European bloc naturally turned out in great strength, but the Russians and the satellite countries did not have it all their own way.

As previously reported here, the United States contingent made an impressive showing, with a lineup of top executives and talent There was also a powerful delegation from France, including Michel Fourre-Cormeray, artists Yves Montand and Simone Signoret, and Robert Cravenne, the Unifrance topper. And from Italy, Federico Fellini, Luchino Visconti, Georgia Moll and Guiletta Massino. Substantial delegations also came from West Germany, the Argentine, Great Britain, India, Israel, Sweden and Japan, and there were smaller, but representative, teams from as far afield as Australia, New Zealand and Canada. And as all delegations and all press were housed in the vast Moscow Hotel on the Red Square, the lobby and dining room was the focal centre for all festival activity.

The best acting award to Steve McQueen, though largely predictable, gave considerable satisfaction to the Yank delegation, but one of the most popular awards was that made by the Soviet Union of Film Workers to Stanley Kramer, which cited his "outstanding creative art for such films as 'Judgment at Nuremburg,' and 'The Defiant Ones.'"

This award came as a total surprise to a member of the jury, and he was not aware it was being made until nudged by his interpreter.

Other prizes for Americans went to Abby Mann, from the editorial board of a Russian magazine, and a second prize to Steve McQueen from Soviet Sports Societies.

Most Pix Punk

There was little dispute about the quality of the films, and unanimous agreement that the overwhelming majority were of such inferior quality as not to merit a place in any international event. The main excitement, therefore, was centred around the non-competition screenings, which were mainly given in the Sports Palace, seating about 8,000 people, the Rossiya Theatre, built for the 1961 fest, which houses over 2,000 and the nabe Cosmos Theatre. These events, which gave the Western world an opportunity of showing its product to the Russians, were mainly patronised by Muscovites, who had to pay normal admission prices.

It was this situation that prompted one exec to comment that these screenings were helping to subsidise the festival. Nevertheless, it was conceded that the opportunity was too good to miss, and the propaganda value of showing the Russians how the other half of the world lived was worth far more than any possible loss of film rentals.

Yank contingent made the biggest drive in the out-of-competition presentations. In addition to the previously reported screenings of "West Side Story," "Some Like It Hot," "Ben Hur" and "Judgment at Nuremburg," Walter Reade Jr. and Paul Heller came in at the tail end and set three showings of "David and Lisa," and

'The Hands' in USSR

Hollywood, July 30.

"The Hands," which American producer John Roberts filmed in Greece with a native cast and was co-billed with Fellini's "8½" at the Moscow Film Festival, is slated for showing in the republic of Georgia, in south of Russia, according to a communique received by Roberts from his associate on pic, writer-director John G. Contes.

Contes, in Moscow, notified producer that following a review of film in Sputnik the official Festival organ, the Festival committee had requested special showings of film for four days in Georgia.

Alden, RKO Theatre Boss, Spreads; Acquiring 98% Of Lerner Stores Corp.

Glen Alden Corp., holding company among whose subsidiaries is RKO Theatres, has made a deal to buy 1,263,617 shares of Lerner Stores Corp. common stock, representing 98% of the company's common, from its present holder, the McCrory Corp. Contract for the purchase, which was signed last week following approval of both boards of directors, is to be submitted for stockholder approval at meetings presently planned for early fall.

In all, the deal will result in McCrory's getting over $56,000,000, of which approximately $35,000,000 will be payable by Glen Alden in cash upon delivery of the Lerner shares after stockholders' approval and over $6,000,000 cash via dividend from Lerner. The balance of $15,000,000, payable on or before 12 years from the closing date, will be convertible at McCrory's option after two years into Glen Alden common shares at the rate of $17.50 per share.

Additionally, McCrory will have the concurrent right to purchase, for up to $2,500,000 in cash, additional shares at the same $17.50 price, for a total of 1,000,000 share ownership in Glen Alden. After the sale is consumated, GA contemplates a cash offer for the remaining common stock of Lerner at substantially the same price: $39.58 per Lerner share after the dividend of $4.85 per share payable Sept. 15, 1963, to holders of record

'8½' Not Communistic Bloc Notion Of 'Peace, Friendship, Humanism'

Moscow, July 30.

The main drama of the Moscow film festival was enacted behind closed doors in the jury room at the Moscow Hotel during the final weekend of the event. The panel of judges met on the morning of Saturday (20) and was expected to complete its deliberation the same afternoon. Expectation, however, was not realized, and the jury broke up late in the day without having reached a single decision.

The conflict within the jury room, it is believed, centred around the choice of film for the Grand Prix. It appears there was unanimous agreement that Federico Fellini's "8½" stood out head and shoulders above the rest, but there was concern among the entire Eastern bloc of judges, who argued that while it may be technically excellent, it did not conform with the objectives of the festival, which was to promote "peace, friendship and humanism in art."

The entire bloc of pro-Soviet members of the jury advocated that, in the circumstances, there should be no Grand Prix award, but this was powerfully resisted by jury members from Italy, France, the United States and India. At one point, on the Sunday morning, it is said that the Italian

NO SHIFT FROM SCHINE

United Artists homeoffice execs refute Albany story that the company is selling away from the Schine Circuit in the Albany-Watertown, N. Y., area.

Company spokesman notes that "Irma La Douce," currently booked into indie operator Sylvan Leff's Town Theatre in Watertown, will also be shown in a Schine Theatre in the area this summer. It has also been stated that UA has never intended to book away from Schine and is continuing with its normal policy, which includes the circuit, in that area.

Rest Rooms Inadequate, Sez City; Exhib: Comfort Only a Short Jaunt Away

Kansas City, July 30.

Two new theatres which Durwood circuit opened side by side in the Ward Parkway Shopping Center July 11 are operating under umbrella of a temporary restraining order against the City of Kansas City. Rhubarb developed when city charged restroom situation of Parkway I (400 seats) and Parkway II (300 seats) theatres does not meet requirements of building code and sought to close the theatres when they had no more than opened.

Durwood officials say there is no problem, as theatre patrons make use of shopping centre restrooms just a few steps from theatre entrances. City officials are holding out for restrooms within the theatres. The temporary restraining order was issued by Judge Paul A Buzard in Jackson County (Mo.) Circuit Court. It was scheduled for a hearing last week, but now has been delayed until August.

HENRY HULL REPLACES HOLBROOK FOR LANDAU

Knoxville, Tenn., July 30.

Henry Hull has been added to the cast of "The Fool Killer," being filmed here by Ely Landau. Hull will play a character role formerly intended for Hal Holbrook.

Landau officials say that director Cervando Gonzales wished a "new approach" to the role and assigned Hull as the answer. The film stars Anthony Perkins and is being shot in the Knoxville area.

Venice Preliminary Film Festivals, Documentary & Juve, Undersold; Might Move Them to Easter Period

By ROBERT F. HAWKINS

Venice, July 30.

Growing impact of United States Information Agency films, under a program recently hypoed by George Stevens Jr., was evidenced here, by two prizes won here by a young American director, James Blue, at the recently-concluded Venice Documentary Festival. These USI-sponsored entries, both made for the Alliance for Progress Program were "A Letter from Colombia," which copped a first prize Lion of St. Mark plaque, and "The School at Rincon Santo," which won the local "human relations" kudos.

Blue earlier was discovered at a Cannes Film Festival where his first feature film, "The Olive Trees of Justice," made in Algeria, was favorably received. It was at Cannes also that Stevens saw the film and subsequently hired Blue for a series of films to be made in South America for the USIS program.

Venice prizewinners are the first promising items in this series. Both films emphasize how collaboration and mutual confidence can help raise morale and living conditions.

In this sense, he suggested that curtain winners be given some spotlight showings in the US, and that US entries be made available to curtain areas for similar projections.

Baruch also regretted that Venice's very limited budget (reportedly $16,000 for a 10-day event) did not permit more publicity for these events (as against much-advertised feature film event later), and went along with suggestions that both kiddie and documentary festivals be held earlier in the year (perhaps at Eastertime or in May) to allow Venice organizers more time to dedicate to them. Saddled with selection chores in various European countries, Fest topper Luigi Chiarini was only able to attend opening and closings of recent "minor" fests here.

Defense Dept. official was accompanied on his Venice "tour" this year by a US Navy representative, Lynn Moore, Navy Dept. annually sends rep to either Venice or Edinburgh. Also in attendance was New York indie distrib Thomas Brandon, who stopped off from Moscow festival and purchased "several" films shown at Venice for US distribution. Brandon also attended local screening of "The Hole," which he releases, and which won another prize for John Hubley, who has several previous Venice wins to his credit. Also attending from the Yank orbit were several Yank filmmakers and distribs, including Tibor Hirsh, Edward Feil, John Craddock, and Peter Damon and Victor Rueda who repped the Bronston Organization.

Some 16 nations entered the moppet race, 25 the documentary event. USA had 35 pix in doc event, nine in childrens' festival. Yank entries were partly submitted by government, partly by CINE, partly directly. Baruch felt that selection system within the US could still be bettered, and that not all films that should have gone to Venice got there. It was very difficult under the current setup to know about all potentially worthy entries in the US, much less get them to the festivals.

Eric Johnston's Condition

Washington, July 30.

Eric Johnston was reported to be in "a little better" condition Monday (29) after suffering a relapse over the weekend.

The condition of Motion Picture Assn. of America president is still listed as critical at George Washington University Hospital here.

Fund Drive Does Well

Hollywood, July 30.

Current Motion Pictures Relief Fund drive, first in seven years, has been the most successful in organization's history, according to a report from Fund chief George L. Bagnall, who reports there are now approximately 20,000 industry members participating in the Fund through payroll deductions. Campaign has copped 3,727 new pledges.

This will enable continuation of the Fund's program at its present expensive level, but matter of expansion of facilities still must be faced. Currently, every bed in the Motion Picture Country Hospital is filled, as well as beds in the endowed section of Cedars of Lebanon. Further coin may be raised via television spectaculars, now being discussed.

Theatrical & Vidpic Player Contracts Now Number 330

Hollywood, July 30.

There are approximately 330 actors under contract for motion pictures and/or television series at Hollywood's major studios today, with Universal-Revue leading the list, with about 95 pactees. Second is Columbia Pictures-Screen Gems, with 82, and MGM is third with 73.

Next is 20th-Fox, which has 26 pactees, all for motion pictures; followed by Paramount and Warner Bros., with 21 each. The Par figure is for theatrical pictures only.

Pace-setter Revue-Universal's list includes vidpix thesps under contract to Revue for its 10 series, as well as actors working in motion pictures for Universal. Also a number of thesps who toil in both tv and pix at the valley lot.

MGM's 73 actors work in tv and pix. The contract list approximates the number the Culver City studio had under pact during its heyday, a studio source once said.

Large number of contract players at Revue-U, SG-Col and MGM does not necessarily presage a return to the day when contract lists were built up by studios, and that's because of the changing nature of the industry. In the old pre-tv days, thesps were placed under contract for pix, and those not already established stars were groomed for stardom.

While star-grooming is still one of the motives involved in the huge contract lists of today, their numbers obviously depend to a large extend on the amount of vidfilm

'MAKE 'EM CHEAP' URGES KANE LYNN

By VINCENT CANBY

There is still a market for supporting features (that is, less euphemistically speaking, B pix) in this country, but anybody who makes them in the U. S. must be out of his mind if he expects a profit.

The point is that while there is a market here for Bs, it's a small market, of perhaps no more than 2,500 dates, meaning that the negative cost must be less than $75,000 per pic if there to be a reasonable expectancy of a net gain on investment.

These are the figures and estimates of producer Kane Lynn who, for the last five years, has been busily turning out frank B's in the Philippines for the U. S. and world market. After having made three pix, which were distributed in the U. S. by others, Lynn and his Philippine partner, Eddie Romero, have now formed their own distribution-production company, Hemisphere Films, in collaboration with Irving Pizor. Latter, as prez of the company, headquarters in New York, while exec veep Lynn divides his time between N. Y. and Manila, and veep Romero headquarters in the Philippines.

First film to go out via the Hemisphere banner is the low-budget actioner, "Raiders of Leyte Gulf," produced by Lynn and directed and written by Romero. Already in release is Lynn-Romero's "Lost Battalion," which American International is handling. Two of their earlier actioners, "The Scavengers" and "Terror Is A Man," went out via Fred Schwartz's now defunct Valiant Films.

While the Philippines has received only occasional articles in VARIETY Anni and International Film Editions as a production center, Lynn pointed out in New York last week that the islands have been buzzing in the last couple of years. In addition to the various features Lynn-Romero have made, there have been George Montgomery's "The Steel Claw" and "Merrill's Marauders," both released by Warners; the Jeffrey Hunter starrer, "No Man Is An Island," released by Universal, and the Van Heflin-Rita Moreno starrer, "To Be A Man," which Allied Artists will release.

Not Cost Alone

While Lynn denies that cost is the only consideration for his Philippine production activity (the islands "offer new locales, new faces, a nearness to other exotic locales in Asia, etc."), it must certainly be an extremely strong consideration. He reported that AIP's "Lost Battalion," for example, had been made for a budget of $45,000 and will turn a neat profit, "though it wouldn't if we made it for $100,000." He estimates picure will play between 1,000 and 1,500 U. S. dates. "A really good B can play up to 2,500."

On the basis of first dates of "Raiders of Leyte Gulf," he expects it to do even better. Film is

United Artists Studying Various Key Markets as to Adaptability For 'Premiere Showcase' Plans

Plans for United Artists' "premiere showcase" multiple-break releasing plan are continuing to shape up on a national basis. Another city in which the distrib has put the idea into work is Buffalo and projection is for a continued application of the system in cities across the country.

Actually the company has been using a multiple-release method in some locations for several years, going as far back as 1954 in Salt Lake City. The "showcase" has attracted the most attention in the Gotham area which is possibly because this district is one of the most tradition-bound in the country, what with most homeoffices located in New York, Los Angeles, however, has been on a similar release pattern for UA pix since 1961.

James R. Velde, the company's domestic sales v.p., says that each area around the nation is being analyzed by the company as to the advisable application of the plan and also the reaction of local exhibs is being tested to see whether such a plan can be worked out in various locales, inasmuchas the "showcase" system cannot be implemented without the cooperation of several exhibs in a given area.

Last year, the plan was instituted in Atlanta and Indianapolis, among others, and the idea is to move it along "as the situation calls for it," the exec says. He feels that the multiple-release plan has been very successful in many areas around the country and notes the company's satisfaction with its operation. Thus its implimentation will be worked out in other locations as time goes by.

The same goes for the company's latest variation on the "premiere showcase" theme, the "golden showcase" which it is using in Gotham for "Irma La Douce." This later operation differs in that a given pic is first played as a first-run, daydate attraction and later moved on to a restricted multiple engagement. In "premiere showcase," a film opens directly in a spread of houses. All of these things will take time, Velde points out, noting that each area needs careful appraisal before such a move is made.

Roach Gear Auction

Hollywood, July 30.

Collection of nearly a half-century's accumulation of major studio production paraphernalia and an equally long-lived assortment of props will go on the auction block Thursday (1) at Hal Roach Studios, recently sold and site being cleared for a giant shopping center.

Equipment includes 20 Movielas, three crash dollies, a crane and Mitchel' BNC cameras, plus handprops, costumes, furniture, etc.

Who Will Write Brodsky-Weiss 'Slowly' Papers?

Jack Brodsky and Nat Weiss, former 20th-Fox publicists who authored "The Cleopatra Papers" tome are now turning producers. Their Horatio Booth Productions firm has set a deal to coproduce a filmization of Mark Harris' novel, "Bang the Drum Slowly," with Robert Rossen's Centaur Productions.

Rossen will direct the project which has been tentatively slated to roll around mid-1964. The director is now filming "Lilith" as part of a two-picture deal with Columbia Pictures and has still to make "Cocoa Beach" as the second film in the deal. No distribution arrangements have yet been made for "Drum."

Brodsky and Weiss originally bought the rights to the Harris tome and this production will be their first film venture.

POE DEFENDS RAMPARTS

Misses London Opening of 'Cleo' while DFZ Away

Twentieth-Fox exec veep Seymour Poe, who had intended to attend tonight's (Wed.) London preem of "Cleopatra" at the Dominion Theatre, has delayed his departure for Europe until Aug. 9, so as not to be away from the New York homeoffice while prez Darryl F. Zanuck is also out-of-town. Zanuck will be on hand for the London preem and returns to N. Y. shortly thereafter.

Poe's "routine" business trip will take him to London, Paris and Rome, with a return to the homeoffice skedded before the Aug. 28 board meeting. Sometime thereafter he intends to get to his long-planned Far East trip, a follow up to his spring visit to Australia and New Zealand.

UA Ducks Costly Mirisch 'Hawaii'

Hollywood, July 30.

Harold Mirisch confirmed Monday (29) a story out of France last week that "Hawaii" will be filmed away from United Artists with which the Mirisch Co. has distribution ties.

Mirisch, just back from trip to Moscow for recent filmfest, followed by a stopover in London, said his association continues with Fred Zinnemann to direct-produce "Hawaii," but added that as yet no new distribution deal has been set. Zinnemann last week disclosed UA was stepping out of the "Hawaii" deal.

Commenting on the situation in New York yesterday (Tues.) UA prez Arthur B. Krim stated that the company had set a ceiling on the film of $10,000,000 if it is to handle it. Zinneman, he said, has planned it "substantially in excess of that" and so UA has "given him its blessing" to take the project elsewhere. However, the prez noted, if Zinneman can do it for $10,000,000, UA is "anxious and willing" to undertake the project.

Mirisch said he plans to hold discussions with companies which have expressed interest and added UA was being "most cooperative." Company has around $29,000,000 in two upcoming pix, "The Greatest Story Ever Told" and "Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World."

Bank of America's UA $8-Mil Diverted; Security Takes Over 'Greatest Story'

Financing of George Stevens' multi-million dollar Biblical epic "The Greatest Story Ever Told" has changed hands, switching from the coffers of the Bank of America to a syndicate headed by Security First National Bank of Los Angeles. This group, which comprises several banks, among them Wells Fargo of San Francisco, Continental Illinois National Bank and National Bank of Detroit, is now supplying the $12,000,000 cost of the negative.

Originally, Bank of America was set to put up the first budget of $8,000,000. However, when the cost climbed to $12,000,000, unnamed directors or bank execs balked, not wishing to tie up that amount of capital in a single feature, no matter what it was. United Artists, distrib of the prospective Biblical epic, was later able to obtain the fresh financing and presented the plan to Bank of America.

Latter agreed to continue its $8,000,000 loan to UA for use in financing other upcoming pix. The dough will now be transferred to the making of three or four other future UA releases. The basic problem had been Bank of America's reluctance to be the single bank backing such a venture as "Story" and the final solution proved satisfactory to all parties concerned.

The Stevens film, which completed lensing in Utah last week, has been slated for release by UA during the first half of 1964, although no specific date is so far projected. It is one of the company's two major pix to be released within the next several months, the other being Stanley Kramer's "It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World."

Wives And Lovers

Sophisticated romanticomedy that chickens out in clutch. Fair b.o. contender.

Hollywood, July 19.

Paramount release of Hal Wallis production. Stars Janet Leigh, Van Johnson, Shelley Winters, Martha Hyer; features Ray Walston, Jeremy Slate, Claire Wilcox. Directed by John Rich. Screenplay, Edward Anhalt, based on Jay Presson's play, "The First Wife"; camera, Lucien Ballard; editor, Warren Low; music, Lyn Murray; assistant directors, Danny McCauley, Bill Poole. An adult comedy about adult matters should respect its adult audience enough to face facts squarely and honestly, not hedge when the going gets touchy. Failure to be consistent with itself mars "Wives And Lovers" an otherwise highly polished and pleasurable sophisticated comedy about a couple whose happy marriage is nearly shattered in the wake of the husband's sudden professional success. Had it maintained the courage of its convictions, the Hal Wallis production for Paramount might have ranked as the comedy find of the year among more discerning filmgoers.

The film excels in one area. Edward Anhalt's scenario, from Jay Presson's stage play, "The First Wife," contains some of the sharpest, wittiest, most perceptive comedy dialog to pop out of a sound track in some time. Story relates the marital misadventure that materializes when an unsuccessful writer (Van Johnson), who for three years has been lovingly and uncomplainingly supported by his wife (Janet Leigh) while he pens a novel, suddenly hits the book-of-the-month jackpot. In a flash, the couple and their precocious tot have moved from a cramped Gotham cold-water flat-to the luxury living of the fashionable Connecticut suburbs.

In the process of converting his prose into a Broadway play, Johnson becomes entangled in an affair with his glamorous agent (Martha Hyer), in retaliation for which Miss Leigh apparently gets herself voluntarily seduced by the star (Jeremy Slate) of her husband's play. This leads to a separation.

But it is here that the script pulls its punches and lapses into apologetic artificiality. Did Johnson sleep with Miss Hyer! Nosiree. Did Miss Leigh succumb to Slate? Not on your life. Having thus exonerated its romantic principals, the film can thus conclude on a note of reconciliatory sentiment in which nothing has been lost but the responsive enthusiasm of its deceived audience.

Here is the issue. When a motion picture delves into matters as frank and adult as who-slept-with-whom-last-night-and-why, it owes it to its audience to be honest to the end. Unless prepared to resolve them intelligently, why introduce matters as bold and unsavory as these in the first place?

The acting in "Wives And Lovers" is pleasing and skillful. Miss Leigh delivers her smoothest performance in some time. Equally slick is Johnson who, in his return to the screen after a three-year absence, proves himself still a valuable leading man in the sophisticated comedy sphere. Miss Hyer, along with Shelley Winters and Ray Walston, performs professionally. Slate's solid portrayal should put his budding screen career in high gear. Lee Patrick is a stickout as an officious, independent maid.

Seven-year-old Claire Wilcox, who weighed in late last year as the moppet star of "Forty Pounds Of Trouble," draws some of the best lines and business in this, her second film, and comes through with flying colors. She's one of the best child actresses around.

Occasional mechanical inconsistencies tarnish John Rich's otherwise bright and breezy direction in his first major feature assignment. Assets to the production are Lucien Ballard's smooth lensmanship, Warren Low's brisk editing, Lyn Murray's lively background score and the expressive art direction of Hal Pereira and Walter Tyler. Tube.

If this is the best that can be done with "Gidget," then the time has come to discontinue the series. Even the young people for whom this third and skimpiest installment presumably is designed will find little in the Columbia release of even remote interest or stimulation.

The Jerry Bresler production introduces Cindy Carol as the new "Gidget," making three actresses who have tackled the title role in as many films. The assigned task of having made love to all three belongs to James Darren.

Ruth Brooks Flippen and Katherine and Dale Eunson are responsible for the limp screenplay that arose from Miss Flippen's yarn based on the original Frederick Kohner characters. While on vacation in Rome, "Gidget" and her steady beau, "Moondoggie," become romantically involved with others, then reunite when the "affairs" expire. Sandwiched in between these drab and predictable amorous doings is the inevitable guided tour of Rome, a site thoroughly exploited in previous films and generally with more flavor.

Miss Carol is a pretty "Gidget," but lacks the charm or spirit brought to the character by Sandra Dee, its originator. Darren has his role down to mechanical perfection. At this stage, its more of a science than an art. His singing is good. He warbles the exuberant, Italo-flavored title ditty and another refrain called "Big Italian Moon," both by George Davis Weiss and Al Kasha. Others of prominence in the cast, in addition to Danova, are Jessie Royce Landis, Danielle de Metz, Joby Baker, Trudi Ames, Noreen Corcoran, Peter Brooks, Lisa Gastoni, Claudio Gora, Don Porter and Jeff Donnell. A degree of efficiency is about all that can be achieved by these players. It is Paul Wendkos third "Gidget" directorial task. If he is lucky, it may be his last.

Among those who contributed their skills to this losing cause, filmed in Rome and California, were cameramen Enzo Barboni and Robert J. Bronner, art directors Antonio Sarzi-Braga and Robert Peterson, editor William A. Lyon and composer Johnny Williams. Tube.

Ballad of a Hussar
(RUSSIAN-MUSIC-COLOR)

Artkino release of Mosfilm Studios production. Stars Larissa Golubkina. Directed by Edgar Ryazanov. Screenplay, Ryazanov and Alexander Gladkov; camera, Leonid Krainekov. At Cameo, N.Y., starting July 13, '63. Running time, 94 MINS.

(In Russian; English Subtitles)

"The Ballad of a Hussar," also known originally as "The Hussar Ballad," is apparently the best operetta-type feature to come out of Russia. Also it is the strongest musical meller to be done by the Russians in many years. Booked into this West Side home of Russian films for a week or 10 days, it looks to run for several weeks. It's a sure bet for language houses and could thrive in some arty spots.

It's the deft direction of Edgar Ryazanov and sterling acting of Miss Larissa Golubkina that's responsible for 75% of the way this one jells. Perhaps an added plus factor is the well-picked cast which turns in many excellent character portrayals.

Basic plot is that Shura (Miss Golubkina), who's pledged to wed a pompous, professional Army lieutenant, sets out to deflate him. In doing so, she becomes the heroine and medal winner in actual battle skirmishes. It all takes place during the Napoleonic invasion of Russia. While the operetta motif is obvious from the outset, the director has never let the outlandish overtones interfere with his actionful story development. Result is at times reminiscent of some Hollywood western musicals, and it's all to the good.

Miss Shura emulates a Hussar (her identity as a femme is retained until the final reel) and get attached to headquarters with the Russian forces trying to stem Napoleon's advance. Her heroism finally wins her recognition and medals. Through all this fighting and bloodshed, per opera bouffe technique, there is little actual battle shooting or suffering. There is one priceless sequence when the marching Russian forces start out with their typical marching song on a spring day but before the tune is completed they are in snowbound territory around Moscow.

Miss Golubkina is quite effective with several ballads but scores best with her bright acting and cute looks. She is seen riding in several sequences like the Lone Ranger himself. Tatyana Shmyga, as the singer from Paris, also chips in with a coloratura tune that goes across nicely. Yuri Yakoviev is realistic as the blustering army officer who doesn't want to be bothered with marriage.

Besides Ryazanov's strong direction (he also helped with the script), Leonid Krainekov has contributed amazingly fine color (Sovcolor) photography, both on the colorful countryside and on the ornate interior scenes.

Horror pic fans will dig this latest effort from the Hammer Film shop in Britain. It is a slickly-produced color story of evil doings in Bavaria, circa 1910, replete with suspense, demonism and mystery, tightly wrapped in a skillful package of effective performance and well-paced direction.

Director Don Sharp gets the film off to a solid start as a young honeymoon couple who have run out of gas on a lonely road are eyed mysteriously from a spired villa by a severe-looking figure and an equally-mysterious stranger warns of undefined danger in the area. This eerie mood is sustained as the couple stay the night at a strangely deserted inn and later dine at the home of the figure who, unknown to them, had been watching them on the road.

This menacing host turns out to have a whole family of wierdies and, as it develops, is the high priest of a cult of human vampires who eventually mesmerize the young bride over to their group during a bazaar masquerade party. With the help of the man who had first warned of danger, the husband manages to save wifie and kill off the blood lusters. This is all unraveled amid colorful settings which effectively evoke Galatea release of 22 Dicembre production. With Toni Petruzzi, Stefano Sattaflores, Sergio Ferrannino, Luigi Barbieri, Flora Carabella, Mimmina Quirico. Written and directed by Lina Wertmuller. Camera, Gianni Di Venanzo; music, Ennio Morricone. At Locarno Film Fest. Running time, 80 MINS.

Italian films have shown an extraordinary rise via talented new filmmakers in the last few years. They now unveil a promising femme director in Lina Wertmuller. Pic looks at sleepy southern, smalltown life but neither sentimentalizes, melodramatizes or jibes at it. It may have many angles peculiarly Italian. But this has enough general scope, observation and insight to slant it for specialized and arty spotting abroad but will need the hard sell.

There is no story here for not much happens in this hilltop town located in the heel of the boot country. It mainly follows three young men around in aimless walks and musings, which deal primarily with women and sex. Also noted is the insularity, class consciousness and the rigid surface propriety of the town.

One boy suddenly gets taken to Rome by an aunt and comes back sleek and full of tall tales about the marvelous life, gadgets and women. He is to go back but somehow never does and falls back into the routine or ogling girls, walks and talks, with a new angle in his probably faked stories of his Rome adventures.

Film's only point states that maybe there is something lacking in these people that keeps them drifting and seemingly oblivious of any true contact and stand on life, progress or even the past. Perhaps there is sometimes guile in showing mainly the dreary side of smalltown life, but there is sharp observation and tender if devastating points made about the townspeople and the so-called Italo economic miracle.

Miss Wertmuller allows little, sharp incidents to suddenly break the turgid life flow as an old woman commits suicide when she finds her authority absorbed by her daughter-in-law, a hapless man floats about to finally go to the one joy girl where he passes another customer shamefacedly, and a city woman leaves a husband in a big fracas and telling off of the ogling townspeople.

Direction keeps this atmospheric anecdotal affair from lapsing into tedium. It shrewdly points up the languid lack of human direction, if there is a clinging to old hierarchal values and a definite looking down on peasants by villagers.

Lensing is properly lush because of the sunbaked quality of this beautiful but listless town. Roguish music, bright editing and good ensemble playing keep this constantly amusing and incisive with the sudden dramatic shafts convincing rather than jarring.

Perhaps a little more of a point of view, less slyness and more forthrightness should have Miss Wertmuller emerging a solid asset to Italo film ranks. And the femme manner of looking at things as a whole, and being more prone to accept instead of dissect and accuse, jives with this theme.

Its colorful accents and characters may be more difficult for general audiences abroad, if it has the handles for more specialized spots. This looms a possible sleeper on its home grounds and could coin an expression in its title, "The Lizards," referring to these youths who seem to lie vegetating in the sun. Mosk.

France now has its own rock-'n-roll stars and seems to want to make its own American films too, judging from this entry. Pic collects a flock of Yank Western themes and tries to transplant them to present day provincial France, with a dash of gangsterism. It emerges a naive if sincere emulation of its American counterparts. Pic looms mainly for local use on its star names and some exorbitant mayhem, sadism and sex. But it's mainly for grind or lower case dualer usage abroad.

Remember Paul Newman getting his thumbs broken in "The Hustler" for cheating at pool? Here anti-hero Robert Hossein gets his hands broken for cheating at cards. Oater heroes and anti-heroes, drawn together by some virile feeling, are also in evidence via psychotic Hossein, and the drifting but loyal Renato Salvatori who befriends him only to kill him later.

Salvatori also has a wordless love scene as he looks deep into Anouk Aimee's eyes, follows her to a hotel and makes deep love, quite unsparingly shown. When she says something he is morose because he feels their relationship should have gone on wordlessly.

Dialog might have been better off also if wordless also, for it is slick he-man stuff that is more parody than precise prose. The destructive psychotic seemingly lets himself be caught cheating and is horribly beaten and dumped on the doorstep of his friend. But the cheated-on characters are prototypes of brutish kind also seen in Yank pix of this ilk.

Actor Christian Marquand, for his first pic, shows a definite love and knowledge of American films of this sort. Some of the fights are well staged and the relationship between the men is adequate, if forced. But the true feel for the inventive is scrappy in this. Color is good, especially some of the landscapes. Violent sentimentality is not a French forte, and this is nothing more than a hybrid psycho adventure pic.

Hossein is hammy as the sick gambler. Salvatori has the earthy simpleton projection for the victimized friend. Miss Aimee, reduced to an object, cannot do much with her role as a sexy dame. This pic remains uneven for all its good intentions and workmanship.

Marquand also overdoes close-ups for making points. But this does display some fluidity, and Marquand could possibly develop into a solid commercial director if he went to things he knew instead of only reflecting film forms he likes. It remains to be seen if this will be as popular here as the better American outdoor and gangster pix are. Mosk.

Film takes a familiar situation of a middle-aged man's choosing of adventure over family life but gets over any pitfalls of sentimentality, false moralizing or melodrama. By knowing, sharp delineation of two milieus, this makes its points refreshingly and entertainly, with enough depth to have it a possible general playoff pic or for specialized chances abroad if well handled. Its Latin lingo earmarks are tops.

For his second pic, Luis Alcoriza, who worked on scripts for noted director Luis Bunuel, shows he has learned how to tell a story economically and unveil character deftly. A man hunts sharks on a little island which gives him money to send to his wife and family in the big city. He has built up respect for himself, is loved by a hoydenish but appealing 18-year-old girl and feels he has earned his name and place on his own.

But one day his wife's supplications, and his feeling that his children need him, have him going home. He finds they do not truly need him and that he actually belongs in the more primitive, poor-

More heat waves in various sectors of country will cut into pix grosses this round. Dearth of new screen fare also is a crippling factor although many of the holdovers and extended-runs are showing marked strength.

For fifth week in a row, "Cleopatra" (20th) (6th wk) is finishing first. "Come Blow Your Horn" (Par) (8th wk) is taking second place, same as a week ago. "How West Was Won" (MGM) (23d wk) is winding up third as it did last round.

"Irma La Douce" (UA) (8th wk) again is capturing fourth place coin. It also was fourth last stanza. "Lawrence of Arabia" (Col) (29th wk) is pushing up to fifth position.

"Great Escape" (UA) (5th wk) is climbing to sixth place as compared with eighth last round. "Bye Bye Birdie" (Col) is capturing seventh spot. "Summer Magic" (BV) (3d wk) will wind up eighth.

"Donovan's Reef" (Par) (4th wk) is pushing up to ninth position from far back in the pack. "PT 109" (WB) (5th wk) will finish 10th.

"Gathering of Eagles" (U) (5th wk) is landing in 11th spot. "L-Shaped Room" (Col) rounds out the Top 12 films. "Women of World" (Embassy), "Spencer's Mountain" (WB) and "Mondo Cane" (Times) are the runner-up pix.

"Longest Day" (20th), with a number of playdates at lower-scale and on continuous-run, is almost like a newcomer this week. Greatest showing is on a giant multiple-run booking in the L.A. area. Fellini's "8½" (Embassy) is making such a solid showing in some three or four keys that it hints great future possibilities.

"Sporting Life" (Cont), which showed much promise on its first two playdates, is big in Boston, great in Philly and still socko in N.Y. "Thrill of It All" (U), which comes into the N. Y. Music Hall this week, is rated wow in Washington, big in Louisville, huge in Minneapolis and top newcomer in Cincy.

"Jason and Argonauts" (Col), which is due at N. Y. State soon, is big in Detroit. Same is true of "Flipper" (MGM) in Toronto. It's also stout in Chi and nice in Boston.

"King Kong Vs Godzilla" (U) shapes sturdy in Denver. "Hud" (Par), still fine in N. Y., is rated hotsy in L. A.

Note: The number of weeks out in release for bigger and longrun pix are designated in such cases.

Rugoff's McGregor & Leo Dratfield Combined Pathe Contemporary Films

Duncan McGregor, veep of Rugoff Theatres as well as prez of Pathe Cinema, which imports features, and Leo Dratfield, head of Contemporary Films, which specializes in 16m distribution, have joined forces to organize Pathe Contemporary Films. The new company, which will specialize in the distribution of foreign features and shorts in the U.S. market, will not alter its founders' relations with their other firms. (In addition to his above-mentioned duties, McGregor is also prez of the Paris Theatre Corp., which owns the Paris Theatre in New York.)

Pathe Contemporary already has six pix—all originally acquired by Pathe Cinema—for release in this market. They include Robert Bresson's "The Trial of Joan of Arc," "Le Doulos" (The Stool Pigeon) with Jean Paul Belmondo; "Therese Desqueyroux" directed by Georges Franju; "Baje Des Anges" (Bay of Angels) starring Jeanne Moreau; "Il Desordine" (Disorder) starring Louis Jordan and Curt Jurgens; and L'Amore Difficile" (Wayward Love), a quartet of off-beat love stories starring Lilli Palmer, Vittorio Gassman, Nadja Tiller and Catherine Spaak.

In view of the fact that Rugoff Theatres' prez Don Rugoff recently formed (with Bob Lawrence) Cinema V for the import of foreign pix, and of the close relationship between Rugoff and McGregor, it's expected that the new Pathe Contemporary will handle the actual distribution of some of the further Cinema V acquisitions. (Cinema V's first acquisition, "Heavens Above," is currently in release via Janus Films.)

Pathe Cinema expects to set all the key dates on its pix from its New York headquarters, later turning the films over to sub-distribs covering those areas which cannot be easily sold out of New York. As yet, its subdistribs haven't yet been named.

KAPUT AFTER 55 YEARS

Portland, Me., July 30.

Civic Theatre, for 55 years a vaudeville, stock company and film house, will shutter Aug. 13.

ME GLADHANDER NOW

But Tarzan Weissmuller Still Thinks As Actor

Knoxville, Tenn., July 30.

Johnny Weissmuller, a former "Tarzan" in pictures and "Jungle Jim" an tv, is now director of public relations for Big Boy, the firm which operates Shoney Restaurants across the country. As goodwill man for the firm, he visits the restaurants, makes appearances and is an ambassador for the food cabin. One of his first assignments was a visit to Knoxville facilities of Shoney which consist of two restaurants.

Is he a businessman? "Don't let them kid you, I'm still an actor," he said here.

"I like this work because I enjoy meeting people and making new friends," he added.

Spain Frowns At Dunking Frolic

Madrid, July 30.

Cries of "dolce vita" were heard in Madrid last week after a poolside dunking display staged by host Alain Delon and guests at the actor's suburban palacio.

Spaniards raised their conservative eyebrows when locally-published photos identified Delon, film director Christian Jacques, Rome-based film star Dawn Addams and Italian actress Virna Lisi, enjoying the midsummer's night lark of tossing or getting tossed into Delon's swimming pool, fully dressed.

With the rapid expansion of foreign film production in Spain and its attendant convergence on Madrid of film stars from most of the other motion picture capitals, the feeling here is that while the "sweet life" may never become as "dolce" as it was on the Via Veneto in previous years, there could easily be as much of it, unless government and municipal authorities get into the act.

LOCALS STICK TO EXCLUSION

Hollywood July 30.

At least one Hollywood local has gone on record as flatly opposing demands of National Assn. for Advancement of Colored People that Negroes be permitted into unions and at least one added to crew of each vidpix series and motion picture. Other locals, while not officially on record, have indicated they share opposition expressed by board of Cameramen's Local 659 and endorsed by its membership. This belongs to the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes.

Opposition by lensers was based on the belief such action was "contrary to State and Federal laws," and contrary to union's pacts with film and tv industries. Regarding that portion of NAACP demands calling for Negro to be given regular role in every telepic series, the board passed that on grounds this falls into province of producer.

Membership of IA Scenic Artists Local 816 and its board met Monday night regarding NAACP demands, and while their actions aren't yet known, D. Clayton Thomason, business rep, made it clear he did not think the union would accede to demands, relayed to the IA locals by International rep George Flaherty.

Thomason declared "we have set of qualifications that movie industries demand before they will put a new man on an apprenticeship program. Two to four years in art schools are required before there is even an interview. When there is an opening—and there isn't any, these days—one of the qualifications in 6-8 years of on-the-job training before man can become scenic artist.

"One of their demands is for additional man—a Negro—to be in each crew, above and beyond the number of men required. This is one agent who will fight this kind of featherbedding till hell freezes over. With unemployment the way it is, we would insist on man with 20 years in the business if there were an opening. Runaway production has hurt our union. We had 285 members five years ago, now have 185, and it's going to be even less. We explained this to NAACP and they said 'we don't care, we want part of whatever is left.' I told them to picket theatres where runaway pictures are showing, and they weren't interested. At producer-union meeting with NAACP, they laid down their demands in such an atmosphere, that Gordon Stulberg (of Columbia) said he didn't like the idea of having to negotiate in an atmosphere of coercion.

"In 10 years I've been agent with union, no Negro has come in and wanted to be scenic artist. NBC has a Negro shopman, who has a student card with our union. He has no desire to be scenic artist. We have no discrimination against anyone because of race, creed or color. A Chinese girl, one of our members, is head of art department at CBS. We have several Japanese members."

A number of union reps questioned legality of NAACP demands not only regarding its possible violation of featherbedding regulations but also of FEPC regulations. Some said preference given Negroes, as sought by NAACP, would be unfair to Spanish-American and others.

A spokesman for IA propmen's Local 44 said that while NAACP labeled all IA locals "lily white," 44 has never had any bars of discrimination, that local is completely integrated and has been for years.

IA Film Technicians Local 683 will discuss the NAACP demand at meeting Thurs. (1) night.

Some union reps said not only was there serious question as to legality of move such as that sought by NAACP but declared it would violate seniority provisions in their current pacts and thus possibly abrogate those pacts.

South African Film Production On Increase; Gold Mining Firm 'Diversifies' Into S. A. Studios

By EDDIE KALISH

South Africa, in and around Johannesburg, is upzooming in film production by both domestic and, perhaps more notably, foreign picture makers.

Quite recently, "Zulu," a co-production of Paramount and Embassy Pictures and Diamond Films, was lensed there with a cast of British stars, including its producer Stanley Baker, Jack Hawkins and Sweden's Ulla Jacobsson, under the direction of Cy Endfield. Working there now is "Sanders of the River," produced by London Films and starring Richard Todd. There's also the local Monarch Films which does considerable work in the Johannesburg area—and Metro's "Rhino" began in the area last week, produced and directed by Ivan Tors.

Recently, however, a new development has taken place in the country which has led to greater interest in filming in South Africa. Rand Mines, one of the largest gold digging concerns in the area, purchased a controlling interest in S. A. Films which operates a major studio in the area. This has prompted expansion of the studio facilities, with the latest of modern equipment, as well as the construction of a large modern motel, the biggest in the vicinity, primarily for the housing of visiting stars, directors et al.

It has also put S. A. Films in the position of having considerable capital on hand for the financing or coproduction of projects to be made in South Africa. The studio, although not participating financially, was used by the "Zulu" company, not for location work in that the company worked outdoors in nearby Natal, but for the supply of equipment, personnel and such. "Sanders" is also presently making use of the facilities.

One of the largest-scale projects for South Africa, however, is a three-pic production plan currently being mapped by F. Herrick Herrick, global filmmaker who began his career as an actor in Chicago in 1905 and has been a producer-director-writer in the industry since its inception, having spent the last 10 years in England. He has made a deal with S. A. Films for the financing of the three pictures and said that these projects will be distributed by a Yank major, although he wouldn't reveal which it was during a trip to Gotham last week.

He reported that S. A. Films

Dale Turnbull Succeeds Father

Ernest Turnbull, managing director of Hoyts Theatres, Australia's largest circuit, as well as chairman and managing director of 20th-Fox of Australia, is resigning as of Sept. 1.

In 1936 he joined Gaumont British in the same capacity. He has been head of Hoyts since 1941 and chairman of 20th of Australia since 1953.

He will be succeeded by his son, Dale Turnbull, who will become Hoyts managing director as well as general manager of Fox operations in Australia.

'Bible' (Old Testament) Columbia–De Laurentiis Project on Big Budget

Columbia Pictures has inked a deal with Italo producer Dino De Laurentiis to film his "The Bible." This is one of the biggest deals Col has made and the company will distribute the pic worldwide, except for Italy, under its terms. A bruited figure runs to $20-mil.

Christopher Fry has been working for the past two years developing a screenplay for the project, which will be limited to the Old Testament. Plans call for a multi-director, multi-star arrangement and Italo director Luchino Visconti and Yank expatriot Orson Welles have been previously inked to direct portions.

"Bible" will be lensed in Italy, Egypt and Spain with interiors in De Laurentiis' new Rome studios, according to present thinking. When it will go into production and similar details aren't projected as yet.

SHOWMAN'S DAUGHTER NAMED 'MISS COLORADO'

Denver, July 30.

Conn.-Made 'Zombies'; It's a Teenage Horror Film With Tunes & Dances

Albany, July 30.

"Invasion of The Zombies" is described as first teenage musical horror film. Inclusion in the cast of The Del/Aires (Coral Records), who also composed the song, "Drag," for it, plus three dance production scenes and a beach party, quality the film for its "category." So states Alan V. Iselin, vice-president of Iselin-Tenney Productions, New York, and president of Iselin Drive-in Theatres Albany.

Del-Aires, comprising Ronny Linares, Bob Osborne, Garry Jones and John Becker, perform as well as warble in the screamie. Film will be distributed in September, with a co-feature, "Curse of the Living Corpse" (already "in the can").

Both pictures were shot at Stamford, Conn., under the direction of Tenney. He has a credit with Times Films and background of television and stage.

Iselin operates seven automobilers—three in the Albany area, one at Poughkeepsie, and a trio in Florida.

Louisville, July 30.

Holdovers are dominating the local screens this week. Only exception is "Spencer's Mountain" at the Mary Ann which is headed for a bumper week. Local situation has all firstruns concentrated in a one-block area on Fourth Street, with results that sellout weekend biz is the rule at most houses.

"Nutty Professor," at the Ohio in second, is big. "Cleopatra" at the Penthouse in the fifth week still is smash. "How West Was Won," in seventh at the Rialto shapes sockeroo. "Bye, Bye Birdie" at United Artists in second is lively. "Thrill of it All," in second at the Kentucky, will par first week's boff take.

'THE CONJUGAL BED' SET WITH EMBASSY

Continuing its wheeling and dealing on the foreign front, Embassy Pictures of Manhattan has set a deal in Germany for the distribution of "The Conjugal Bed" (formerly "Queen Bee") and is still negotiating there for the marketing of the four Joseph E. Levine-Carlo Ponti coproductions currently in various stages of work and "Landru."

The deal for "Conjugal" was made with Nora Films which will distribute the film, for which Maria Vlady won the Cannes Film Festival "best actress" award, in Germany and Austria.

er but humanly satisfying shark hunting grounds. So back he goes.

What Alcoriza has done is paint the poor section without patronizing. Its rough, harsh aspects are outlined but not in a reformist way. This is how it is and the pic implies that man may or can change it. The camaraderic is neatly felt as is the hurt and even fury of these people when this man they have accepted and looked up to leaves.

Knowing character insights keep this from slipping into false heman aspects or escapism palaver. It is technically fine with a fine flair for depicting love and action sans the usual cliches or overindulged eroticism. In short, a Mexican film that may resemble others on the surface but is a great cut above them in depth, treatment and theme. It needs careful sell. It is technically fine with expert performances. Mosk.

All-ballet pic deals with an old legend of a despot who kidnaps a young bride from a little village but faces the wrath of the people and husband to have it all end in tragedy. Dancing is lithe and dramatic, mime expert, but it is repetitious, with garish color, and mainly for Cantonese circuits or specialized dance or school showings abroad.

Sets are acceptable since it is primarily canned ballet. But dancers manage to give some depth to their characters and and bring alive the feel of legend. Music is a composite of Chinese themes with Western sound arrangements.

Dancers use mainly low-level, clean fluttering but get into sharp elevation and darting energy in fight sequences. Folk, Russian dance influences and classic ballet mingle in the terps forms. It has a certain beguilling, eye-catching quality that makes it "seeable" in spite of its head-on lensing. No "East Side Story" this, but an okay packaging of dance on film. Production values and costumes are fine. Mosk.

Polish pix seem still free in individual creative outlook, in spite of the Russian pull-back to more orthodox social realism. This is a pessimistic, revealing look at some aspects of Poland today. If this sometimes is too symbolic, literary and talky, this pic has depth in character and sustained visual flair, and might make a specialized arty bet abroad. Pic takes its own time, rhythm and pace to spin its heavily symbolic yarn, but it's still absorbing.

A youth is on the run because he thinks he killed a man in an auto accident. He ends up at a big power plant works near the Polski border. Here he gets involved with a group of types who seem to stand for certain aspects of the country today.

Director Wojciech Has displays a subtle feeling for revealing character associations which manages to give them depth. Here the boy seems a groping type who finds too much adult lying, evasion and pettiness about him.

A dying tubercular man who, befriends him for selfish and philosophical reasons, a group of brutish workers who use old war experiences as excuses for pettiness, some roaming girls (calling themselves dancers) who are really on the make for more heeled men and a wily barmaid, make up his initiation into life

This is technically expert, with the actors managing to make their highly literary figures acceptable and giving it a sweep and knowing insight into human aspirations. Pic is a definite offbeater from the Eastern bloc. Mosk.

(PORTUGUESE)

Locarno, July 23.

Cinedex production and release. With Paulo Renato, Leonia Mendes, Rui De Carvalho, Lucia Amram, Hugo Casais. Directed by Artur Ramos. Screenplay, Luis Rebelo, Ramos, Alexandre O'Neill, Sttau Monteiro; camera, Joao Moreira; editor, Artur Ramos. At Locarno Film Fest. Running time, 85 MINS.

Frederico ..... Hugo Casais

Litle Portugal rarely has pix at fests. This one shows new trends have seeped in and, more importantly, films are beginning to look at their own country more severely. Social drama may have more value for its own markets. But this displays enough character and narrative flair for Latino lingo situations and specialized booking abroad.

It concerns a drifting young crowd who spend time in listless talk, liaisons without passion and finally bring on tragedy when an irresponsible youth inadvertently leads to the accidental death of the daughter of his father's chauffeur. But the chauffeur, to insure a better life for his son, helps hush up the affair. It does make a rich girl break away from a married man she thought was different.

Director Artur Ramos shows he has seen other pix depicting the aimlessness of rich life. He gets good work from his thesps, if most of the roles are stereotyped and the plot telegraphed.

This emerges a social tract on the lack of communication and vaporous outlooks of the world today. It is technically good. This just misses being an exceptional film. Mosk.

Tuulinen Paiva

(Day of Wind)
(FINNISH)

Locarno, July 22.

Ruutsalo release and production. With Raili Metsa, Yrjo Tahtela. Written and directed by Eino Ruusalo. Camera, Matti Xlinin; editor, M. Letinen; music, Otto Donner. At Locarno Film Fest. Running time, 70 MINS.

Girl ..... Raili Metsa
Boy ..... Yrjo Tahtela

Arty intention without invention leads to pretention. Except for an overdone love scene and nude shots, which could provide exploitation and grind use abroad, this one looms mainly for Finland.

A boy and a girl snuggle, breathe hard and finally take their clothes off on a beach. Then he tells her he must go to the city to make his way. They are on some outlying islands. Next she is seen roaming around the city looking for the boy.

What she runs into are some more quick adventures ending the pic in a sort of dream sequence of all the characters on the island beach. Acting is a series of poses and director Eino Ruutsalo uses too many aimless symbolic shots that mean nothing since no true atmosphere or mood are created.

A forced sound and music track is also of little use. In short, this seems to be a badly assimilated attempt to adopt some of the methods of Michelangelo Antonioni and Alain Resnais, but without the control, meaning and depth these men have been able to give their work. Result is aping rather than assimilation. Mosk.

Luciano

(ITALIAN)

Locarno, July 26.

Vorona release of Mario Lanfranchi production. With Luciano Morelli, Valentine Placente, Anna Bragaglia, Franco Ciuffi, Paolo Carlini. Written and directed by Luigi Baldi with script aid by M. Jemma; camera, Ennio Guarnieri; music, Luciano Chailly. At Locarno Film Fest. Running time, 80 MINS.

Luciano ..... Luciano Morelli
Wife ..... Valentina Piacente
Mother ..... Anna Bragaglia
Father ..... Franco Ciuffi
Rich Man ..... Paolo Carlini

For his first feature film documentary maker Luigi Baldi has stretched a short he made on the general life and background of a real delinquent into a feature entry. It lacks the taut insight of its predecessor and sometimes does not find the right blend between realism, social statement and characterization. So it seems a chancy item for the U.S. except for specialized bookings, with depth possibilities also flimsy.

Played by the same young man who essayed role in the short, Luciano comes home from prison to find his mother gone and his father feigning illness and carrying on with another woman. He rages against the poverty and runs off to get mixed up with a man married to a rich woman who takes him home.

Here the rich are painted neurotically, incapable of love and as miserable, in their way, as the poor. Luciano leaves and goes towards home. Director Baldi shows a mobile camera and a flair for atmosphere and sudden revealing insights into human troubles. But there is a tendency to touch on too many things which make its impact light and seemingly forced in its dramatics.

But Baldi looms a possible worthy addition to the high standards of Italo filmmaking newcomers when he finds the right way of channeling his documentary talents into the needed wider social and human frames for feature pix. It is technically good and the non-actors are acceptable and at times more effective than the few pro players in the cast. Mosk.

Im Pokoriaetsa Nebo

(Conquerors of the Sky)
(RUSSIAN)

Locarno, July 23.

Mosfilm release of Gorki Studio production. With Nicolas Rybnikov, Vladimir Sedov, Svetlana Svetlitchnaia, Evgueni Evstigniev, Oleg Jakov. Directed by Tatiana Liosnova. Screenplay, Anatole Agranovsky, Leonide Agranovitch; camera, Valery Guinsbourg; music, Andre Echpai. At Locarno Film Fest. Running time, 100 MINS.

Koltchine ..... Nicolas Rybnikov
Charov ..... Vladimir Sedov
Nina ..... Svetlana Svetlitchnaia
Chief ..... Evgueni Evstigniev
Bassarguine ..... Oleg Jakov

Pic shapes a competent, if conventional, tale of a test pilot who pioneered the first Soviet jet plane. It sometimes gets a bit too grandiloquent and starry-eyed in outlook and characters, but has the saving grace of subdued dramatics and tasteful pacing. Made by a woman, it could have been made by a man. Another aspect of the equality of the sexes in Russia.

This does not have the deeper personage insight and flair for much arty chances abroad. Film appears mainly a possible dualer on its okay tale and well-done flying scenes. The making of the plane is taken from drawing board to testing.

But then a pitch is made about how much he did and how he helped the cause of Russia. All this was already intrinsic in the pic and did not need the final aria. But director, Tatiana Liosnova, displays a puckish, tomboyish humor, an interest and ability to put technical data on screen without too much dullness. She has a firm hand in putting a tale together.

Perhaps a less didactic tale and more individual outlooks and characters could have her making worthy pix and taking her place in the Soviet scheme of picmaking. It is technically good. Mosk.

Kiss of the Vampire

the eerie mood of John Elder's well-constructed screenplay.

Edward De Souza is properly dazzled and horrified at what takes place in the role of the newlywed husband and Jennifer Daniel makes a pretty victim of the sorcery. Noel William turns in a strong effort as the evil leader of the vampire cult and carries off the job in demonic effectiveness. Also turning in a competent job is Clifford Evans as the profit of doom who turns out to be the girl's saviour, he being an expert on the subject of vampires after their attempt to claim his daughter failed when he himself killed her with that ever-faithful spike in the heart. This sequence, incidentally, makes for an evocative prologue before the credits.

Also adding to the demonic flavor of the tale are performances by Barry Warren and Jacquie Wallis as Willman's disciple son and daughter. Peter Madden is effective as the retiring innkeeper of the hotel the couple stays at and Vera Cook is credible as his wife and the bereaved mother of their daughter who has been claimed by the vampires. Isobel Black is oke as the fang-toothed offspring, who eventually meets her end with the rest in a finale which resembles a Transylvannia version of "The Birds," with an attack by bats substituted for blackbirds.

Alan H me's camera has nicely captured the colorful and eerie quality of the proceedings and Bernard Robinson and Don Mingaye have artfully designed and dressed the production. James Bernard's music lends nice emphasis in underscoring the action and "Vampire" has been crisply edited under the supervision of James Needs.

The Universal release is a solid entry in the exploitation pic sweepstakes and is a good bet to capture some of the escapist late summer biz. It also again demonstrates that consistently effective touch of producer Anthony Hinds and the Hammer Film company in turning out these slick chillers. Kali.

Tom Jones

(BRITISH—COLOR)

Lusty, boisterous 18th Century frolic based on Henry Fielding classic; star-studded cast should steer this to big league boxoffice ratings, despite occasional arty touches.

London, July 23.

United Artists release of a (Tony Richardson) Woodfall production. Stars Albert Finney, Susannah York, Hugh Griffith, Edith Evans, Joan Greenwood; features George Devine, Wilfrid Lawson, Jack MacGowran, Freda Jackson, Joyce Redman, Rachael Kempson, Angela Baddeley. Directed by Tony Richardson. Screenplay, John Osborne, based on Henry Fielding's novel; narrator, Michael MacLiammoir; camera, Walter Lassally; editor, Antony Gibbs; music, John Addison. At London Pavilion. Running time, 128 MINS.

Tom Jones ..... Albert Finney
Sophie Western ..... Susannah York
Squire Western ..... Hugh Griffith
Miss Western ..... Edith Evans
Lady Bellaston ..... Joan Greenwood
Molly Seagrim ..... Diane Cilento
Squire Allworthy ..... George Devine
Lord Fellamar ..... David Tomlinson
Mrs. Miller ..... Rosalind Atkinson
Black George ..... Wilfrid Lawson
Mrs. Fitzpatrick ..... Rosalind Knight
Partridge ..... Jack MacGowran
Mrs. Seagrim ..... Freda Jackson
Blifil ..... David Warner
Mrs. Waters (Jenny Jones) ..... Joyce Redman
Parson Supple ..... James Cairnososs
Bridget Allworthy ..... Rachel Kempson
Thwackum ..... Peter Bull
Mrs. Wilkins ..... Angela Baddeley
Mrs. Fitzpatrick ..... George A. Cooper

It's been a long wait for Albert Finney's film follow-up to "Saturday Night and Sunday Morning." And though "Tom Jones" is a period piece and very different it has the same lustiness and boisterous content with which to project the star. It should breeze its way cheerfully through the boxoffice figures. It has sex, Eastmancolor, some prime performers and plenty of action. Tony Richardson has directed John Osborne's screenplay with verve, though, occasionally, he falls back on camera tricks and and editing which are disconcerting.

Based on Henry Fielding's enduring novel, story is set in Somerset, a West Country lush county, and in London during the 18th Century. Hero is Tom Jones (Albert Finney), born in suspicious circumstances, with a maidservant dismissed because she is suspected of being his unwed mother. He is brought up by Squire Allworthy (George Devine) and leads a rollicking life in which women play a prominent part before he finally escapes the gallows after a frame-up. He finds a presumably happy ending in the arms of a neighboring daughter, Sophie, played in rather over-genteel style by Susannah York.

Ramifications of the plot, which enables Finney to indulge in considerable sexual activity with a variety of delectable dames, are too complicated to need discussion. But the somewhat sprawling, bawdy and vivid screenplay of Osborne's provides some meaty acting opportunities and the thesps grasp their chances with vigorous zest.

Finney is big league. He slips through his adventures with an ebullient gusto that keeps the overlong film on its toes for most of the time. Hugh Griffith and Edith Evans as Squire Western and his sister ham disarmingly. Miss Evans has some of the choicer cameos in the film. Joan Greenwood, George Devine and Wilfrid Lawson are others who get top credits for their work. Angela Baddeley, Rosalind Knight, Rachel Kampson, Jack MacGowran, Freda Jackson and Joyce Redman are others and rate benevolent nods. David Tomlinson with a brief but effective comedy appearance in a guest role as an aristocratic heel, and Diana Cilanto have limited roles but nevertheless prove that it makes sense to bring stars with knowhow to do brief jobs.

Eastmancolor captures some good location and period stuff, lensed well by Walter Lassally, particularly in the Newgate Prison sequence as well as a fox hunting episode.

Director Richardson has occasionally pressed his luck with some over-deliberate arty camera bits. The music of John Addison is a trifle obtrusive and lacking in period style. However, "Tom Jones" measures up as a genial energetic comedy, with an added bonus of Michael MacLiammoir putting over occasional narration with his usual smooth wit and perception. Rich.

The Great Dream

Drab indie meller.

Hollywood, July 16.

Gary Graver production. Directed and written by Graver; cofeaturing Graver; camera, John Willhem; music, Les McCann Ltd. Reviewed at Lytton Center, July 16, '63. Running time, 67 MINS.

The Girl ..... Lois Adams
The Boy ..... Gary Graver
The Drunken Man ..... Billy Rhodes
The Strange Man ..... R. J. Gristak
Leader of the Toughs ..... Bert Byers
The Toughs ..... Robert Parr, Tony Tsavidis, Robert Ruard

It might help if the young writer-producer-director-star of this low-budget independent film abandoned the Orson Welles bit and delegated some authority to persons better equipped to handle certain creative phases of the work. Much of his writing, for example, is painfully pretentious mumbo-jumbo.

Most of Graver's skill appears to lie in the directorial and production area. It obviously took a good deal of resourcefulness and ingenuity to mount and execute this picture on a shoestring budget. And there is evidence of some cinematic flair in the new wavish manner in which Graver and his cameraman, John Willheim, have set up and photographed several sequences. On the other hand, what story there is transpires at a pace even a snail would deem lethargic. And the story itself, no doubt lofty in intent, emerges opaque and choppy and childish.

The David-and-Lisa-like yarn relates some of the hard knocks encountered by two young aspirants to Hollywood fame and fortune, a boy (Graver) and a girl (Lois Adams) who meet, sleep together and go their separate ways. In addition to those played by Miss Adams and Graver, other characters encountered along the primrose Hollywood path include a drunken midget (Billy Rhodes), a pervert (R. J. Gristak) and four youthful hoods (Bert Byers, Robert Parr, Tony Tsavidis and Robert Huard) who beat Graver up on the corner of Hollywood and Vine. There are plenty of witnesses, but nobody raises a finger in his defense. Hollywood may be a blase, callous burg, but such atrocities are not that readily acceptable to the inhabitants.

The 67-minute Yucca production sports a racy jazz score by Les McCann Ltd. Among the Graver's represented are associate producer Frances and production coordinator Jeff. Tube.

Chouchou and the Million

(LEBANESE)

Moscow, July 23.

Les Fils de Georges Haddad (Bierut) release of an Issam Hamaoui and Antione S. Remy production. Stars Chouchou and Chamel. Directed by Antoine S. Remy. Screenplay, Mohamed Chamel; camera, Bruno Salvi. At Moscow Film Fest. Running time, 85 MINS.

Just for the record, this Lebanese film stars two local tele artists in a trite little comedy about an errand boy, who behaves like a congenital idiot and walks like an ape, until he inherits a million. Then he sets out to prove the old proverb about fools and their money.

The film, it is reported, is a fabulous success locally, and may possibly do well in other middle-east areas. But this can be readily discounted for most other markets. Myro.

First, Walter Wanger (in collaboration with Joe Hyams) wrote a paperback on "My Life With Cleopatra," and next came the Jack Brodsky-Nat Weiss magnun opus on "The Cleopatra Papers" (Simon & Schuster). Now James Goode, ex-Life, who has been a Hollywood freelance and publicist, and who worked on "The Misfits," has written "The Story of The Misfits" which Bobbs-Merrill will publish in September. It's an inside story on Marilyn Monroe's and Clark Gable's last film—as it developed—with Arthur Miller, playwright-and-then-husband of the blonde star, supplying the original screenplay. Goode's book gives accent to his contention that probably at no time in Hollywood history was there ever assembled a group—writer, director, stars—who seemingly personified the title of the picture they were making, "The Misfits." Same publisher is also bringing out Robert ("The Magic Lantern") Carson's "An End To Comedy," Hollywood scripter this time takes his film colony from the Coast to Spain—"the new Hollywood."

outright purchase or percentage distrib terms for fear the government's undeclared ban might be prolonged indefinitely.

U. S. film circles here are taking a dim, but cautious, view of the Columbia situation. It raises a fundamental question of foreign government control over Hollywood filmmaking, using economic sanctions in a given market as a pressure mechanism. It is pointed out that U. S. authorities withheld comment, criticism or threats when a Spanish film, "Welcome Mr. Marshall," lampooned a major American political and economic enterprise which indirectly aided Franco's Spain.

On the other hand, Emeric Pressburger's Highland Productions and Gregory Peck's Productions underestimated local sensitivity on any subject dealing with what the Franco regime identifies as the "Spanish Crusade for Liberation" in originally planning to set part of location filming in Pamplona and the Spanish Pyrenees.

Among the pros and cons, it is felt that the Minister of Information Fraga Iribarne would hesitate before permitting the Columbia situation to negate a year of effort in creating a new image of Spain as more modern, more liberal in outlook with respect to the past.

In a show of good faith, Columbia went the limit at the recent San Sebastian Film Festival to demonstrate its cooperative spirit. While it is true that Columbia picked up three licenses in the process, the documents are not worth the parchment they are printed on without final government release clearance.

Columbia's situation will become acute by the time Spanish government ministers return from the summer capital to their desks in Madrid. It is then, observers predict, that developments might take a dramatic turn.

'8½' Not on Line

juryman, Sergio Amidei, who had taken little part in the discussion, walked out of the jury room, to be followed a few minutes later by Stanley Kramer, ostensibly to attend a press conference.

According to gossip in the Moscow hotel, (which was the festival hq) Kramer, Jean Marais of France and Satyajit Ray of India, were most insistant that the Grand Prix should go to the Italian film. There was deadlock the whole of Sunday morning, but while Kramer was attending his press conference and a screening of "The Defiant Ones" at the Sports Palace, an interpreter was sent to him and he was requested to return to the jury room.

By mid-Sunday afternoon the resistance of the Eastern bloc had been worn down and at 3:30 p.m. there was a unanimous decision to give the Grand Prix to the Fellini film. The fight, apparently, was only over the main award. There was a minimum of discussion about the other prizes, and although there was a plethora of awards, these were all decided in a matter of minutes.

At the prize giving ceremony in the Palace of Congress in the Kremlin on Sunday night, Madam Ekaterina Furtseva, the Soviet Minister of Culture took Kramer on one side and said to him: "I hear you were a naughty boy today."

Kramer retorted: "I thought the proceedings in the jury room were meant to be secret!"

The award of the Grand Prix to "8½" has special significance in view of the custom of the Soviet authorities to buy all films which collect festival prizes. As one of the Russians commented to a VARIETY reporter: "We are now stuck with the Fellini film, and I just cannot imagine what the Russian people will make of it."

With this award the Italians have maintained their sensational run at this season's European festivals, having collected the Grand Prix at Cannes, for "The Leopard," the Grand Prix at San Sebastian for "Mafioso" and shared the Grand Prix with Japan at Berlin for "Il Diavolo."

Governmental Centre Du Cinema denying Danish producer Bent Christensen's allegation that it refused a press showing of his "Weekend." Pic was allowed a press screening just before the Cannes Fest and no release visa has been asked for as yet, says the CDC. They suspect Christensen is using this point as a publicity pitch. If pic was turned down by Cannes it has nothing to do with them. They consider the affair closed . . . Andre Hakim, in charge of production of the 20th-Fox-backed French pic "La Bonne Soupe," reportedly against his wife, Suzy, wanting to play the small part of a joy girl in the pic. Director Robert Thomas seems inclined to give it and Hakim may call on help from his father-in-law to stop it. Latter is Darryl F. Zanuck. It seems that Irina Demich, who appeared in "The Longest Day," and Jack Warner's daughter, Barbara, would also like to do cameo street-walker bits in the pic.

Popular youth resort, famed by Brigitte Bardot, who spends every summer there, Saint-Tropez, will be used in a new French comedy "Le Gendarme De Saint-Tropez" in which comic Louis De Funes plays a harassed country cop assigned to the resort. He has to cope with the abduction of eight wives of an Arab sheik by Paris blades, his daughter getting a rush from young swains and general nudity. De Funes is in great demand and has five other pix lined up besides starring in the hit legit musical by Robert Dhery, "La Grosse Valse."

Comedians Bourvil and Fernandel to co-star in Gilles Grangier's next pic. It is the first time the two leading French screen comics will play in the same pic . . . Actress Dany Carrel narrowly escaped being killed by husbands in her last two pix but turns criminal in her presently shooting opus "The Widows," in which she heads a gang. . . . John Huston was in for the re-release of his "The Red Badge of Courage" and his new one "The List of Adrian Messenger." One pressman asked him if he was worried about losing his talent as he went on and, talk about forthrightness, whether he thinks it could have happened already. Huston laughed it off and said he hoped not since he had a spate of pic projects among which were "The Night of the Iguana" and "The Man Who Would Be King."

Negro Actors Win Roles in German Films and TV; Orphan to Star at 17

Frankfurt, July 23.

While some Negroes are complaining about scarcity of film and tele roles in America, several have made the grade in West Germany. Seventeen-year-old Elfie Fiegert, who was the dark-skinned "Shirley Temple" of several German films 10 years ago, is returning to the screen as one of the leads in the Hans Domnick remake of the Curt Goetz play, "House in Montevideo." She will play the role of a Spanish teenager.

Miss Feigert, daughter of a Negro soldier and a German girl, was found in a German orphanage and adopted by a German couple who raised her in a village. She had her first screen role 10 years ago in the R. A. Stemmle film, "Toxi." "Toxi" became her screen name, and she also appeared in two other films, "The Dark Star" and "Two Bavarians in a Harem."

In the last couple of years, she has had several roles as a dancer and singer on German tele.

Another Negro star, Billy Mo from Trinidad, has scored such a success in German films and tv that he has recently taken German citizenship. And American singer Kenneth Spencer, making his home in Wuppertal, does excellent work with German concert dates, tele and screen appearances.

And in Frankfurt, Philadelphia-born Joe Bunch, a former GI stationed here, is technical advisor at the local tv outlet, Hessischer Rundfunk, for programs concerning the American way of life. He also works weekends as greeter at one of the town's jazz cellars, and does an occasional stage stint. One of the latter was his performance in a production of "The Little Hut" at the Little Theatre.

Show Biz Integrated

While in theory the entire entertainment field is "integrated" in West Germany and there are of course no color limits in restaurants, hotels or nightclubs, the sole "segregation" that does exist is due to the American servicemen stationed here.

In areas where troops are stationed, the American white soldiers have insisted that the bars be kept segregated, with certain of them for the whites only, and others for the Negroes only. In Frankfurt, for instance, one large area of nightspots and bars near the main railroad section is the exclusive area of the Negro troops.

When a Negro soldier tries to enter a "white" bar, although there are no signs on the door, he is likely to be thrown out or beaten up. And serious events have occurred when Negro students from the African countries, attending German universities, have inadvertently tried to buy a drink or attend a floor show at one of the spots that are more or less reserved for the white American soldiers — and been beaten by GIs.

DE BIASE NEW ITALO SHOW BIZ DIRECTOR

Rome, July 30.

Franz de Biase has been officially designated Director General of Entertainment by Italian Minister Alberto Folchi. He succeeds Nicola de Pirro, who recently left the important post, having reached retirement age. De Biase entered the field from journalism and has held several posts in the Italo entertainment office over the last 15 years.

He was temporarily named to DePirro's post after latter's retirement, designation becoming full-time and official with the current decree. The new Entertainment boss is 50 years old.

Danish Pix Prod. In Sharp Upbeat

Copenhagen, July 23.

Of about 25 films annually produced in Denmark at least 10 are being made this summer, with a view to early fall preems. The bulk of these will be run-of-mill Danish film fare but a new trend is spotted in production here. In various ways, films are being made with an eye on the foreign market.

At the Flamingo Studios, Annelise Hovmand is directing "Sextet," which is said to contain a new twist on the eternal triangle. The way such a twist is obtained is expected to bring forth many diverse opinions among censors here and abroad. Film is being shot in both Danish and English versions.

After opening the season with a romantic pot-boiler, "April," filmed partially in Greece, Palladium will follow up with an ambitious version of a somber Danish classic short story "Tine," which has a war background. Also from Palladium come "The Bus" and "The Castle."

"Three Girls in Paris" has French actor Daniel Gelin as its male and main attraction. He likes working with the Danes so well that he has signed on for one more Saga-produced Danish film this year.

Greatest expectations of the year are attached to Bent Christensen Productions' so far unnamed film. This will be directed by Henning Carlsen, maker of "Dilemma," the semi-documentary film about South Africa's racial strife. Erno Muller will play the lead as a freedom fighter who returns to Denmark after 18 years abroad and finds things drastically changed in his absence. Helping him to acknowledge the new conditions of life is a young girl, played by Maud Berthelsen. Miss Berthelsen for the last few years has been one of the highest paid fashion models in Paris.

Irish Govt. Advanced $900,000 For Studios At Bray, Now Closed

Dublin, July 23.

The Irish government has advanced nearly $900,000 to Ardmore Studios at Bray since the studios were established. Of this, $699,700 was advanced as a debenture loan, and a grant of $126,000 was provided by the Industrial Development Authority. Financial details were made public when the Minister of Finance was questioned in the Dail (Congress) on the amount of public funds invested in the studios.

Another question was asked about the closure of the studios. The Minister for Industry and and Commerce replied that the present situation resulted from difficulties in obtaining business and that efforts were being made to obtain further work.

Ardmore Studios is also in the news with an application to the Dublin High Court for a permanent injunction restraining seven members of the Electrical Trade Union (Ireland) from picketing the studios. It also seeks a declaration that no trade dispute exists between the parties. An interim injunction was granted last February when a picket was put on the studio during the shooting of "Of Human Bondage" for Seven Arts.

Yank Entries Win 6 Awards Plus Two Sideline Prizes at 14th Venice Documentary Fest, Children's Festival

Venice, July 23.

Yank entries walked off with six major and two sideline awards at the 14th International Venice Documentary Film Festival and the 15th Children's Fest, for one of the strongest showings in years here. First prizes went to James Blue's "A Letter from Colombia," produced Progress Plus for USIA; to "Team, Team, Team," directed by James Slater and Lane Slate; to "The Hole," John Hubley's animated item (recent Oscar winner) in the documentary field, where Tom Priestley's "Polaris, Story of an Undersea Voyage" won a second prize. (No first prize was awarded).

In moppett sector, George Gordon's "Music, the Expressive Language" won a first prize for the U.S. in its class while Sy Wexler's "Human Growth" won a second.

Curtain entries walked off with top kudos, with Poland's "Romantic Return," directed by Halina Bielinska, copping the Lion of St. Mark for best moppet entry, and Czechoslovakia's "City of Mud," directed by Vaclav Taborski voted the best short subject. Czechs also won the best children's selections while France topped the selection roster in documentary events.

James Blue's "School at Rincon Santo" (Progress-USIA) won a sideline kudo for the States, the "Human Relations" prize, awarded for the first time this year. "El Camino Real," entered by Spain but produced by Samuel Bronston won the "Primi Piani" award. It was largely shot in the U.S.

Donald Baruch, the U.S. Government rep to the events who accepted the awards, expressed his full satisfaction with the results. He especially singled out the success this year of USIS entries, progress in this sector being exemplified by the twin success of James Blue's entries, sponsored by USIS in the Alliance for Progress South American movement.

Yank rep, however, regretted the absence this year of Yank-made films, especially in the children's sector. Most companies queried on entries appeared to be afraid of a "moppet" slotting on pix exhibited in this Venice sector.

Says U.S. Must Participate

"There is no doubt," Baruch stated, "that the U.S. must participate to the fullest in Venice." He noted that apart from intrinsic importance of event, and growing Yank impact, the U.S. presence at Venice was imperative due to all-out participation of curtain nations.

These he said originally had participated half-heartedly, but had since grown to realize importance of "doc" and children's events. Ever since, they have scored strongly in both events.

More important generally, the U.S. emissary felt, was that films shown at Venice—especially prize-winners—be seen everywhere so that true values could emerge also for future training and reference of a previously backward people.

"Letter" is more general in scope, showing hope rising via education in agricultural schools in which the pupils of today become the teachers of tomorrow. "School" is more specific, showing how people of a village worked together to build the first school ever erected in a remote area. Both are black and white one-reelers.

PAT BOONE SCORES IN DUBLIN VIA SPRINT

Dublin, July 23.

Pat Boone, here to star in Seven Arts' "Never Put It In Writing," helped an American track team to victory at the John F. Kennedy Stadium here during an International Athletic Meeting. He was anchor man for the U.S. team in the half-mile relay and beat a fancied Irish runner, Noel Carroll, on this last leg of the race.

Afterwards Boone said he has no intention of taking up running, but will stick to basketball and cycling for keeping fit. He later acted as host to the American team at a steak supper.

Cinerama-UA Setting Deal for 3d House In London to Open 'World'

London, July 30.

London is to have a third Cinerama theatre by the end of this year. A deal is on the point of being closed between Cinerama and United Artists on one side, with 20th-Fox, for a lease of the Carlton in the Haymarket for presentation of "It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World."

The Stanley Kramer production for UA is being scheduled to open at the Carlton next Dec. 3, with a Royal premiere to be attended by the Queen.

The Carlton, long a 20th-Fox showcase, will be the first theatre in Britain to be equipped with Cinerama's single-projection system. The house has a capacity of about 1,200, but may have to forego some of the front seats to accommodate the widescreen process. The two other Cinerama theatres in the West End, the Casino and the Coliseum, are using the triple-screen, triple-projection system.

It has been no secret during recent months that 20th has been strained to find suitable product for the Carlton, and has had to fill the void with frequent reissues. Ironically, it's two blockbusters are in Rank theatres. "Longest Day" has been at the Leicester Square Theatre since last October while "Cleopatra" opens tomorrow (Wed.) at the Dominion.

Not too much time was devoted at the 12-day Locarno Film Fest to parties. Some cocktails mixed with mimeograph ink at press conferences, notably the Poles poured vodka and champagne (Polish) . . . Another was financed by the combined hypo orgs of Italy, France and Germany one afternoon. This is one of the first times that Unitalia, Unifrance and German export have joined to save expenses." Yanks did little for non-competing Danny Kaye film "The Man From the Diner's Club" (Col) . . . A skedded non-competing screening of the Cannes prizewinning Japanese pic "Hara Kari" was called off when the print did not come in from France where it is due to open. It was replaced by a showing of John Ford's 1939 "Stagecoach" which scored big. This was part of a Ford retrospective of 13 features back to his silent days.

Outdoor screening arrangements, as before, comfortable, big and cool but unfortunately were rained out three days out of 12. Screenings then transferred to a local theatre . . . Jury member Michel Simon, the French oldtime star of Swiss origin, was elected prexy and also spent time studying English for his role as Burt Lancaster's father in "The Train" which rolls in Paris this summer. Simon saw Lancaster for the first time in "The Leopard" which screened (out of competition) to wind the fest. He was impressed by his dignity but suggested that no Sicilian prince ever had that strength and moral drive . . . Czech juryman Jiri Weiss still waxing sentimental over his American stay when he jurored at the San Francisco Fest last year. He talked of Hollywood hospitality and said he was invited out all during his stay. Noted for his dramas of wartime days, he is now prepping a fairy tale pic . . . Robert Siodmak stayed at his home in nearby Ascona while serving on the jury. This hospitality-saving led to conjecture that Ascona regulars Erich Maria Remarque, Paulette Goddard and George Marton, U.S. play and literary agent, would also eventually grace the jury at future fests.

With no American film distribs or major brass here, not one gin rummy game was reported and the casino got precious little play . . . Wojciech Has came in for the showing of his Polski pic "Golden Dreams" which drew good critical, if mixed, audience acceptance. Has previously won awards at Locarno with his "Goodbyes" and "The Common Room" . . . Yank, French and Italo pix chalked up solid attendance at the fest.

Italo femme filmmaker Lina Wertmuller, who scored with her first pic "I Basalischi" (The Lizards), points out she is Italian in spite of her name. There was a German great grandfather in the family. She was assistant to Federico Fellini for "8½" . . . Locarno documentation and press handling was efficient this year due to the fine organization brought in by Gastone Schiavotto on loan from the Venice Fest where he handles the press under Mario Natale . . . Italo jury member Valerio Zurlini felt too many of the "first films" showed too much self-absorption on the part of the directors . . . Film to him has to comment on the world today, if from a personal viewpoint, but not sacrifice all to personal whims and ticks . . . Joe Given, Swiss foreign film distrib, says he would like to get as many of the first pix shown at the fest as he can. He seemed bullish on them all and especially the Yank indie of Adolfus Mekas "Hallelujah the Hills."

Locarno Hotel Turns Critic

Locarno, July 30.

Italian film, "The Four Days of Naples," which raised German press hackles and led to a Teutonic scribes ankling the Foreign Press Club in Italy when club gave film its award of the year, also was attacked by some neutral Swiss when it led off the Locarno Film Festival July 17-28.

This time it was not any of the few German press people present but the management of the Grande Albergo Hotel that got miffed at the showing of the pic. The hotel directors posted an open letter disassociating themselves from this film. Disapproval was on basis of spreading hate 18 years after the war, "that it was time to bury differences," etc.

Note went on to say that Europe was integrating itself on all planes and it was time to stop harping on the past and look to the present and future. It seems the hotel got into the criticism act since the outdoor Locarno Fest theatre is located in its yard with seats on the hotel porch and down below.

Nanni Loy's "Naples" deals with the four day Neapolitan insurrection against the Germans when the Italo high command capitulated during the last war. If it shows the harsh German reprisals against their ex-ally, it is still a telling warning against the type of organized brutality that was displayed by the Germans during the last war as well as a look at people in crisis and detailing the good and shabby it can bring out in them.

LOCARNO HAS TO SELL SWISS, TOO

By GENE MOSKOWITZ

Locarno, July 30.

"Too many festivals" is a continuing cry of the Federation of International Film Producers Associations. Plainly it aims its disapproval at latecomers, small festivals and marginal promotions generally. Without Federation endorsement certain festivals cannot secure product, notably not American features. The solution for the lesser festivals lies in "specialization," as per the brand-new Festival of Science Fiction Films, reported last issue from Trieste, Italy.

Vinico Beretta who heads the Locarno Film Festival, the Switzerland annual, points out that Cannes itself, the seasonal lead-off event, experienced trouble lining up features of commercial and artistic resonance. Berlin, too, was showing the strain of too many festivals and too few pictures to spread around among them. Moscow tended to specialize in its own way—with emergent nations, party-line themes and the propaganda of "peace." Equally, Beretta feels, there was thinness apparent in the fare at Spain's San Sebastian Festival, which has no reason to like the Federation.

Here at Locarno the specialization emphasis is upon "first" pictures, whether judged by direction, author, composer. The spotlighting of fresh talent is thus a modified slant for a smaller film festival.

Beretta is aware that Cannes has a Critic's Section that specializes in unusual "first films." Indeed some of the Locarno items were from that source. Venice, too, has new talent under an Information Section and gives an award to the best. But Locarno is the first to give Keynote firsts as the main pix.

Beretta pioneered with a special first-try film prize two years ago and now has found this is the way to go. His fest is begrudgingly sanctioned by the Federation, though it has tried to have him cut out prizes. New York's Motion Picture Export Assn. has promised support and attendance but never come through on either.

Specialized fests seem to be the answer. The French Annecy Fest, with its animated items only is in point.

This was Locarno's 16th year as if a "tolerated" event consistently snubbed by the Yanks. This year Locarno finally secured acceptance and financial aid from the Swiss central governmental film office after being run by the Locarno Canton all these years. If national handout is small, $5,000, it bodes the end of hostility from the bigger German-speaking part of the country towards the Romano, French and Italo lingoed, fest and gives it a definite place and niche in spite of its inferior Federation and MPEA status.

A star is a great rarity at Locarno but many filmmakers of Europe turn up. Main aspect is thawing out the conservative Swiss film distribs who are now eyeing the fest and buying many offbeaters. Swiss rarely participate since they make few pix, hardly half a dozen annually, and not many of fest calibre. Swiss producers dread pre-release press comment that may be downbeat.

Move to Unionize Small Town Staff

Eight of 13 Vote for Hospital, Restaurant & Tavern Union as Bargaining Agent

Minneapolis, July 30.

Last week occured what exhibitor circles interpret as a first step to unionize all of the state's film theatre employes, other than projectionists who already, of course, have American Federation of Labor Charter. It was the making of Local 21, Hospital, Restaurant and Tavern Employees union the bargaining agent for the 12 cashiers, ushers, concession stand workers and janitorial help employed by the only two theatres, one a hardtop and the other an ozoner, at nearby Albert Lea, Minn., which has a population of 13,500.

A state labor department referendum in St. Paul resulted in eight of the effected employes favoring the move, four opposing it and one not voting, according to Richard Wanek, state labor conciliator, whose assistant supervised the election from which management representatives were excluded.

Lyle Carisch circuit owning family, residing in a local suburb, recently bought the two theatres and shortly after the acquisition was made defendant in a suit brought by a former house manager who alleges $14,025 is due him in severance pay, unpaid bonuses and vacation allowances.

The union hasn't made public yet what its demands will be for the 12 employes. A contract now is being drawn up. The state labor office states that after this is presented to the theatres' owner it may be called upon to conciliate.

Minnesota exhib leaders are pointing out that the majority of theatres employ mostly teen-ager part-time help. Some believe the threatened unionizing "could be the straw to break the camel's back."

CATHERALL'S NEW POST

Los Angeles, July 30.

Phil Catherall will manage National General's new Fox Peninsula Theatre, in nearby Rolling Hills Estates, set to open Aug. 7. He swings over from similar post at Loyola Theatre.

In another NG appointment, William P. Mauck takes over the Fox Redondo.

Robert Velaise

actor changed his mind about making that one, too, and was "almost sued" before he finally made it.

Velaise's plans for that "big comedy" are to make a real "zany," as he calls it, picture—a kind of combination of "Hellzapoppin" and the British "Running, Jumping, Standing Still Film," which, incidentally, Sellers also made but not for him. It would be a spoof of British aristocracy, title hunters and such, he said, and noted that the Duke of Bedford had granted him permission to use his Woburn Abbey for some of the filming. This too will have a host of writers, with Bod Godfrey directing and Mankowitz supervising the production.

Other Projects

As far as the "Jane Eyre" remake project, Velaise said that he has been talking to James Mason and Susannah York about appearing in such a film. He pointed out that Darryl F. Zanuck owns the property but commented that he might sell it in return for distribution rights on the new version. All this is yet to be settled, however.

Velaise also owns a novel by Fitzroy Maclean, a British member of Parliament, called "A Person From England," which is a story of Russia in the time of Queen Victoria. Scripter John Mortimer has written a treatment and Velaise has been dickering with Alec Guinnes about appearing in it. No director has yet been set. There's also a deal brewing which would involve Velaise and Italian-born British producer Joseph Janni, who recently did "A Kind of Loving," in an Italy-France-England coproduction, with Janni covering Italy, Velaise covering France (where he also lives and works) and the two going 50-50 on England.

What is an investment banker doing in the film biz so far immersed in production? "It amuses me," Velaise said. He also gave more serious reasons such as the fact that, in his estimation, the climate for foreign films is vastly improved around the world, particularly in the U.S. He noted that, among his financial dabblings through the years, he once owned a theatre in Louisville, Ky. He has made several trips to look over the import scene in the States, he said, and finds conditions very good right now, although he mentioned that "Wrong Arm" had performed unevenly, though successfully, while playing around the U.S.

His deals aren't just limited to theatrical features either. His French company makes tv films and he just last week set a deal with Screen Gems, buying 57 French-dubbed Columbia films which he'll make into vidseries for French and Canadian tv primarily.

Judge Checks Area In Which Circuit Wants to Build

Los Angeles, July 30.

So he might be closer to the area on which he was to rule in National General Corp.'s application for permission to build a 900-seat hardtop in Orange County, about 45 miles from Los Angeles, Federal Judge Edmund L. Palmieri of District Court for the Southern District of N.Y., convened his court here last week for hearing, when NGC general counsel Harold Lesser presented the circuit's position to court.

Following one-day hearing (24) Judge Palmieri next day made a tour of the proposed site with a view to finding a basis for any ruling. During tour, he made a survey of proximity of other houses in the area. Court clerk has sent a certified copy of his minutes taken during the hearing to Judge Palmieri's clerk in N.Y. Judge Palmieri has taken matter under submission and is expected to write an opinion or memo when he returns to N.Y.

Judge Palmieri, in explaining why he was hearing NGC's application in L.A. rather than in his own N.Y. court, stated the object was to better view the proposed site of the theatre in question and to view other theatres which have been acquired by various Consent Decree defendants in previous applications.

Prior to his return east, Judge Palmieri was guest of Lew Wasserman at Universal City.

James B. Harris bought "The Bedford Incident," Mark Rascovith story, for $100,000 for his indie program and will discuss cooperation with Defense Dept.

Hal Wallis has Janet Leigh on five-pix pact following her performance in "Wives and Lovers."

British Frown As Film Fests Over-Multiply

London, July 30.

Once again the Federation of British Film Makers hits out at the number of film festivals. In its annual report, it frankly declares "there are too many festivals and the currency has been debased."

Federation, however, notes some encouraging signs. The International Federation of Film Producers Assns. seems likely to follow a policy of greater firmness, and it is also probable that festivals which have no real value will wither from lack of support.

Many festivals, the Federation comments, are realizing that if they wish to survive, they must create their own special personalities and have some definite and different purpose in view.

330 on Contract

production. Quite a few players are under pact for specific series, and if the series involved were to end, many would be pink-slipped.

At Revue-U, for example, one studio exec estimated the number of actors under contract for tv was about 8-1 over those ticketed for pix exclusively. A number have two-way tickets, for both tv and pix. There are many kinds of pact deals, exclusives, non-exclusives, option deals.

Much the same is true at Columbia-SG and MGM. Metro has 25 players under pact exclusively for tv; eight exclusively for pix and tv; 12 for pix non-exclusively; 14 for pix on option deals; four, non-exclusive for tv.

Col has 28 thesps under pact, nine exclusive. SG has 54, 34 exclusive for tv, 30 on option deals in tv. Of these, four work for Col also.

Paramount has 21 pactees, only one exclusive. The 26 20th players include two on exclusives. Warner Bros.' 21 pactees break down to 16 on exclusive in tv and pix, five non-exclusives in pix.

Britain's Probable Toll Licenses

London, July 30.

Within the next six to eight weeks the Post-Master General is expected to name the companies which have been allocated franchises to operate tollvision trials in Britain. It can be confidently predicted that the awards will go to:

Choiceview Ltd., owned 50-50 by the Rank Organization and Rediffusion. Will be allocated either the north or west area of London, and either Leicester or Nottingham in the Midlands;

British Telemeter Home Viewing, which holds the British franchise of the American "Telemeter" process, and in which British Lion and Granada, among others have a financial stake, will be allocated the Wimbledon area in southwest London, and the Manchester territory; and British Relay Wireless, a consortium which includes Associated British Pictures, Associated Television and British Home Entertainment, will have the Victoria area in south-west London, and a yet-to-be-determined provincial territory.

There are other companies still in the running, among them Tollvision, which is headed by Rudy Steinberg, and another operated by the Sagall brothers, who launched the Scophony tv system in the 1930s. Neither of these outfits has its own landline facilities, but it is understood that the other companies have given an assurance to the PMG that their cables will be made available, if necessary, to other pay tv companies.

The three major relay outfits control more than 90 per cent of the piped facilities in Britain. Rediffusion and Rank between control about 50 per cent of the relay business, British Relay Wireless, some 30 per cent, and Telefusion upwards of 10 per cent. The lines of the latter company will be used by Telmeter in its Wimbledon trial.

With the trials scheduled to start by October, 1964, the pay-tv companies are already getting down to basics, and are in the process of forming their own trade association. But until contracts with the PMG are finally agreed and inked, there is a cautious attitude towards programming although all are agreed in principle that interchange of programs between all companies in all areas is an essential prerequisite to economic operation.

Kramer Re Films As 'Weapon'

in session and some hours before the awards were decided, Kramer hinted obliquely at dissension in the jury, but frankly admitted that many of the competitive entries were very bad, and at a rough guess estimated that at least 20 fell in that category. He had discerned a good deal of anti-Americanism in many of the films, but the Red treatment of anti-American themes had not been nearly as honest as their own.

Cubans, Who Else?

Among the features with anti-American content, Kramer particularly singled out the Cuban film, "12 Chairs," and when he made an adverse comment on it to a fellow member of the jury, he was asked whether he reacted in that way because it was anti-American. "Not at all," he replied. "I think it is anti-Cuban, because it is so bad."

Kramer opined that he had spent an important two weeks in Moscow, and that the United States had adopted a new tack by coming in numbers and bringing in the right people. "The important thing," he noted, "was that they liked us and responded to us." The entire festival had been a tremendous studied effort to gain knowledge, and from that standpoint had been most exciting.

Commenting on the festival theme of peace, understanding and humanism, Kramer reckoned that the last word was an important one to the Soviets, who suffered from operating under an established policy. They were operating under the limitation of "humanism," but creative people were straining within the bounds of loyalty, and there was an inevitable loosening up because "creative people will create."

In the battle of ideas which were frequently and freely exchanged, the Americans had been provocative, argumentative and challenging, and had substantiated their arguments with an "unheard of package" including such titles as "West Side Story," "Judgment at Nuremberg" and "The Defiant Ones." These had clearly demonstrated the freedom to comment in the United States, and this led Kramer into the explanation of his tussle with "Izvestia" over the omission of the translated lyrics of "America" from the first "West Side" showings. He forced a climb down from that official organ, which subsequently published a retraction in a box. Kramer believed that the reception to the U.S. pix had given credence to the belief that the Russians were hungry for good films.

Kramer also referred to the facilities offered to Abe Polsky, the student of cinematography who had accompanied him on the trip. He had been allowed to have the services of a Soviet camera crew, and they had filmed items of interest creatively, such as the Moscow film school, the Kremlin Palace of Congress (the venue of all competitive screenings), the film workers' union, as well as sound interviews with creative people including actors and actresses.

The press confab, held at the Sports Palace immediately prior to the screening of "The Defiant Ones," was opened by Stevens who, speaking on behalf of the U.S. Info Agency, said how grateful he was to have been supported by such an excellent group of people and he specially named Kramer, who had an excellent reputation, and whose films were highly regarded in the Soviet Union.

The films that had been shown during the fest, both in and out of competition, "had whetted the appetite of the people of this city," Stevens added, and he revealed that the Russians wanted to but "The Great Escape" under the Cultural Exchange plan.

Also attending the press conference (and subsequently taking a bow at the 'Defiant' screening), were Sidney Poitier, who had arrived for his 48-hour stay only the night before, Susan Strasberg and Susan Oliver. Owing to the severe tight programming, they had no chance to participate, and could only add star glamor to the proceedings.

'Mutiny' & 'Grimm' Multiple-Playdate Tactics Promising

Metro has put its big-budget "Mutiny on the Bounty" and "Wonderful World of the Brothers Grimm" into multiple release in some areas throughout the country this summer and is posting some solid results in areas with the plan.

Opening in a 24-theatre spread in the Pittsburgh area last week, "Mutiny" hit a sock $12,000 in its first day of play. The pic has been playing this type of policy in several locations since the beginning of the summer with nice effectiveness in both hardtops and drive-ins.

"World," in which Metro is partnered with Cinerama, opened last Wednesday (25) in a 25-theatre break in the Los Angeles area, rolling up a substantial $25,000 tally its first day. The pic had previously played to strong biz last year in its firstrun engagement at the Hollywood Cinerama Theatre. This current break is the first multiple run in L.A. for the film and additional openings are skedded later this summer in various cities around the country.

Opus Productions Inc. has been chartered to conduct a business as motion picture producer, with office in NYC. Capital stock is 200 shares, no par value. Resnick, Barr & Resnick are the attorneys.

'GONE ARE THE DAYS' SET FOR TRANS-LUX, N.Y.

"Gone Are the Days," the film adaptation of "Purlie Victorious," Ossie Davis' Broadway comedy dealing with the racial situation in the South, has been set to have its world preem at the Trans Lux East Theatre, N.Y., toward the end of September.

Hammer Films presentation, produced and directed by Nick Webster who also adapted the Main Stem original with Davis, stars Davis and his actress-wife Ruby Dee, both of whom essayed the same roles on Broadway. Likewise, several of the original legit cast members are also repeating in the pic.

Moscow Fest

Stanley Kramer succeeded in getting Sidney Poitier over for the final weekend for the showing of "The Defiant Ones" at the Sports Palace. "Judgment at Nuremburg" had the additional distinction of being screened at the Palace of Congress on the Monday after the close of the festival.

"West Side Story" was also given a Palace of Congress showing after its earlier presentation, and Stanley Kramer took the opportunity of rebutting allegations made in Izvestia that the lyrics of one of the numbers had been deliberately withheld. To prove his point he recited the words to the 5,000-plus audience.

'Sporting Life'

"This Sporting Life," the Rank prize winner at Cannes, which Walter Reade's Continental is distributing in the US, was also presented at the Rossiya on several occasions and subsequently given the big gala treatment with a Palace of Congress showing on Saturday night (20) when the final festival attraction was the celebration of the Soviet Cinema Day in Gorki Park.

Allied Artists "Billy Budd" was also enthusiastically acclaimed, and its director and star, Peter Ustinov, had powerful ovations when making personal appearances before each presentation. Among other out - of - competition films were "The Leopard," which won the Grand Prix at Cannes, "To Die in Madrid," "Man and the Brute," and "Germinal" from France, the Greek-made "Hand," and the Peter Sellers starrer, "Heavens Above."

One of the highlights of an over-crowded agenda was the appearance of all the Soviet cosmonauts on the stage for the final prize giving ceremony, which was followed by a full three-act version of Swan Lake, by the Siberian Ballet. Another was the Soviet Cinema Day celebrations at the open air stadium in the Gorki Park, which seats upwards of 12,000 people. Additional chairs had to be placed in the aisles to accommodate the crowds. This was the sixth national celebration of the event, which has as its slogan the quote by Lenin that the cinema art is the most important of all the arts. The proceedings began with familiar-type speeches by Russian film personalities, followed by a star studded concert in which the participants included many of the festival guests, among them Yves Montand, Peter Ustinov, Georgia Moll and artists from many other countries.

Like all international events, the Moscow festival was an active deal-making session or many of the participants. But Western nations found it tough trying to come to terms with the Russians on prices for the films in which Sovexport displayed interest, but negotiations are continuing in many cases, and there is a confident belief that talks started during the fest will come to fruition in the coming months. The Russians also indicated that they would like to take the official US entry "The Great Escape," under the Cultural Exchange agreement. Dave Lewis, Metro's Paris-based continental manager, was also negotiating on several d.als.

As a tail piece to the Moscow story, festival secretary Vladimir Pozner is dickering with the thought of holding the 1965 event in February so as not to subject the guests to the trying heatwave conditions experienced this year and in 1961. But February is one of the coldest months of the year in Moscow, so he could anticipate grouses of the opposite kind.

Embassy Distribution System Spreads Into Cleveland, Kaycee

Embassy Pictures' plans to increase its domestic distribution setup from 10 to 12 branches have now been widened to the consideration of 15 offices around the country by the year's end. The company has already brought its total to 12 and it now looks like an additional three will be added to help strengthen the web.

The two latest additions are in Cleveland and Kansas City. In the former city, Lester Zuker is heading the office, handling Cleveland, Cincinatti and Indianapolis. In K.C., John Long has set up shop, handling that city and Des Moines and St. Louis. The addition of these branches was projected at Embassy's first national sales meeting in New York last winter.

Increased product and other factors are cited as reasons for the revised blueprinting of yet another three offices. The company has quit a few deals going, the product from which is either ready for release, completed, in final stages, in work or about to begin. Execs at the company feel that, in order to handle this flow, it is best to broaden the sales staff, especially considering the special selling job that some of the pix require because of their particular natures.

LESLIE CARON RUES SCARCITY OF ROLES

San Sebastian, July 30.

"Even though diminished American film production has created tangible problems for Hollywood stars who love their profession, the self-respecting actor or actress has only the choice of sitting it out in anguish until the right script comes along or finding a niche in the theatre.

This is the stand French-born Leslie Caron takes at a time when film assignments generally are shrinking. Her San Sebastian appearance was timed to screening of the British entry, "L-Shaped Room," at the Basque film fest. The film also marked her last appearance before cameras, some eight months ago.

She rejected the current film trend toward independent production as a means of acquiring more frequent assignments. "The actor who takes on the role of producer gets so involved in the commercial end of film-making, he almost inevitably achieves nothing but low-brow, low-grade commercial films," Miss Caron said, citing her own experience in "Guns of Darkness" produced by her now disolved Concorde banner.

"Television is tempting but does not provide a solution to the film actor's problem of steady work. The opportunities," she said, "are practically negligible. TV is mainly concerned with producing the insignificant average movie that Hollywood has abandoned years ago."

She mentioned the British Oscar she won in "L-Shaped Room" in support of her attitude that the actress today can still accumulate rich rewards, even in a time of restricted professional employment, by patiently sifting through scripts offered until the right part turns up. At the moment, she is interested in Italian stage director Franco Zeffarelli's plans to recreate the life of Camille, completely divorced from the Dumas story and screen it as a realistic treatment of a harlot in the true climate that brought Alphonsine du Plessy to quick fame and an early death.

Pasadena Big For Those Operettas; Helps Tuesdays

Los Angeles, July 30.

Colorado Theatre in nearby Pasadena, a sentimental community, has been reaping a tidy take from Tuesday night showings of MGM Golden Operettas series, distributed by Seymour Borde & Associates. Theatre manager Carl Meeker, as a result of his promotion campaign, has been named winner of contest staged by Borde.

Meeker's campaign is attributed by distrib as being responsible for up to 1,500% increase over normal biz. House on a Tuesday night usually takes in about $80.

Colorado grosses for the 12 films in the series, screened on Tuesday nights, were: "Rose Marie," $798; "Merry Widow," $1,095; "Great Waltz," $1,209; "Sweethearts," $1,121; "Chocolate Soldier," $934; "Girl of the Golden West," $1,072; "New Moon," $802; "Student Prince," $1,014; "Maytime," $1,128; "Brigadoon," $998; "Firefly," $783, and "Bittersweet," $1,018.

MGM, acording to Borde, is prepping another series of musicals and operettas for Fall and Spring release.

Colorado is one of Fred Stein's Statewide Theatres.

John Hatcher has purchased the Rietta Drive-In Theatre at Henrietta, Tex., from Claude Thorp. Hatcher recently came to Texas from California.

IATSE CARD-HOLDERS TRAVEL ONLY DELUXE

Hollywood, July 30.

Six locals have won an arbitration against Daystar Productions, in a case involving the issue of first class transportation for 21 crew men of the International Alliance of Theatre & Stage Employees.

Locals complained that the men, working on a Daystar pilot last Oct. 27, had been flown to Seattle and return in a jet tourist plane, and that their pacts called for first class transportation. Arbiter Benjamin Aaron, ruling for the unions, held that their pacts have provisions requiring first class transportation, disallowing "substitution of a lower class of service, however excellent the quality of the latter may be." The union men involved each were awarded $36.19 in damages.

Locals were IATSE's local 80, grips; 659, cameramen; 695, sound; 705, make up; 706, costumers; 728, electricians. Leon Choolock and Lindsley Parsons Jr. were production managers on the pilot involved, "Mr. Kingston," which starred Walter Pidgeon and Peter Graves.

Israel Fest

the Israel Philharmonic, the New York "Pro Musica" group, famed Indian dancer Shanta Rao and American actress Agnes Moorehead.

The trouble is, that this is sandwiched in between appearances of pianist Artur Rubinstein and singer Richard Tucker, who ended performances just before the Festival began and appearance of dancers Dame Margot Fontayne and Rudolf Nureev, who will start performing right after the Festival ends. Part of the Festival's potential audience apparently preferred to spend money on these performances.

This is cause for quarrel between organizers of Festival and management of Israel Philharmonic, which played host to Rubinstein and Tucker. Festival accuses Orchestra of throwing the monkey wrench into Festivals's wheels.

While the Orchestra management denies this accusation, it airs grievance against the Festival, which is overpaying guest musicians, thus wrecking the Israeli cultural market. Many of the great Jewish musicians, Rubinstein among them, play for the Orchestra free and in any case, the Orchestra doesn't pay more than $500 for an evening's performance. The Festival payed last year $6,000 to Igor Stravinsky for appearing as conductor on three half-evenings. Since the Festival's losses are subsidized by the Government, while Orchestra is 90 percent selfsustaining, this is unfair competition—the Orchestra claims.

Vanguard's Detroit Preem For 'Girl In Trouble'

Detroit, July 30.

"Girl in Trouble," Vanguard International's new film, will have its world preem at the 5,041-seat Fox as result of a deal consumated between Stanton H. Davies, of Davis Film Distributors, Boston, and the Fox's Herman Cohen and William Brown.

Davis said the engagement will be backed by an extensive promotional campaign which, also, will be used throughout the country in subsequent engagements.

the Jew "as a man with a big cigar yelling at his mother-in-law." In any case, she argued that "the essence of good drama is that which is larger than life." And that "depicting reality too perfectly" is one of the things that has been hurting Hollywood.

On industry responsibility, she commented, "is it our responsibility that thousands of girls got sick dieting to look like Lana Turner? Or that thousands of idiot women became suspicious of their husbands because of all the movies in which secretaries stole the husband from his wife?

"When the Parent - Teachers Assn. complains about what's on television for children to see why don't they mention that parents are quite free to say, 'Shut off the tv, Johnny, and go out and play.'

"We always get it in the neck. We're treated like criminals no matter what. Nobody seems to realize we're not a philanthropic industry. Nobody ever thinks of us as people who have to earn a living. They asked me, 'Why do you do that junk?' when I did a 'Virginian.' I'll tell you why I did it—it was earning money for my family for six weeks. Not that I have anything against the 'Virginian.' It's fine in its own area—but not for me."

trouble was the governors, split by Gov. Nelson Rockefeller's proposal for a civil rights resolution, had abolished their Resolutions Committee. Thus, they couldn't have any resolutions.

The upshot was that Stevens buttonholed individual governors to urge they take leadership positions in their states for the Center's money drive.

Proof Not Necessary To Free Will Baptists

Detroit, July 30.

A resolution urging the censorship of films, tv and magazines to "protect the morale of our society," was approved by Free Will Baptist Women attending the annual meeting of the National Assn. of Free Will Baptists.

The resolution asked the women to write letters to supervisory officials in the various media "protesting the tolerance of obscene magazines and pocket editions and lewd Hollywood movies that are having an adverse effect upon the morals of our society." No titles, facts, evidence or proof of charges were given.

The women were told to write to "major television networks commending the work of censorship in the past and requesting that for the sake of morals in our country that an endeavor be made to keep television programs wholesome for family viewing."

'B' Market Today

getting berthed by the RKO, Loew's and Stanley Warner circuits, among others. He describes it as a good, salable action picture, sans names, but professionally done, and available to exhibs a nice, uncomplicated flat terms.

In addition to the production cost advantage enjoyed by working in the Philippines, Lynn pointed to the benefits to be earned by a Philippine-made picture in the Philippines. Though the Philippine market is not an especially easy one (it is a ready market for the best pix from the U. S. and Europe), and thus highly competitive), "Lost Battalion" earned $25,000 in the Islands, thus putting it well on the way towards recovering its negative cost even before its U. S. release. This also insures a continuing cash flow which allows him to continue picture-making with some semblance of regularity.

Cash-Flowback

It was the cash-flow situation which prompted him, Romero and Pizor, eventually, to set up their own State-side distribbery. Lynn has nothing but praise for the kind of "economic, cost-conscious, realistic" distribution organization operated by AIP's Jim Nicholson and Sam Arkoff, but he says when you go through an outside distributor, the producer must be the last person to see any money. "After they deduct the distribution fee, print and ad costs, etc., it takes at least a year before you get a dollar."

It was for this reason they organized Hemisphere which they admit to be something of a gamble, as is everything in the film business. It's their estimate that they can set 60% of their top dates—that is, circuit bookings—from New York, before turning the film over to states righters. To keep the overhead as low as possible, Hemisphere also will handle pix other than those turned out by Lynn and Romero in the Phillipines, and, at the moment, have two reissues, the spectacles "Queen of Sheba" and "Rape of Rome" (formerly "The Pagans"), on the agenda.

Their future production schedule, with no picture skedded to go over $100,000, may include pix slightly more ambitious in the way of U. S. "names," though not necessarily stars. According to Lynn, the U. S. "names" may not seem to mean much in themselves, but they "help cover your bet" if your B pic doesn't turn out to be quite as entertaining as you'd expected. A circuit booker will more readily be inclined to risk his flat rental on dull B with a "name," more so than on a dull one without a "name."

Hemisphere is leery of color pix, even though it might enhance the booking lure, for the simple reason that a color pic means tripling of the print cost, and that's a comparatively sizeable consideration in relation to the original B budget, and in terms of the limited market.

Hemisphere's next skedded pic is to be "Amok," which is to be shot principally in the southern Philippines at Zamboanga. Pic, which deals with murderous religious fanatics indigenous to the area, will start in either late October or November.

Other Producing Nations Got Grief, Too: Word From the Wise

Hollywood, July 30.

"The whole world has its runaway problems," producer-director Robert Wise observed last week upon his return from 13 months abroad. Noting production is down in Japan, Rome and other film centers, Wise revealed he was approached for coproduction deals in nearly every foreign area he visited. Additionally, he said, filmakers throughout Europe are making deals outside of their areas in far greater number than have been done before.

Slack in production is most notable in Rome. Japanese two years ago produced 550 films, last year made 450, expect only 350 this year, Wise reported. Major problem lies in subject material and style of film which makes it generally marketable only in a limited area. Significantly, more American pix are taking up this market and have become far and away the major product exhibited throughout the world, Wise observed.

Producer said he experienced marked interest in the reports coming to foreign filmakers "that Hollywood is dead" and noted, paradoxically, "There is such interest abroad in Hollywood films that we certainly aren't dead in their eyes." Producer also asserted, "The Academy Awards have more significance than do any other film festivals" and said he saw adyertising constantly pointing to award winners and Oscar pictures.

Producer said he met with film organization reps in Madras, India, world's largest producer of pix, where he observed an organization made up of producers, film personnel, distributors and exhibitors. Wise said his observations indicated success of such an organization, which, he asserted, would be of value for the U. S. industry.

Producer spent 10 months in England filming "The Haunting" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, remaining three on world travels. Tour was partly on behalf of worldwide release of "West Side Story," which, he revealed, has been cut in Eastern distribution for violence in the rumble knife fight sequences. Wise said he "gave permission to do whatever is necessary in any area to get the picture played."

Producer also revealed "Two For the Seesaw" will not be shown in Japan because "they like action pictures and 'Seesaw' is almost entirely dialog." Wise said he became conscious of action requirements abroad, stressing "That doesn't mean I will change the kind of pictures I will make, but I will be aware of the visual importance."

Producer is now prepping "The Sand Pebbles," from Robert Anderson script, on approximately $4,000,000 budget for 20th-Fox. Picture originally had been on the Mirisch Co. slate, but moved to Fox.

FIVE-STORY SCREEN

800-Car Ozoner Also To Buck Canadian Winters

Ottawa, July 30.

Bob Maynard, operator of the now-shuttered Francais filmer, is building an 800-car ozoner to cost $400,000. Drive-in will be operated by Odeon of Canada and will have expansion area for 400 cars, transistor speakers and 300 in-car heaters to permit winter operation.

Maynard said the screen will be the height of a five-story building. Site is close to Ottawa's new Queensway, a through-city limited access highway.

Columbus Review Board Snappish

Columbus, O., July 30.

Battle is shaping up between Victor Goodman, chairman of the Columbus film review board, and two City Council members, Mrs. Golda May Edmonston and William R. Fornof. Goodman impugned the motives of the two in voting against an amendment he proposed which would reduce the number of board members required to review films from five to three. The proposal was defeated 5-2.

Fornof told Goodman that is he can't get present board members to review films, he should get "more conscientious" members. "No one has shirked his duty," said Goodman. "It is very difficult to get five board members to review a movie because each of the members has his own work, family and civic obligations."

Goodman said he would recommend that the next vacancy on the board go to Fornof. "Then we will see how quickly he will accept an assignment when it inconveniences either him or his family," said Goodman. "He will receive no salary for this, as he does on council."

The board chairman accused Mrs. Edmonston of being inconsistent. "She says that the local laws are not powerful enough and she insists on a censorship bill, but censorship is illegal and I have pointed this out to her numerous times."

"If she is so appalled at obscene movies she should not vote against something that should make our board more effective. Either she doesn't understand the situation or she doesn't believe what she says. She sounds off on a moral plane but doesn't do anything about it."

Goodman said it was "absurd" of council not to go along with the amendment. Answering a criticism by Ken Prickett, executive secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, that exhibitors face "harassment" by the board, Goodman said "we are not trying to harass the industry. If that was our intention we could do that at the present time."

Goodman said City Council should take stock of board operations and said that "either we operate effectively or we should stop operating." He said the board has been helped "immeasurably by co-operation from Mayor Westlake and Safety Director Giles." He said "we feel we have been judicious and have moved wisely. We have kept a number of bad movies out of Columbus by our constant surveillance."

Theatreman Builds Links

Albuquerque, July 30.

The former president of Albuquerque Theatres Inc., Louis C. Higdon of Dallas, has entered a new field of entertainment. He is building a $150,000 nir hole golf course in Albuquerque on which construction has already started. He expects to have it open for business in mid-November.

Higdon was president of the local chain (a subsidiary of Frontier Theatres of Dallas) from 1956 to 1962, operating the setup from Dallas. He has been inactive in the theatre business for the past year.

Higdon says he plans to move to Albuquerque next month, to supervise the operation.

Atlanta Burns for 'Cleo'

Atlanta, July 30.

Wilby-Kincey officials, operators of Roxy Theatre, where "Cleopatra" is racking up big business, are smiling over the discovery that they've got the prize engagements of any city in the country outside of the blue ribbon showings in New York City and Los Angeles, where they're getting $5.50 top as compared to $3.30 in Atlanta.

Yardstick used for comparison purposes are grosses garnered by Metro's "Ben Hur." Nationwide take for "Cleo" after four weeks topped "Ben Hur" (or any other road show engagement) grosses by 51.5 per cent, it was revealed.

But, in Atlanta this average pales when the figures show that the increase here tops 100 per cent despite that fact that admission averages $1 per ticket less ("Ben-Hur" played the Roxy for 10 months as a hard ticket outing.)

And Honolulu Bubblys

Honolulu, July 30.

State of Hawaii premiere of "Cleopatra" (20th) will be held Wednesday (7) in Consolidated circuit's Kuhie Theatre with the American Cancer Society set to benefit from the $10 a ticket showing.

Champagne will be served during the intermission.

Next Phase at Universal-Revue Plant Now With MCA Thinkers

Hollywood, July 30.

Decisions on implementing the next major phase of MCA's expansion plans for its Universal-Revue studio will be made before the end of this year. They are contingent on traffic studies now being made, and on a general study of the problems involved.

While MCA hasn't yet decided how many new film stages will be built, tentative plans call for construction of additional motion picture and vidpix stages. Construction has already begun on a new looping and dubbing stage, and is under way on the Universal City complex and the Technicolor lab.

Meanwhile, 250,000,000 pounds of dirt are being removed in a leveling program aimed at making operation of the studio more efficient. MCA may raze some of the older shop buildings to make way for new stages.

Company has already allocated $22,000,000 on expansion plans previously reported.

Diversified, Techni Inc. Presents Bettered Sales And Profit Half-Year

Technicolor Inc. with its diversified subsidiaries earned $1,703,199 for the sixmonth period ending June 29. This contrasts with $828,607 for the like period a year ago. In terms of share equivilency the contrast is 64c a share to 31c a share. Around 2,650,000 shares are out.

Consolidated sales were revealed by chairman Pat Frawley as $38,288,423 for the first half as against last year's first half of $27,609,554. Translated increase in sales volume: 38%. Marshall Burns Division is chiefly responsible for sales zoom.

Directors Guild Picks

Hollywood, July 30.

Directors Guild of America's second quarter nominations include entries by 20th-Fox, Allied Artists, Paramount and Columbia Pictures. Quartet include:

"Cleopatra" (20th), directed by Joseph L. Mankiewicz, assistant, Fred R. Simpson; "55 Days at Peking" (AA), Nicholas Ray, Jose Rodero; "Hud" (Par), Martin Ritt, C. C. Coleman Jr. 1 "The L-Shaped Room" (Col), Bryan Forbes, assts. Gerald O'Hara, John Quested.

NEW JERSEY HARDTOP

Architectural Pinned To Tilted Walls and 'Dome'

Reade-Sterling has plans for construction of a new type of hardtop theatre at Eatontown, N.J. The 800-seat house, which is expected to be a prototype for other houses to be built by the circuit, will consist of an elliptical parabolic shell, with reinforced concrete "tilt-up" walls, capped by a geodesic dome.

House will be adjacent to—but separate from — circuit's Eatontown drivein. Completion scheduled for early 1964.

'Premiere Showcase's' 22, Largest Number to Date, For 'Toys in the Attic'

Eight new theatres have joined United Artists' "Premiere Showcase" plan for the presentation of the Mirisch Company's "Toys In the Attic," which makes its Gotham bow today (Wed.) in 22 theatres, including the Astor and Cinema I.

This is the largest number of houses coralled by the plan since its inception and also marks the first time that Skouras Theatres, one of the larger local circuits, will be participating. Heretofore, "premiere showcase" lacked circuit participation and therein has been the basis for some of the criticism of the plan by industryites. In fact, five of the eight new theatres are Skouras houses.

Italo Auspices for N.Y. Premiere of 'Leopard'

U. S. preem of 20th-Fox's "The Leopard" will be sponsored by Vittorio C. de Montezemolo, Italian consul general, at New York's Plaza Theatre Aug. 12.

Prof. Giuseppe Cardillo, director of the Instituto Italiano di Cultura, will cosponsor the event. Pic stars Burt Lancaster, Alain Delon and Claudia Cardinale and was directed by Luchino Visconti. Miss Cardinale and Visconti are expected to be in Gotham for the preem.

Seven Arts and John Huston have set Rudyard Kipling's "The Man Who Would Be King" as last of director's three-pix deal with company.

Choice of Authors Given; N.Y. Quotes 'Variety' Critic Vs. Mayer, of Same Sheet

Albany, July 30.

VARIETY continues to be mentioned in legal papers filed on checkerboard moves and countermoves made by appellant and respondent in "A Stranger Knocks." This is the Danish picture which the State Education Dept.'s Motion Picture division ruled, last May, cannot be licensed unless two "obscene" scenes are deleted.

The ruling was unanimously upheld by the Board of Regents on June 27. Trans-Lux Distributing Corp., holder of the American rights, seeks to have Appellate Division, Third Department, issue orders annulling the Regents' decision and directing the issuance of a seal.

Louis M. Pesce, director of MPD, cited Stef's critique, in VARIETY, Nov. 2, 1960, as one of the reasons for denying a license, without cuts—in his "answer" to Trans-Lux's first petition, to the Regents.

Both Weisman, Celler, Allen, Spett & Sheinberg, attorneys for appellant, and Charles A. Brind, Regents' counsel, list the VARIETY review among the exhibits to be included "for the record" before Appellate Division.

And Harry W. Rand, who is handling the case for the New York firm, cites in appeal papers filed Friday (26) former exhibitor and constant essayist Arthur Mayer's affidavit, among several by "names," approving the film's artistic and dramatic merits, and denying that "in the context" two sexual scenes are obscene." Paradoxically specified in the affidavit, is the fact that Mayer is "a frequent contributor to magazines, such as Saturday Review and VARIETY."

Mayer writes: "I have seen the motion picture and in my opinion it is a serious work, which was written, directed and acted with professional competence. The appeal of the work is not to prurient interest. Moreover, two scenes to which I understand objection has been made, viewed in the context of the scene, do not appeal to prurient interest. While the film explores the close intimacy between a man and a woman, in sexual terms, I do not believe that the subject is handled in such fashion as to offend any reasonable and mature man or woman. It is my opinion this film, rather than appealing to prurient interest, is a work of professional competence which explores a moral problem of genuine significance."

COLUMBIA DISPLAYS ITS 14-PICTURE FUTURE

Columbia Pictures will release 14 pictures in the next eight months, according to plans detailed by veep Rube Jackter at the company's three-day sales meeting in New York last week. In addition to Jackter, the homeoffice and field executives heard talks by prez A. Schneider and ad-pub veep Bob Ferguson.

Col's release schedule calls for the August release of Jerry Bresler's "Gidget Goes to Rome," to be followed in September by Irwin Shaw's "In The French Style," starring Jean Seberg, and "The Three Stooges Go Around The World in A Daze."

The remainder of the sked includes: October, Carol Reed's "The Running Man," with Laurence Harvey and Lee Remick; William Castle's "The Old Dark House," and Hammer Films' "Maniac." In November, "Under The Yum-Yum Tree," starring Jack Lemmon and Carol Lynley; December, Otto Preminger's "The Cardinal," which will be a hardticketer. Also in December, Carl Foreman's "The Victors," will have prerelease engagements in New York and Los Angeles going into national release in February.

Going out in January are Stanley Kubrick's "Dr. Strangelove, or: How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love The Bomb," and William Castle's "Straight-Jacket," starring Joan Crawford. Also going into release early in 1964 are Fred Zinnemann's "Behold A Pale Horse," starring Gregory Peck and Anthony Quinn; Robert Rossen's "Lilith" and "The Long Ships," with Richard Widmark and Sidney Poitier.

Previously questioned about the "always smiling" quotation, Garner said, "I don't know. If I had $15 million, I would do nothing but smile." Did Miss Day drink only milk? Garner thought this possible, but added, "I am allergic to it (milk)." He had never "heard her (Miss Day) say anything mean."

recently bought a 500-acre tract of land on which it put up a studio and that another stage is currently under construction. The operation is now set up to produce as well as service other companies as it did with "Zulu" and also it is actively interested in luring foreign productions to its doors, which is among the reasons the studio is backing his projects.

Herrick Trio

Titles of the Herrick pix are "Ingue," "Kalahai" and "Pretorius." Basil Keys will produce the films and Herrick will be exec producer. Terrence Young, British director who recently did "Dr. No" and has made several pix, is also a possible director for the first of the upcoming films which will either be "Ingue" or "Pretorius," the latter a war pic. It is still a good four months before the pix are due to roll, Herrick pointed out, and no casting has yet been set.

His deal with the Yank company is a package deal for worldwide distribution of the trio. The plan is to use actors of international reputation and the budgets are such as can stand that strain, he said, "Ingue" being figured for $3,000,000 and the other two for $1,250,000 each.

Herrick also noted that there are several other studios that are working there, including a 20th Century-Fox studio. They are all relatively busy he said, doing commercial films as well as features. Several ad agencies have offices in South Africa, he noted. Several local films are made there every year, with local stars et al performing and there are crews of solid knowhow, he mentioned.

These pix play well locally, as does Yank product and that of Britain and other countries. There is no television to offer visual competition, which is a help. Most of the local films don't see exhibition in other world marts, however, although there have been a few which have been shown in United Kingdom.

It's all part of an ever-broadening vista in which the film biz has been spreading in recent years. As countries like South Africa develop, they begin to seek outside investments in a variety of industries, the picture business seemingly one of the most popular. South Africa happens to be a wealthy country, too, with all its mineral resources, and so it may prove a lure for filmmakers who are seeking capital and cheaper facilities, Herrick offered.

ATAS: A Credo for Employment

A statement of policy on fair employment practices to the 1,500 members has been issued by the New York Chapter, National Academy of Television Arts & Sciences.

Issued by the organization's board of governors, the statement reads: "As a medium which has a tremendous impact on the lives of most Americans, television should be in the vanguard in giving proper representation to all groups that make up our country. The New York Chapter of the National Academy of Television Arts & Sciences, representing a cross-section of the industry, deems it its duty to remind the television industry of its responsibility to reflect the realities of the Amercan scene by employing and truthfully representing all facets of our population. The advancement of the arts and sciences of television, a stated purpose of the Academy, requires no less.

"This applies especially to the Negro. There are in America Negro ambassadors, Negro judges, Negro doctors and Negro lawyers as well as Negro housewives and workers. There is no reason why television should not take pride in this fact and reflect this pride in the casting of its programs.

"All Americans must be afforded the opportunity to make their contribution in front of and behind the cameras, as well as in other areas of television, solely upon the basis of ability.

"We call upon our members and everyone else in the television industry to take all possible action in support of the spirit of this statement."

Statement is signed by Chapter president Royal E. Blakeman.

CBS Putting up 2/3 of Coin In British Pay-TV Partnership Deal

London, July 30.

Under the deal in which British Home Entertainment Inc., which is gearing to supply programming fare for toll television in this country when and if the Government gives the greenlight, is involved in a partnership arrangement with the American CBS network, BHE and CBS will jointly buy and produce theatrical properties with CBS putting up two-thirds of the money.

These properties will be available for sale to toll television in England and for free tv in the U. S. over the CBS network. If BHE picks up a property in which CBS is not interested, the U. S. network has the right to pass on that product without making any investment.

The partnership has teed off with the production of the "Royal Ballet" with Margot Fonteyn and Rudolf Nureyev. Other productions under consideration are "The Velvet Knife," the Peter Ustinov play, and "The Hollow Crown."

David Susskind, president of Talent Associates-Paramount Ltd., has been named exclusive representative for British Home Entertainment in the U. S. He'll scout properties for BHE for production either in Britain or the U. S.

British Home Entertainment is headed by Lord John Brabourne and has on its board such names as Sir Lawrence Olivier and Anthony Havelock-Allen. It's expected that the British government will give the greenlight to toll-tv sometime in 1964. Under the suggested setup, the companies controlling the wiring will be completely separate from the companies offering the programming fare.

Trick of the Week

Those Sudsville scripters may be getting too subtle. Anyhow, some folks can't tell the victims from the killers on CBS-TV's "Secret Storm."

Character Harry Crawford is due to be throttled Friday (2). He's been portrayed for the last 14 months by actor James Dimitri. An agent called Dimitri last week to tell him he had submitted him for the part of the murderer.

London, July 30.

Hopes that Metro's vidseries "Harry's Girls" would return to production in this country after completing initial shooting in south of France have been dashed by Metro. Producer, it seems, is not under any circumstances ready to pay British artists Screen Actors Guild residual rights on a series produced in Britain. As result

CBS-TV Pacting National ARB's

CBS-TV, alone of the three networks, has decided to negotiate a deal with American Research Bureau for its national rating service. Thus CBS will be evaluating from both the ARB and Nielsen sides of the street. NBC and ABC are just going with the Nielsens.

It's CBS prexy Jim Aubrey's contention that the network can do a better job of evaluating and spotting the program trends by correlating the two services. There has been no record of a hit in the Nielsens, for example, getting a flop status on the ARBs, so to a degree one service complements the other. Hence, CBS feels the two-way spread can only redound to the web's benefit.

CHAIRMANSHIP AT CROSSROADS

By LES CARPENTER

Washington, July 30.

"Mr. Clean," also known as E. William Henry, handsome, well educated, well mannered and, at age 34, the chairman of the FCC, stands at a crossroads.

The intelligent young man of many gifts most likely knows which way he is going. For those with a heavy stake in his attitude toward broadcasting, much rests on which way.

As FCC is now constituted, it is propelled, if not gutted, by politics and the jockeying for subsequent position. The question arises as to whether men who answer the million dollar questions involving the broadcasting industry want a future in politics or in money.

Does, for example, Henry see himself, in not too many years, as governor of Tennessee or as a U.S. Senator from the state in which his hometown of Memphis is a populous part? Can he, long beyond midnight, as he dreams, see a border state governor or Senator with his tall physique, who has made the television set in everybody's living room a symbol of white knightism, taking the oath of office as President?

Or, in less of a gamble for a fine attorney, does he look ahead to the riches and the fine things that will accumulate for his daughters (one of whom is currently in Caroline Kennedy's White House nursery school) if he leaves government for a law practice with major corporate accounts?

Such questions suggest an ulterior motive behind a man who may have none—consciously. But they are, nonetheless, germane in any analysis of one of the most high-class men who ever walked into the FCC's doors.

Henry has style. More important, he has competence and Robert F. Kennedy behind him. There is, further, the self assurance that breeding combined with mental excellence can guarantee.

So is Bill Henry, the man and the chairman of FCC.

There is a difference between Henry and his predecessor, Newton Minow, also a man of vast intellect, but one of a different background, taste and ambition.

Minow's appetite for a reward from Government service, with its modest pay and personal harrassments, seemed to lie in the newspaper headline. He became a national celebrity, known by name to millions. For him, that seemed to be satisfaction, and he left for a

CBS, NBC Reiterate Pro-Negro Stand on Casting But Meaningful Drama on Integration Still Lacking

By MURRAY HOROWITZ

"That the Negro be adequately and accurately depicted in programs appearing on the CBS Television Network" was reemphasized in a recent memo by Mike Dann, v.p. in charge of web programming.

The short, three-paragraph memo, similar to the one issued in the spring of '62, said "The Negro should be depicted as he lives in today's society. Sensitive consciousness in casting Negroes in dramatic programs should be maintained.

"There are many Negro doctors, lawyers, school teachers, engineers, policemen, nurses, jurymen in everyday life today. We wish to maintain realism about having them appear as such in our dramatic programs." The Dann memo, circulated among CBS-TV staff producers, outside producers, and packagers and ad agencies supplying shows to the web, ended with a "Thank you for your cooperation" sentence.

In the spring of '62, Hubbell Robinson, then senior v.p. in charge of web programming, issued a similar memo, addressed and circulated among the same parties. Whole intent of the Robinson and Dann memo is to get away from the type casting of Negroes in the past, and to use Negro talent creatively in drama series, casting them in roles ranging from angels to heavies, and in-between characters.

At the same time NBC-TV program chieftain Mort Werner in a reiteration of network policy (addressed to all network producers and other interested parties) emphasizes: "producers are urged to cast Negroes subject to their availability and competence as performers, as people who are an integral segment of the national society, as well as in those roles where the fact of their minority status is of dramatic significance."

Perhaps the two series best realizing the intent of the memos on CBS-TV have been Herb Brodkin's "Defenders" and "Nurses" series. Both are N. Y. based shows and have been the pace-setters for the web, and next season out, David Susskind's "East Side, West Side" also is expected to follow the "integrated" pattern. Actor-playwright Ossie Davis, who happens to be a Negro, furnished the script for an "East Side, West Side" outing. In these shows, Negro talent is slated to receive major, as well as minor roles, as called for by scripts.

Next season, CBS-TV's "Great Adventure" series will have one episode devoted to the heroic work of Harriet Tubman before the Civil War. Miss Tubman, a Negress, was one of the leaders in

Gleason's 14 Scripters

Fourteen scripters have been lined up to make the "Jackie Gleason Show" funny next season on CBS-TV. The 14 for the "Great One" consist of seven regulars and seven contributors, the latter hired on shortterm, possible in and out basis.

Regulars are: James Shelton, Walter Stone, Snag Werris, Hank Ladd, Andy J. Russell, Marvin Marx and Syd Zelinka. Irregulars are: Hugh Wedlock, Al Schwartz, Bill Carr, Howard Harris, Sid Reznick, and the team of Dan Shapiro and Jerry Livingston.

CBS-TV to View Press, TV, Radio On Civil Rights

In a program of self-examination, unprecedented in the annals of network tv, CBS News has designed a program to explore the way broadcasting and the press has handled the current civil rights battle in America.

The program, slated for the night of Aug. 21, will be an hour affair, starting at 7:30 p.m. It could be called broadly "How Journalism—Press and Broadcasting—Has Handled Civil Rights News." The program will go into charges that the networks have been partial to the Negroes cause, charges made by southern and northern segregationsists, in and out of the Halls of Congress, charges that the presence of tv cameras incites riots, etc.

Charles Collingwood, CBS News correspondent, will be host. The design of the program will find Collingwood reading representative mail received by the network on its news coverage of the civil rights battle, and going over news and editorial treatment of the same issue in the press. Collingwood at one time was the man of "WCBS-TV Views the Press."

There then will be panel dis-

Levy's TV Series Addams-Inspired

David Levy, the ex-NBC program chieftain, has negotiated a deal with Filmways for a half-hour situation comedy series being projected for the '64-'65 tv season. It will be based on seven characters evolved by cartoonist Charles Addams, with the latter as co-packager.

Preliminary to development of the series Levy has been huddling this week with both Addams and Lee Moselle, president of Filmways. Later this week Levy goes to the Coast to conclude the dickers with Filmways board chairman Martin Ransohoff and Al Simon, head of the company's tv subsid. He's also negotiating for writers and casting. Levy will produce, with Addams serving as consultant. No title has been chosen as yet.

Editorial Hearings Got 'Sneak Previews' In 1953 On WMCA

By HERM SCHOENFELD

The surprise angle about the recessed Congressional investigation into broadcast editorializing is not that the Washington solons decided to tackle this thorny issue, but that they waited a decade to do it. It was precisely 10 years ago that WMCA, N. Y., moved to shatter the broadcaster's traditional facade of neutrality by frank on-the-air pronouncements by the station's management on the issues of the day.

When WMCA's boldness paid off with a reversal of the FCC's "Mayflower decision" against editorialization and failed to incur the predicated storm of squawks and controversy, other broadcasters took the cue and also plunged into editorialization. Currently, about 10% of the nation's 5,000 radio and tv outlets set aside time for formal editorial statements.

Editorialization has proved to be one of the primary ways for the broadcaster to dig roots into the local community. In view of the fact that many cities and towns of the U. S. are one-paper communities, the broadcasters, where they were not owned by the newspapers, have emerged as a counterbalancing voice on local issues.

Although the D. C. probe was sparked by the irritation of some Congressmen over the endorsement of some candidates by stations, this has not at all been typical of the broadcast editorializers. In fact, less than 150 stations in the whole country have taken stands in election contests. The rest have avoided this area completely, recognizing the inherent dangers in political partisanship.

Far more typical of the broadcast editorial is their firm position for civic virtue and against sin. Broadcasters have taken up the cudgels for Community Chests, more church attendance, school bonds, more parks, public safety measures, better law enforcement, etc. One metropolitan station exec came out four-square a few months ago for more cooperation among local welfare agencies in dealing with unemployment among youth.

This type of editorialization, while frequently valuable in focussing public attention on an important civic problem, are not calculated to generate much opposition among politicians and viewers. These innocuous pronunciamentos have, however, helped to entrench the broadcasters' right to make statements on more disputatious issues.

Pioneer in editorials, WMCA, under the ownership of the late Nathan Straus and currently R. Peter Straus, has also taken the lead with freewheeling on-the-air flyers for and against important public figures who have been in a position to retaliate. The station hit the jackpot when it challenged the N. Y. State apportionment law in the courts and was upheld in the U. S. Courts last year. The young Straus' maximum utilization of the station as a public forum has given rise to speculation that he is angling for a high political post.

Editorials in favor of Negro struggle for civil rights have been frequently heard on northern stations, particularly in the big cities with large Negro populations. In the south where the question is far more explosive, some stations have also dared to speak out in favor of a responsible attitude towards upholding the law. In this respect, WWL-TV, in New Orleans, has displayed outstanding courage in attacking civic business leaders for abdicating their responsibilities and leaving their communities to the mob.

The effectiveness of broadcast editorials is not easily measured, but they undoubtedly have their impact in arousing communities to action on specific issues. The danger has been that broadcasters in making editorial statements sometimes two and three times a week have diluted an influence that could be much stronger with more discriminating use.

The Washington hearings have established the fact that broadcast editorialization is here to stay. Spokesmen for the networks, chains and independent broadcasters all insisted on their right to express their convictions on the

What They're Saying About Option Time

VARIETY asked a group of key station operators to comment on the FCC's recent action in banning network option time. Here are some of the responses:

Mitch Wolfson, Pres., Wometco Stations: "Each time the FCC intrudes itself into the normal business relationships between networks and stations, it is, of course, a matter of concern; and it is even more worrisome when programming is involved. Censorship wears many disguises. Networks and stations, as a matter of mutual self-interest, had over a period of years evolved a relationship in network affiliation contracts, which on the whole seemed workable and satisfactory. Most stations will, of course, not try to twist the networks' tails since they realize that the essence of broadcasting, as we in the United States know it, depends on strong networks which can develop the talent and afford the facilities for creative and imaginative programming.

"I am hopeful, therefore, that the ruling abolishing option time will not have any substantial effect, and that the stations will continue their stable relationships with the networks. The networks then will not only continue but will increase their investment in and attention to programming for the diverse tastes of all segments of the American public."

Jack Harris, Gen. Mgr., KPRC-TV, Houston: "It is my feeling that there will be practically no effect on network programming during the coming season.

"I have never felt that option time was a restraint on stations. The fact that so much time has been cleared for networks is the result of the networks' being far and away the best supplier of program material.

"Over the years the syndicators have seldom come up with a product comparable to that produced by or for the networks.

"I recall that during the Barrow hearings, the syndication companies indicated it was the lack of prime time which prevented their producing first class first-run material.

"Now we will see, beginning with the 1964 season. If the syndicators do, indeed, come up with quality first-run material, then I believe there will be an increasing tendency for stations to become more selective of network fare which they will carry. However, I am not convinced this will be the case. My guess at this stage is that the elimination of option time will have minimal effects on network clearances."

Hugh B. Terry, Pres., KLZ-TV, Denver: Where affiliate and network enjoy a relationship of mutual respect, confidence and understanding, I have never believed the 'option time' provision was important . . . thus, I see no great danger in its elimination. From a practical standpoint an affiliate is going to carry the majority of programs available from the network—that's why it affiliated in the first place. And, as always, the affiliate has the right to reject any program it believes to be undesirable and not in the best interests of its service to the community.

"The issue at hand is not one of option time, but rather one of common sense. The affiliate must recognize the network's need for nationwide time clearance if a client is to invest his money in true network programming. This is essential to the present and future economic health of the network. The network must recognize the local station's need for programming, other than network, in every time period. This permits the station to do a good local job, to be a vital part of the community, and consequently become a stronger, more effective affiliate.

"I say let's bury option time and operate under our own Golden Rule of Television—Do Unto Others as You Would Have Them Do Unto You. The affiliate needs the network. The network needs the affiliate. Our nation needs both."

Willard Walbridge, Gen. Mgr., KTRK-TV, Houston: "The present exhumation of the option time corpse appears to me to be both unwise and unnecessary. The day is long gone, if indeed it ever existed, that networks would say—You must take this program because it is in option time. In more than 20 years of dealing with all three networks, there has not been one single instance of this in my experience.

"In the delicate balance that exists in the relationship between station and network, option time is the fulcrum on which it rests. The balance is maintained by mutual need. The network remains the primary source of programming with resources far beyond the capabilities of the station. The station is the licensee, and, as such, is the well-established final word on acceptance.

"The test of the efficacy of this arrangement lies not in legislating more comprehensive option clauses, nor in throwing out the clauses and thereby inviting chaos. The fact is that most, if not all stations in the United States take more time from networks than the past or present option hours require. We do it because this avails us of the best method of getting proper public attention in our program flow. We weigh the strength of what is available elsewhere, what we can produce ourselves, and what the network offers, and predictably it comes out that networks offer greater diversity and quality.

Harold Essex. WSJS-TV, Winston-Salem: The responsible telecaster is not going to let the elimination of option time make any difference in his efforts to program his station, to the best of his ability, in the public interest.

"The problem may come from those operators who see in the deletion of option time an opportunity to fatten the cash register. It is quite possible that many good, but low rating programs in the educational, cultural and public affairs categories will not get clearances on some stations now that the 'must' of option time is no longer there.

"Should this come about, the Commission may have defeated itself in its zeal to improve programming.

Harold Grams, Gen. Mgr., KSD-TV, St. Louis: "It is my opinion the new option time ruling will have no effect on programming. What more can I say?"

Bob Dillion, V.P., KRNT-TV, Des Moines: "In my opinion, the option time ruling will have little, if any effect in most markets in the near future and very little in the long view. I believe stations will clear about the same amount of network program time that they have in the past. Most stations in he past have preempted network programs in option times in order to schedule programs, particularly in the public interest, and I believe they will continue to do so.

"I believe most stations find it difficult to produce, on a regular basis, many programs which are good enough to stand up against the competition, nighttime especially, and most stations find it difficult to buy programs which can compete. Thus I don't believe the stations will be able to wisely program very much more time than they do now.

"It seems to me that lack of available local program content, lack of local personnel time and ability to produce, and lack of quality programs to buy are important reasons for my view that little change in programming will be brought about by the new ruling."

Otto Brandt, V.P., Crown Stations: "Network option time, schmetwork option time—what about station option time?

"The lamentable aspect of the demise from the station's point of view is the simultaneous abolishment of station option time. That area of the schedule that until now has had built around it a high fence with a hands off sign plainly in view. Now the entire schedule is fair game for the networks. True, the station has theoretic control, but the facts of network-affiliation-life are such that life is bound to become more complicated—and ironically, without any drastic programming changes taking place.

"Furthermore, during the past several years I can't recall a single network program-clearance discussion during which the network has even mentioned the words network option time.

"Makes you wonder."

Ward L. Quoal, Exec V.P., WGN-TV—"In my opinion, the ban on option time, scheduled for implementation on Sept. 10, will have very little effect in the customary relationship between the three networks and their respective affiliates.

"In previous broadcast assignments while in the employ of network affiliates, I have testified before Congressional committees in behalf of option time. Even though a major portion of my responsibilities today embraces the management of a non-affiliated television station, I still believe strongly in option time.

"I do not see how you can have a network without it or at least without some working arrangement with affiliates so that the network is sure of its position in making sales commitments for programs in particular time periods to advertisers. If it were not for the substantially harmonious relationship which exists today between the networks and their respective stations, the ban on option time could be very disrupting and could decimate much of the approaching program schedule especially in the public affairs area.

"Network programming, however, has been good and is improving constantly and affiliates are happy with it. That is why very little effect, if any, will manifest itself, at least in the initial period of the implementation of the ban.

"We at WGN television are in an unusual position in regard to this development. First of all, we believe the networks need option time and we have, therefore, supported it, a view 180 degrees removed from most, if not all other, independent stations. Also, with our highly competitive program schedule in this market, there have been periods in the last few television seasons when we have captured a larger share of the audience

"Certainly, we will not solicit network program traffic. As a practical matter, our schedule is firm for the '63-'64 season. However, any station obviously would covet some of the network vehicles, so we are not going to make a statement that we would never be interested in one or more of these programs if they did become available.

Paul Morency, Pres., WTIC-TV, Hartford: "I am not at all certain what the effects, if any, the new ruling on option time will have on the tv industry. We have always tried, and I think on the whole successfully, to reach agreements as to network programs carried in consultation with the network rather than by the enforcement of any rigid rules. We have found this method works out much better for both parties.

"For the whole program schedule to be effective we certainly must have the great network programs, and the wonderful news coverage in depth which only they can provide. To have a complete program schedule we must include then, the local production, local news dissemination, and the other important local events and problems.

Donald Swartz, Gen. Mgr., KMSP-TV, Mpls.: "Network option time, in my opinion, is in the public's interest. An individual station must look to suppliers for diversity in programs by the network or independent producers.

"Prime time program development, being most important to the long range plans of an individual station, has been best served by the networks. The networks have been willing to sustain the financial burden of program development, therefore the

Looks Like France's Second Network Only A 'Token' Gesture

By GENE MOSKOWITZ

Paris.

That also-ran story, about the new second station for the state controlled television here, now gets another fillip due to recent revelations. Yes, it will still bow in April '64, after several years of false alarms, but it looks like it will be a token affair, and cover only a small part of the country, for some time after its bow.

Minister of Information Alain Peyrefitte, under whose aegis the governmental radio and tv arm, Radiodiffusion-Television Francaise operates, recently made the familiar notation that the new Channel will tee off in '64 and that Paris will even have some token programs at the end of '63. But he admitted that a long delay would be in store before it could service the whole country.

Actually it is estimated that at the rate things are going it will take seven or eight more years to cover all of France. In '64 Paris, Lille, Lyon and Marseille will tee off to tap the most densely populated and set owning sections. But that will only represent about 1,640,000 receivers able to get it out of the over 4,000,000 in operation.

Add to that deterioration that could ensue to sets with new channel additions. They could rust or become obsolete by the time the section of the country is able to get the second channel. And it will need 115 big emitters to cover the same territory served by the present station with 44.

Main problem has been in the financing, making the RTF go-ahead piecemeal instead of being able to have a definite overall work sked that would have made advancement easier. Actually, the much discussed and written about station has not even officially appeared as such in the governmental official journal. It is only mentioned as an adaptation of a 625 line definition in the wavelength setup allocated to France.

The present station has 819 lines but new lineage was adopted for easier exchanges with other countries. But no actual treasury loan has been set up for it and there is only one emitter extant, used for experiments and aligning currently building emitters for the coming web.

Put Off Since '59

To go back a bit, the new chain was first announced in 1959 for autumn of that year. Then came the reversal and note that it would be '60, and then '61. Finally in '61 the principle of a loan was devised by the Council of Ministers to have it an operating realty by '63.

But now, after some early '64 tries, it will have three hours a day in April '64, with five hours on Sunday (this 23 hours weekly is about half the original web beamings) for Paris, Lyon, Lille and Marseille. What happened was that funds were not forthcoming and the RTF used up its reserves and put in its electronic orders only in late '62.

For '62-63 the amount to the second web planning was $46,600,000. So it did not give enough for personnel, programming handouts low a true timetable, thus bringing on the longtime span between the actual start and the final serv-and for materials to be able to folicing of most of the country. There are also dead area bugs to iron out in the sections that will be able to get the new station.

Added to these problems was the spat between film producers and tv people. Former wanted more vidfilm work, more French films shown on tv and a chance to balance bad biz by more income from hiked video programs coming their way. Some has come but not enough.

It is still not clear whether there will be a commercial and advertising opening in the pending station. It is felt that financial gaps will call for it. Meanwhile it is being talked up as complimentry to the present one via more entertainment series, newscasts etc., but still being weilded as a public service adjunct rather than a free wheeling show biz arm.

Present station has seen some freer newscasting and brighter visual coverage as well as more, if still small in volume, good dra-

THE CHAIN GANG SPEAKS UP

By DONALD H. McGANNON
(President, Group W)

Although Group ownership has been with us for many years, it has not been properly or fully defined, especially as to its potentials and responsibilities. I am glad to express at least the attitude of Group W—the Westinghouse Broadcasting Co.—in the increasingly critical area.

Broadcasting opportunity, expressed most simply by the number of licenses available to a Group, is a thing dynamic, demanding, precious, perishable. It is ever evolving, never still—can never be totally or perfectly fulfilled. The raw material of time is fleeting, the minds and hearts of people are unquiet; hence, the challenge — the responsibilities—are broad in scope and magnitude.

From one point of view, the privilege of having multiple licenses substantially broadens the economic base of operation. At this point the opportunity of the Group owner begins to take shape and meaning.

It is our belief in Group W that multiple licenses mean more than just an added coupon clipping process. Extra profits coupled with the opportunity of compound creative staffs and personnel means added broadcast potential. This is peculiar to multiple ownership, stemming from the complex station base; as a consequence, in our belief, it is a concomitant responsibility. We don't believe a Group owner can just sit on his potential—he must as a responsible and enterprising broadcaster strike out for the new and the good.

Thus, Group ownership occupies a strategic position between a network on the one hand and a single station on the other. A network is national in scope and direction. It cannot and should not attempt to direct its strength to the individual community. The network shares with the Group only one advantage: the resources in money and manpower are more extensive than those of the single station.

But the network lacks the specific community attachment of the Group-operated stations. In programming and other areas, the network must operate on a kill-or-cure economic base that applies to several hundred stations, in disparate communities, across the nation.

Achieving Common Philosophy

A single owned station can act in the interests of the community much as a Group station. Economics restrict it to doing little more than an excellent local job. A multiple owner can utilize the service of a vast creative manpower pool in achieving a common philosophy, in enhancing the basic, local service, and in securing talent or processing programming that would not be feasible for one station. Thus, the integrity of the station Group is based on broader economics and regional perspectives.

Let me illustrate how, in the past several years, we believe a higher level of service to the public was achieved in various ways at Group W.

1) Personnel: We have collected at the corporate staff level an outstanding experienced group of broadcasters, dedicated to pioneering new and ambitious goals for the art. They are men who enjoy working in an atmosphere that represents a national cross section and dimension but also approaches a small, intimate, executive atmosphere in which they can freely and effectively voice creative ideas and suggestions. The most direct realization of their worth is the counseling, advice direction, trouble shooting, etc., made available to the individual station whose broadcasting effectiveness is, accordingly, that much improved.

Similarly at the station level within the Group—where job functions are the same as in any other station—the competitive verve and opportunity to achieve advancement afford higher opportunity and appeal for experienced personnel who represent a powerful totality in attacking any creative or management problem. It was just such a Group that planned and projected the programming concept of Mike Wallace in the first instance, then the successful Allen Show and now the upcoming Mike Douglas Show. It is these station people, with their new found and expanded experience, who are now directing these endeavors.

I have used programming as an easy illustration of the great values and outstanding manpower available to the Group—similar opportunities exist in engineering, sales promotion, fiscal, public affairs and management.

2) Group Projects: The limitation of staff, money, and facilities sometimes hampers or destroys a fine creative programming concept. In order to overcome this, a Group operation is often able to attract talent that would otherwise be unwilling to do a show for exposure in one community. The Group is also able to finance an effort that would be infeasible for a single station. The net results is, in my opinion, a whole new area of programming flowing from Group operation. Let me give you a few examples:

a) The Children's Specials

These are a series intended to have broad application for the many age brackets of children's audiences, as well as adult's. Most prominently, they have included:

"Magic! Magic! Magic!" featuring Julie Harris, Zero Mostel, Melbourne Christopher
"First Concert" with Robert Shaw and the Cleveland Symphony
"Black Nativity" in cooperation with Gospel Inc.
"People and Other Animals"—Jane Fonda, Bobby Morse, Ivan Sanderson
"Baird's Eye View"—Bil & Cora Baird

b) Public Service Conferences

Several years ago, in order to try to find a higher level of discussion and exchange in a totally non-competitive area, Group W undertook an industry-wide seminar for the purpose of exploring new ideas, attitudes, techniques, etc. in the field of local public service programming. So far, four of these have been held with the fifth coming up in the fall of 1963. It is hoped that some industry value came from these meetings. WBC justified this considerable expense and undertaking through the experience and learning gained by the staff and station personnel of its own organization.

c) The Steve Allen Show

As I mentioned above, this was born of the planning and deliberation of the creative people of the WBC organization. It is predicated upon the need for programming of the five WBC tv stations and precipitated by the decline of feature film products and the serious limitation of new firstrun material for local syndication. The Steve Allen Show is now in 41 markets and doing very well in audience acceptance. The undertaking also affords a new outlook for talent, performers and creative people beyond the traditional three customers and their suppliers. Such a project as this, multiplied many times among similar situations present within the industry spell out a significant stimulant for new talent and the vehicle by which local talent can move into the national bloodstream of the industry.

d) The Mike Douglas Show

This was also a part of the program planning that created the Steve Allen Show. In this instance, however, the plan was to bring a high level of production and star value to one community. It would cost more than would normally be the undertaking for a local show in order to develop a vehicle for use beyond the original station. Such a plan obviously cannot be achieved by an individual station. The Mike Douglas Show has been very successful locally and will very shortly be made available to the other Group W stations and to stations outside the Group.

e) The Washington and Foreign News Bureaus

These bureaus supply a national and international news service to the WBC radio stations and affords these stations the opportunity to treat global and national questions through the statement and persons of individuals well-known within that community. Group W is the first multiple owner to establish such bureaus. They are costly, but have been extremely successful and have more than justified their cost in light of the service to the six radio stations alone. They also complement the news coverage of the five group W television stations. Our reporters have made virtually every Presidential trip since 1958. They broadcast a multitude of live programs from the last two Presidential conventions and accompanied the candidates on their harrowing campaign trips prior to election. Many other facts of this journalistic effort could demonstrate the significance and importance of such activity.

f) Special Radio Projects

A substantial group of radio projects including: Helen Parkhurst's, "Growing Pains," Bergen Evans', "Of Many Things," "The Voices and Sounds of World War II," "Africa—Peace Corps Plus One," Series on "Alliance for Progress," documentary on alcoholism, "Here's How," documentary on schizophrenia, "Twisted Minds," a series on "The National Purpose," and many others afforded to our radio stations and non-WBC stations a degree and quality of programming that couldn't have been achieved without the combined resources of a group of stations being applied to the task.

g) Communism

The subject burns brightly in everyone's awareness and recently an arrangement was made with Time, Inc., to utilize a primer entitled The Meaning of Communism as the basis for a television series. Professor Marshall D. Shulman, Professor of International Politics, Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy, will do 21 one-half hour programs for television on this subject. The series will be more than just passing treatment; ultimately, perhaps, it will be considered tutorial in effect. This will be a Group W project.

There are many more instances that I would like to cite but I think that these establish the basic premise: a Group of stations has the potential of achieving higher levels of programming than an individual station while sacrificing none of the close community identity of the individual stations. We have further found it to be a responsibility, one which we welcome. There are many other areas applicable to the advertiser and agencies that are the result of Group activities. This results in a common philosophy which is an assurance to the advertiser of the context in which his message will be presented. It also involves a matter of standards, commercial content and frequency, which in the case of Group W is often more stringent than industry codes) and, finally, continuity acceptance.

These are important elements aimed and designed at not only respecting the public interest but also using these media in a manner that will realize their greatest advertising potential. It is a series of substantial assurances to the advertiser of the effectiveness of his purchase.

I have read and heard about the alleged leverage that Groups have in dealing with networks, etc. I reject this because it is untrue. Group W is affiliated with all three networks. Our contracts are standard. We preempt network shows for the presentation of editorials and public affairs features, but beyond that, our clearance record is as good as many or most of the industry when consistent with the public interest. Group W feels it is important that as a Group it must not be subservient but must speak out on important industry issues. However, this conviction is in no sense anti-network and is highly in favor of three strongly competitive tv networks and the previously workable system of option time, as long as it would be limited to three hours in a given time segment.

Our dealings with other elements of the industry is on an arm's length basis with no group discounts given nor preferential concessions sought. In my opinion the impact, value and effect of the Group, despite its substantial age, has not been realized. I think it has to take its proper place in the industry and fulfill its proper contribution to the industry. Multiple ownership affords a broadened privilege and in an industry as dynamic as this, such occasion and opportunities must be captured. I can warrant that such undertaking as Group W has engaged in over the past several years have meant an enhancement of all of our opportunities, including the financial.

By WESTON C. PULLEN JR.
(President, Time-Life Broadcast, Inc.)

Today, in both radio and television, so-called "group operators" are licensed to own and operate more than 1,400 broadcast facilities—a third of all commercial television stations and 25% of the radio outlets. By and large, the group operators—although the term sounds suspiciously like some sort of sinister syndicate—have established excellent records of public service, as testified to by that very recent FCC Chairman whose accolades to the broadcasters were not exactly strewn like rose petals in our paths.

The value of a group operation lies in that hoary equation, "The whole is greater than the sum of its parts." Just as Army divisions in the field draw on Army headquarters for elements which add to their efficiency (although front-line troops will tell you in no uncertain terms where to dispose of a theory like that), so do group-owned stations receive support and sustenance from their group headquarters, and vice by all means versa.

From government, there is seeming harassment of group operators, and hence a challenge to the concept under which they operate. We believe this attitude is a hangover from the days when political philosophy equated bigness (of anything but government) with evil. Today, the world of business and the world of communications is enormous and complex; huge and multi-faceted organizations like General Motors, Procter & Gamble, RCA, DuPont, General Electric and many others have demonstrated beyond dispute that size and efficiency complement rather than battle each other. Astronaut Cooper would not have orbited far if NASA had chosen its contractors from mom-and-pop electronics manufacturers. It takes a Rip Van Winkle to argue that bigness equals monopoly.

A Third Force

In the broadcasting business, multiple owners can be a much-needed third force between networks and individual licensees. I believe they are the best hope of challenging network power and innovation; group operators can provide more services than can single stations, and they can add to the texture of their local television and radio services many threads of broadcasting service that might otherwise never be available to their audiences.

Time-Life Broadcast, for instance, maintains a full-time Broadcast News Bureau in Washington. So do the networks. Their manpower is greater; they are better equipped to relay instantaneously the top national and international stories that originate in the Capital. But those stories must be of equal interest to all the network's affiliated stations and their audiences; network news judgments are predicated on a national audience.

Operation Countdown

By JIM KITCHELL
(NBC News Director)

Cape Canaveral.

Like the man says at the corner Gulf station, "Cape Canaveral—turn left about five miles—just follow the line of tv trucks, they'll get you there." When it comes to major space flights these days, the man is right about the tv trucks for it looks like a massing of television equipment and troops for a royal review. Some of the latest equipment in the line of small cameras, portable video tape recorders, special long lenses, camera mounts and what not pass through the gate at Cape Canaveral. In a sense it is a royal review; one for the master of our very existence—the television viewing public.

It hasn't always been this way at the Cape. There was a time not very long ago when the mere mention of a television camera made the Provost Marshall break out in a cold sweat. Back in 1956 NBC News presented the first coverage of a missile launch from Cape Canaveral—It was ATLAS #2 and ended its flight after approximately 30 seconds in a spectacular explosion. With the telecast of this piece of newsfilm several hours after it happened, the battle lines were drawn. The American people began to learn what half of the state of Florida already knew; that big skyrockets were being launched from a triangular sand bar jutting out into the Atlantic Ocean. A battle of wits started between the press corps and those stuck with the job of trying to hide the launch of 70-foot tall giants that rattled windows 20 miles away when they took off.

Of course, in those days advance launch schedules were not the type of information given to the press types, so they were left to their own devices for acquiring the information.

Typical of these was the encounter I had with the friendly manager one night upon arriving at one of the two existing motels in Cocoa Beach. "Hi, Henri, who's in town?" The reply included the names of several top engineers from the company that built this nation's first ICBM. Having digested this information I decided to retire with the comment that I was tired and would like to leave a call for 7 a.m. The response was unexpected, "Jim, I think you ought to get up earlier." Having acquired this piece of intelligence that a launch was due the next morning, I pushed ahead: "Let's try 3 a.m. then, Henri." "That's a little early" came the reply. "Well, what time should I get up?" I queried. After examining the call list at the switchboard I was told that five o'clock would be a lovely time to take a stroll on the beach and study the beauties of the view. I trotted off to bed secure in the knowledge that I would not miss a story.

Several harrowing experiences during the next few months such as being chased over the sand dunes by air police in jeeps with loaded guns, and helicopters which hovered overhead in order to stir up the sand around our

Radio Plays More Meaningful Role As 'Instant Show Biz'

By ROBERT HYLAND
(Gen. Mgr., KMOX, St. Louis)

St. Louis.

Radio, the senior electronic medium once written off as the declining voice of the past, is proving that it is, instead, the growth medium of the future. It has demonstrated what many individuals are called on to prove: that through adversity comes strength, self-knowledge and a new sense of direction.

Radio is bigger than ever, and its dynamics know no bounds. It's bigger in audience, bigger in the plans of the advertiser, and, most important of all, bigger in community influence.

Far from being eclipsed by television, radio has refused to become merely the sound of a talking picture or a fringe supplement to an advertising budget. Radio is a giant in the prime of life, and it comes closest to being the indispensable medium to both listeners and advertisers.

Why this strength and vitality in the face of the formidable combination of sight and sound offered by television? What lies behind the change from a medium on the defensive to a medium on the move? The answer is significant to all media, for it is not found in better promotion, better public relations, or even in more sophisticated selling efforts. The answer to radio's response to the challenge of television is simple: the medium is producing a better than ever product.

The "Golden Age" of radio is not the era of Jack Benny, Amos 'n' Andy and Charlie McCarthy. It's now. To describe the radio programming that makes up this "Golden Age" cannot be done simply. Today's radio programming, both network and local, cannot be labelled like television programming. It's not possible to say 1964 will be "the year of talk and information programs," or "the good music year," as one might say "the year for situation comedy" or "the season for westerns" on television.

Therein lies one of the major factors in radio's resurgence. For, where television's status is primarily a reflection of the ebb and flow of network offerings, the vitality of radio is largely attributable to its responsiveness to local community interests.

Network radio, with its unparalleled ability to provide instant worldwide news coverage and entertainment features on a "big name" level, remains a keystone in the radio structure. And the supplementing of these network strengths with a variety of creative, locally-oriented programming provides a complete service few communities could do without.

At KMOX Radio, we are well into our fourth year of information programming, in which more than 50 prime daytime hours are devoted every week to discussion with listener participation, of topics ranging from Red China to teenage curfews. Our information programming, at its inception, was regarded as a mere "straw in the wind." But this initial acceptance of programming of substance has snowballed to a popular format now in use from coast to coast.

Formula That Gratifies

Information programming is, in itself, no easy formula to radio success. To win audience, information programming must be planned with care and deep knowledge of one's community, and watched closely and consistently from the management level. But if done properly, it can bring gratifying results, in audience acceptance and increased station stature.

Our KMOX program schedule recognizes a great fact of life in America today. Our better educated, better informed, hungry-for-knowledge listening public is ready to accept programming that would have been regarded as impractical and visionary 10 years ago.

Today's housewife is as interested in, and frequently more active in, community, civic and political affairs as her husband. She is concerned with taxation as with child care, and as eager to expand her cultural horizons as she is to prepare meals her family will enjoy. Our programming further recognizes the fact that American

H'WOOD: $200,000,000 TV RIDE

Man on the Run

Walter Cronkite offers a fairly typical example of how the hot network newsmen are spending their summers before buckling down for the tough competitive season ahead (in the case of Cronkite facing up to an expanded half-hour CBS-TV cross-the-board (7-7:30) show.

If Cronkite is conspicuously absent these days from his quarter-hour evening news strip, it's hardly because he's summering at Nantucket (although he did have a crack at this earlier in July before being called back for the "Town Meeting of the Air" satellite show), but because he's now on Normandy Beach with producer Fred Friendly and President Eisenhower preparing the Normandy invasion hour for "CBS Reports."

What about the balance of the summer "dog days" for Cronkite? Nothing much to speak of, except for a swing of London, Paris, Verdun, Berlin, Vienna, Belgrade, Cairo, Athens, Israel, Amsterdam, Prague and Zurich for shooting on next season "20th Century" series—plus a side trip to Sarajevo for the '64 series commemorating the 50th anniversary of World War I.

ABC Radio's 'Menu for Murder' Bid to Recapture Drama Glory

By HERM SCHOENFELD

Network radio, which came back from the dead to become a humming, but smalltime operation again, now is dreaming of recapturing its lost glories. At ABC Radio, the comeback feeling has been so strong that the web is now venturing into the production of drama, a field which radio long ago deserted to the visual might of television.

Now, according to ABC Radio programming chief Bill Rafael, there is a changing temper in radio audiences which permits programming elements beyond music and news. In fact, the click of several all-talk stations around the country was the tipoff that the public might even go for dramatic dialog.

Hence, ABC Radio has come up with project for a nightly dramatic series under the overall title of "Menu For Murder." This series, which is slated to bow in the fall, will be made available exclusively to the web affils on a syndicated basis since this move into drama is too drastic for a regular network feed.

In rounding up a stable of eight scripters who will churn out the nightly dramas, Rafael has had some difficulty in finding writers with experience writing for drama. Except for some shows being produced in Australia and being marketed in the U. S., the art of radio drama has become virtually extinct. That goes both for the writers, whose knowledge of sound effects has been atrophied by tv, and the thespers, who think they have to ham up their voices to register through the microphones.

Rafael has already fed some sample dramas to the affils through closed circuit lines and has received acceptances from about 50 stations. The affils are being charged 20% of their network hourly rate for the show.

"Menu For Murder" will be a late night series running 50 minutes starting at 10:05 p.m. It'll be a complete drama in a mystery groove each night.

CBS-TV Wraps Up Lotsa Bowl Coin

On the CBS-TV sports card, web wrote biz on bowl games and features accompaning its football series telecasts.

P. Lorillard inked for one-eighth sponsorship of the Bluebonnet Bowl, Gator Bowl and Cotton Bowl, Dec. 21, Dec. 28 and Jan 1, respectively. United Motors Service Division, of General Motors, signed for one-quarter sponsorship of Bluebonnet, Gator and Cotton bowl games. Same bowl games attracted one-eighth sponsorship of Carter Products.

Carter Products also signed for one-third sponsorship of "Pro Football Kickoff." General Mills signed for alternate week sponsorship of College Football Scoreboard starting in September. Bristol-Myers signed for the other alternate weeks.

Red Buttons Series

Hollywood July 30.

Red Buttons returns to tv after a long absence to head up his own half-hour situation comedy show for the '64-'65 season. Deal was closed by Mort Werner, NBC-TV program chief, with General Artists Corp.

Kay Medford of the N.Y. stage will have the femme lead and Don Appel is now preparing the pilot script.

ABC-TV Daytime $18,000,000 Spurt For Single Month

ABC-TV's daytime business is even hotter than the weather, chalking up a sale a day during July for an overall monthly gross of about $18,000,000. That compares with the $7,000,000 in orders for the web's evening lineup during the last month. Nighttime biz, which traditionally slows down in July, was $1,000,000 ahead of last year's July sales while daytime was over $2,500,000 ahead.

Daytime surge is keyed to the fact that ABC-TV will have three premium-priced shows next fall in "The Price Is Right," "Trailmaster," and "Tennessee Ernie Ford." These shows command about $4,000 per-minute compared to the $2,600 minutes in the other daytime shows.

Advertisers who have bought into the premium priced shows include Simoniz, Beechnut, Shulton, Bristol Myers, General Foods, Corning Glass, Block Drug and Coats & Clark. Much of this money represents business coming to the web for the first time or shifted out of other networks. Lever Bros. transferred a $1,000,000 order from NBC to ABC for "Trailmaster," which is "Wagon Train" repeats retitled, and Reddi-Whip moved money from CBS to ABC.

Advertisers recently signed for their first ABC-TV daytime campaigns include Alberto-Culver, Beechnut Gum, Bondex, E. L. Bruce, Exquisite Form, Hubley Toy, Maxwell House, Kimberly Clarke, Plough Inc., Quaker Oats, Seven-Up, Shwayder Bros., Waterman-Bick and Ocean Spray.

ABC-TV's nighttime biz during the past month has come via buys from Chesebrough-Pond, Procter & Gamble, Brown & Williamson, Sherwin-Williams and Max Factor. The web's news shows have also been getting good buyer reaction. Purex has picked the tab for the five-minute daily strip with Lisa Howard titled "News With a Woman's Touch." Sunoco has renewed its alternate nightly sponsorship of the 11 p.m. news with Murphy Martin with Brown & Williamson and Abbott Labs buying the other night. The 6 p.m. news show with Ron Cochran is also in a good sales position with about a dozen different sponsorship participations.

MAJOR STUDIOS' ENORMOUS STAKE

Motion picture companies now gross over $200,000,000 from television programming, according to Bill Fineshriber, who directs the activities of the tv film export committee of the Motion Picture Export Assn. of America.

The "200 - odd million dollar gross . . . from programs only . . . is derived from three sources," according to Fineshriber. They are: "sales of telefilm and feature pictures on the U. S. networks, syndication of telefilm and features abroad." Fineshriber estimated gross for '63-'64 encompassed the motion picture companies belonging to MPAA. Only pix company which could be classified as a major in the pix biz that's out of MPAA is Walt Disney. There are many indies and minor companies, though, that don't belong to MPAA, a factor which would increase the estimated $200,000,000 gross for '63-'64.

In Fineshriber's report to the MPEAA tv film export committee on his six-week tour of European markets, he stressed the importance of tv program sales abroad in the overall economic pattern of the association's member companies. He pointed out that during the '63-'64 season, MPAA companies will supply 26 hours of programming weekly on the national U. S. networks, which, he called "well over a third of all prime-time programs on all three chains.

Above and beyond the $200,000,000, there are other biz ventures of member MPAA companies, as tabulated by Fineshriber: ownership and operation of tv stations and dubbing studios, making of tv commercials, representation of foreign stations as time sales agents, rental of their Hollywood studios to outside tv producers.

Fineshriber said that while the gross income from foreign sales as yet constitutes a comparatively modest share of the total receipts from television, its contribution to net profits is vital to the economic health of all the member companies. Hence, he said, the necessity for continuing development of the export market.

Among the foreign market areas Fineshriber observed, Europe remains far below its great potential as an outlet for U. S. telefilm. Despite growing set saturation in every country and the establishment of additional telecasting channels, the number of hours actually programmed is increasing very slowly. Government and quasi-governmental monopolies in charge of television, strong local nationalisms with their attendant union demands for strict quotas to limit outside product, the lack of competition for viewers' attention, inadequate budgets for the purchase of programs—these are some of the factors holding back proper development of European markets, according to Fineshriber.

Strenuous efforts on the part of U. S. distributors are clearly indicated to achieve better penetration of European tv. Several of the MPEAA companies have recently increased their television sales staffs in Paris, London and Frankfurt; and the association itself has formed active tv committees under the chairmanship of its regional directors in Europe to accelerate market developments there.

For Real Prime Time Strength British TV (Both BBC & Com'l) Looking to U. S. Shows for '63-'64

Whatever BBC's top brasser Kenneth Adam may have forecast about the dimse of American material from the British networks, one thing is certain—it hasn't started yet. Not on BBC-TV nor on the commercial outlet.

Glimpse at the structure of both webs' current schedules shows that British program plotters are still hot on US vidfilm and are using it in an important dual role.

Firstly, far from being squeezed out of the best airtime by local programming, Yank product is holding down many of the key berths in the networks' weekly lineups, forming "cornerstones" of the programming pattern throughout the week. Secondly, American material is generally acknowledged here as the best "troubleshooter" in the business, and the nearest thing to a surefire remedy when the competition becomes too hot. This has resulted in the slotting of American vidfilm against some of the hottest local entries.

In the country's main market, London, a territory probably more keenly fought than any other, the playing off of Yank material against top British product is particularly rampant. For example, at the beginning of the season, BBC put a spanner into the hitherto blissful workings of the commercial web's Monday night sked when it (BBC) brought in "The Lucy Show" at 8 pm. Associated TeleVision's expensive drama production "The Plane Makers" was unable to make any real headway against "Lucy's" opposition and has been bumped from the slot as was "Harper's W1" which also bowed to the U.S. comedienne. Currently, ATV's "Love Story" skein, a year in the making, is narrowing the rating gap.

But "Lucy" still gives BBC the edge on Mondays 8-8:30 in London, a lead which is handed on to the Corp's, pubaffairs show "Panorama." The indie channel only snatches back a convincing lead on Monday nights with another American show, "Naked City," which beams at 9:15 pm and steals the audience from BBC's newcast and "Suspense" drama series.

Important point here is, therefore, that the two major turning points in Monday evening viewing in London are brought about by American series.

Incident is not isolated. On every evening throughout the week one or other of the webs has scheduled a U.S. show that is "holding" potentially strong opposition or is crushing weaker shows into rating oblivion.

Apart from "Lucy" on Mondays, BBC acquisitions like "The De-

'Temple Houston' Sales

"Temple Houston," 11th-hour replacement for the Robert Taylor-Four Star hour on NBC-TV, has picked up a couple of additional participating bankrollers along with those who stuck despite the sudden switch.

Goodyear and Bristol-Myers have made minute buys in the lawyer-man-oater. All told, there are now 31 out of 78 minutes pacted for the fourth quarter.

Sherwin-Williams folded its buy with the folding of the Taylor entry, and Helene Rubenstein shifted its coin to NBC's "Tonight."

Lotsa Muscle In NBC Sportin' Life; $19,142,000 Slate

In the three-web rivalry for sports supremacy, NBC-TV bid close to $1,000,000 to land a single event (the National League football championship game) but that's only a fraction of the story—1/20th to be exact.

Athletic fervor at NBC has culminated in a sports slate this season (September to July) that is worth $19,142,000 on the rate card, and which includes more than a score of specials and several regular telecasts. Football, baseball and golf dominate the lineup, but track, basketball, skiing, swimming, wrestling, motorcycle-racing, bowling, hockey, bob-sledding and table tennis will be on view.

Here are some of the highlights: World Series of Golf from Akron; 83d annual National Single Tennis Championships from Forrest Hills; World Series; Ladies Professional Golfers' Assn. Championship at Las Vegas; Jr. Rose Bowl from Pasadena; Liberty Bowl from Philadelphia; Blue-Gray All-Star game, Montgomery, Ala.; East - West Shrine game from San Francisco; Sugar Bowl from New Orleans; Rose Bowl from Pasadena; Senior Bowl from Mobile; Pro Bowl from Los Angeles; National Invitational Basketball Tournament from Madison Square Garden; Tournament of Champions golf at Las Vegas; National Open Golf Championship from Washington, D.C.; and the 35th annual All Star baseball game.

Regular shows will include a 90-minute variety - sports series hosted by Bud Palmer and beginning in January; Shell's international golf; NFL (pro football) highlights, beginning in the fall; and weekly big league baseball.

FCC Reverses Stand: You Can Now Say 'Cocktail Lounge'

Washington, July 30.

. . . NAB's new liquor advertising guidelines in effect have sanctioned identification of cocktail lounges.

The Code Authority guidelines supersede those issued last August which prohibited the words "liquor" or "cocktail" in ads.

Now those words are permissable if "required for reasonable sponsor identification."

Otherwise the guidelines remain about the same as last year's allowing beer and wine commercials but nixing ads for the harder stuff.

The Code Authority said its new rules can't apply to every situation and emphasized that ad copy in doubt be evaluated by Code officials.

NBC-TV's 3-Hour Civil Rights Entry

In an ambitious program venture out of Bill McAndrew's news division, NBC-TV will preempt three hours of prime time Labor Day (Monday, Sept. 2) to present a telementary on Civil Rights from its beginnings through the turbulent current events.

The three-hour special from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m. will preempt the two-hour "Monday Night at the Movies"; the Art Linkletter show and "David Brinkley's Journal."

Preempted sponsors will be offered a chance to switch their bankroll to the special. The feature film spread has 10 participating sponsors; Pharmacraft and Miles Labs are pacted for Linkletter; and Pharmacraft and Abbott Labs bankroll the Brinkley show for the coming season. NBC News chief McAndrew says the show will draw upon the entire corps of domestic correspondents for analysis of the local scene, and also on the foreign correspondents for reaction reports from around the world.

Brit. Com'l TV Millionaires' Paying the Price ($50,000,000) For Opening Up Their Big Yaps

By HAROLD MYERS

London.

By this time next year, the new Television Act will just be coming into operation, but the intervening 12 months are anxious ones for the entire commercial tv network. There has rarely been a case in British economic history when an industry has been so penalized for success.

Nine years ago, when independent television was launched in Britain, it was anybody's guess whether this would be a hit or a flop. For the first year or two the financial position was, indeed, extremely bleak. Though there was growing public for the commercial programs, losses running into millions of pounds sterling were being piled up by the pioneering companies.

That situation changed dramatically, and instead of the red ink that dismally decorated the balance sheets, all the majors, and the regional companies too, began to announce profits running into millions. The golden era had arrived.

Taking advantage of hindsight, it could now be said that the commercial television industry overemphasised the lush bonanza. Everyone linked with commercial tv was automatically tagged a tycoon or a tv millionaire, and that astute press magnate Roy Thompson coined a phrase that has boomeranged against television eversince. He described his licence to operate a regional network in Scotland as a licence to print money. Smart words and true ones, but a phrase which he must surely regret having ever uttered.

Nine years passes all too quickly, and it was inevitable that at the end of the first term of the Television Act steps would be taken to curb profits. Although divided among itself, the independent television industry is largely in favor of a second network, which, it is argued, would end its monopoly, create more competition and, inevitably, divide the advertising coin between opposing companies. But the Government, under considerable pressure, thought otherwise. The report of the Pilkington Committee which was set up to advise on new legislation, blasted the commercial operation and whitewashed the BBC. The Government yielded to pressure. There is to be a new network, but this goes to the BBC. In all probability there will be a second commercial network, but not before the summer of 1965 at the earliest.

Govt.'s Ideas

The Government's formula for dealing with commercial television profits is to tax advertising revenue on a scale which, it is estimated, will cost the industry $50,000,000 a year. Inevitably, this will have a deep and profound effect on all the companies — hurting profits, affecting quality of programming, and jeopardizing employment of technicians and creative workers. It is ironical that such a tax on revenue, which is believed to be unprecedented in Britain, should have been introduced by a Conservative Government and should have met with the resistance of all the Labor unions in the industry. Had a Labor Government contemplated such a step, the entire weight of the Tory party would have been directed against it. Now, the Tories find themselves honor bound to supporting their own party in a principle which many privately deplore.

How could this have happened? Many insiders believe that it was the result of over-confidence and almost arrogance on the part of the commercial television lobby. After the first shock of the Pilkington recommendations, the lobby got to work confidently expecting that the Conservative Government, which had introduced the original commercial tv legislation on the basis of a minority recommendation, would be on their side. That, apparently, was the first mistake. The others followed because the industry could not agree on a united policy. There was pressure from segments of the press to tax television earnings and the Government yielded to that pressure. More recently, one company indicated that if the Government stood by its taxation decision it would hardly be worthwhile reapplying for a licence. The Daily Express, which has never been a friend of independent tv, smartly volunteered to step in, claiming that a profit of a million pounds sterling was a fair return on the investment involved. That was another maneuvre that boomeranged.

Prospects

But as the time for granting new licences approaches, there is little doubt that all the existing companies, including the small regional outfits which have struggled to survive, will be in the field reapplying for concessions, though many of them will be agitating for better terms. There has long-since been a demand for a reallocation of territories, and the Independent Television Authority took the initiative some years back when it advocated the ending of the existing "mosaic" of broadcasting areas.

Then there is the question of the small regions which are limited to confined broadcasting areas, and have little or no opportunity to reap the rich rewards that have fallen to the more successful companies. Outfits such as Grampian, Border, Wales West and the North, and Westward have had to face problems of survival and have had to call on the help of their big brothers in the industry to keep them going. That, it is felt, is something that will have to be redressed when the new territories are determined.

While the commercial tv side of the industry has had something of a drubbing, there are major developments scheduled in other directions. The BBC's second network, to be known as BBC-2, will be going on the air in the spring of 1964 and will rapidly spread throughout the country. The new 625 line definition system will be introduced at the same time, and color will follow a year or so later. Then, there will be a pay television service which will start towards the end of 1964 for a trial period of two to three years in selected territories. These are the encouraging and positive features of the new legislation.

One serious aspect of the commercial tv tax, however, is that it will probably curb vidpic production, which has always been a

Italo-TV Shifts Into 2-Channel Modus Operandi

By BOB HAWKINS

Rome

Italian television has in the past year become a matter of fact, and its days as a novelty factor and topic of conversation are over. Proportions are now being reestablished between the small screen and its other rivals for public attention, still notably films, more insistently travel and motorization.

At 3,500,000 paid subscriptions for television when last totaled up (but now more probably close to 4,000,000), RAI-TV, the sole Italian telenet, has a reported audience potential of some 16,000,000 homebodies, becoming 20,000,000 if one includes audiences in public places such as bars, restaurants, hotels, etc. For some prime events, 30,000,000 Italians are estimated. The past six months, despite still unbowing set prices (average $200-$300), have seen subscriptions spurt some 500,000.

1964 is felt to be the critical year, in which the first saturation figure is expected to be reached. RAI is already beginning to push radio subscriptions again (current total: over 9,000,000) with a special accent on car radios, which need an extra permit in Italy.

Despite the heavy expenses made necessary during 1962 by second channel installations throughout the country (and perfectioning which still continues in the hinterland areas) RAI still came out handsomely on the books, with income up in all sectors. In fact, advertising figures could be even

Retrospective On the Retrospective

By LEWIS FREEDMAN

I think it can be safely said that the television industry's first retrospective, sponsored this past winter by the Museum of Modern Art, has had no appreciable effect on the industry. Very few people in the business saw more than one or two of the selections and then unusually for sentimental reasons. The only esthetic comment that came to my attention was the remark that the shows seemed more engrossing on the big screen and easier to see, and that it's a shame there isn't some way of getting television out of the home and piped into large dark audiforiums where you can watch it with other anonymous individuals.

However, it was my interesting assignment to look at, discuss, and even think about the drama that was on television since 1948. Certain impressions have remained with me.

Firstly, there has never been so much drama anywhere in the world ever. If drama is "a composition portraying life through action and dialog," then television drama must include horse operas and soap operas, the kitchen sink school and the sinking of the Titanic. It ranged from Doctor Sam Johnson to Doctor Kildare. Comedy had a brief brilliant fling and then spun off into an orbit of its own, wearing such diverse masks as Father, Mama, Lucy, Bilko, and Beaver. The dramatic heroes and Anti-heroes held down every conceivable job and read like a high-school career survey.

In these few years television drama has passed through a Golden Age and several ages ostensibly less golden. Do any patterns emerge?

Television drama used to mean the single, isolated story, the "one shot," presented live in an anthology like "Studio One" or Philco. Now it means almost overwhelmingly the filmed series, written around the continuous hero, the doctor lawyer, or police chief to whom each week a different adventure happens. This change was partly due to technological progress and partly the result of commercial pressures.

But with this change in form there was a change in substance.

Escape Route

If there was a Golden Age, it was when television drama concerned itself with real problems, real issues, and real people. Now it has escaped substantially into a world of adventure, suspense, and melodrama.

The series is an ideal form for this lightweight world. The Hero, simply by virtue of repetition, is a superman of strength and endurance; we know we can trust him because he wins all the time; he is an absolute in a world of relatives; he is Big Daddy, Big Brother. Although I have seen temptation flicker across his forehead in the hospital corridor, and although I have shared the doubt outside the courtroom door, I know from experience I am safe with Ben and Perry. So safe that lately I have been allowed to encounter such controversial monsters as Religious Bigotry, Abortion, and Integration. The series backlog of virtue is so great that such chances can be taken. But as long as the series remains to be continued next week, the final curtain can be postponed, the ultimate reckoning can be finessed, and the commitment to real life can be avoided. After all, it's the last act that always was tough to write.

The "one-shot" comes to an end. It can neither depend on last week's memory nor on the promise of next for support. It much have its own life within it and in order to live it must resolve its conflict. And that means that the Hero might get killed. There is no guarantee that he will be standing by the camera at the end of the hour with a look of sympathy and understanding. The lovely thing about the series episode—the word is used advisedly—is that the audience knows that the detective is not going to get killed. He might be bruised a little, he might even be moved and saddened, but nothing under the sun is going to keep him from being back next week.

In fact, the appeal of the television series is its implicit promise of immortality. Watch me it whispers and never die. Watch me and never grow old. Watch me and in fact never even have a blemish.

So much for the retrospective. The future is anybody's guess. Currently there's evidence that television drama is hiring expensive, serious, and famous writers. Presumably this is to have them do serious and expensive plays. Anthologies are in good repute; the one-shot is having a renaissance backed by the authority of highly reputable performers and sponsored by large corporations.

But let the buyer beware. Those last acts aren't only hard to write. They make definite moral and social commitments. And they come right before the closing commercial message.

Wanted: Key News Exec For ABC-TV

Execs of American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatre are in the market or a topflight exec to take over helm of the ABC news department. With the elevation of Jim Hagerty into the corporate echelon, AB-PT prexy Leonard H. Goldenson is now understood to be looking for a news chief with extensive broadcasting experience. While Goldenson is looking, he's also getting plenty of applications for the job from other networks. In the meantime, Steve Riddleberger, v.p. and general manager of ABC news, and Bob Quinn, exec producer, will be co-piloting the operation.

Hagerty's moveup to v.p. in charge of AB-PT corporate relations generated the inevitable rumors and speculation that he was being "kicked upstairs" preliminary to bowing out of the company. All indications, however, point to Hagerty remaining with AB-PT with more responsible assignments handed to him. Hagerty will be playing a central role in the buildup of ABC's international division with the company making maximum use of the familiarity with foreign execs and solons which Hagerty gained during his eight-year tenure with the Eisenhower administration. Hagerty's standing in Washington, D.C., where he will be the spokesman for AB-PT, also cued his promotion to a spot where he could help all of the company's divisions.

Talent In TV—It's Just A Matter Of Reciprocity

By JACK HELLMAN

Hollywood.

Staring across the Hollywood landscape at each other, the cinematics and electronics might well toss back and forth this poser: what have you done for me lately? To be sure, it isn't a one-way street and each has fattened off the other but the degree of reciprocity is the moot point. As openers, the theatrical suppliers could toss in a blockbuster, "where would tv be without our oldies?"

But more to the point and relevant to the interchange is the traffic in talent, both creative and in camera range. The cinema stars shone brightly in the spectrum of fleeting images but turn it around and the theatricals have feasted not too well on the incubation of television. The big list is to writers, producers and directors and here the vidmen can give the senior art points and pointers. The theatre and niteries could also get into the act and there it could be a standoff. To name a few, radio and tv spawned for the footlights Ernie Martin, Meredith Willson, Jerry Lawrence and Bobby Lee, Larry Roman. On the interchange, tv profited handsomely from the likes of Shirley Booth, Andy Griffith, E. G. Marshall and a passel of others who shift their professional years as the opportunity arises or the pelf beckons. Television plucked from the niteries such practitioners as Danny Thomas, Jerry Lewis and Joey Bishop to name a few of the leaders. Where Frank Sinatra came from is hard to classify. He had it in tv, however, before pictures claimed him. Judy Garland was a radio product long before Metro brought her over the rainbow.

Interchangeability

There is such a complexity of trades within the show biz perimeter that there can be no definitive categorizing on the true genesis of careers. From the starting point to the line of finish may have encompassed every prism of a composite picture. How would one classify such as Phil Silvers, Milton Berle, Jimmy Durante? Name it and they've been in and out of it. Any breakdown, therefore, must be purely fragmentary. F'rinstance, let's take the writers or rather the appraisal of Michael Franklin, executive director of Writers Guild of America, West. He writes:

"In reviewing the Guild records I note that there are so many writers who have moved from one field into the other and continue to operate in both fields that it is not appropriate to furnish a long list of names. On the other hand it is not appropriate to pick out certain names and leave out others. The figures I can furnish may be helpful. In the Guild's tv branch are 1,804 members, of which total there are 537 who also are members of our screen branch. Conversely, we have 1,140 members in our screen branch and of this total number there are 574 who are also in our television branch."

As for actors, producers and directors, who are not so transient in their transactions, a clearer line can be drawn. The traffic from pictures to tv by actors is so overwhelming as to be no contest. To name the few who moved out of tv into theatrical pictures: James Garner, Everett Sloane, Jack Webb, Polly Bergen, Richard Boone, Jackie Gleason, Steve McQueen, Agnes Moorehead, John McIntire, Edgar Bergen and a scad of lessers. The list is long of actors who moved from picture to tv. To name the more prominent: Robert Young, Barbara Stanwyck, Loretta Young, Lucille Ball, Ann Sothern, Robert Taylor, Edmund O'Brien, Ida Lupino, Charles Boyer, David Niven, Jane Wyman, Robert Stack, Fred MacMurray, George Montgomery, Dale Robertson, Barbara Hale, Peter Lawford, Donna Reed, Barry Sullivan, Lloyd Bridges, Ralph Bellamy, Ronald Reagan, Ray Milland, Barbara Britton, Gale Storm, Roy Rogers, Dale Evans, Gene Kelly, MacDonald Carey, Wendell Corey, Don Duryea.

Among the directors who moved from tv to pictures: John Frankenheimer, Arthur Hiller, Norman Jewison, Seymour "Buzz" Kulik, Arnold Laven, Ralph Levy, Sidney Lumet, Leslie Martinson, Robert Ellis Miller, Robert Mulligan, Sam Peckinpah, John Rich, Martin Ritt, Boris Sagal, Alex Singer, Peter Tewksbury, Jack Webb, Franklin Schaffner, George Roy Hill, Robert Stevens. Among the pix-to-tv are Les Selander, Tay Garnett, King Vidor, Frank Capra, John Ford and Alfred Hitchcock.

The Producers Guild submitted no listing but George Schaefer, Frankenheimer and George Leffers must be among the top craftsmen in their division.

Puerto Rican Stations Face License Revocation

Washington, July 30.

FCC asked Quality Broadcasting Corp, Supreme Broadcasting Co. Inc. and Radio Americas Corp. to show cause why their three commonly owned Puerto Rican radio stations shouldn't have their licenses revoked or be subject to a $10,000 fine.

Commission said WKYN-AM and WFQM-FM, both of San Juan and WORA-FM, Mayguez, intercepted news broadcasts of the Armed Forces Radio Service in New York and rebroadcast them later giving the impression they were coming directly from the Mutual Broadcasting System.

The Defense Dept. has earlier refused the stations permission to rebroadcast shortwave programs from Armed Forces Radio Service.

NBC'S '52 CLUB' CLIENTS

43% of Nighttime TV Sked Sold On Year-Round Basis

NBC-TV sales department hasn't struck any medals yet, but the sliderule division has cannonized members of the 52 Club with percentages—the 52's being the sponsors who are in for a solid year of the '63-'64 season—September to September.

Network figures it has sold a firm 52-weeks on 21 out of 49 prime-time half-hour periods, which is 43% of the nighttime schedule. Out of the remaining 28 prime half-hour periods, 20 are SRO through May, or down to the summer rerun and/or replacement season.

In addition, two of the web's participation shows are sold for 52 weeks, non-cancellable — "Dr. Kildaire" and the 90-minute "Virginians." "Eleventh Hour" is close to the same shape.

Solid for 30 weeks are such shows as the Jack Paar hour and "Mr. Novak."

$12,896,800 PROFIT FOR BRITISH BRWT

London, July 30.

British Relay Wireless and Television, the wire relay company which is shortly to be involved in Pay-TV trials in the London area, has recorded its highest ever profit for the year ended March 31, 1963. BRWT profit is $12,896,800, that is $1,878,800 higher than last time.

Main reason for the swelled profit is the tiny tax payment of $10,208 brought about by allowances on the company's large depreciation of $10,351,600 on its equipment out on hire.

Demise of the 'Happy Hack' In Scheme of H'wood Vidpix Making: They Now Wear Global Spectacles

By DAVE KAUFMAN

Hollywood.

Stop the world—I want to get on.

That's about what has happened to Hollywood telefilm producers and other execs the past year, the result of two entirely unrelated happenings, neither dealing directly with the production of vidpix from the world's largest tv film production center.

The double-barreled events which have caused Hollywood to emerge from its cocoon of provincialism more or less inherited from its big brother—motion pictures—are the continuing pressures from Washington on broadcasters, and the realization that the market for vidfilms today is a global market, no longer confined to the 50 states.

Both events have been a long time coming, insofar as their impact on Hollywood was concerned, but today there isn't a single Hollywood tv exec of any importance in the industry who retains a head-in-the-sand attitude. Hollywood's awakening didn't come easily, but that's unimportant, the fact that they realize today the national and international impact of the product they make is the key.

The awareness insofar as Washington was concerned came almost like a slow burn, with Hollywoodians not realizing the significance of Washington developments when they first occurred. But that is excusable, because among the unpopular Washington events were the headline-hunting tactics of a number of congressional investigators blasting Hollywood tv not so much for their content, as to get newspaper space, a goal they achieved admirably.

Since blasting Hollywood is one of the oldest professions in Washington as a device for gaining publicity for the critic, the Hollywood execs didn't take this too seriously at the time. Particularly when some of the solons accused tv of having too much sex, a charge which made the average Hollywood exec wonder what programs the accuser was watching. Network censors have succeeded thoroughly over the years in keeping tv about as devoid of sex as is possible.

Minow's Shotgun Blast

Of course, former FCChairman Newton Minow led the charge against tv, and his initial "wasteland" blunderbuss didn't rouse many of the film colony's execs, because principally it was an old charge. Only the source was new. But unlike Hollywoodians, the networks and broadcasters took Minow's shotgun blast very seriously. Since the networks wind up paying for the film made in Hollywood, they wasted no time conveying the message to the producers to eliminate excessive violence, upgrade the quality of their product, to do a better job.

It was a no-nonsense message, and the execs and producers responded quickly. Ironically, after being more or less forced to take a second look at themselves and their product and to take more time and skill in preparation of shows, they learned they could do a better job. In a survey of top Hollywood execs recently made by VARIETY, the vast majority readily credited Minow with having awakened them to their responsibities, and creating an awareness which has made for improved product.

Don't for a moment be misled into thinking this means the ultimate has been reached, and there will be no bad or routinish shows from Hollywood. No such Utopia exists, either in tv or any other branch of show biz which relies so heavily on creative skills. There isn't much talent of topdrawer quality around, so the millenium will never be attained. But that's not half as important as the fact that the men behind the scenes responsibile for the output of telefilms are trying in every way possible to achieve quality. There is only a relative handful of top telescripters around, and the competition for this group is heated, with money no consideration as each vidfilmery goes all-out for the best. The same is true where directors, producers and other creative talent is involved.

While there will always be a shortage of excellence, the point is unhappy days have fallen on the hack, be he a writer, producer, or what. The same happy hack who not too long ago got rich as he was hired principally because his ability consisted simply of being able to deliver a script or picture on time, is not finding the pickings too good these days.

Never has tv in Hollywood been so receptive to quality, and never has the competition among the telefilmeries for the best been so heated. Inevitably this will result in an elevating of standards. When a mediocre telefilm comes on next season—and it will—that means the company involved couldn't land the top talents because of their rarity, and had to settle for less-than-best.

World Market

Producers and execs these days are also coming to realize more and more that they are turning out films which will be seen the world over. Their initial awareness of this aspect was purely a financial one, back in 1960, when the writer's guild struck for 22 weeks over the key issue—a royalty plan in place of residuals on telefilms, whereby writers would be cut in on a gross of every film on which they participated, both for showings here and abroad.

It was a bitterly fought strike, longest in the guild's history, and even the guild had a wide chism, with one group feeling the overseas tv pie was being highly overrated, while the other and ultimately successful group held the principle was one worth fighting for, even at the risk of economic hardship to members. They got the economic hardship—22 lean and hungry weeks for writers—but in the end they also got 4% of the gross in perpetuity on vidfilms.

This year, the majority of telefilmeries had an option about converting from the residual to the royalty plan immediately, or putting it off for a year, and much to the surprise even of the guild, the majority decided to convert to the royalty concept immediately. It's now in effect for most companies.

Another link in the chain of events involving the global awakening is content of programs. Producers who not long ago never gave it a thought are now carefully aware of the global reruns poten

Dig We Must— For Knowledge

By LeROY COLLINS
(NAB President)

Washington.

Our system of modern electronic communication has a vital role to play in the outcome of this world struggle. Man now has the power, through broadcasting, to reach, to inform, to influence and to enlighten his fellow man on a scale unheard of heretofore. Never before has this been so desperately important, for knowledge and truth are our best hopes to build a nation and save a world.

But this power of communication may be used, or it may be misused. The totalitarian state thrives on its misuse. The free state thrives on its full use.

We are not worshippers of the status quo. We are not yet satisfied with the present state of broadcasting in this country, but at the same time we recognize that no other system in the world can match it.

We will not hesitate to criticize its failures, but at the same time we should enthusiastically acknowledge its successes.

We will not condone its misuse or its lack of use, but we are determined to keep American broadcasting operating in a climate of freedom. This is necessary to its continued growth and ever-expanding service.

The broadcaster takes the easy way out if he contends himself to shout at the government instead of accepting responsibilities for his own house; if he lets the rating services do the selling for him; if he programs by the numbers instead of using his own good judgment as a balancing factor; if he looks to the government for a blueprint as to how he can serve best the public interest.

The easy way allows for lazy effort, weak defenses, insidious discouragement. But if we are to serve the needs of 20th Century man, we must be 20th Century men—in the vanguard, not the rear guard. We must follow the hard road which demands character, resourcefulness, sharp determination, and strong motivation.

No one knows better than the broadcaster that he can never think in terms of having reached any plateau of fulfillment. He must be willing to search and to probe, to explore and to experiment, to seek new ideas, new techniques, new facts which will help him do a better job.

This is the demand upon each broadcaster—that he give the best of which he is capable—if collectively broadcasters meet their responsibility of an affirmative role in this rapidly changing world.

In NAB we are placing our strongest faith in remaining free in our programs of self-regulation and self-improvement. We are embarking on new programs of highly specialized research in the content and consequence of what we broadcast and for training broadcast personnel. More of our members are expressing their opinions on important matters through editorials. We are working diligently to make our Codes of Good Practice the finest system of self-regulation yet developed in American business. Also, we are concentrating on a broad new effort to improve program expertise. These are not mere defensive maneuvers but rather affirmative efforts in response to our own sense of right and duty.

As broadcast journalists, we also oppose attempts to restrict the flow of information from government to the people, and, as broadcasters, we oppose any effort by government to interfere with the exercise by the broadcaster of his own best judgment in the programming of his station.

Whenever government restricts or withholds information which does not directly involve our national security, the most important right of the people—to see and hear—is seriously impaired.

The too-often unjustified use of the security label and the hazy doctrine of executive privilege, the substitution of the pat "handout" for first-hand inquiry by the press — these are trends, often well-intentioned, which should be reversed. Only in the rarest of cases can the "closed door policy" of government operation be justified.

There may be some who would argue (despite the unparalleled role of broadcasting in informing the people) that because a broadcaster holds a government license, he should be placed in a somewhat different posture of freedom than other media of communications. Such a conclusion is without foundation in law or in fact.

Despite the fact that broadcasting falls under a form of government regulations, the broadcaster still can and should be just as individualistic as a person is individualistic—as every community is individualistic. Indeed, that is the best way for him to stay a broadcaster.

Furthermore, more broadcasters must be willing to do more of what other broadcasters have done—that is, accept true roles as inseparable parts of their communities, turn their attention to the knottiest of social problems besetting the people they serve, bring the light of broadcast journalism to bear upon those controversial issues, take positions which they know to be right

Nielsen Car Meter Plan Seen Doomed Due to High Cost

A. C. Nielsen has pitched a new service to the radio networks and initial reaction would indicate that the national radio pocket-piece may well be headed down the drain with the rating firm's local radio service.

Revised national radio ratings, as presented by Arthur Nielsen Sr. to execs of three networks recently (ABC having split with the rater some time ago in favor of Sindlinger), would depend on diary reports and recordimeters attached to car radios instead of the current audimeter system now employed on plug-in home sets. Idea, of course, is to get an indication of the medium's big out-of-home audience via cars and transistor sets.

This is the info the radio industry has wanted for years, but there are a couple of catches in the Nielsen plan that make it unacceptable to virtually all of the network execs. The price would reportedly be between three and four times what the web service now costs, and Nielsen asked for 65 weeks to get the new system working.

Nielsen's local radio service was folded in the wake of the Oren Harris Washington hearings into ratings, and the prohibitive price of the proposed new national service—along with the year and three-months wait—has network execs predicting that Nielsen will also quit the countrywide count. Anyhow, some have asked the company to come up with another plan within the next few weeks.

Same time, NBC Radio, while continuing the Nielsen contract, has followed ABC in taking the Sindlinger service, but currently on a month-by-month rather than contract basis.

Nielsen's car recordimeters would measure only the periods of time that the sets were on, with station-for-station info to come from diaries. The audimeters currently in use on the plug-in sets measure times and stations.

Musical Shows, Soapers Still Mainstays For Mexico's TV

By CHARLES LUCAS

Mexico City.

Since its inception 13 years ago, Mexican tv has been in one continuous boom. The formation of Telesistema Mexicano brought network tv to all parts of the Republic. Each year sees new stations added. In December of 1962, Acapulco went on the air with local programming and alternating each week programming from Channel 2 and Channel 4 in Mexico City. In February Merida on the Yucatan peninsula went on the air using programming selected from the Telesistema net.

Heart and soul of the Telesistema net is the control center in Televicentro in Mexico City. There Don Emilio Azcarraga of Channel 2 Telesistema, and Don Romulo O'Farrill of Channel 4 and Telesistema control all of Mexican television. Each year sees new rumors that the two gentlemen are splitting the vast radio-television empire; that Channel 4 is building a new plant, and that a divorce is eminent. These rumors current every season are thus far only rumors. It is true that the existing facility is far too small and too crowded for the current ambitious programming, but there are no plans to construct another and competing facility. Another equally current rumor is that the industry will be nationalized within the coming year, before the end of the Lopez Mateos administration. Again this is only a rumor, and is denied by all official or authoritative sources.

Over 1,000 technicians work round the clock in Televicentro to bring 300 hours of live programming each week to the Telesistema net. There are 23 stations in the network, which covers the Republic, but with several extensive gaps. There are eight videotape machines in Televicentro, and 24 others in the Telesistema net. These videotape 150 hours of programming each week in Mexico City, for bicycling to the other stations and for service of foreign markets. Two kinescope machines kine nine programs weekly to service markets without videotape machines.

The tapes and kines are sent air express to other stations, and to foreign markets. Mexico is such a mountainous country that a direct transmission net using coaxial cable or microwave has been prohibitively costly. However, experiments are being made with various systems to ascertain the feasibility of putting just such a system into operation. The system used by the Telephone Company's microwave transmission is too costly. Even so each system would utilize a relay station costing $80,000 minimum.

During the past year a 23-station relay microwave transmission system between Mexico and the U.S. was installed, and brought the Cooper space shot to Channel 4 viewers. An announcer at the scene from Channel 4, brought the description to Mexico's viewers in Spanish, scoring a tidy first for that Channel. It is expected that future space shots, specials, sporting events, would use this same facility. Sponsorship in these cases is usually by an automobile company, in this case Ford, or a similar organization with enough cash to pick up the tab.

Probably the single event which was the most spectacular was the introduction of color television. This took place on Channel 5, the only station equipped and licensed to handle color on an experimental basis. System is the invention of engineer Guillermo Gonzalez Camerena, who has patented his system under the name Gon Gam. It is a simpler system than any other type, with fewer circuits and fewer tubes. An existing color set can be converted to this type for around $12 (U.S.). This assumes you have color antenna. If not the antenna here costs around $10 plus installation charge, and the color tube is around $150 (U.S.) or about half its U.S. couterpart. The camera is a much smaller color camera than any other existing model. For a station to convert, to this system, the operator need install an antenna, a monitor, and the color camera(s).

Camera cost is around $12,000 per unit. No special heads are needed for the videotaping. Color is accurate and easy on the eyes. Currently Gonzalez Camerena is working on a compatible black and white — color conversion system, that would, with a small converter, bring color to a black and white set. In any event viewers on the border would find his existing system a boon to both U.S. and Mexican color programming. In spite of its experimental nature, Channel 5, brings about 10 hours per week of color to its viewers.

Engineering-wise it is expected to adopt various new systems, employing stopped action and slow motion, and other new techniques adopted by the Japanese to the Mexican system. All transist or videotape machines are in an experimental stage. Last year and in January of this year, both Ampex and Machtronics tried out portable machines, but they were not successful. Consensus was that the machines are really data processing machines. However, according to Ing. Gerhard Lux, the specifications of the problems of Telesistema have been given to both companies, and results that are satisfactory have been promised.

Coproductions with U.S. and foreign companies stepped up last year, and during this year. It is expected that this will boom along, also according to Roberto Kenny, of Telesistema.

Chief reason is the employment

Ex-WBC Exec, Others Set Up TV Prod. Outfit

San Francisco, July 30.

A new tv and film producing company, Pilothouse Productions, Ltd., has been announced here, with William H. (Bill) Ryan, former publisher of Contact magazine, as one of its principals.

Other partners are Ed Ripley, investor, and Herb Beckman, of Tides Book Co., Sausalito. All three were in Hollywood through Sunday (28) discussing properties with tv nets.

Ryan, a former Westinghouse tv exec, says he saw properties as a publisher that will make "sensational" commercial films and/or tv series.

New firm also includes designer Nick Sidjaokov, Sidney Peterson, formerly with Disney, and publicist Jerry Mander.

West Berlin—Still An Eldorado For Radio Fans

By HANS HOEHN

Berlin.

Radio, to begin with, is still very much alive in Germany. There's no denying the fact that the advance of television has led to the loss of many formerly faithful listeners yet it has not shaken the position of radio in Germany. It even looks as though radio has regained much ground within the past two or three years in this country. Several reasons may be given for this statement:

First of all, the medium of television has lost, of course, its novelty factor in the meantime.

Secondly, there is the music angle. The greater part of most stations' programming is dedicated to music. As per music, tele can't compete with what radio has to offer. That is naturally one of the major reasons why music lovers have stuck to radio. On the other hand, hi-fi has done much to bring back radio. And finally not to forget the popularity of transistors. The latter have reached a real boom here in recent years. And there are the car owners who rely on the continued living of radio.

Another important factor which has helped to keep radio alive is the news. Radio comes along with news practically every hour on the hour. So as per news, tv can't compete either. Taking all these factors into consideration, there's hardly any doubt that radio will stay very much alive for many years to come.

The structure of the German postwar radio is like that: While the East German broadcasting is State-owned, the W-German radio stations are run by the different Laender (lands or territories) and supplied by radio taxes (two Marks or 50c per set or seven marks or £1.75 if there's also a tv set in the possession of the respective person). Since the stations are run by the Laender, there are political groups involved for the dominating parties vary in the various Laender. Each of the Laender has its own radio station plus several repeater stations.

A Multi-Sided Medium

With regard to W-Berlin, there is the American-sponsored (since 1946) RIAS (Radio In the American Sector) in addition to SFB (Station Free Berlin), the regular local (run by the Land of Berlin) network. It's often been said that radio lovers have the best choice in Berlin. There's no exaggeration to say that no other German if not European city is—radio-wise—so interesting and multi-sided as the city of W-Berlin. It's an eldorado for radio lovers. There's the SFB with its two programs. There's RIAS with its three programs of which the first one is on the air all 24 hours long. RIAS is primarily a political station but also has enough entertainment programs to satisfy the various tastes. It has a £4,000,000 budget per annum at its disposal and no commercial goals. And there is AFN (American Forces Network) of Berlin, the favorite station of those many Berliners who have taken a fancy to American show business. This one offers the latest in American radio entertainment. It has often been said that it would be a day of mourning for many Berliners if AFN-Berlin stopped its broadcasting. And there is the BFN (British Forces Network) with its own and its BBC programs around here, so one can imagine that local radio fans truly never have had it so good.

Of all the W-Berlin radio stations, RIAS may be called the most interesting one. Its major aim is to keep the East Germans informed of what's going on in the free world. It is to keep the cultural heritage of Germany alive in E-Germany and to prevent the other (East) Germany from becoming a different Germany in her inside. RIAS is certainly the most effective anti-Communist radio station. It is today, more than ever, the bridge between the Free World and the people of the Soviet Zone of Germany. When Ulbricht began the erection of the Wall on Aug. 13, 1961, the manifold contacts between East and West came abruptly to a halt. Where before Aug. 13, thousands of East Berliners worked or visited in W-Berlin daily, and literally millions attended theatre and cinema programs or visited the East Reading Room at the American Haus each year, all such cultural and economic contacts ceased after the erection of the Wall. Radio, and to a lesser extent television, remain the only media of exchange between the Free World and the unwilling inmates of the "German Democratic Republic." RIAS now carries an even heavier responsibility than before in informing the East Berliners and the East Germans of the true nature of events in their own country and in the world, and in providing continuing cultural contacts with the West.

RIAS' Influence

The Commies naturally hate RIAS. Since RIAS went on the air, it has been denounced, threatened, and ridiculed by the E-German press, radio and television. The favorite Commie accusation is that RIAS is a cover for espionage, sabotage and treason. RIAS has been consigned to hell, has been regularly referred to as a "gutter station," and was recently promoted to the accolade Goebbels used to describe the BBC, "the enemy station." An estimated 600 jamming transmitters in the East Zone of Germany attempt to block the RIAS signal. All wavelengths except FM are jammed, but RIAS gets its message through by using several different frequencies on all wavelengths, and by virtue of the fact that its main and very powerful transmitters are located within the relatively small area to which it broadcasts. It has been estimated that the Soviet Zone jammers use enough electricity each day to light the city of Leipzig.

RIAS which has seven Americans and about 520 Germans on its payroll operates with three programs. The first one is 24 hours, the second one eight hours and the third one (long wave) nine hours on the air. The percentages (average) of the different programs: RIAS I has about 56% musical programs, 28% political (11.3% news) programs, 13% cultural and educational items, while the remaining 3% go for sports, radio drama and cabaret or quiz programs.

RIAS II has about 46% music, 30% political programs, 16% culture and education, 4% cabaret or quiz, with the rest going to sports and drama.

RIAS III has the heaviest political propaganda and the best of RIAS in this respect: 51% political or news programs, 23% music, 22% culture and education, 2% cabaret or quiz, 1% drama and almost no sports.

RIAS is extremely popular with East Germans. That was evidenced via polls carried out (before the erection of the Wall though) at such exhibitions like the Green Week or Industrial Fair which used to be frequented by East Berliners and East Germans. One of the last polls (before the wall) showed the results: 76% of the East German populance listen to RIAS regularly once a day. 50% are constant listeners of the RIAS radio.

The erection of the wall has made such polls impossible, of course. But it's believed that the RIAS is now as before the No. 1 station with most East Germans. Listening to RIAS in groups is illegal in E-Germany).

Talking Into a Vacuum?

What is RIAS' biggest problem right now? — Dean Koch, the (American) radio program officer of this station, gave this answer: "The biggest problem now for us is to keep in contact with the Soviet Zone audience. Since there is no direct contact with the East Germans any longer, there is the danger that we lose the feeling and that the absence of this contact leads to an estrangement. It's a big task to overcome these hurdles for we never know now whether we are not talking in a vacuum."

One of RIAS' most popular programs is the regular "Aus der Zone Fuer die Zone" (From the Zone of East Germany For the zone of East Germany) which features political comments and excerpts from letters received from East Germans. This program provides the last forum of free public opinion for Zonal residents. RIAS

News & Documentary Shows Creating Flurry In Chicago; Are There Enough Subjects?

By LES BROWN

Chicago.

Come to think of it, it's not at all surprising that the Chicago Emmy awards went preponderantly to cultural, news and public affairs shows last spring. Even at this early date it seems fairly safe to predict they'll go much the same way next season. The reason is simply that there will be few local programs of any prominence outside those classifications.

The big competition in local programming next fall will be for subject matter. Enamored of the documentary and the news special, and pleged to those image-making program forms for at least another year and probably longer, the four commercial stations here are faced now with the prospect of picking the garden clean. Unless there's a lucky outcropping in '63-'64 of fresh civic problems, social evils, political scandals and miscellaneous corruption the video stations (and two of the radio outlets, WIND and WBBM as well) could well find themselves reworking last season's furrows, straining to come up with a variation of a well-exposed issue.

Practically everything of established and enduring civic concern —from slum conditions, to overcrowded mental hospitals, to the Chicago crime syndicate—has been covered by one or more of the stations since they got hooked on the documentary form two years ago. There have been well-produced puffs for the chamber of commerce and the police and fire departments; profiles of the Roman Catholic cardinal, the police commissioner and famous ex-Chicagoans; and even an audience survey on commuter transportation, which WBBM-TV billed as "an experiment in two-way communications" between the tv station and its viewership.

With most of this community's weightier problems already examined, and quite a few of the lighter ones as well, the quest for new topics stands to be a problem particularly for a station like WNBQ, which admirably has committed itself to a half-hour documentary per week in its "Dateline: Chicago" series (moving to 10:15 Sunday nights)—these in addition to some prime time news specials.

The NBC o&o has already covered many of the subjects listed above, plus such things as the mayoral and sheriff races, the decline of Midway airport and the problems of Cook County Hospital and the Chicago Board of Education. To get a full season's worth of Monday night installments last semester, it had to resort to video essays on the field of advertising, the matter of tipping, the spread of key clubs and folk music bistros here and the phenomenon of weather. On a few occasions it was forced to fill with a special edition of the regular cultural series, "Artists' Showcase," and with an outside-produced documentary.

The ambitious series has gone into reruns for the summer while the program, news and public affairs departments put their heads together to draft up some provocative topics for next season. It's clear that the scope of the series will have to be broadener beyond the area of current events and local programs.

WBKB has come up with its own solution to the forseeable shortage of material by eschewing the news gambit in its specials and concentrating on what might be called "general non-fiction." A skein of 10 prime-timers are on tap for late summer and the fall, which includes two "Home Again" biographies (Bob Newhart and Red Grange), two satirical "Second City Reports" by the local cabaret-theatre troupe, a study of Chinese life in Chicago, a view of America by a teenage German girl, the travails of a southern Negro family that has moved north and a tongue-in-cheek study of female idiosyncracies.

Partly, this non-fiction tack has been necessitated by the relative poverty of the ABC station's news operation (except for Alex Dreier's own unit), although that department will contribute one documentary in the coming months, a 60-minute special on the problems and scandals surrounding the Sanitary District.

WBBM's Impact

WBBM-TV, which does documentaries better than any station in the market and seem to make greater impact with fewer of them, has been known to depart from the local issues with occasional specials on Berlin, the Congo, Mexico and the European Common Market. Of some 25 specials in prime time last season, only about half were documentaries or in-depth reports, in the strict sense, and most of those dealt with such topics as school dropouts, slum landlords, penal institutions and political candidates, which were hardly unique.

What WBBM-TV has in mind for the fall in the area of specials is a question mark, but the intent to do significant programs in prime time is there, and it's possible that the CBS station will lean heavier on the cultural offerings, as per "The Mikado," "Music For an April Night" and "International Hour: American Jazz" of last season.

WGN-TV caught the news documentary fever last year and made notable strides from its early chamber-of-commerce approach. A pair of late-season opuses, "TUF Guys" and "Friday's Children," were insightful and packed an emotional punch, but several others dealt with such obvious do-gooder themes as traffic safety, dental care for children and drag racing.

The important thing that happened to WGN-TV in the past season was that it hatched a solid documentary producer in Dick Hance, who now has three new projects in the works. The station also seems to have tapped a source for "problem" material in institutionals and organizations whose work is of social consequence, examples being the police Tactical Undercover Function and the Dixon State School for Mentally Retarded. But even here the supply is not unlimited.

There's no question that the local documentary is a hard program form to beat for giving a station status in the community. Such efforts win awards and usually get the kind of press attention other local shows can never get.

But, as with anything, it's possible to overdo a good thing; and by next January, if not sooner, there's a good chance the tv stations here will find themselves wondering where their next documentary is coming from.

Thai TV: Weapon For West VS. Communism

By SANFORD MARKEY

Thai TV, Asia's first television, celebrated its ninth anniversary last month as a full-grown entertainment industry helping the West in the battle agains communism.

There are two branches to Thai TV; both are government controlled, but relatively free to pursue their own programming and operations. One, Channel Four, is operated as a civilian venture; the other, Channel Seven, is under the direct jurisdiction of the Royal Thai Army. Both vie for the best possible programs; sell commercials, and are as competitive as American networks for the average viewer. In charge of both channels is General Surajit Charusreni, a cabinet member of the government.

Together, they provide the strongly pro-Western homeland of "The King and I" with as extensive a television presentation as can be found in any country, and together they are forming a powerful voice in Thailand's battle against inroads of communism from the north.

"We recognize the far-reaching value of tv, and it is our desire to continue to utilize this medium, along with radio to the fullest capacity as a vehicle both for education and entertainment for our people," said Pichai Vasnassong, creative arts director of Thai TV. Vasnassong, an architect, was one of the first to join Channel Four, and spent much time in the States acquiring television background training before starting his career.

"One of our greatest problems is replacement parts," he said, pointing out "we are half-way around the world from the United States. Most of our equipment is RCA, and although we have had no major problems and have never been forced off the air, we do not have the replacement parts on hand. So, we have not been able to extend our programming hours beyond our current daily evening schedule of five and one-half hours from 7 p.m. plus an additional seven hours daytime all-film programs on Saturday and Sunday starting at 11 a.m. We hope, however, to soon acquire additional transmitter and other properties to permit us to exend our operations."

Channel Seven's hours of programming are similar to Channel Four.

Out of the 71 provinces of Thailand, 32 are within television coverage, with a population of about 12,000,000 or nearly half Thailand's population. Signals can be picked up at places as far away as 75 miles from Bangkok, although since 1961 there are relay stations in the north at Lampang; northeast at Khonkaen and south, Haadyai.

The total number of television receivers in the 32 provinces is estimates by Vasnassong at 100,000, and the average number of viewers at peak hours is almost one million. There are no license fees and no registration for radio and television receivers.

"Our programs are of every type," said Pichai, who himself is responsible for a daily on-the-air commentary as well as being the director for several live variety shows and responsible for the translation of the "Ben Casey" programs. Vasnassong listens to the English dialog of Dr. Ben, translates it into Thai and a cast of three—two men and one woman—do all the voices while the show is on the air. For those who want to listen to the English, Thai TV plays it over FM. It takes the creative arts director eight hours to translate Dr. Ben, plus three hours of rehearsal time. Dr. Ben Casey is one of the most popular on the air.

"We are proud of our production staff," said Vasnassong. "We can do everything you do in the States, and we don't have wealth of facilities you do. We're particularly partial to our 15-man news staff, and our six photographers cover the news with the zest of your best man. We have two videotape recorders. Our news reals are CBS and ITN and we also have recourse to your USIS.

"The bulk, perhaps as much as 90% of our television film is from the United States, and Westerns are very popular. Most of our programs are sponsored and international standards of practice are being followed so far as commercials are concerned."

Modest Rates

"Advertising rates are very moderate because of limitations of our coverage compared to the mass market you have in the United States," said Vasnassong.

"Filmed commercials of one minute cost from $10 to $18 per show. Air time charge for half an hour show is only $30, and a spectacular dramatic show of about two hours costs the sponsor about $200, inclusive of air time, talent and production. As our viewing audience and set sales increase, so will our rates. At present about 30 brands of television sets are being manufactured and sold by companies from the United States, Britain, Japan and West Germany."

By comparison, the number of commercial spots make states-side codes a do-gooder's dream. There apparently are no limitations in Thailand, as I counted 10 commercials ranging from 10 seconds to a minute within program breaks. As a result, programs have been known to start somewhat later than the on-the-hour scheduled time.

Thai television is rightfully proud that its personnel are all Thai, and with the exception of some "key personnel from RCA."

By American standards, salaries are low, but compared to other jobs in Thailand, working in broadcasting has both prestige and salary advantages.

Announcers usually earn up to and over $100 a month; cameramen and technicians over $50 a month; this in a land where a laborer makes about $1 a day. Most of Channel Four's personnel who were with the station when it went on the air, June 24, 1954, are still with it. There are no unions and the station maintains a "talent staff of over 20 singers and musicians plus a large number of outside artists who work in package shows. These outside variety guests may earn as much as $50 a program. Most of our staffers work an eight-hour day," said Vassnassong.

Aside from entertainment, the Thai viewer is a most avid learner of English. A program called "Let's Learn English" produced with the cooperation of USIS and the American Book Co. is reported to have an audience of 200,000 for its six-a-week shows; three being half-hour in length, and three for 15 minutes. So successful is the stanza that the book printed in conjunction with the program is a reported "best seller" on the Trailand book parade.

In programming, according to surveys, Thai TV is about 60% live; Army TV, 47%. Both channels run about 12 to 14% in live educational and cultural films: news and sports account for 11% (Channel Four) 17% (Channel Seven). Some other statistics include commercials of all types about 10% on both channels, and entertainment film from 20% (Ch. 4) to 26% (Ch. 7). Live drama (4) is 25% of air time versus 17 for Ch. 7.

Television in Thailand is very cooperative with Washington, Britain and other Western nations. According to USIS, American agencies in December had 34 hours of material used, including such items as reports on the Peace Corps inside Thailand; American science news and regular Thai-Washington roundups and documentaries.

Thailand is receiving American loans and grants to help the nation in its communication fight with the Reds. Collins Radio Co. of Dallas, for example, is building a network that includes both telephone and telegraph circuits with microwave radio and cable transmission. Technicians of Western Electric Co. are supervising long-distance phone work. These facilities, part of a $20,000,000 program of loans and grants will do much to offset communist radio broadcast against the Thai government from Hanoi, Peking, etc.

It's expected the grants will permit Bangkok to shout into northeastern Trailand where the Reds are known to be infilitrating, and utilizing radio to broadcast propaganda lambasting the government of Field Marshall Sarit. It's estimated that the anti-Sarit broadcasts 30 hours a week in Thai and about 70 hours in the Lao languages for the tribes along the Thai-Laotian border.

Besides the Americans, the Australian government is helping the Thai government with the planning of additional powerful radio stations to offset the Comunist propaganda broadcasts.

And the Time Is Now

By MURRAY WORONER
(Manager, WAME, Miami)

Miami.

In the beginning man created the art of broadcasting. The art was without form and void . . . and no talent was upon the air. But the spirit of man moved along the airwaves, and the broadcasters said, "Let there be more talent." And there was more talent . . . And man heard the talent and that was good. The broadcasters divided the talent with commercials, and he called the talent programs, and the commercials his little old moneymakers. And these were the first years. . .

And the broadcaster developed new programming techniques . . . He created dramas . . . news and sports programs and the broadcasters made great inroads on the minds of advertisers and listeners, and began draining advertising dollars from the older less vibrant less exciting media . . . And it was good . . . And these are the early years. . .

And more and more broadcasters came forth, and Government allocated frequency and said let the broadcasters be gathered together into one set of frequencies so all may know where to find them, and let them be competitive, let each city have many more stations . . . and let them serve the people of their community with public service . . . And it was so . . . And it was good . . . And it was the middle years. . . .

And the broadcasters said, let us know of ourselves what the listeners would hear. And the broadcaster created the ratings. And the raters sampled the listeners to determine what the listener preferred. And the management changed the programs to give the listener what he thought he preferred . . . And it was not good. Because a serpent in the heart of the broadcaster took the rating and introduced the rating as fact to the advertiser . . . when he knew in his heart it was not fact. And the advertiser believed . . . And the agencies believed and the rating became an unwholesome thing. Which was not good. But the broadcaster feared it and submitted to it . . . And wonder of wonders, it multiplied. And then there was more than one, then there were more . . . and more. And they stultified the brain of the advertiser. And they overwhelmed the ability of the agency. And they killed the imagination of the broadcaster. And that was not good . . . And those were the recent years. . .

And man created television . . . And it was good . . . And it changed the listening habit of the radio listener. But it did not change the evil rating . . . The tv viewer was rated . . . And the octopus control extended into the new medium. But the radio listener had changed his habit. He still listened . . . but not in his living room . . . He listened in his car . . . on the beach . . . on the golf course . . . in his boat . . . in his kitchen . . . and the ball game . . . radio went with him . . . But the raters did not. And radio was injured. And advertisers shunned radio, because they believed . . . Television was injured . . . And advertisers shunned certain stations because they believed . . . And Congress looked into this situation . . . and it was not good . . . And that was this year. . . .

And Congressman Harris cried . . . Con game . . . And Congressman Moss cried . . . Fraud . . . And employees of the raters admitted their digressions under oath . . . And it was not good . . . And broadcasters . . . agencies . . . and advertisers were shaken in their belief . . . And it was good . . . But among the agencies and the advertisers there remained a hard core of believers that still insisted the rating is biblical in character and that is not good . . . And broadcasters have raised up in objection and they are demanding better studies . . . They are casting out the con men . . . They are decimating the fraud . . . And that is very good . . . And the time is now.

West German Television —One Gripe After Another

By HAZEL GUILD

Frankfurt.

Trouble with television today in West Germany is — everybody's mad at it.

Seems that just about every individual and organized group has some major gripe against the country's two television networks.

Once the Second Television Net finally got going on April 1 this year, all the folks who had been sitting around fussing that they had only a choice of two programs (both produced by the First TV Net) continued to have the same old complaint.

The Second TV Net, under a complicated arrangement, took over the former Second Program of the First Network, and put on, instead, its own programs.

To the casual viewer, there was just about no difference in the new setup.

Gripes continued to pour in—charging that the two more or less government-run and certainly government - influenced television networks were boring and repetitive, and that their political viewpoints were influenced and one-sided.

Some of the charges even ranged against "the American influence" that appeared with the aping of American quiz and variety shows.

There has been a growing demand for a new and independent television station or added channels which will be truly outside of the monopolistic and powerful duo that now control all the tv shows here.

Network Number One, for instance, includes nine outlets — Frankfurt, Munich, Hamburg, Bremen, Saarbruecken, West Berlin, Baden-Baden, Stuttgart and Cologne. The network splits the time between the various stations so that each is responsible for a portion of the programs every week, and while they operate jointly, each has its own local programs (generally from 6:30 p.m. to 8 p.m.) interspersed with the highly lucrative commercial time.

The First Net generally is on the air Sunday from about 11 a.m. until midnight; and during the week is operated from 4:30 p.m. until 11 p.m.

The Second Net, headquartered at Mainz, operates Sunday from 5:30 p.m. until 10 p.m.; and during the week from 6:30 until 11 p.m.

Most of the nine stations comprising the First Net already have some plans afoot for "regional outlets" which will perhaps next year give the viewer local shows as well and thus constitute a different outlet for added shows.

About a third of the entertainment programs on German tv are import wares, many of them bought from the French idea man Jean-Paul Blondeau. He's responsible for selling such favorites here as "Sing With Me, Play With Me," the Austrian quiz "A Schilling a Second," and "To Tell the Truth."

Fun & Misery

Others are dubbed-Deutsche versions of American television programs, including "Perry Mason," "Maverick," "Fury," "Father Knows Best," "The Donna Reed Show,' and just about every old time movie that used to darken the American television channels during the late-late-late shows.

For all this fun and misery, the nearly 8,000,000 Germans who now operate television sets pay a monthly fee to the federal post office of 5 marks ($1.25).

And naturally they gripe about what they get for their money. In fact, a German lawyer has just formed a Central Association of Television Viewers. He's charging members 50 pfennigs (15 cents) a month to join up, and promising that the association will question all its members about their complaints and what they would like to see on television, and then offer "constructive criticism" to the television officials via a regular newspaper of comments. Anyone over 21 is welcome to belong.

(To an American viewer, jaded from the sheer weight of American television shows, the German television offers a remarkably clear picture on several points — the quality is excellent, with the television operating under a frequency standard of 625 lines, about double the American standard, hence bringing in a very sharp picture. And with the government accent on documentaries and informative shows, there are choices of such remarkable features as "Abortion in Japan," and "Breslau as it is Today," the latter showing that the once German city has become completely Polish.)

But wait—there are plenty of other groups mad at German television besides just that unorganized mass of 8,000,000 set-owners.

The West German government's sole female minister, Mrs. Elisabeth Schwartzhaupt, the Minister of Health, is running an anti-commercial campaign for the German tv.

She claims that because the television comes under government dominion, any "commercials" appearing on the nets more or less have the government's sanction, at least in the eyes of the unsuspecting and gullible public.

She wants to ban all commercials of any health or medical products from television. And she is getting plenty of support, mainly from other media who would like to pick up the paying accounts.

But, of course, the stations are fighting mad once they've been attacked in the cash register department. Mainz officials just announced that their new up-and-going station is running at about $10 million a year in the red—with program costs of $17,500,000 annually, another $10,000,000 for personnel (staff of about 2,670 now), $7,500,000 for technical costs and $10,000,000 for investments. They raise $23,000,000 from their share of the post office monthly fee collected from the set owners, another $12,000,000 from commercials—and they need $10,000,000 of credit to keep going.

Hence, they would like to increase their commercial time—or get more money from the post office.

The First Network, which had no television competition in 1962, sold about $70,000,000 of ads—and it is completely overbooked with the scant commercial time it has under its stringent rules.

This results in complaints from the would-be time buyers and from the advertising agencies—who would like the time for the commercial spots expanded on both networks in order to get a crack at added announcements.

But wait—there are still plenty of others mad at the German television.

Free Films on TV

The German cinema owners are furious because television is just about free, and offers them unfair competition. Theatre boxoffice receipts in West Germany were down 40% last year from the 1956 high, and of course (same old story to the Americans) much of the downfall is blamed on the free films being played on television.

Last year 135 full-length feature films played on German TV, some of which had never been played in the German cinemas. And the cinema-owners, subject to a heavy entertainment tax bite, object that the television is illegal competition which does not even have to pay this hefty tax. So they're up in arms and fighting.

In addition, Hessischer Rundfunk, the Frankfurt outlet of the First TV Net, a couple of months ago anted up $150,000 to pay part of the costs of the $500,000 full-length film called "Delay in Marienborn," starring Jose Ferrer and Nicole Courcel. (Well-known Hollywood writer Jim Henaghan did some of the script work, incidentally).

Under this first-of-its-kind arrangement, Hessischer Rundfunk has the original right to show this film on German television — after which it will be sold to the theaters in Germany and in other lands.

This is the first such project, others of a similar nature to follow, with the television stations making their own films for first-runs, following up with sales to the cinemas.

And this makes the theater owners ever madder! They are getting second crack at the films!

Germany's 500-odd daily newspaper publishers are also getting into the act. They complain that the tax-free television is slicing

Can Com'l TV and ETV Achieve A Peaceful Co-Existence Pattern?

By MIKE MOSETTIG

Washington.

In many ways educational television resembles a gangling, well mannered teenager.

Obviously, it is growing, but no one knows to what size or proportions.

It isn't really sure what it wants to do or how to go about doing it.

It's elders and governors aren't quite sure how to nurture and direct it to successful adulthood.

Finally, everyone has to say they love it, despite reserved worries that in its youthful awkwardness it will drop good china and break the leg of a delicate antique chair.

Two acts of Congress last year spurted the development of etv. The first provided funds and the second gave it room to grow.

Congress authorized $32,000,000 for a five-year matching federal-state teachvee program. Almost all of the first year's $1,500,000 appropriation will be taken if the six applications up for consideration at the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare are granted.

Groups in Chicago, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and South Carolina and Virginia have requested $1,362,940 from HEW which administers the etv program.

HEW will likely get between $5,000,000 and $7,000,000 to grant through June, 1964. The big rush for funds will come in the next two years.

The program is under the purview of HEW Undersecretary Ivan Nestingen and more specifically Dr. John Bystrom of the Office of Education.

Bystrom estimates up to 200 groups may receive Federal grants by the end of the scheduled five year authorization.

If past performance is an indication, it is likely the heat will be on Congress at the end of the five years to renew the program so more new etv stations can get on the air.

A second piece of Congressional legislation—the all channel bill—has resulted in almost a complete reversal of channel allocations by FCC to teachvee groups.

Previous to May, 1962, when the all-channel bill was passed, the educational tv groups were going after VHF channel assignments. Since then a large bulk of the applications have been for UHF spots.

Obviously, if UHF performance shows signs of matching its promise, the trend will quicken.

FCC has reserved 332 channels for etv and another 90 non-reserved channels are being sought by teachvee groups.

1,000 Channel Need

In a perhaps grandiose prediction, the National Assn. of Educational Broadcasters estimated etv would eventually need 1,000 channels. But if grandiose, it still is an indication that etv interests will be intensifying their demand for channel space, perhaps, against demands of commercial broadcasters.

But FCC may be on the verge of reducing these competing pressures somewhat. Under consideration and likely to be approved is a proposal setting aside the space from 2500-2690 mc for very low power etv stations. Operating on these frequencies, the stations with now more than 10 watt power could transmit class room programs within a 15-mile area. The operation, which has been tested in Plainedge, N.Y., functions like closed circuit tv, although as a technically different principle.

If approved by FCC the operation would be used for class room instruction either by schools or a county school district.

One result of its use, would be the freeing of etv stations from having to broadcast class room programs. The metropolitan teachvee stations could direct their total efforts to adult education and cultural programs.

In part this could answer one of the dilemmas facing etv—whether they should carry school age or adult programs.

Teachvee programming produces worries in various quarters. Last year, the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee charged the Kennedy Administration was going to use etv for political thought control.

Commercial television's perennial critics hope etv will fill the cultural gap they find on the three networks and with tv programming generally.

Commercial television interests, on the other hand, wonder if widespread and viewed etv will create an atmosphere for peaceful programming coexistence, as envisioned by CBS prexy Frank Stanton, or open a new arena of competition.

Full Speed Ahead On Rating Reform

Washington, July 30.

NAB's rating council is making "excellent progress" and getting cooperation from the rating services "far ahead of expectation," its chairman Donald McGannon said.

McGannon, president of Westinghouse Broadcasting said all phases of NAB's rating plan are moving along "ahead of schedule."

A subcommittee has worked out the basic approach to auditing services, McGannon reported.

The raters, in turn, have been responding to applications for NAB accredidation "far ahead of expectation," he continued.

Another subcommittee expects to have its criteria for rating services completed by mid-August, he said.

The Council was established by NAB prexy Le Roy Collins as an attempt to clean up the "ratings mess," uncovered in Congressional hearings, without Government Interference.

It has received the blessing of Rep. Oren Harris (D-Ark.), chairman of the Investigations subcommittee, and FCC Chairman E. William Henry.

Ann Sothern Sales

Twentythree additional sales have been inked for the "Ann Sothern Show," bringing total sales to 88 stations, according to Economee Television Programs, the rerun division of United Artists Television.

Series, composed of 93 half-hour episodes, was sold recently to KATU, Portland, Ore.; WHEN, Syracuse, N.Y.; KARK, Little Rock, Ark.; WVEC, Norfolk, Va.; WSAV, Savannah, Ga.; WSIX, Nashville; and KPRC, Houston, among other stations.

Aussie Commercial TV Windfall; $38,250,000 In Annual Billings

By RAYMOND STANLEY

Melbourne.

Facts and figures throwing light on Australian commercial television are contained in a 61-page television report recently issued by leading Aussie advertising agency, George Patterson Pty. Ltd.

Commercial television Down Under now covers an excess of 75% of metropolitan homes, 50% of country homes and 65% of all homes in the Commonwealth, providing at tv stations alone employment for about 3,000 fulltime and 1,000 parttime people and is second only to the daily press in advertising volume and rising fast to an estimated total investment of $38,250,000 a year.

Less than 10% of programs shown in peak times are of local origin with the American image still being largely reflected on the miniature screens. During a recent spot check over the month of 136 evening programs (excluding news, live variety, which were not available because of copyright or other restrictions) telecast nationally in the United States, only 12 were not shown Down Under.

However pressure on stations to increase Aussie content is steadily mounting and culminated officially in the setting up of two committees by the Federal Government—a seven-man Senate Committee to "inquire into and report on the encouragement of the production in Australia of films and programs suitable for television" and an inter-departmental committee more concerned with the basics of the film industry. Recommendations from both committees are still awaited.

However the report sees future prospects looking brighter than at any time since the advent of tv Down Under in 1956. It lists as these competition from a third commercial station in most capital cities, probable recommendation by the Senate Committee for an increase in Aussie material, formation of a TV Guild in Sydney, intention of the MCA organization through its subsidiary Revue Australia to "increase our local production efforts in this country considerably over the next two or three years," plans of three "name" writers (Morris West, Jon Cleary, Ted Willis and film producer Mervyn Murphy in association with established overseas interests shows already scheduled for production or on the board at Artransa, Hector Crawford Productions and other such organizations, increasing station acceptance of outside "packaged" shows and apparent acceptance by tv management of the desirability of more intensive training of writers, producers and artists, all pointing to an upsurge in creative program thinking in the immediate future.

New Channels

Third commercial channels scheduled to open in Sydney, Melbourne, Brisbane and Adelaide, and a second in Perth later next year is being viewed with mixed feelings all round. It is likely to cause more competition, both improve and deteriorate some standards, and in some instances cause a scarcity of material available. The report feels that one logical development would seem that stations will have to introduce more repeats.

Although a coaxial cable exists between Melbourne and Sydney (via Canberra it is too costly to use except on rare occasions — like the Queen's visit—since Post Office charges for it are in the vicinity of $2,475 an hour.

The report feels that the big problems confronting Aussie production of drama, self-contained plays or series and serial type programs are lack of good script writers and skilled producers, limited pool of "character" actors, restricted local sale, difficulty of selling overseas and reluctance of viewers to watch local shows.

Some commercial managers, as well as the chairman of the Australian Broadcasting, Commission feel that a school for producers, scripters, actors and cameramen should be set up—with the help of a Government subsidy. The recent formation in Sydney of a Radio, Television and Screen Writers Guild is believed likely to help in the more profitable employment of local scripters.

AB-PT's Net Profit In 2d Quarter Dips

Due to decreased earnings from the television and network divisions, the net operating profit of the American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres for the second quarter of this year dipped to $1,830,000, or 41c a share. This compares with the $2,511000 or 56c a share netted during the similar period last year.

Net profit for the quarter including capital gains was $2,061,000, compared to $2,487,000 for last year. Estimated net operating profit for the first six months was $4,219,000, compared to $5,553,000 for the same period in 1962. Net profit, including capital gains, was $4,473,000 compared with $5,396,000 in 1962.

AB-PT prexy Leonard H. Goldenson noted that the first and second quarter results reflected the fact that some "of the television season did not measure up to expectations."

British ATV Sets New Entries For '63-'64 Schedule

London, July 30.

Associated Television, the British major on the commercial network which, last fall, introduced 10 new shows, is in the pioneering vanguard again this autumn when it brings in such new-to-Britain series as "Espionage," "Sentimental Agent," "The Charlie Drake Show," The Norman Vaughan Show" and, from America, "The Phil Silvers Show."

Station, so far, is the only one beating the big drum for its fall line up; others and BBC are playing it close to the chest. But if the ATV schedule is anything to go by then, with the occasional exception, the British viewer is in for more of the same.

On the new show side, ATV has pepped up its Saturday night sked with the introduction of "Sentimental Agent," a spinoff of "Man Of The World," in the 7:30-8:25 p.m. berth. This comedy-adventure series starring Carlos Thompson is followed by another newie, "The Charlie Drake Show," the first series Drake has brought in for the indie web following a boffo career on BBC-TV.

ATV is replacing its Victoriana drama "Sergeant Cork" in the 9:05-10:05 p.m. berth with "Espionage," the Anglo-U.S. coproduction which is being handled in cotton wool at this end.

Hypoing the "desert lands" of Sunday afternoon viewing any fruits of which have been going BBC's way for the most part these past couple of seasons, is a new show from ABC-TV, featuring Al Read, a local, highly-accented comic. Read's outing is set for 3:30-4 p.m. until November when reruns of ATV's "Broadway Goes Latin," made in conjunction with Milton Lehr, take over.

London weekend station has slotted "Beverly Hillbillies" from 10:35-1105 p.m. on Sundays from Sept. 29 following the most highly-rated drama slot of the week which houses "Armchair Theatre" and "Drama 63" on an alternate basis.

Fall skeds sees also the re-entrance of Phil Silvers to British screens, only this time not on BBC (as was his "Bilko" entries), but in the Midlands on ATV, Monday nights at 7:15 p.m. The regionally-produced "Thirty Minute Theatre" is also scheduled and is slotted in at 10:50 p.m. on Thursday nights. Other newie, "Norman Vaughan Show" is set for 10:25 p.m. on Fridays.

Among the notable returning shows on the commercial web are "The Avengers," from ABC which reclaims its Saturday night berth at 10:05 p.m. and "The Saint" which is slated for the Thursday night anchor show at 8:15 p.m.

Otherwise, the indications emerging so far would give shape to a picture of the same shows in the same slots. For instance, Sunday night is still dominated by "The Palladium Show" and the drama cycles; Monday by "Coronation Street" seg and "Naked City," Tuesday by "No Hiding Place"; Wednesday by "Coronation Street"; Thursday by "Dickie Henderson Show" and Friday by "Emergency Ward 10," etc.

Orren Harris' 'Editorial Primer'

Washington, July 30.

Rep. Oren Harris (D-Ark.) offered four thoughts on broadcast editorials and from these more likely than from the verbiage at recent House hearings will come the guts of any laws on airwave opinion.

—Wiser than outright repeal of editorials would be an amendment of the Communications Act to assure fairness to politicians when stations editorialize for or against them.

—He hopes neither NAB nor FCC plans to write minumum staffing requirements for stations wanting to editorialize.

—The right to editorialize must be earned. Repeating what he suggested at the editorial hearings, only stations which generally air political programs and debates should be allowed to editorialize as well.

—Canned editorials should be identified as such on the air.

Harris told the National Broadcast Editorial Conference at the University of Georgia the difficulties raised in the bill of Rep. John Moss (D-Calif.) on political editorializing can be corrected. He said the House Commerce Committee which he heads will consider the bill.

Noting a "regrettable trend to uniformity among broadcasters," Harris inferred that NAB's and FCC's minimum staffing ideas would not be the way to counteract the trend.

He suggested that exclusive or primary focusing on the staffing problem is not the way to assure fair editorializing.

Speaking of canned editorials—a subject discussed frequently at the hearings and one obviously worrying many Congressmen—Harris suggested stretching Sec. 317 to cover them. The section now only requires identification of material for which the broadcaster is paid to air.

Harris warned canned editorials could cause greater harm to the public than payola and the rating services if they gain the same control over broadcasters.

Howard K. Smith to Congress: Don't Tamper With Editorializing

Athens, Ga., July 30.

Howard K. Smith, American Broadcasting Co. commentator, told the opening session of the first National Broadcast Editorial Conference, that legislators must not be permitted to tamper with the right of radio and television broadcasters to air editorial opinions.

"Like all else in life, editorial judgment is highly imperfect and we live with that as we must with all other aspects of our imperfect processes of life," Smith told his audience in the Center for Continuing Education on the University of Georgia campus.

He added, however, that "legislators must abandon the hope of the ideal, the expectation that strict, clear legislation will produce perfect balance of opinion and eliminate the need for hard, human fallible judgment of what is fair and what is not."

He added: "Editorials are more than a permissive function.

"I think it is a kind of public duty. I believe we should quite boldly and insistently take sides on public issues and explain why in words that are as persuasive as possible."

Representatives from radio and tv broadcasting industry from 20 or so states were present at the opening of the three-day parlay, cosponsored by the Georgia Assn. of Broadcasters and the U. of Ga. Henry W. Grady School of Journalism.

This conference, the first of its kind, was organized and called to delve into and seek to find the answers to problems of editorializing on the air.

Opposition to proposed laws governing editorial broadcasts crystalizing at this meeting is expected to point the way for any changes in rules and regulations of the FCC.

This conference comes on the heels of attacks in Congress in hearings on the subject by the Communications Subcommittee of the House Commerce Committee.

Smith said that the basic question before the House Committee was:

"Should editorials be permitted at all on radio and television?"

He countered this with the assertion that it is the public duty of radio and tv stations to editorialize.

He granted that good judgment and fair play should prevail, but added that restraints should be as few as possible or a negative influence would result.

"A dull and cautious editorial or a strong stand on a banal issue are of no help to anyone," Smith said.

He added that there is no need for Federal control over such editorializing because the FCC is properly and adequately armed to handle breaches of fair play and good broadcasting.

"I fear that Americans are unlearning how to say clearly and forthrightly what they mean in this age of conformist pressures," Smith told his listeners.

Newman's 'Bloodless Revolution' Finds BBC-TV Poised for Action

London, July 30.

Not all the current excitement around BBC's London-based hq is being generated by the mammoth task of prepping an additional 25 hours a week of highclass programming for its second web. Running parallel with all the faith and anxiety, hope and sweat being poured into this chore (which has to be wrapped up pretty soon for a start next April), is a lot of high interest in an unheralded internal project. It is becoming known as "Newman's Bloodless Revolution."

The "Newman" is Sydney Newman, BBC's new drama chieftain and member of the all-powerful "inner cabinet" of top executives who plan and control the whole of BBC's video operation.

Brought in to stimulate the web's flagging dramatic prowess, his revolution has come in the shape of a complete revamp of the basic structure of BBC's drama limb—a department responsible for around eight hours (and soon 12) of programming per week. The project, which will take at least until fall to complete, is "bloodless" because, the way Newman plans it, he will not have to fire anyone as a result of the drastic changes.

Since his January start with the Corp., the executive has complied, submitted and had approved a plan of campaign aimed at breaking down BBC's traditional "Vast Organization" setup. Present system, he contends, tends to swamp creatve talent and their ideas.

Newman, he says, is to bring into force a multiplicity of creative units in which writer-producer-director have easy access to one another and, to a great degree, to a controlling upper-echelon exec.

Already, he has reorganized his drama group from one straggly whole into three specific sections —one dealing with series; the second handling serials and the third producing teleplays. Each section, which itself is sub-divided into two or three sections dealing with specific program groups, comes under the aegis of an executive, responsible directly to Newman. And within each section producer-director teams are being instituted.

Corporation's tv script department has virtually been disbanded and the script editors attached to respective creative units. Department does still function, however, in the handling of unsolicited scripts which, if they show any promise, are passed on to an appropriate creative unit.

Newman intends by the fall to extend the process of converting the vast pool of staffers into autonomous units of designers, costumers and even technical crews.

Effects of "Newman's revolution," first on-screen evidence of which will be apparent in the late fall, will be to "localize" the activities of creative personnel. For example, whereas in the past a BBC producer would work on anything and everything, he will now become part of a team also comprising a director, scripter, designer and so on, and will work on one type of project, say, for instance, the Sunday night play cycle. It will now be the rule and not the exception for each drama project to have both producer and director working on it. And BBC's video script department will no longer have to "sell" a yarn to a producer. This precess will be eliminated as each creative unit will have a script editor working "just across the hall" from the producer and director, and applicable scripts will be handled by him in close association with the rest of the team.

Newman expects that his new mosaic of permanent creative units, each working on their own particular programming sector, will give them a chance to evolve a "unique touch." Plan to involve the same technical crews with the same creative people springs from Newman's days as drama head at ABC-TV. There, his weekend-only schedule of drama production resulted in the same band of technicians working on the "Armchair Theatre" skein which, he found, ran more smoothly for it.

Whether or not he can magnify the process to seven days a week proportions and be as successful as he was with "Armchair Theatre" will emerge in the fall. Not until then will it be possible to assess if his impact at BBC will pay off in ratings and quality.

CBS Taps Granet For 'Adventure'

Bert Granet, producer of the Desilu hourlong dramas, "Twilight Zone" and the "Lucille Ball" specials has been assigned as the new producer of CBS-TV's "Great Adventure."

Granet replaces John Houseman who resigned as producer of the historical series in a policy hassle with the network. Webs execs are understood to have wanted more of an accent on action adventure material resulting in a continued east-west hassle. Series is being produced on the Coast.

Series, scheduled to be presented in cooperation with the National Education Assn., was conceived under the programming regime of Hubbell Robinson, then senior programming v.p. for the web. Houseman who will continue has association with CBS-TV as a producer of web dramatic specials, will complete six hourlong "Adventure" episodes before leaving. He had lined up 18 scripts before the policy hassle came to a head.

Satellite Corp.'s Dispute With FCC Over Stock Issue

Washington, July 30.

A dispute between FCC and the directors of the Communications Satellite Corp. over issuing stock to the public has been dragged into the open with the Commission charging the directors of disregarding the intent of Congress.

Satellite chairman Leo D. Welch promptly denied the charges.

FCC said the Satellite Corp. is making important decisions which Congress intended to be made jointly by publicly elected directors and other board members.

In a letter, FCC said it was "disturbed by indications" that the Corporation no longer has definite plans for the once-promised 1963 public stock issue in February and pointed to "the apparent lack of progress . . . in arranging such an issue."

FCC said the incorporators, chosen by the President, were primarily responsible for the initial public stock offering plus establishing a commercial satellite system.

After the public stock was sold, a 15-member board of director was to run the corporation, FCC said. The board, as specified by Congress, would include six directors elected by public stockholders, six chosen by stock owning common carriers and three Presidential appointees.

This body was to make the important decisions of the corporation, not the original incorporators, FCC said.

The incorporators have been holding up on the stock issue until further research and development was completed. Commission said these steps should be "continuously and aggressively pursued together with other measures that must be taken in order to advance this most critical national program."

Responding to FCC's letter, Welch said the "initial public offering of stock will be made at as early a date as the directors determine to be compatible with the public interest and the carrying out of the purpose of the act."

He said the corporation will send FCC a letter summarizing its position.

The dispute popped into the open when the Satellite Corp. asked FCC for an additional $600,000 of credit after receiving $500,000 earlier this year.

Commission okayed the request but said it wouldn't authorize more credit until plans were made for a stock issue.

KPRC-TV'S NEW STICK

Houston, July 30.

The FCC has granted a construction permit to the Houston Post Co.'s KPRC-TV to erect a new antenna tower.

KPRC-TV filed an application with the FCC for the permit on June 5.

The new tower, which will be 1,549 feet high, will add more than 8,000 square miles to the station's coverage. It will be more than twice the size of the present tower.

Brit. TV Regional Outlets Decide To Band Together

London, July 30.

Britain's 11 regional commercial tv stations which cover the country outside of the main London, Midlands and Northern areas, have formed the British Regional Television Association, an organization aimed at promoting the interests of local indie contractors. Marquess Townshend, chairman of Anglia-TV, is chairman of the new association for the first year.

Formation of BRTA, which will be the regionals' mouthpiece dealing with the Independent Television Authority, the network, unions, etc., marks the coming of a new era for the local operators. It is the final link in a chain of events that makes the regional outlets, collectively, a second force in the fundamental structure of commercial television in this country.

In the past there have been two regional station "attitudes" in operation. One has been progressive, has endeavoured to produce programming of quality which it subsequently tried to sell to the network—in some cases even abroad—in addition to the "locally-orientated" fare demanded by the Independent Television Authority. The other has been content to plug into the network and just "muddle along" with interview shows and cheap-to-mount panel games to fill their local programming time comitment.

Advent of BRTA has made for the cooperative use of facilities among the 11 regional stations and, it has been calculated, instead of pouring about $4,000 an hour into network coffers, such coin could be spent on program production. Providing each of the regional outlets took the show, much of the nut could be recovered. And, in addition, a second choice of program would be on offer to the little contractor.

One major factor stopping full scale inter-production of this kind is the fact that the major contractors, which "sponsor" their "offspring" regional stations, have agreements whereby they take a percentage of the local operators gross whether or not he opts out of networked shows. Also, it does not make economic sense for the small stations to mount full time programming when, in addition to their percentage fee, they can plug into the network for a "nominal" price.

But the desire not to be entirely dependent on the majors for material has already spurred program production and coproduction by the local stations.

Classic example is the "Thirty Minute Theatre" project which is now complete and scheduled for the fall. Four regionals—Scottish-TV, Anglia-TV, Southern-TV and TWW—have each produced three half-hour dramas which will be networked to each other and to other parts of the indie web.

Another project involving interregional cooperation is "Celtic Challenge," a pubaffairs q-and-a show which is being produced and screened by TWW, Scottish-TV, Border-TV, Grampian-TV, Ulster-TV, Westward-TV and Telefis Eireann, the commercial station in Eire.

There are also dickers currently under way for four regionals to produce a documentary on Britain's shipyards.

Tighter banding together of the local operators will not only have the effect of stimulating production on the inter-regional basis, but is anticipated to give the stix boys more bargaining power when it comes to scheduling agreements.

Mike Santangelo Exits TA in Contract Hassle, Sets Co-Prod. Ventures

Michael R. Santangelo, after ankling an exec post at Talent Associates-Paramount Ltd., has set up a flock of co-production deals in television, legit and film. With Lincoln Productions, he's producing two animated features for theatrical release. These will be "Return To The Land of Oz" and "Pinnocchio in Outer Space." He's also readying an animated film for tv with Lincoln Prod. and Groucho Marx.

He's also dickering for a South American and Far Eastern tour for "Black Nativity," the gospel show Santangelo produced with Barbara Griner. They are working on a couple of other musicals for Broadway and may also do shows for the World's Fair. Santangelo is planning to produce a tv special with Eddie Albert.

Santangelo left TA in a hassle over an employment contract.

Hugh Downs 'Chit Chat' In Mackinac Is. 'Sneak'

Hugh Downs, emcee of NBC-TV's "Today" show, is pulling a switch in game shows. He's preeming his new game show, "Chit Chat," at the Grand Hotel, Mackinac Island, acting as m.c. for tonight's (31) debut there. His game of conversation also is being published by Milton Bradley for home distribution this winter.

All this is prior to the show's hoped for tv debut.

Consumers Union's Ciggie Cancer Assessment Jolt for Tobacco Boys —On Other Madison Ave. Fronts

By BILL GREELEY

A few weeks back the cigaret industry surprised everybody with an announcement out of the blue (haze) that it was going to quit the advertising appeals that make the habit appear sophisticated, healthy and aphrodisiac as exemplified in ads decorated by young and chic models, athlete endorsements and closeup twosomes in verdant, pastoral surroundings.

The sudden pronouncement seemed a tactical switch for the industry whose approach to the mounting evidence of a link between smoking and lung cancer (and other terminal respiratory diseases) has been a clearly defined battle line.

Now, however, a strong motivating force for the new attitude of the Tobacco Institute (which issued the statement on new industry policy) has turned up. It's a book, The Consumers Union Report on Smoking and the Public Interest, published this month by Simon & Schuster ($3.50). To date, as it cogently wraps up all the research, propaganda and worldwide actions surrounding the controversy, the Consumers Union report is the most powerful argument compiled.

CU's director Dexter Masters says page proofs of the book were sent to Dr. Little of the Tobacco Industry Research Committee and all factotums at the Tobacco Institute immediately before the new policy was issued. "Our view," says Masters, "is that it was the first reaction to our book." He expects that the book will sell for a long time, selling in all about 50,000 copies.

Authors of "Smoking," all with extensive magazine credits, are Ruth and Edward Brecher, Arthur Herzog, Walter Goodman, Gerald Walker along with the editors of Consumer Reports (the CU product-evaluating magazine which carried an excerpt from the book earlier).

"Smoking" is in four parts: "The Medical Evidence;" "The Industry: Science & Public Relations;" "The Industry: Advertising & Health;" and "Points for a Program."

The book's main charge comes from the first section on medical evidence. It puts together all the research so far, and concludes that the statistical evidence combined with any of a variety of theoretical approaches show "there is simply no remaining room for reasonable doubt" re the cig-cancer link. A reader is impacted with overwhelming doubtlessness. And he is backed by the word of responsible medical men who now consider lung cancer a world epidemic.

The advertising history of the industry and its actions since the rise of the cancer scare are carefully and critically reviewed. There are several illustrations from sick lung tissues to industry health appeals to posters from foreign government campaigns current against cigaret smoking.

Incidentally, while the tobacco industry has announced the new promotional approach, there has been very little evidence of any action by individual tobacco firms. From Camel's Times Square billboard featuring a parachutist blowing actual smoke rings to Kent's collegiate couple ogling each other and puffing contentedly in ivy shroud, the appeals are stet.

Radio's Soundoff

Since the medium's crisis in the early rise of television, radio's resurgent good economic health has come in waves. There's one current, and the industry is riding it with appropriate promotion.

Blair has a new Pulse study, based on more than 2,000 home interviews, which purports to cover the nation. CBS Spot Sales has a lavish recorded approach timed at the creative side of the ad agencies.

Blair says its study, "National Survey Number 1," is the first to measure national listening of all types of radios—in home and out—while utilizing the personal interview technique (in the home). It also has demographic breakdowns, based on what a pre-survey of agency execs showed the buyers of radio want these days.

It takes some hard raps at network radio, and shows, for example that the male head of households spends 235% more time listening to the air medium than reading newspapers, and 500% more time with radio than with magazines.

Blair is using the survey to prepare special campaigns for agencies based on "product profile data" supplied by the ad men via questionnaires prepared by the rep firm.

CBS Spot Sales presentation, an "all ears" promotion, is in the form of an lp record and a follow-up tape of creative radio commercials aimed at inspiring the agency copy departments which have been known to consider radio blurbs a lacklustre chore compared to tv.

The disk is a fully-produced radio musical comedy with top actors lyric and song and a story. Latter concerns how the agency under-execs discover a new medium—radio—while the prez is out on the golf course for the weekend (they do so when the cleaning man knocks over the tv set and only sound is available).

Coast commercial producer Alan Alch is producer of "That Agency Thing" which features a 28-piece band directed by Bob Thompson and a cast including Herschel Bernardi, Howard Morris, Byron Kane, Paul Frees and June Foray.

Record liner is written by Dave Bascom, of Guild, Bascom & Bonfigli, San Francisco, who calls radio his "No. 1 favorite advertising medium," and CBS Spot Sales veepee Maurie Webster, who says (as the boys at Inlike Agency on the record discovered) "radio is indeed a new medium today."

'Perils of Perline'

ABC-TV is utilizing clips from the old classic films with Laurel & Hardy, W. C. Fields, Fay Wray and Vilma Banky for a sales presentation pitch to Madison Ave. time buyers. Titled "Perils of Perline" (she's an attractive network time buyer), the film stars ABC-TV's weather gal Susannah Glidden as the heroine with Yale Roe, ABC-TV daytime sales chief, coming to the rescue in the nick from a fate worse than a high cost-per-thousand. Elliott Ames, playing the heavy, wrote and produced the sales epic.

H-B's 90% SRO

J. B. Williams has bought alternate-week sponsorship in the expanded "Huntley-Brinkley Report," which goes to a half hour strip on NBC-TV Sept. 9 at 7 p.m.

Show is now 90% sold with only one weekly quarter hour for sale. Previous bankrollers include Plymouth, R. J. Reynolds, American Home Products, American Chicle, Aluminum Corp. and Standard Brands.

Jimmy Dean: 'Sick Of Watching Perfect TV' So Plans to Go Live

Philadelphia, July 30.

Jimmy Dean, here to drumbeat for his new hourlong comedy and variety show, preeming on ABC-TV in Sept., declared that the similarity of his name to the late James Dean of the movies never bothered him. "My name was never James. It was always Jimmy. I used it professionally before he came on the scene, so I saw no reason for changing it." He also declared, I'm not one of those no-business-like show-business guys. There's lots of other fish to fry—lots of things I can think of doing."

He plans three taped shows first, but the rest will be live. "I'm sick of watching perfect tv. On a taped show there's always the feeling you can do it over again if it's not right. You don't get the best out of people."

Dean has a high regard for former localite Ed McMahon, who takes over the "Tonight" show this week as Johnny Carson's relief. McMahon falls in his category of "nice guys." I'm sort of partial to nice guys on my shows. I'll take that quality in preference to talent. It shows through. A guy may have a world of talent, but if he's got a mongrel temperament, he's not for me."

SAMETH'S ABC NOD AS EXEC PRODUCER

John Sameth, a director with the web since 1955, has been named executive producer for ABC-TV.

He replaces John B. Green, who has ankled to become producer of "100 Grand," the network's new big-money quiz show premiering this season. Sameth has directed a wide range of entertainment and telementary programs, and was pool director for the Glenn and Gordon manshoots.

Syndication Keeps Pace With TV's Flexibility

By MURRAY HOROWITZ

Mid-'63 finds syndication alive and kicking, with the domestic market-to-market field astir with activity, with the foreign market growing.

Not all the domestic activity betokens profits. Nature of syndication has been changing and the character of what is commercial in the market place has undergone some drastic revisions.

In general terms, features-to-tv field has never had is so good; off-network hour properties, following a flush of success, has evolved into a tough competitive biz; off-network half-hours in syndication parallels the success of the network run; foreign biz is expanding.

Other facets of the syndication biz finds the number of first-runs few and far between; and the entrance of station group operators such as Westinghouse Broadcasting, Triangle, and Storer into syndication programming.

To speak of syndication, as if it were separate and apart from the whole of television is a bad artificiality. Syndication has a king-sized stake in such matters as the final fate of option time, the CBS-TV station compensation plan, the call for Federal regulation of the networks, the controversy over program content. In short, all the issues alive in the air concerning America's most popular medium has its repercussions in syndication, the phrase used to describe the sale of programs on a local rather than on a network level in the U.S.

Some of the major syndicators realize that they have a greater responsibility than merely being the transmission belt of off-network properties or pix once made for theatrical exhibition. Despite that recognition, few of them have been able to introduce first-run properties. The exceptions include United Artists Televison, Official Films, and Independent Television Corp. among the syndicators, and station group operators such as Westinghouse have come forth with "Steve Allen."

Day of action-adventure series, introduced with regularity over the year, for market-to-market selling is over. Its demise, perhaps forecast by the critical panning of most of these first-run entries, just can't run the economic gauntlet in today's market. Now it's more a matter of pin-pointing the content of a new first-run series, seeking out an untapped market such as Official's "Biography" skein, or taking an old format and dressing it up for new appeal or new economies. First-run syndie product has became a tailored rather than a formula item.

In '63, the off-network hours made the big syndication noise. Roster of companies with hours to sell reads like a who's who of network television. It was the off-network hours which brought such companies as Desilu, Four Star, Warner Bros. into the biz of selling vidfilm series on a market-to-market basis. Off-web properties also expanded the catalogs and efforts of such pix companies as Metro TV and 20th-Fox.

First year efforts of Warner Bros., with the largest catalog of off-network hours, was reported by the company to reach the $10,000,000 level. First years strides of syndication efforts of Desilu was put at $5,000,000 and $4,500,000 for Four Star. MCA TV, which started the hourlong off-network thrust, made another twist in mid-'63 and turned to off-network half-hour selling. Half-hours, in the midst of the comparative deluge of off-network 60-minute series, found themselves in comparative short supply.

The problem besetting vidfilms making the station by station turn seem to evaporate when the features-to-tv field is examined. Little did the picture makers of old think that their longest playing time would be secured not in updated nickelodeons, but at home, on tv screens. Name the star and he or she can be found on tv. Name the producing company and that company's trade label will be found on video.

The Vaunted Vaultees

First the post-'48's came out of the vaults to ring up millions on the home screen. That was, for the majors, some seven or eight years ago. It is these vaultees that are currently being sold for another round in the market place. The bottom of the barrel cinematics are being retired, but the better ones—and their number runs in the hundreds—are being sold for reruns, at comparative hefty prices, too.

The post-'48's, once a settlement was reached with the Hollywood talent guilds, soon struck the tv path. Now the gap dividing the theatrical and tv release of a feature of a major Hollywood studio now stands at about five years, or even less. That's true for most pix product. What has triggered the earlier release dates of major studio pix is the network introduction of feature programming—ABC-TV had a try at it for one season and NBC-TV did so well with pix that in '63-'64, web is telecasting pix both Monday and Saturday evenings.

There's a quip in network programming quarters—a quip with a good deal of truth in it—"When in rating trouble a particular night in the week, program features." The concept may do nothing for creative television, but it has a validity for harried program execs.

The emergeney work which pix may do for sagging network ratings may be a short-lived affair on the basis of current pix economics. The supply of available post-'48 fresh pix is dwindling rather rapidly and while a network may now pick and choose, in seasons hence the choice will be more severely limited.

Bulk of features-to-tv biz, of course, is a non-network affair. The customers are the stations across the nation which have found that pix attract audiences and spot advertisers. As to prices of cinematics the numbers of those price tags are getting higher and higher. It's a case of supply and demand.

Not only has the price range secured for pix broadened, but the content range. Some of the festival prize winners which years ago would only get limited distribution, now are getting wide distribution. The growth of the art houses throughout the country has paved the way for the acceptability of more adult pix on tv. Another factor, too, is that staid circuits now play the so-called "international picture" as readily as native product.

Networks are very much involved in syndication via subsids. There's ABC Films, CBS Films and NBC Films, all acting, in the main, as funnels for off-network product in both the domestic and foreign markets. Activity of network subsids in market-by-market selling raises more than one question on the power of such subsids to secure residual selling rights both here and abroad. In some quarters, network power plays secure residual rights have been attacked as monopolistic.

Another product mainstay of syndication is cartooning. Many of the major syndicators have a backlog of cartoons, a good quantity of which were initially made for theatrical release. In '63-'64, there won't be many new made-for-tv cartoons for the market-by-market route. New entries will be coming from King Features, ITC, Screen Gems, Trans-Lux and a few other companies.

Always lending a strong assist to domestic syndication is the expanding foreign market, which in 1963 is expected to gross some $55,000,000. Foreign field now has two trade organizations, tv committee of the Motion Picture Export Assn., and Television Programs Export Assn., each working their separate ways to secure and expand the foreign field for American tv program sellers.

Television committee of the MPEA is composed of motion picture company members, pix companies which support the sister Motion Picture Assn. of America, topped by Eric Johnston. MPEA's tv committee is headed by Bill Fineshriber. TPEA, which has strong network support, has as its prexy John McCarthy, an old hand at foreign trade. In most instances, both groups work in harmony, despite occasional unofficial sniping and overzealous press releases.

TV: Shill for Shallow Shows

scope of television. The onslaught has now been unleashed by an organization no less formidable and mighty than the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the United States, representing 31 Protestant and Eastern Orthodox denominations.

The Council, from the standpoint of popular support (its denominations have over 40,000,000 members), is easily the most potent and influential U.S. religious institution. As such, of course, it has always been against various forms of sin and for the general advancement of society's morals, as demonstrated by its past announcements and activities.

But the specific pronouncements approved by the National Council's General Board, in this year's annual spring meeting, directed against broadcasters and bigots, in twin but unrelated drives to improve tv and eliminate racial segregation, is eye-opening indeed!

As a matter of fact it was the Council's indictment of television, not of segregation, that captured the front page headlines of the influential dailies which devoted key space to the Council's anti-tv manifesto.

In a soberly worded, but nonetheless strong protest demanding FCC action, the Council castigated tv's present programming as long on "entertaining and diverting" but woefully short in the kind of mass education that "identify and clarify . . . ideas and information."

Thus the Council laid down the platform of a crusade, to alter network programming, that is expected to echo throughout its member denominations in a campaign waged from thousands of pulpits and through Church magazines and publicity media.

Behind the pronouncement lies the immediate dissatisfaction among Church groups with the lack of prime viewing hours allotted by tv broadcasters to religious programming.

The Council's pronouncement, it's also believed, extends far beyond the adverse reaction of professional clerics in that it represents, too, the persuasions of key lay groups.

Less Idiocy, More Ideas

It's expected that the Council will preserve in this newly-enunciated objective—of less idiocy and more ideas — through a follow-through program of implementation which is expected to get under way before the meeting of the Council's General Assembly when President Kennedy addresses it in Philadelphia on Dec. 3.

Inside observers, close to the Council's work and keenly aware of its explosive potential, so far as tv is concerned, feel that the root cause of the Council's concern lies in the anemic status and uncertain future of educational tv.

While the Council commended "commercial broadcasters for the widespread aid they are giving to educational programs," there are strong suspicions that educational tv stations, which are surviving as charity cases supported by commercial tv interests, permit the networks to duck their full responsibilities in the cultural and educational spheres.

The Council's statement makes it glaringly apparent that it is not satisfied with the networks' financial support of educational tv through well-publicized money grants and equipment gifts to educational tv stations. It demands that commercial tv interests contribute not only money but solid effort—to perform through the actual telecasting of educational programs on the commercial stations.

Ironically, it's the very generosity of the Frank Stantons, the Bob Sarnoffs, the Leonard Goldensons, the Walter Annenbergs, et al — who've dipped into corporate profits to support educational tv stations—that has made commercial tv, in the eyes of some, even more blatantly and crassly commercial than even before the gifts were actually tendered. For such financial handouts, accompanied as they are by lofty and idealistic press releases, come—it's pointed out—from tv interests well aware that a viable educational tv station that survives represents solid insurance that in a Philadelphia, for example, there can be only three (not four) commercial VHF stations.

In Philadelphia Channel 12, which for years represented a VHF commercial station licensed to nearby Wilmington, Del., goes educational on Sept. 12, Philadelphia and the Delaware Valley, therefore, so long an educational tv station can survive, are restricted to three commercial stations and to a choice of three networks. To the present three Philadelphia stations, the advent of education represents, over the years, extra multi-million dollar profits.

The huge profit increment, over the years, flows from splitting Philadelphia audience and tv advertising three, rather than four, ways. Thus an Annenberg tax-deductible gift of WFIL's recently vacated plant and old equipment to Philly's educational station, which helps insure one third less competition, makes good business, as well as philanthropic, sense. Ditto the $100,000 to the same Philly educational station given by CBS, which, like Annenberg, also owns and operates a commercial station in the City of Brotherly Love. This more recent action was a reprise of the grants previously awarded New York's Channel 13 by the networks and independent stations whose profits take in five, rather than six, competitors offers obvious profit plusses. Quite obviously, should a VHF educational station die from lack of financial support, the FCC— in due course—would be under pressure to assign the unoccupied channel to a new commercial station.

Although educational tv stations are now floundering on the abyss of bankruptcy, it would appear that, with occasional financial help from commercial tv, they may continue to remain indefinitely poised in their present posture of too proud to die, too weak to serve and compete effectively.

The National Council of Churches apparently is dedicated to see to it that the tv networks contribute to educational tv in ways far more meaningful than putting money in the educational tv stations collection plate.

One dramatic suggestion offered has been the actual abolishing of the educational tv stations per se. The 47 educational stations now on the air could thus be allocated to regular commercial use, making possible, overnight, a strong fourth competitive, commercial network.

Concurrently, each commercial station in the U.S. would be required to go educational, sans commercials, one evening each week.

Thus New York would revert to seven commercial stations but would have educational-cultural tv offerings not just from a financially anemic Channel 13 but an every evening service supplied by a diversity of stronger stations better equipped in money, manpower and overall production savvy. In such an eventuality educational tv would receive the powerful stimulus of competition between the most professional and competent practitioners of the tv art.

And in extending their service horizons (as would be required by new licensing conditions), the network-station hierarchy would compete against each other in new efforts to tie up the Harvards, the Princetons, the Cornells, the Encyclopedia Brittanicas, the World Book of Knowledge—not merely the Wm. Morrises, the MCA's and the documentary producers on what is now the reducing front of public service prime time programming. These gentlemen, with their superior promotional and public relations skills, are better equipped to organize the money-raising campaigns from public and other sources needed to support tv's educational activities.

In so doing, it's felt, the commercial tv interests will come closer to reaching the oft-enunciated goals of a balanced television service, not only in entertainment and news but in culture and enlightenment.

Educational tv, many now feel, is too important to be delegated to educational tv stations. It's a growing task which should be assumed by every station in a manner which will distribute the burden and responsibility equitably to every tv station whose license privileges them to make a profit in public service.

Radio France on Verge Of A Major Overhaul

Paris, July 30.

Though most interest has been focused on nationalized tv, radio is still a very much live factor here and also due for a shakeup by the governmental Radiodiffusion-Television Francaise. Most of the proposed shifts are conjecture but heads of the four RTF stations have been warned not to plan any important programs after October, when changes are to be revealed.

Robert Bordaz, head of the RTF, is reportedly finishing his blueprint for the moves. Aims are to have a definite cleavage between cultural entries and entertainment programs and to try to have more provincial aspects instead of letting Paris dominate the works.

France 3, which has specialized in documentary-type shows and original dramas, will become a strictly educational hookup during the day and France 2, notable for its soap operas and more serious episoders, if most are below par, may go soundless during the day under new plans with half-hour evening shows only of variety types, music, quiz programs and series.

Seemingly more fact than rumor, it has alarmed radio technical and creative unions who fear losing out in employment on these changes and may add strikes to those already plaguing tv. They maintain that civil servants want to force their radio attitudes on the public without giving it a chance to air its wants and opinions.

Unions point up the RTF is a public service underwritten by taxes and should keep up all its stations. There is talk that France 4 might be done away with to convert it more for foreign and other local aspects. They also maintain any suppression of daytime shows could deprive the sick and shutins of their due.

It is also estimated that radio has declined sorely quality-wise and needs plenty of new ideas and unusual programs. They also want the office of program director, vacated recently by the death of Paul Gilson, filled as soon as possible so direct talks and negotiation can go on.

It is felt that there were attempts to go in for unusual and more dynamic programming during prime time due to tv competition but, overall, radio needs an overhaul. There are also two important peripheral private commercial stations, Radio-Luxembourg and Europe No. 1, that have big followings and are to be reckoned with.

Of the RTF stations, France 1 had gone in for some good disk shows and fairly good info series but fallen on night entries, France 2 had stuck to series and soap operas with some higher grade episoders, France 3, emerged with some okay vulgarized science, sociological and historical series, and France 4 had fine classical music and some good verbal shows on criticism and literature.

Radio-Luxembourg, beamed in from the nearby country, slants itself for femme listeners and Europe No. 1, situated in France but beamed in by tape from the Sarre, aims at the young with rock, musical comedy tries and magazine format programs.

It is felt that news and historical shows still lack the proper perspective, tautness, bite and actuality to have them needing new formats and personnel. So radio is not the forgotten man and will get plenty of attention comes October, even if tv is now the big brother something-for-nothing show facet.

Granada Again In Lead in Brit. Com'l TV's May Billings

London, July 30.

Ad revenue accruing to the commercial stations on the independent network for May, this year, a five-week month, showed an overall 11% increase over May 1962, a four-week month. Collective figure for the former period was $24,371,200 as against $21,868,000 garnered in the latter, according to Media Records, an independent monitoring service.

Biggest grosser for the month was again Granada-TV, which serves the North, Monday to Friday. Station took $5,171,600 ($4,233,600). London weekday company, Associated-Rediffusion collected billings worth $4,434,600 ($4,200,000). Associated TeleVision coined $2,007,600 ($1,621,200) from its London weekend operation and $2,410,800 ($2,178,400) from advertisers in the Midlands during the week. ABC-TV earned, via its two-area, weekend-only operation, some $1,055,600 ($980,000) from the Midlands and $1,758,400 ($1,590,400) from the North.

Smaller regional stations sliced up the May ad coin this way: Scottish-TV $1,433,600 ($1,411,200). TWW $1,330,000 ($1,260,000). Southern-TV $1,425,200 ($1,352,400). TTT $1,142,400 ($1,111,600). Anglia-TV $714,000 ($697,200). Ulster-TV $358,400 ($327,600). Westward-TV $445,200 ($470,400) Border-TV $235,200 ($168,000) Grampian-TV $246,200 ($266,000). Channel-TV $50,400 (not operational previous year). WWN $142,800 (not operational).

The 11% tv ad duty for the month amounted to $2,679,600 ($2,405,200) which, added to the total advertising money going to the independents, means advertisers shelled out $27,050,800 during May, against $24,273,200 last year.

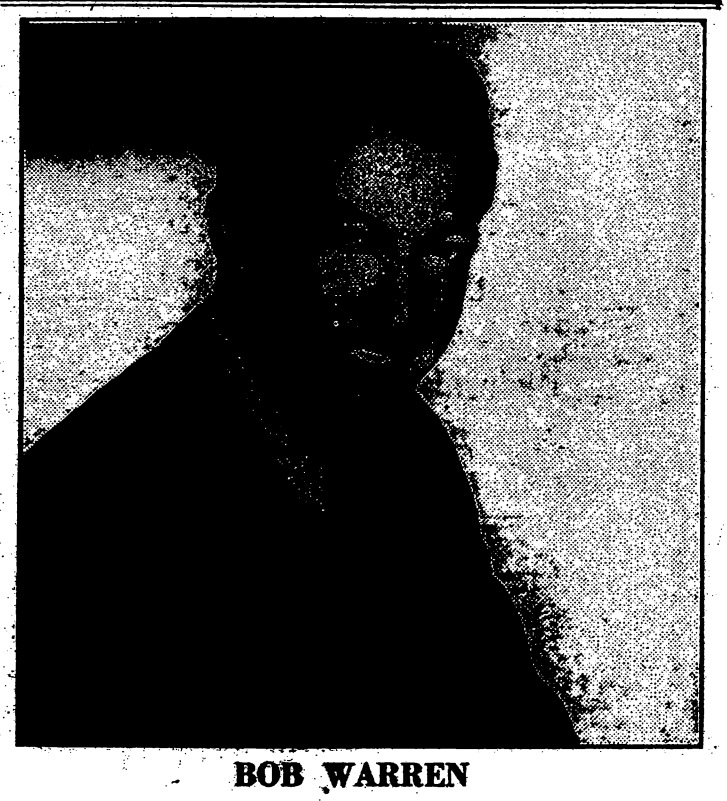
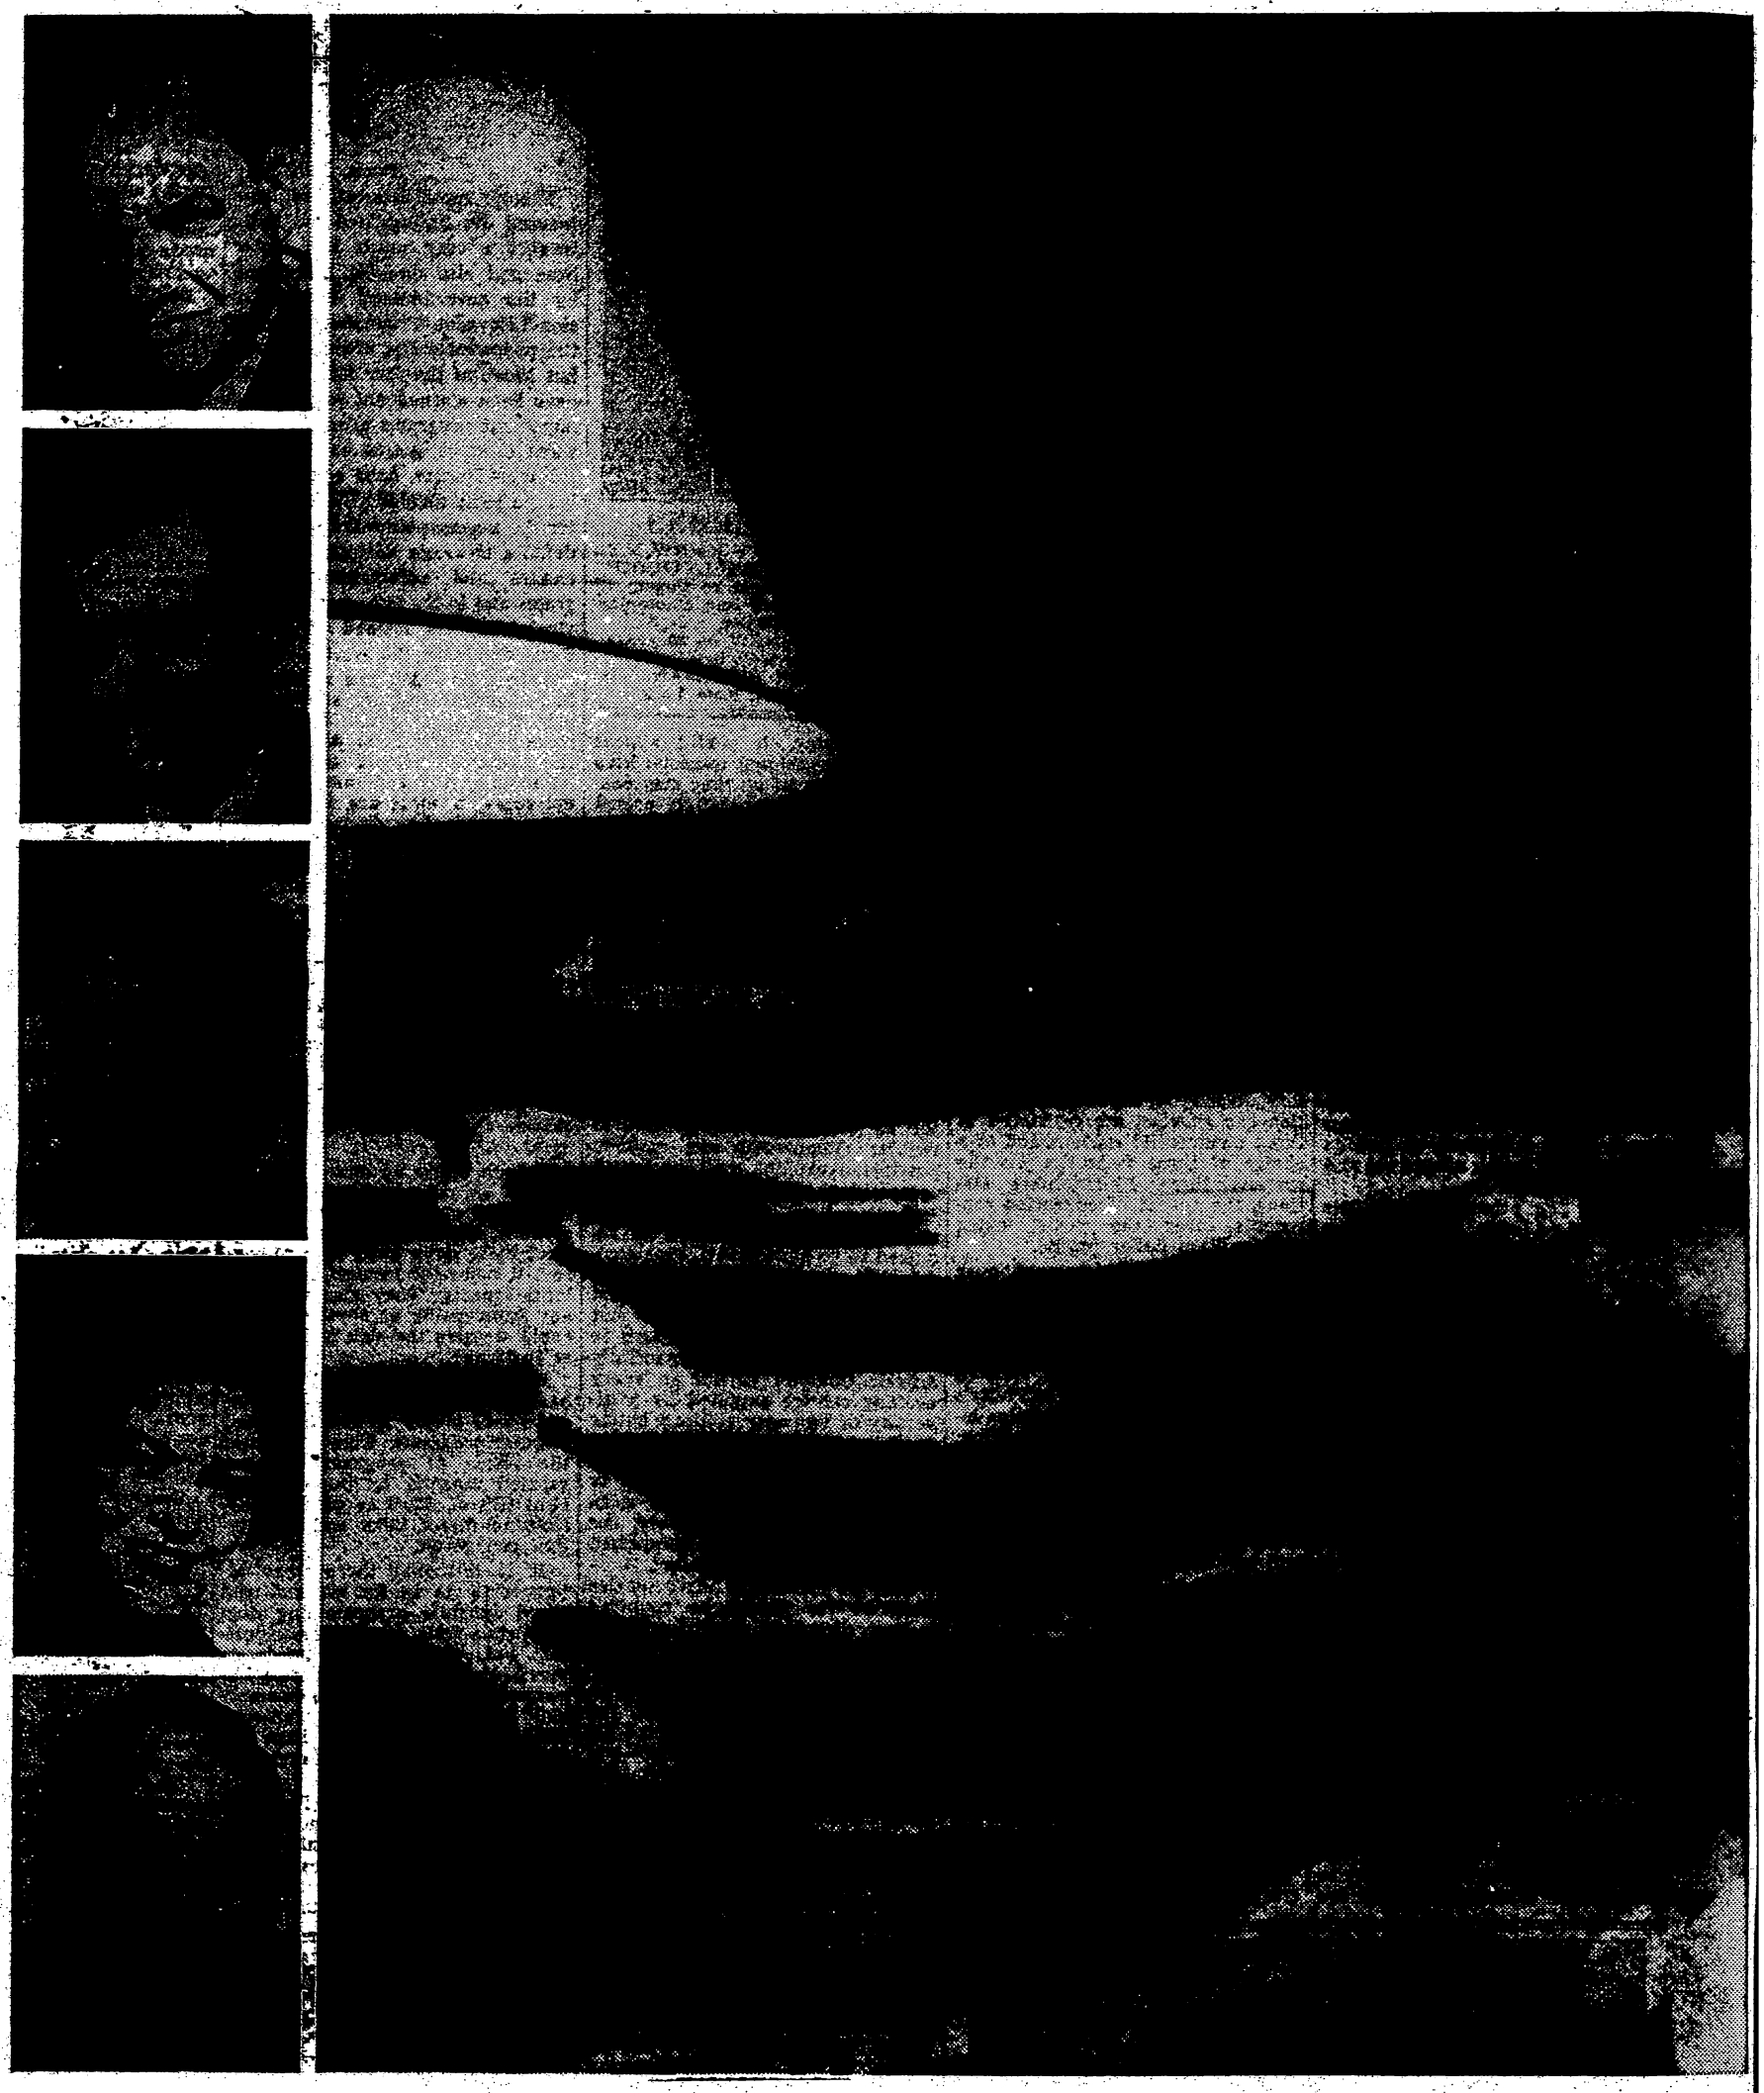
NTFC Dissolved

The National Television Film Council, formed 15 years ago as a clearing house on the use of film in tv, has dissolved.

NTFC president Robert Gross said, following a final meeting of the board, that the bank balance will be transferred to the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital. Decision to disband, said Gross, was prompted by feeling that the org had achieved its purpose of orienting the tv industry to the use of film.



BOB WARREN



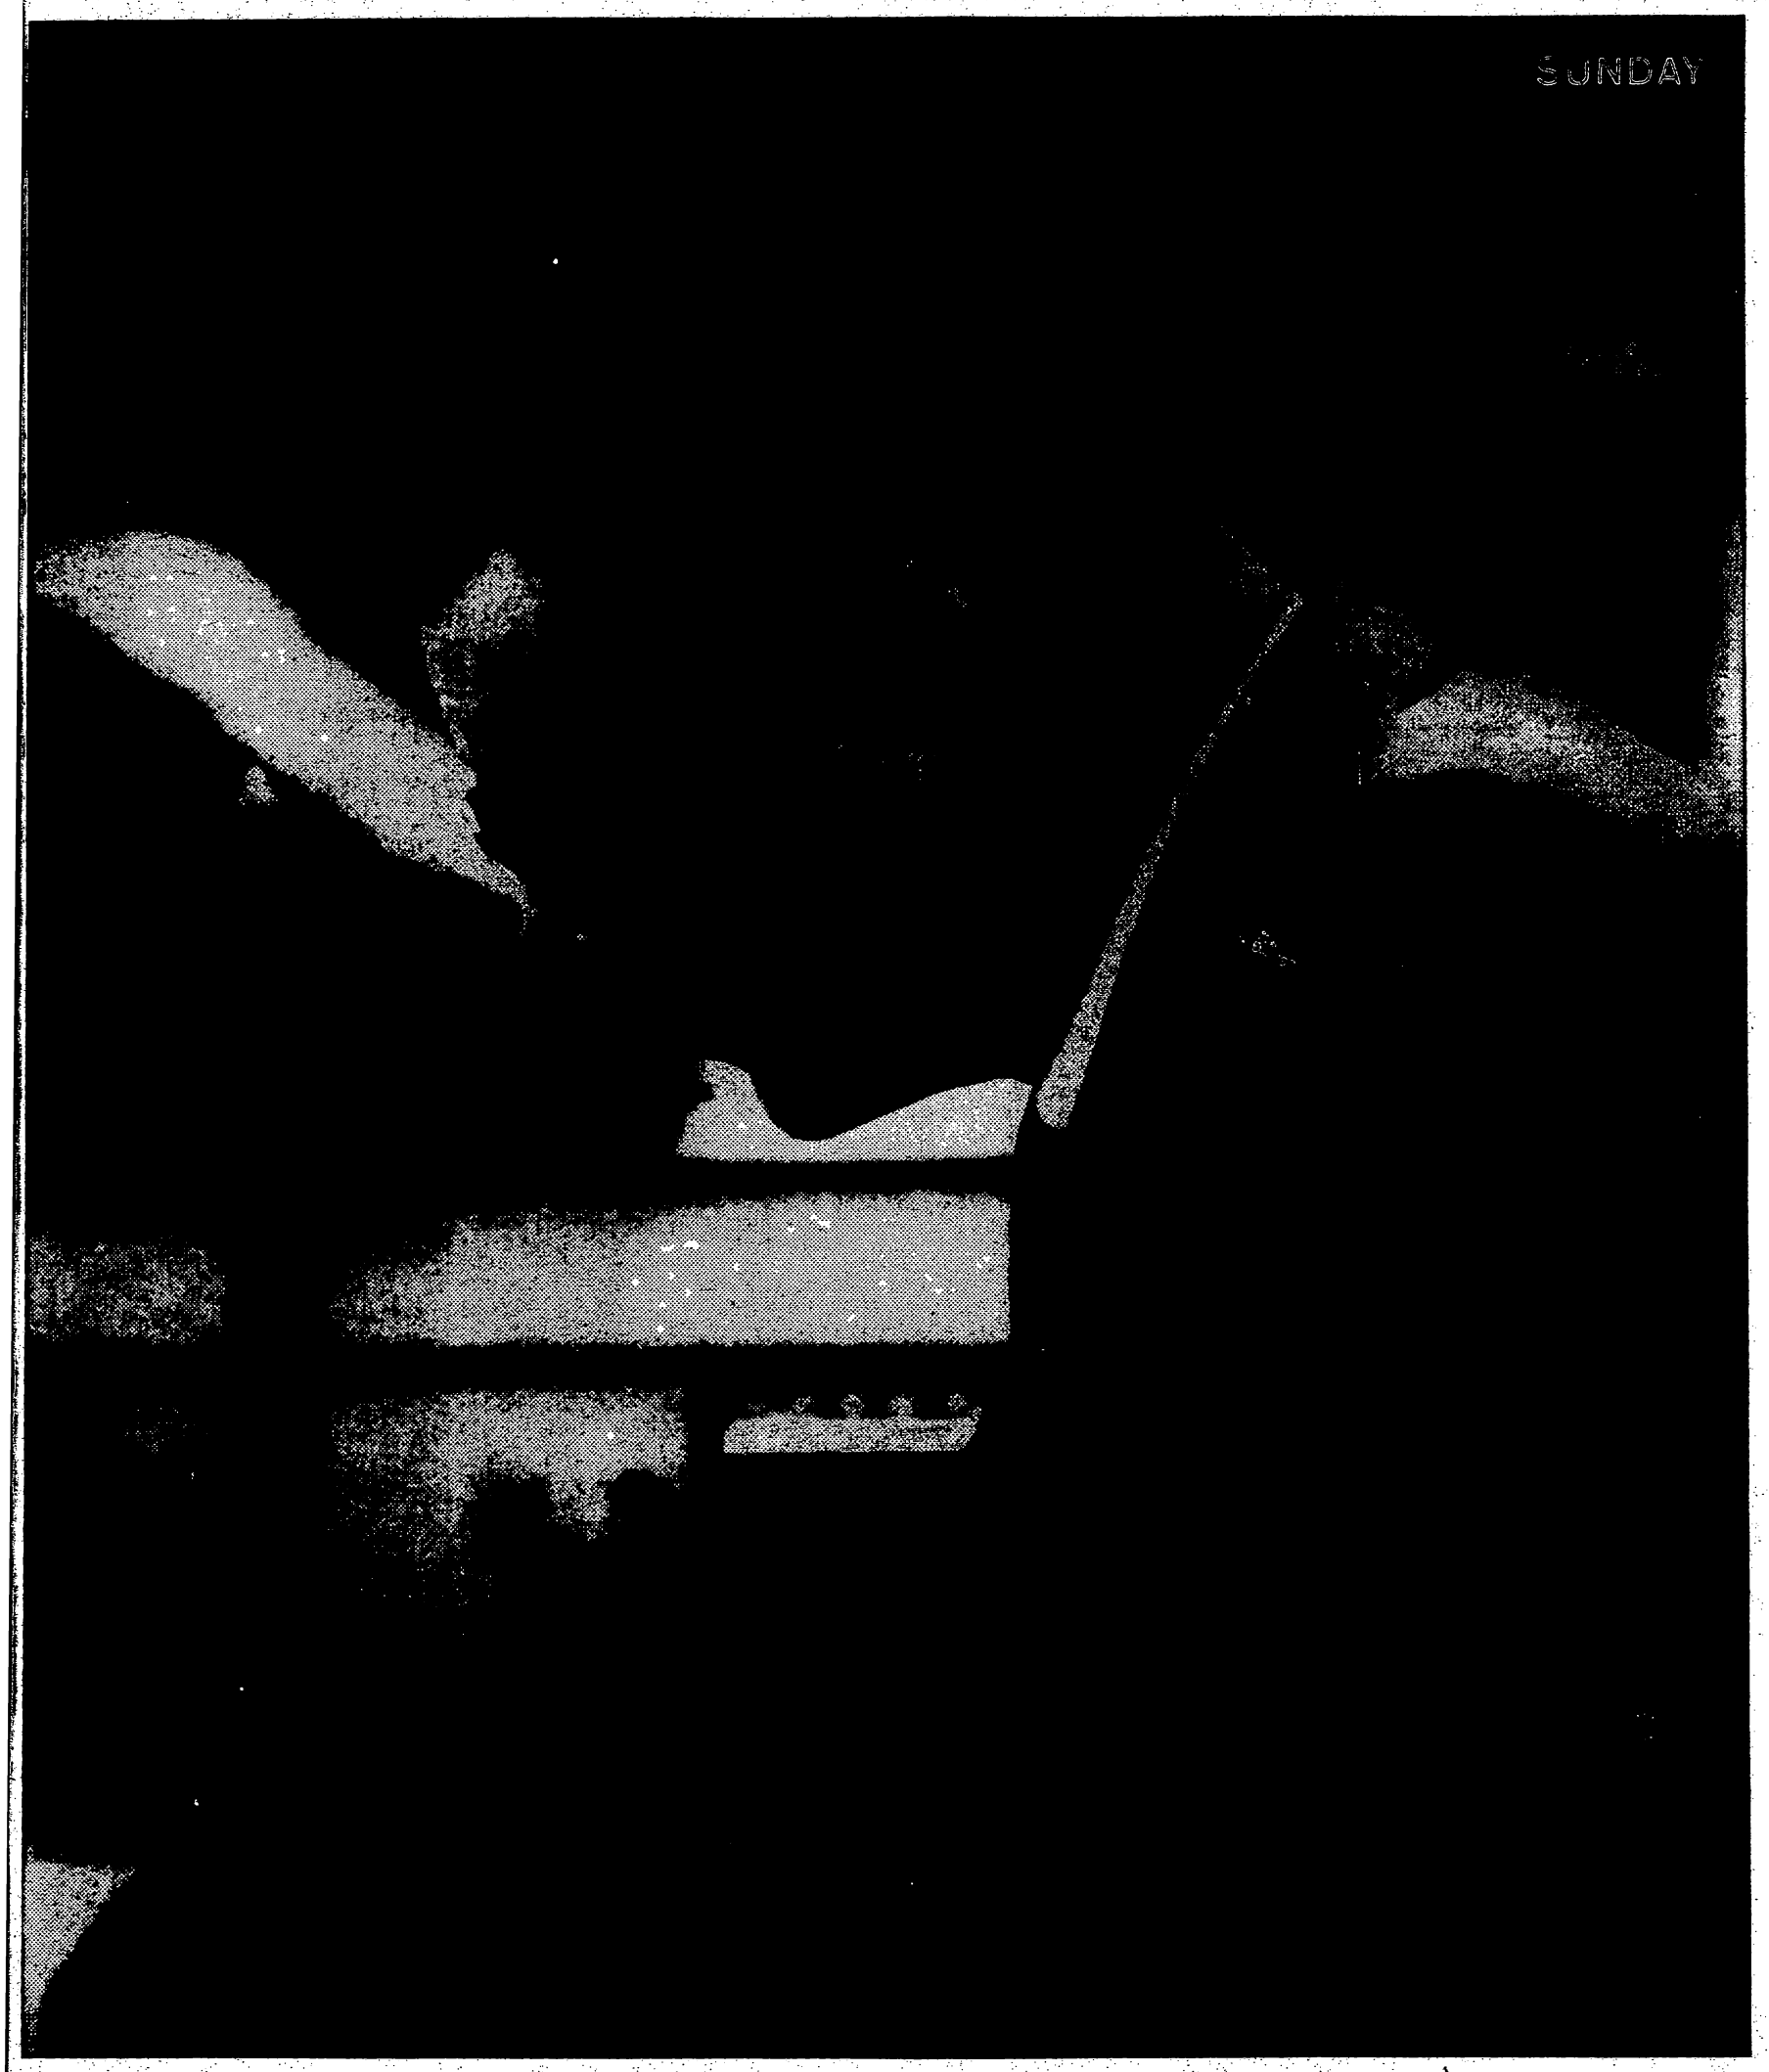
Sunday's Driver

Although he's already featured regularly on the "Today" show and NBC Radio's "Monitor," Frank Blair (above) has unhesitatingly accepted still another assignment: host of the forthcoming "Sunday" series.

Fact is, it will be a labor of love for Blair to be in the "Sunday" driver's seat, since the program will cover a range of interests as wide as his own.

When it becomes a Sunday afternoon highlight of the formidable NBC Fall schedule, the live, full-hour series will not only cover leading national and international happenings, but—like a weekend newspaper magazine—span Music, Art, Science, Theatre, Books and Sports.

In keeping with this concept, a corps of reporters will appear each week, including NBC Washington correspondents Ray Scherer, Robert Abernethy and Nancy Dickerson, and sportscaster-humorist Joe Garagiola.



Analyses of the passing scene will be offered regularly by NBC's witty, literate Edwin Newman and frequent visitors such as Cleveland Amory, columnist, author and perceptive chronicler of American society; and Aline Saarinen, one of the art world's most authoritative critics.

"Sunday's" very able back-seat driver is producer Robert Northshield, whose past credits include "Today" and such acclaimed NBC News specials as "The Chosen Child," "Who Goes There?", and "The Trial of Adolf Eichmann."

Of course, "Sunday's" diversity merely reflects the span of our entire Fall schedule, which ranges from the urbane "Tonight" to the newest adventure series, "Temple Houston"; from the world-news coverage of the expanded "Huntley-Brinkley Report" to the music of the Andy Williams specials. In all, it shapes up as a season whose virtues couldn't really be described in a month of "Sundays."

Italo TV

higher, but RAI, being a semi-official organization operating as a monopoly via government grant, is strictly bound not to up its commercial totals over certain preset figures. Yet advertisers are clamoring for more and more space, and certain "concessions" have been made.

On the program side, however, the inevitable effect of a switch from single program operation to a (limited) two-channel one has been a certain lowering in all-around standards and quality, though undeniably the ability to switch programs has given the Italo televiewers more choice and varied fare.

Tape Gets Big Play

Most notable — and again unavoidable — change has been the loss of freshness which characterized many early RAI-TV shows. Because of space shortages and other economic considerations, RAI has turned to tape with a vengeance. While some years ago most of its variety, quiz, dramatic, and sports stanzas were live, now only sports remain in the domain of immediacy, and even here, tapes are widely used to record entire football games or other events which are cast later in the day.

If one excludes irregular program times and unexpected last-minute changes, RAI remains, however, a technical gem in operation. It has few peers in sports coverage, dramatic lighting of plays and camerawork in general, news programs (if one excepts the political aspects, which at times tend to throw a shadow of bias one way or another), children's programs which are truly and constructively for the moppets, current events (f.e. the recent Vatican events as well as President Kennedy's visit to Italy), dramas.

The quality of its variety shows is very varied, ranging from such high points as "Studio One" to the depths of several other unfunny, unoriginal programs seen during the past season or two. Actors and authors both seem to agree that it is difficult to work for RAI because of latter's latent fear of censorship criticism—political and/or moral—which removes any and all topicality from comedians lines or skits in an understandable but exaggerated attempt to please one and all without offending anyone.

Though several U. S. shows have had long runs on RAI-TV, Italians generally seem to prefer their own fare, especially if in serial form. Dramatic presentations of Italian or foreign plays or books (Dreiser's "American Tragedy" was one) are run off—one hour or so at a time—every week for five or six weeks. Ratings are very high, acting good, sets opulent.

Lately, the prime topic of conversation—and of public controversy—has however been films on tv. Saddled with its two outlets and a product shortage, RAI has been buying up films at an unprecedented clip. Recently, it purchased some 200 or more Yank features from various companies. These it is now showing packaged as "Great Garbo Series," "The Great Oscar Winners," "The Films of Frank Capra," etc.

Naturally, film exhibitors here have begun to protest, and there have been several theatre shutdowns to try to force the government into some repressive action against what film people call "unfair competition": film admissions are heavily taxed, they say, while films shown on tv (by a government — subsidized net to boot) "pay" no similar levy.

A gentleman's agreement of sorts was subsequently announced by the local film people, under which RAI was supposed no longer to show more than one or two features per week, and then not on Sundays, holiday eves, or other "prime" positions. ANICA, the Italian film industry association, has however since renewed its protest, adding that the telenet had not respected its agreement. More protests are planned by the pic people, but RAI has just begun an "Alfred Hitchcock" feature series and is unperturbedly planning others.

RAI-TV meanwhile continues to develop its Telstar relay system via a special station in the Fucino Valley, and at times picks up relayed events from the U. S. A transmitting unit able to send locally-originating shows to the States is currently being built and is expected to be ready by the end of the year.

RAYETTE'S $1,000,000 JERRY LEWIS BUY

Rayette, maker of beauty preparations, has made its first network buy with a $1,000,000 bankroll in ABC-TV's "Jerry Lewis Show," preeming Saturday night, Sept. 21.

Company's commercials for Aqua Net hair spray will be live rather than vidtaped or filmed. Ad agency is Taplinger, Millstein.

West Berlin TV

has also a considerable number of topflight non-political items to offer. Station boasts of having the city's (and Germany's) most popular drama and film critic, Friedrich Luft, at its disposal. It has Guenter Neumann und seine Insulaner (Guenter Neumann & His Islanders), one of the finest cabaret ensembles in the land, and moreover the Radio Symphony Orch, also an outstanding aggregation, on a non-exclusive contract basis working for itself.

AFN-Berlin also deserves a chapter for itself. In all, there are 10 AFN stations (seven in Germany and three in France) operating in Europe. AFN-Berlin is the only AFN station that works 24 hours a day. Currenly headed by Major Jack Maloney (who's soon to be replaced by Capt. Lowell White—Maloney returns to the U.S.) and Mark White as program director, this is a typical American station. It has 13 Americans and 14 Germans on its working list and has a wide following. People like to listen to the music of AFN (about 60% of this station's programming is music) and those Berliners who understand English also listen to this station for news. AFN-Berlin is also heard for symbolic reasons ("The city is safe. The Americans are still here") according to program director Mark White who's been with AFN now for 11 years. Major Maloney said that the AFN stations are a vital thing with American tourists on the continent. Checkup with Hilton Hotel revealed that practically all American tourists (U.S. tourists head the tourist list in Berlin) tune in to AFN-Berlin when they are in Berlin.

In all, the European AFN stations have 65 transmitters. The stations are heard in partly far distant places. AFN-Berlin for instance, is eventually received in the CRS or Sweden. The budget of AFN-Berlin, incidentally, amounts to $600,000 per annum. This is not too much but it should be taken into consideration that the American staff is nearly entirely composed of U.S. officers and soldiers and that the stateside programs are obtained gratis.

One of AFN's biggest pluspoints is definitely the fact that it gets the latest U.S. radio programs and brand new stateside hit tunes in less than no time. Furthermore, famous names in the news are constantly heard over the American Forces Network. AFN-Berlin takes special pride in interviewing famous U.S. show people for its listeners. Among the personalities interviewed were Alfred Hitchcock, James Stewart, Tony Curtis, William Holden, Shirley MacLaine, Jose Ferrer, Billy Wilder, James Cagney, Stanley Kramer, Judy Garland, Anatol Litvak, Tony Perkins, to name some. The Berlin AFN Station doesn't hesitate to interview local stars. Some examples: Paul Hubschmid, Fritz Schulz-Reichel (Crazy Otto), Caterina Valente, Swiss-born singer Vico Torriani, orchestra leader Werner Mueller, etc.

Both technically and artistically, the German radio stations are doing quite a good job. This also goes for SFB (Station Free Berlin) which also has two programs to offer. Oddly enough, the whole idea, the entire programming, the setup of orchestras, choirs and the like of most German radio stations remind of the old stateside radio stations, those big 50,000 watt stations. It's radio the way it used to be in the States 30 years ago. The American-sponsored RIAS with its more than 520 people, its orchestra and choir may be regarded as a typical example. But this surely needn't be a drawback. All in all, there is no reason to be dissatisfied with the radio situation in Germany.

affiliate stations should grant option time to assure a continuity of prime time programs.

Donald H. McGannon, Pres., Group W Stations: "The recent decision of the FCC will have a very limited value in stimulating or encouraging new forces and sources of programming in the television industry. The situation rapidly reduces itself to a 'chicken and egg' sequence: what is going to come first—new, first-run programs for stations and then the problem of clearance in high audience time periods—or the converse? I think it unlikely that many prime time network shows will be preempted until such time as stations have qualitative programming material on hand.

"I believe there has been some support of this point of view in the past when the Commission passed a rule recognizing option time but reducing it from three hours to two and a half hours in a given time segment. It is safe to say that the result has not been any significant dropoff in clearance of network shows. On the contrary, at the present, for all practical purposes, the networks are programming 7 to 11 p.m. (Eastern Time) depending on what period the individual station takes the network news feed. Why the recent decision should change this basic pattern or perhaps even decelerate the further expansion of network is something I cannot fully understand until and unless there appear more sources of programming than at the present.

"It was for this reason that Group W (Westinghouse Broadcasting Co.) in its filings with the Commission did not recommend the elimination of option time but rather a specific containment of the amount of time made available via network sources in prime time periods to three hours. This, of course, did not contemplate the exclusion of public affairs programming or actuality programming on a non-scheduled basis. In the same span of years there has been a serious elimination of outside program sources with the concomitant result that there are virtually no first-run syndicated programs available to stations at the present time. The bulk of material available is a dwindling amount of feature films and off-network reruns. If there is any justification to the charge of sameness or conformity in the program fare of television, the basis for such a charge will be broadened substantially if stations were to now program off-network reruns in local time periods adjacent to the 7 to 11 p.m. period.

"At present, the producer of product has only three customers and they are the three networks. Stated in another way, the producer of a program has no economic security for his investment unless he can secure network exposure in prime time; hence the drying up of these sources.

"The elimination of option time can be expected to affect most severely the network which happens to have the weakest audience appeal and which is most likely, therefore, to be subject to preemptions and an erosion of clearances. The damage to both network and affiliate can be serious indeed. Only by establishing clear limits to the amount of prime-time network programming available to a station can this be avoided and a truly competitive three-network economy maintained."

George Comte, Gen. Mgr., WTMJ-TV, Milwaukee: "In my estimation it has never been clearly explained or demonstrated why there is need for or by what right the FCC should regulate a network any more or any less than any other program source.

"Certain business requirements become apparent because of need. The need is usually dictated by common business sense and grows from the necessity of a strong economic base to get the essential job done. Option time is such.

"I believe contractual relations with suppliers of program material should not be a matter for FCC regulation at all. Any inroads in this area tend to lend credence to the belief that it is another bureaucratic maneuver to gain ultimate overall control.

"As far as the current ruling's impact on the industry is concerned, I don't think it will basically make too much difference. The networks are going to have to have reasonable clearance to stay in business. We need the networks to supply television programming, and good business sense as well as the practical economic aspects will dictate that the networks will have to have clearance regardless of option time regulations."

E. R. Vadeboncoeur, Pres., WSYR-TV, Syracuse: "Except as another example of bureaucratic interference in broadcasting's business practices, the new option time ruling will have little effect on the industry. All affiliates of all networks recognize the necessity of the principle to any effective network selling and have repeatedly told the Commission so. They will now give substantially the same clearances vountarily as a matter of good business.

"In our own experience, option time never was inflexible, anyway. We dealt with all three networks and never had any real problem in preempting option time when there was good and sufficient reason. Elimination of option time as a contractual requirement will mean very little in actual industry practice."

A Memo For Emmy

By DAVID LEVY

No one is ever going to devise a method of nominating and electing Emmy winners that will please everyone. But the fact should not deter members of the Television Industry and the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences from trying to improve the present system. Jack Gould's devastating remarks about the latest Emmy Awards is a reflection of the way many concerned members of the industry feel about the state of tv as well as the state of the Emmy.

There have been complaints of bloc voting and no doubt there is some truth to this criticism. Some people will vote for Eastern based programs simply because they have a narrow vision about the medium, work in it in the East and therefore want the honors bestowed on Eastern productions and artists. Some will follow the same code on the Coast. Some will be induced by other loyalties and ties. There is nothing that can be done about these people if the industry is to continue with national awards. And I am hopeful that they are a minority anyway.

There can be more sensible ways, however, to conduct nominations and elections. Generally speaking, the actual membership of the industry itself most likely views television to a lesser extent than typical viewers who look to the medium for recreation rather than employment. Those in the industry—and therefore in the Academy—lead busy lives and their viewing must, of necessity, be more limited. It is probably more selective as well.

I would like to propose some system that follows the lines of our national political contests. I suggest, since we have only three networks, that the responsibility for nominating one (possibly two) candidates for each category be vested in each network. This would not mean that the Academy would have to dispose of its present system entirely. Members could still indicate on Academy postcards their applause for a show they have viewed and the Academy could forward such data to the networks for their information and guidance prior to the nominations. The point is that network programs are viewed consistently by network personnel. Few members in the industry could match the viewing habits of network personnel. My view is that this will "grade up" the quality of Emmy nominees.

In addition, professional critics of the general press and of trade papers could indicate their own judgments prior to the actual nominations by responsible committees functioning at each network.

Bias Out In The Open

This system of nomination would give representation to all three networks together with their product and artists. Whatever bias there is, is public knowledge—each has made its own judgments of programs, craftsmen and artists who deserve national recognition. This proposed method eliminates the complaint that one network or another scores more nominations because it has more employees and more of them in the Academy.

The membership of the Academy would then vote from among the six nominees in each category for its award winners on ballots provided by the Academy. It may be desirable to provide a blank seventh line in each category for those who differ with the nominees offered. A tabulation of all votes cast for all award categories should be published in the public interest.

A desirable corollary would be a statement signed by the presidents of the three television networks which expresses their common wish that Academy members cast their votes solely on the basis of their judgments as to the merits of the nominees.

The networks could also provide an important service for all chapters of the Academy—circulating film and tape productions of programs containing the work or personality of their nominees. The Academy membership should then be in a knowledgeable position to vote intelligently. The Academy could make a greater effort to persuade its membership to see the programs—and to abstain from voting in categories where the member has not viewed the nominated programs. Programs that are often "lost"—such as the distinguished "Shakespeare: Soul of an Age" would then be in a posture of some equality vis-a-vis a program in the same category which, because of extraneous factors apart from its innate quality, has gained enormous public attention, such as "The Tunnel." It is, of course, quite possible that "The Tunnel" would have been winner of the Program of the Year category, but it is also likely that "Shakespeare: Soul of an Age" would, under a system such as described above, have a greater chance to emerge as winner.

Again, professional critics could be constructive in running summaries of their own judgments on nominated programs prior to the date the membership of the Academy votes.

OFFBEAT IN SYNDIE UPBEAT

Option Time As a Factor

Helping the offbeat first-run syndication efforts of producer-distributors is the cloud surrounding option time. The FCC's ruling doing away with option time is up for appeal, but there's no doubt that the ruling strengthens the hands of the local stations to bump a network show in favor of a locally bought show.

There may be some screams in Washington if the local station kicked off a network entry in favor of some lack-lustre shoot-'em-up. However, if a local station offers prime time for a documentary on the war, communism, or a "Festival of Performing Arts," or a Jo Stafford special, it's not a case of critically inferior shows replacing superior network shows. It may, in fact, just be the reverse.

The Ex-Wrestler & The Ad Lib

Mike London Hit Over Head With a Chair During TV Interview Squabble

Albuquerque, July 30.

All of those arguments between wrestlers—used by fight promoters to jazz up interest in television wrestling performances — aren't fake, and one Albuquerque promoter has the bruises to prove it.

He is Mike London who sponsors a weekly syndicated wrestling show on Sunday nights over KGGM-TV here. He fills in the breaks between bouts with live chatter from the studio. Often he interviews one of the grunt-and-groaners from one of his upcoming matches.

Such was the case last Sunday, when London (himself a former pro wrestler) was interviewing Rosko Monroe Brambaugh of Lubbock, Texas.

London and Brambaugh got involved in an argument, with Brambaugh finally picking up a chair and hitting London over the head with it.

Plenty of viewers watched the entire live bout on their screens. Police said no arrests were made, since no one wanted to press charges.

BBC-TV Serial In Sale to KPIX

London, July 30.

BBC-TV which, for some years, has been trying to persuade American stations of the virtues of dramatic serials, has sold its first contemporary serial to KPIX in San Francisco.

The six parter is called "No Wreath For the General" and is scheduled to bow on KPIX next month. Written by Donald Wilson, now head of BBC-TV's dramatic serial section, the production stars Maurice Hedley, William Franklyn, Rona Anderson and Lana Morris. It was first screened by BBC in 1960.

Says BBC: "We see this sale as a breakthrough. So far the only serials we have sold in America have been the classics which have mostly been shown on the educational channels. We will watch the results of 'No Wreath For The General' with great interest."

HTS Serials to Japan

Hollywood, July 30.

With the recent sale of its new first-run serial package, "16 Republic Cliffhangers," to Japanese tv outlets, Hollywood Television Service has licensed its entire serial and half-hour program libraries in the Japanese market.

As syndication wing of Republic Corp., HTS peddles one of the largest libraries of serials, 45 adventure strips, in addition to its half-hour programs and 1,200 feature pix produced by Republic Studios.

WGHF-TV Goes ABC

WGHF-TV, a new outlet going on the air in High Point, N.C., about Oct. 1, has joined the ABC-TV web as a primary affiliate.

Owned by Southern Broadcasters Inc., of which James W. Coan is prexy, WGHP-TV will cover the High Point, Winston-Salem and Greensboro markets.

More 'Bozo' Sales

"Bozo the Clown," now in its fifth year of syndication, has been sold to an additional four stations.

In addition, two markets, KPRC, Houston, and WMTW, Portland, Me., have renewed their telecast rights to "Bozo Group 1," and "Bozo's Cartoon Storybook" for another three years. These stations also purchased telecast rights to the 52 new "Bozo" cartoons in Group 11.

"Bozo," distributed by Jayark Films, is now being carried by 218 domestic and foreign stations.

FCC's Table On FM Assignments In Lift of Freeze

Washington, July 30.

FCC lifted the freeze on FM applications and adopted a table of assignments for the 80 commercial FM channels.

The table provided for 2,830 channel assignments in 1,858 cities on the continental U.S.

Commission said the major stress is being placed on stations which can provide service to "relatively wide areas." These stations are most appropriate, FCC continued," if FM is to be complementary to AM. Present short spaced stations may be granted extra power, FCC said.

New rules accompanying the assignments go into effect, Sept. 11.

No grants will be made for 60 days. During this period, applicants for FM assignments can alter their applications to conform to the new rules. After the 60-day period all non-conforming applications, including hearing cases will be dismissed.

FCC promised future rule making for assignments in Hawaii, Alaska, Puerto Rico, Guam and the Virgin Islands.

Applications for Alaska, Hawaii and Guam will be granted if they meet minimum mileage separations. The "freeze" will remain for Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands pending the new rules.

Minimum power for class C station was raised from 10 to 25 kw.

7 Arts Feature Sales

Seven Arts Associated is mopping up major sales for its feature packages. During the past week, seven more stations bought the 50 titles in the company's volume seven, bring the total to 25 under contract since this package went into release last month. Latest deals were made with WTMJ-TV, Milwaukee; WTVJ, Miami; WLOS-TV, Asheville, N.C.; WEEK-TV, Peoria; KGMB-TV, Honolulu; and KVIQ-TV, Eureka, Cal.

Two additional stations, WFGA-TV, Jacksonville, and WFMY-TV, Greensboro, N.C., bought the 93 features in the Seven Arts' fourth and fifth volume. Volume three was sole to WJW-TV, Cleveland; and WMTV, Madison. Volume two was sold to KEZI-TV, Eugene, Ore. The first five volumes, totalling 211 films, were sold to KNKM-TV, Monahans, Texas.

BRINGING BACK REGIONAL COIN

Bluechip regional and local sponsors, which deserted syndication, are returning in increasing numbers, bankrolling unusual first run syndication entries.

That the bluechippers were still around was proven away back by Official Films' "Biography" series, one of the few first-runners around at that time that was still able to cop such coin.

What happened to "Biography" on the sponsor scene has been magnified by the success United Artists Television has had with the six David Wolper specials and the Jo Stafford specials of Independent Television Corp.

In terms of what traditionally had been offered in syndication, these are offbeat entries. Some offbeat entries haven't found their place in the market-place. Consider the lack of syndication success of David Susskind's stellar "Festival of Performing Arts," being handled by Screen Gems in distribution. The Susskind series, which won unique White House recognition, just isn't being bought by stations across the country.

Other offbeaters, though, are facing much better. In fact, UA-TV plans another series of six Wolper specials for the '64-'65 season and ITC is planning another series of musical specials for the syndication route. In addition to the aforementioned, Westinghouse Program Sales has written a success story with its syndication of the "Steve Allen Show," now placed in 41 markets as opposed to the 18 of June, '62. Westinghouse has only measured "fair" in its marketing of its children's hourly specials. "Open End," Susskind's talk show, expects wider market dispersion next season, with National Telefilm Associates again handling distribution. Susskind also is engaged in an hour drama series, utilizing top writers such as Edward Albee, which could find its place in syndication.

The tabulation of projects can run on and on. What is heartening to the producers and distributors engaged in these projects are that there are such companies as Standard Oil of New Jersey around to underwite the effort, making some of them economically feasible.

The development which finds syndication in the first-run field turn away from action adventure (shoot-'em-up-down-sideways) was explained this way by one key syndicator. "Let's face it," he said. "We killed the goose that laid the golden egg. We drove the bluechip regional sponsors away from us by burning them with inferior shows. We would sell them on the basis of a $75,000 pilot and a $18,000 per episode cost thereafter. The only way the regional and local bluechippers will come back in underwriting first-run properties is quality. If you've got anything that doesn't stand up to network quality, get lost. You're wasting your time."

Foremost Dairies, in returning to syndication, inked for six Jo Stafford specials in a 30 major market spread. The guests include Ella Fitzgerald, Rosemary Clooney, Stanley Holloway, Peter Sellers, Peter Lawford, Mel Torme and Claire Bloom.

UA-TV, under the sales direction of Bud Rifkin, has been busily engaged in smoking out either new or returning regional and local sponsors for its six Wolper specials and its factuality, "Lee Marvin Presents Lawbreakers." The Wolper specials, perhaps, is more indicative of the offbeat, first-run market situation. UA-TV signed Liberty Mutual Insurance Co. for 26 markets, on alternate hour basis. Rifkin's sales operation, in matching other sponsors to the Liberty pole, has nabbed some of the best accounts in the syndication biz. Another important aspect is that major agencies such as N. W. Ayer and BBD&O again are involved in first-run syndication buys for their clients.

Stations With Right-Wing Editorials Must Allow Negroes to Respond

Washington, July 30.

Negro leaders must be given a chance to respond when stations run editorials or commentaries on civil rights, FCC warned.

Neatly wrapping up questions of civil rights and the recent influx of canned right-wing broadcasts, Commission's statement served to soothe some Congressional worries over broadcast editorials while reminding stations of their fairness doctrine responsibilities.

FCC said stations presenting views of an "issue of current importance such as racial segregation, integration or discrimination," must offer spokesmen for all responsible community group an opportunity to give their views.

"In particular," FCC went on, "the views of the leaders of the Negro and other community groups . . . must obviously be considered and reflected," to achieve fairness on such controversial issues.

Commission said "several recent incidents" suggested the need to call the fairness doctrine and subsequent rulings to the attention of stations.

In determining fairness, FCC said it will look to the "substance rather than to label or form."

"It is immaterial," FCC continued, "whether a particular program or viewpoint is presented under the label of 'Americanism,' 'anti-communism,' or 'states' rights,' or whether it is a paid announcement, official speech, editorial or religious broadcast."

If one viewpoint of a controversial issue is presented, the station "is obligated to make a reasonable effort to present the other opposing viewpoint or viewpoints," FCC said.

Commission said it intends to issue a primer or rules with further definitions of stations' fairness doctrine responsibilities.

'Top Rank's' 70 Markets

In sales just completed, National Telefilm Associates has sold its feature package "Top Rank" to WZZM, Grand Rapids, Mich., and WTIC, Hartford, increasing total sales to 70 markets.

In another development, NTA's board of directors elected Peter S. Rodgers senior v.p. of the company. Rodgers, formerely v.p. and general sales manager for NTA, joined the company in 1955 as sales manager of the western division. As senior v.p., Rogers will continue to direct all sales activity for NTA, reporting to prez Bernard Tabakin.

Chi's New Mania: Showmanly TV 'House Blurbs'

Chicago, July 30.

That special talent called show biz savvy, which hasn't carried too high a premium in local broadcasting the past several years, is suddenly being prized again in Chicago chiefly through the new importance given to on-the-air promotions. Whether network or local, the art of the promo has gained stature over the past several seasons, and indeed the opinion has all too often been wryly expressed that a spot is more entertaining than the show it plugs.

WBKB-TV seems to have touched off the current mania here for the showmanly house blurb with the raft of clever spots Bud Chase has been turning out since he joined the station 10 months ago as a member of program director Dan Schuffman's creative team. Chase's promos have been witty and artfully produced, and a number of them have made use of such star talent as Steve Allen, Phyllis Diller, Jimmy Dean, Shelley Berman, Hans Conried and Tom Ewell, all of whom Chase was able to nail while they were in town on other business. He's got carte blanche to develop a campaign for the fall lineup, both local and network, with other names that come in.

Says Chase, a vet of 16 years in radio-tv, "We feel our promos should do more than advertise a show. We want them to entertain, so that the viewer enjoys when they come on. The whole design of our campaign is to let the promos bespeak the general creative atmosphere of our shop."

WGN-TV and WBBM Radio are now getting into the act with showmanly promotional campaigns of their own. WGN has hired comic Jimmy Edmonson, who's also known as Prof. Backwards, to tape a series of 15 on-the-air blurbs for a saturation campaign to bally the station's fall schedule. Edmonson will do a gag routine of 20 or 50 seconds duration in each of the segments and pay it off with a plug for a WGN program. In effect, each of the spots is to be a miniature show. The promos are being taped this week.

WBBM has cut a full hour's worth of 20 and 30-second promotional spots with comedienne Phyllis Diller, who reportedly did them all ad lib. Sample: "Until I listened to the informative news on WBBM Radio I thought that Shirley Temple was a reform synagog." They'e going on the air next week on a saturation basis, and the CBS station is talking now of getting another comic to do another series later in the season.

News Columns

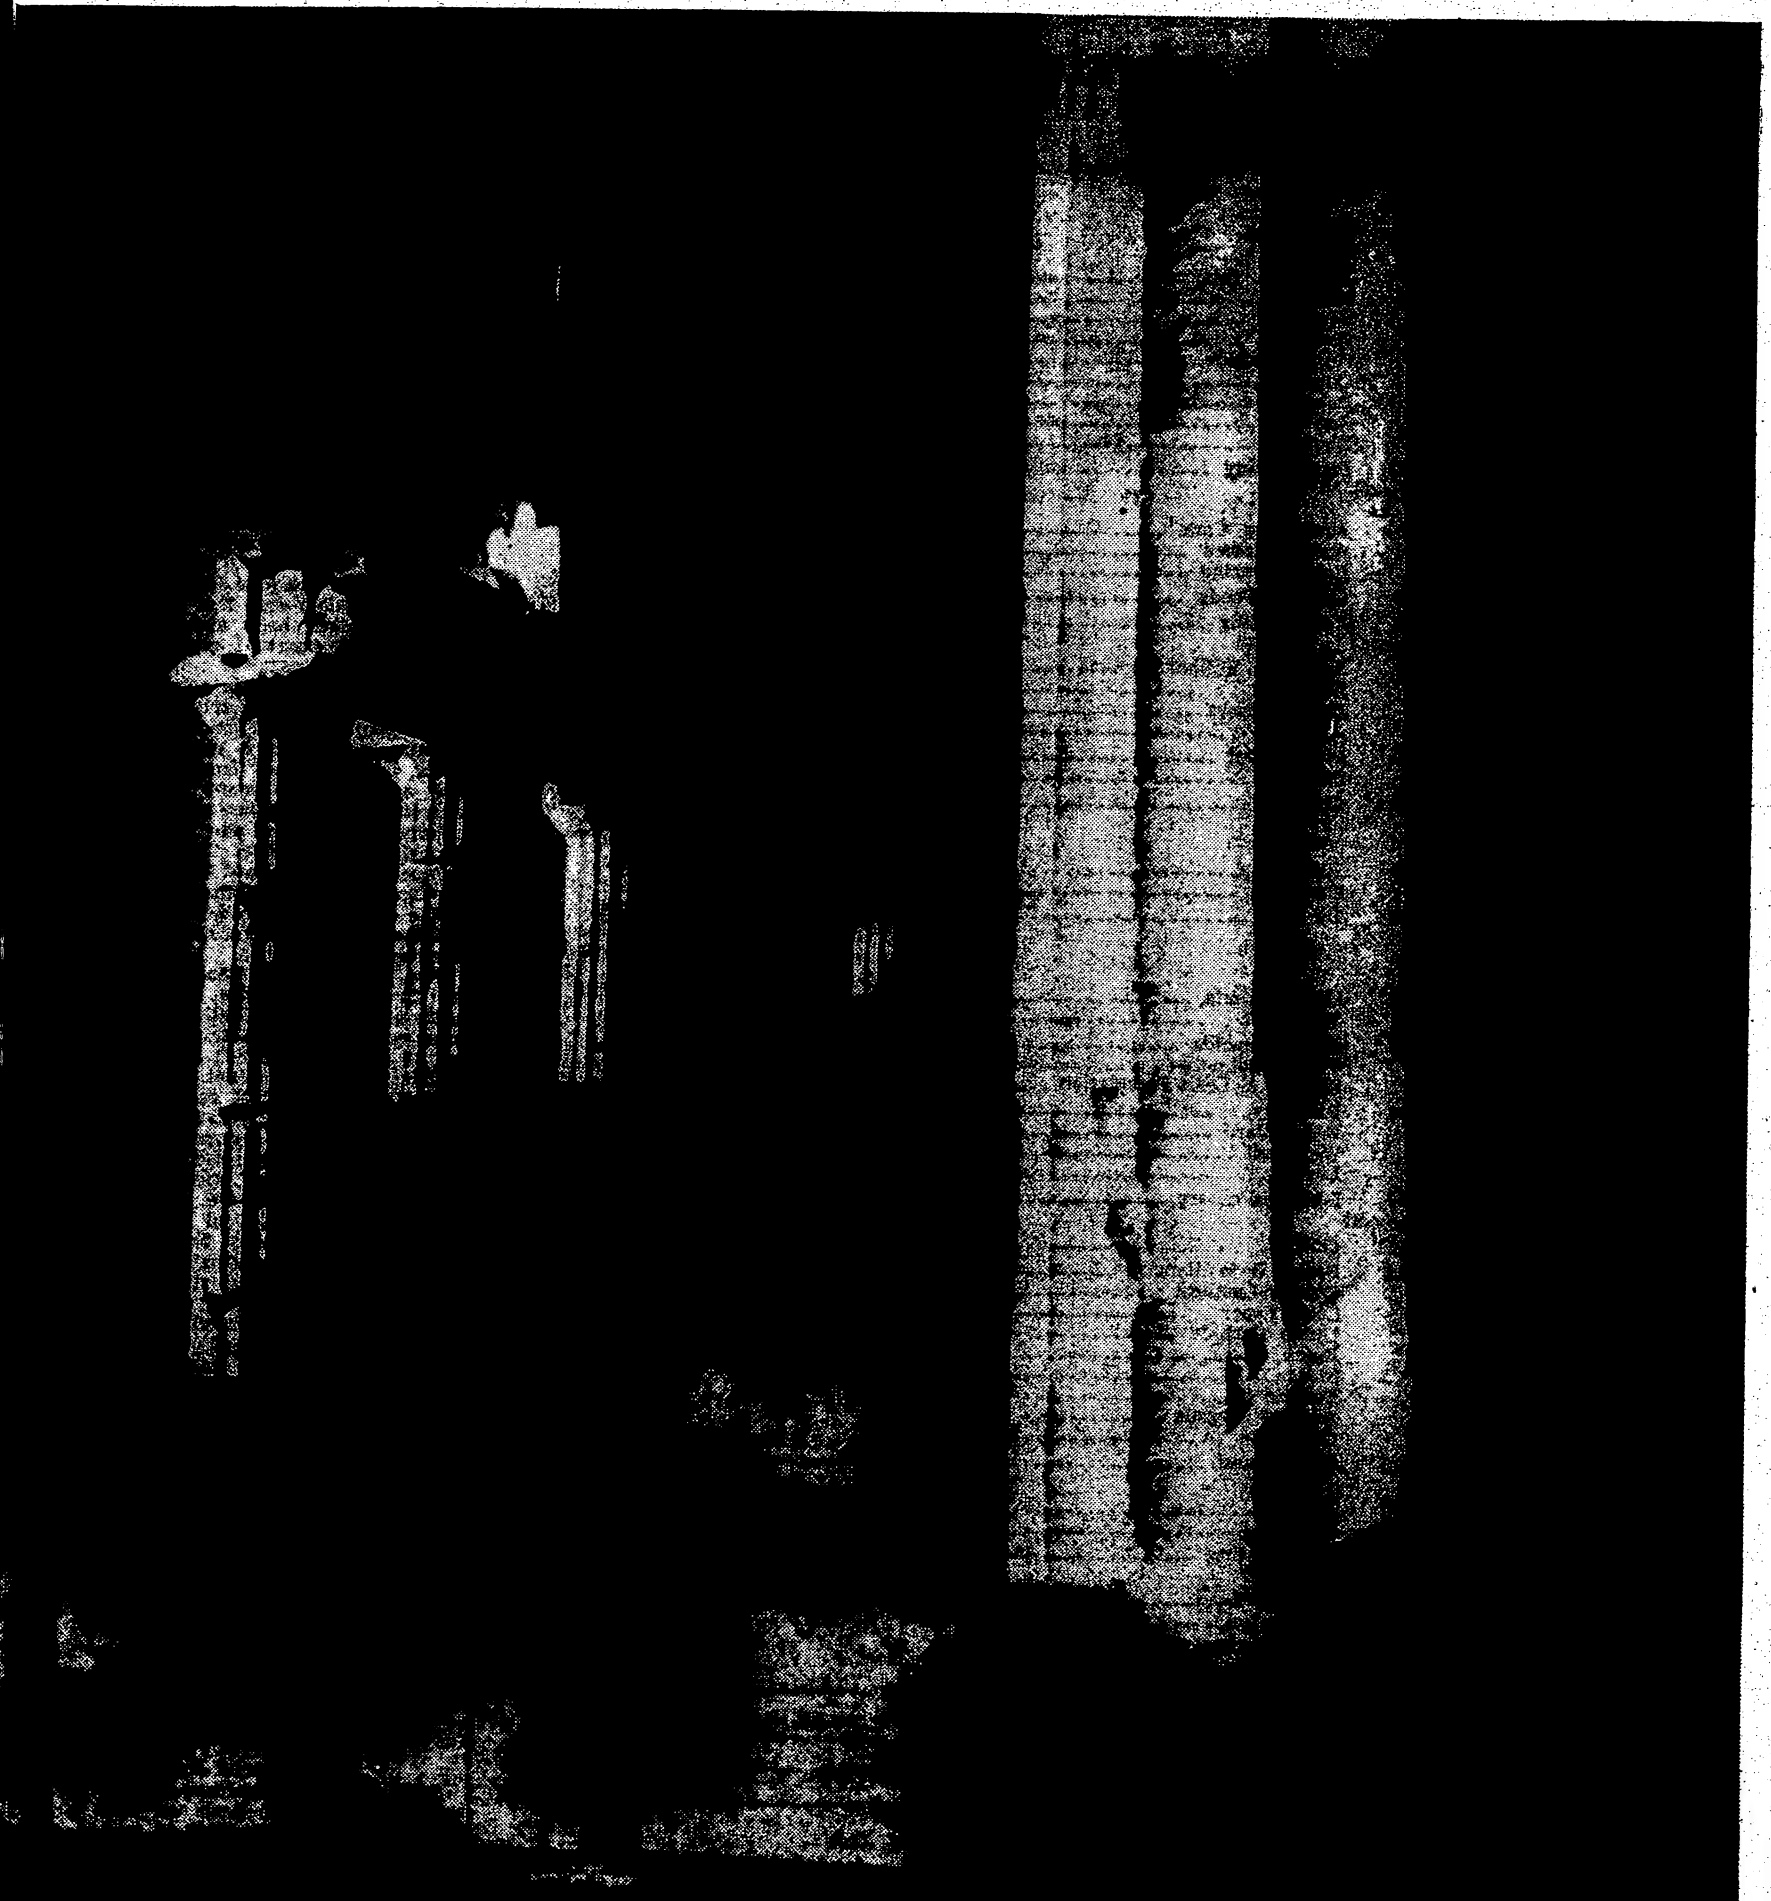
But what's so newsy about ancient Greece? What's so pressing about the Battle of Marathon, the trial of Socrates or a performance in the theatre at Epidaurus?

The answer, says NBC News, is "plenty." And who can deny that the past and present are tied together inextricably in the flow of human affairs?

That's why next season's actuality specials on NBC-TV will range all the way from an exploration of Greece's Golden Age to an up-to-the-minute study of American foreign policy.

Whether the datelines read "B.C." or "R.N." (for "right now"), this network's news specials are unique in broadcast journalism.

No better proof of that is needed, really, than the reception accorded the two most talked-about



"actualities" of the past two seasons.

Just this Spring, "The Kremlin" explored the last eight centuries of Russian history through an unprecedented look behind the walls of Moscow's storied citadel. The nation's critics hailed it as a television masterpiece.

Then, last December, it was a phenomenon of current history that held NBC viewers spellbound. "The Tunnel's" on-the-scene, start-to-finish coverage of an underground escape into West Berlin won a flock of important prizes, among them the Emmy for "Program of the Year."

Next season's news specials will be dealing with subjects as varied as race relations, a journey on the Orient Express, and 20th-century warfare. But one aim will be shared by all: making this complex age of ours just a bit easier to understand.

Look to NBC for the best combination of news, information and entertainment.

'Disenchanted' Check Out Of 2d German Web

Mainz, July 30.

So many of its 1,800 employees have quit or been fired since the new Second Television Network got started here on April 1, that the web has just brought out a special "press announcement" stating that there is no "mass exit" from the television center.

It's reported that close to 100 of the employees who were hastily hired to get the network going have been fired, and that about the same number have quit.

Reasons given are that the new network is already in debt and has asked for about $60,000,000 of shoring up for the next four years to keep it going and that therefore there have been many cutbacks in the expected expansion plans.

Some of the workers complain that there is no team spirit, that they were not given the housing allowances or money to buy apartments that they had been promised, and that too many budget controls have been slapped down.

Formerly, many of the stations belonging to the First Television Network had complained that their employees were being snapped up by the competing Second Net with promises of better jobs and more creative freedom.

Now, it's reported that six of the 12 employees who left the Radio and Television Net in Saarbrucken are back at their old jobs, and 35 of those who left the Hessischer Rundfunk outlet of the First Net at Frankfurt have tried it out at the Second Net, quit, and been rehired at the former jobs.

"Mainz is too large and anonymous an organization," one worker who quit summed it up.

But Professor Dr. Karl Holzammer, general director of the Mainz headquarters of the Second Net, released a special press statement denying the report.

"There is no background for the report that the Second German TV has lost a large number of personnel either through firing them or through their quitting.

"Now as before, the workers of the radio and television stations have the right to come to this station or to leave it. And with several vacancies, the Second German Network still has openings for qualified specialists," the announcement summed up.

"Spy" is an hour-long espionage show created by Dick Donovan. Collier Young will probably produce the pilot. Both series deals were negotiated for BCP by Artists' Agency.

GREAT EXPECTATIONS?
With William Clark
Producer: Tony Firth
Director: Shaun O'Riordan
25 Mins., Sun., 5.40 p.m.
Associated TeleVision, from London

The new nations of the British Commonwealth have been taking some pretty odd paths towards democracy, and the dubious procedures they have adopted have led to much brow-mopping in these parts. This skein attempted to provide a platform for representatives of these newly-independent countries to justify their constitutional purposes. Under the urbane and intelligent chairmanship of William Clark, the London emissaries of Pakistan and Tanganyika faced the alert questioning of journalist James Cameron and an invited audience of students.

Both countries under scrutiny claim to be democratic, but allow only one party. Iftikhar Ali, from Pakistan, claimed that the British example could not be adopted throughout the world, without modification that President Ayub Khan might have subdued the opposition but had not shot it, and that emergent countries could not afford the luxury of clashing opinions. S. J. Ntiro, from Tanganyika, said the same things but more crudely. He defined democracy as "one man, one vote" and thought that the fact of a ballot was a dignified system in itself—irrespective of the condition that they could only vote for one man. He opined that much discussion about ways and means to economic self-sufficiency was carried on, but was generally evasive — and crumbled under pressure from some sharp questioning.

Although the program hardly eased local doubts, for these variants of democracy seemed dangerously ridden with double-talk, it was nicely skeptical in outlook. Shaun O'Riordan directed Tony Firth's production with fluency, but the relation between platform speakers and visiting audience was often stiff and starchy. Otta.

TERRY-THOMAS
With Sheree Winton, Donald Sutherland, Harry Rabinowitz Orch
Producer: Johnnie Stewart
30 Mins., Sat., 9:55 p.m.
BBC-TV, from London

Terry-Thomas, who wrote and devized this half-hour, adopted the casual approach, informally wandering around a small set, which he shared with a small orchestra under Harry Rabinowitz. The show was largely a monolog, with Terry-Thomas purveying his dapper and well-tailored silly-ass image through a set of neat ideas. He got on terms with his audience in the first minutes by the charming gimmick of cutting in film clips of a child and T-T himself as studio watchers. From then on, the show was easy and fluent in Johnnie Stewart's deft production.

But the material needed all the star's professionalism to get it across. He relied on impromptu gags and quick sketches, some of which were inclined to founder. An encounter with a waiter in a would-be Hollywood eating-place was one such, and a filmed takeoff of a famous local cigaret commercial also petered out in tentative titters. In fact, this reliance on film was probably a mistake, disrupting the intimacy.

Terry-Thomas also delivered the title song of his "Mad, Mad, Mad World" movie with more zest than melody, and closed with some familiar impersonations of Noel Coward, Eartha Kitt, and the like.

It was, in fact, a pleasing personal appearance, but it hovered uncertainly between a personality showcase and a cabaret item. For this lack of definition, Terry-Thomas had only his own words to blame. Otta.

THE LONG DAY
With John Mead
Producer and Writer: Mike Towers
55 Mins., Mon., 10:35 p.m.
TWW, from Bristol

Dartmoor, the jail that as an Alcatraz reputation for its rigors and bleakness, was effectively scrutinized in this intriguing documentary, emanating from the Television Wales and West outfit that has the franchise for that area. The program was networked, and indicated the sort of worthwhile enterprise envisaged from the smaller stations, but rarely seen outside their own regions.

Mike Towers provided a clear and conscientious script, and produced heatly and without frills. He built up a cogent picture of the locale, with the ugly prison, which is doomed to closure shortly, on the fringe of the rural village that exists on its personnel and the tourists who put the jail on their itinerary. Historical background took in its 1812 use as a camp for American prisoners, of which souvenirs survive. Both prisoners and staff, as well as local inhabitants, had their say about the place, modestly drawn out in interviews by John Mead.

Most memorable moments came from inmates, who talked freely about their reactions to the discipline and the situation. Minimum qualification for Dartmoor is a five-year stretch, and a few are there for life. Maybe because the prisoners were chosen for their conversational prowess, they made an intelligent impression. They had two chief complaints. The isolation of the prison made visits from their relations and families infrequent. And the work they were given was largely routine, none having a good word for stitching mailbags.

A prison officer discoursed verbosely about the trials of working there, and sympathy was aroused for some official's wives, overcome with boredom. Without hammering the point, the show indicated that meaningless punishment—and much of it seemed to lack purpose—was hardly the path to reform. As someone said, Dartmoor has become largely self-defeating for the press and public image has made it out to be a sort of concentration camp from which any alert guy would seek to escape. The program softened this viewpoint, showing some of the social assets such as tv and workshops, but did not disprove the negative attitude to people and their crimes that it embodied. Otta.

TAXI!
With Sid James, Bill Owen, Ray Brooks, Renee Houston, Rachel Thomas, Jack Lorenzo, Norma Parnell, Eddie Leslie, Stella Kemball, George Pastell, Betty Impey, Jacqueline Lacey, Vera Day, Anthony Wager, Michael Robbins
Producer: Michael Mills
Writer: Ted Willis
45 Mins., Wed., 7:55 p.m.
BBC-TV, from London

That portrait of a genial cop on a fairy-tale beat, "Dixon of Dock Green," has been a steady favorite of BBC-TV viewers for the last seven seasons. Ted Willis, who masterminded that mixture of myth and tear-jerking morality, has now sponsored a similar concoction, taking a London cab-driver as his central wand-waver. The skein also gives a fresh format to crumple-faced Sid James, a pleasurable thesp who has never found a tight-fitting tv niche since the breakup of his partnership with Tony Hancock. The brew, though smacking of corn and molasses, may go well down with the undemanding, but the prospects, on the segment caught, were that it lacked the firm base in reality and the originality of invention necessary for firm addicts.

Sid (Sid James) was here involved in a bit of knight-errantry on behalf of an aged and self-willed old dame, Gig Lambert (Renee Houston). She was a lonely occupant of a bedsitter, deserted by her children who could not support her tantrums, and was threatened with eviction by a grasping landlady. She refused to budge, and the plot's mild interest centered around the efforts of Sid and his buddy, Fred (Bill Owen), to defeat the lanlady's siege by sending in food via a window and switching on the water and gas when its supply was stopped. These events were hardly nerve-stretching enough to generate much enthusiasm, and other incidents were both irrelevant and simple-minded.

Sid James did his best in a part that gave little chance to his brand of Cockney opportunism, and he seemed visibly embarrassed by the sentimental fervor

THE RAVAGED MOUNTAINS
Producer-Director: Bob Pilkington
Writer Narrator: Jay Crouse
60 Mins., Wed., 7:30 p.m.
WHAS-TV, Louisville

Penetrating deep in one of the country's "distressed areas," in the southeastern section of Kentucky near the Virginia border, the people have not begun to recover from the almost annual flash floods, now common in the area. This special WHAS News produced tv documentary depicted in film and narration the ravages of uncontrolled, mechanized logging, large-scale strip mining and forest fires in Eastern Kentucky.

One of a series of "WHAS Reports" documentaries, this frank editorializing warned, on viewing the damage done in a number of mountain counties, "we have less than a decade to stop these practices which might well turn the area into a desert within our lifetime." The documentary, "The Ravaged Mountains," brought to the viewers in picture and sound, the serious effects these practices are having on the annual spring floods in the area.

Harry M. Caudill, former state representative and ardent conservationist is leader of a group that warns that in a single generation, filling of the rivers by land erosion as a result of this mining process could cost the state and federal agencies millions of dollars.

The term "strip mining" means that by means of giant scoops, the top soil is removed from the layers of coal, and dumped on either side of what are actually valleys. These mounds of earth are several hundred feet high, almost mountains. Other scooping equipment is then used to remove the coal, most of it going to the TVA to fuel Government power plants.

This documentary, in fairness, recorded statements from strip mining operators who claimed that the land could be reclaimed. One president of a coal sales company spoke optimistically of experiments with fruit trees which indicate that after mining is completed, the dirt will be backfilled and eventually become fruit orchards. His company also operates the largest coal auger in the world in Perry, Letcher and Knott counties. He and his partner emphasized that strip and auger mining are a powerful force in the area's economic picture.

Other arguments, pro and con, anent the strip mining and future of the area were included in this show. All evidence points to the fact that something needs to be done, and fast; but some contend it is already too late. Wied.

CINCINNATI BASEBALL
With Waite Hoyt, Gene Kelly, Ed Kennedy, Frank McCormick
BURGER BEER, BROWN & WILLIAMSON, SOHIO, HUDEPOHL BEER
WKRC and WLW-T, Cincinnati

Radio and tv coverage of the Cincy Reds games is in high gear this season. But its influence on paid admissions at Crosley Field is questionable.

Going into the last half of the schedule, home attendance was silghtly behind the '62 pace, which could be blamed on adverse early weather and the club's muffing of pre-season high pitching and batting potential and predictions.

Befitting his city's laurels for pioneering pro baseball, major league night games and nocturnal colorcasts, the National League's biggest radio linking of 80 stations originates here on Taft's WKRC. It bears Burger Beer network billing for the 22-year tagger, with former pitching great, Waite Hoyt, doing the play by play for the entire rounte. Outlets are in Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, West Virginia, Virginia and Tennessee.

Telecasts, by Crosley's WLW-T, were increased this season to 54 home and away games. All 17 night and day home games are in color. The full tv schedule is fed to WLW-D, Dayton, and WLW-TV, Lexington, Ky. Other relays are to WLW-C, Columbus; WAAZ-TV, Huntington, W. Va., and WLW-I, Indianapolis, for less than 30 games.

Senior miker Hoyt enjoys a degree of popularity with listeners which rates him Mr. Baseball of Cincinnati. Doubling with him for the second season is Gene Kelly, who had long service in Philadelphia before switching to Cincy. They are under contract to the Midland ad agency, Burger's rep. Additionally, each has separate

FRONT & CENTRE
With Gordie Tapp, Billy Van Four, Robert Downey, Louis Agostini Orch
Producer-Director: Terry Kyne
Writer: Christopher Beard
30 Mins., Wed. (24), 8:30 p.m.
KRAFT FOODS, PEPSI COLA
CBC-TV, from Toronto (tape)
(Needham, Louis & Brorby: BBDO)

Alternate sponsorship by Kraft Foods and Pepsi-Cola as a summer replacement, "Front & Centre," so-called variety show, had an off night—when caught. Idea is to feature an established act, plus one that has not got the "breaks," but with Bob Downey, the magician, in the latter category stealing honors from The Billy Van Four singers (who will be featured in the forthcoming Canadian National Exhibition evening grandstand show). "Front & Centre" is in for 12 weeks and will be tv'd across - country Wednesday nights at the 8:30 p.m. prime slot to the 43 stations of the Canadian Broadcasting Corp.

On a lighted runway, with some 100 in the studio audience, Billy Van Four (three men and a girl) opened with a bouncy "She's Here," interspersed with "What's New" and "Sounds," finale using unison tongue-clucks and palm-poundings for a finish. Girl displayed a trick falsetto and quartet was okay on harmony singing, but material was all wrong for pro pace.

Not until Downey was introduced for his magic act, complete with disappearing doves, did the tv show pick up. Gordie Tapp, despite the fact that he has been doing hillbilly roles on "Country Hoedown," plus rustic costume and blacked-out teeth, has been cleaned up and did a swell job of emcee'ing. Lucio Agostini did the band accompaniment with his 22 men, but Agostini plays off-camera, though he rates a closeup bow. Tapp is permanent emcee. Ray Smith did the arrangements for The Billy Van Four in their first two numbers; Dolores Claman was responsible for the specially-written "Sounds."

The wonderment to trans-Canada tv viewer-listeners is that such sponsors and experienced agencies would underwrite the series, with the producer exhibiting such lamentable dearth of imaginative direction, timing and camera work. McStay.

POPULATION EXPANSION
With Jim Dooley, Dave Moore
Producer-Writer: Dooley
Director: Clarence Anderson
30 Mins.: Wed. (17), 7 p.m.
WCCO-TV, Minneapolis

This documentary in the one-a-month "Reports" series produced by WCCO-TV, local CBS affiliate, might not have been able to boast an engrossed audience. That's because its local population explosion subject matter doubtlessly didn't hold for many setowners the interest, concern and significance, or even importance, which it should have held, considering what will be involved for most people. A consequence probably was that for numerous dialers parts of the discussion were downright dull.

However, as usual, as far as comprehensiveness, general handling and presentation were concerned it represented a well-done job by the highly capable station staffers responsible for the series and its manner of presentation.

Topdrawer producer-writer Jim Dooley, director Clarence Anderson and narrator Dave Moore, who in this instance shared his chore with Dooley, once more did themselves proud. The matter at hand was covered thoroughly and skillfully to give the program's audience a complete and clear insight into what may eventuate and the problems likely to arise from the population expansion already underway.

A word of praise also must go again to cameraman Bob Sjcholm for his considerable contributions. Striking shots of throngs of people and vehicular traffic along Twin Cities' main thoroughfares and also of residential and suburban doings imparted relished film action that made a steady flow of talk a bit more palatable.

The documentary, among other things, pointed out the population drift from the adjoining Twin Cities into their suburbs, the causes of and necessity for this and what the development portends in the way of growth and various newly created situations. Dooley's predictions, coming frequently during the narration, carried weight Rees,

THE LIVELY ONES
With Vic Damone, guests
Producer-Director: Barry Shear
Musical Director: Jerry Fielding
30 Mins., Thurs., 9:30 p.m.
FORD MOTORS
NBC-TV (color)
(J. Walter Thompson)

"The Lively Ones," which is the advertising tag line for the Ford line of cars, is back as a spritely summer musical layout. This show moves at a fast clip over a vast talent array. Each singer or band is showcased for only one number, and if sometimes that isn't enough, it's better than pouring it on too much.

Preem stanza hopped, skipped and jumped all over the map to pick up the guest performers in various habitats. As the opener, Damone delivered a bright "I've Got A Living To Do" number. Addiss & Crofut, folksinging team, had one good number aboard a mine sweeper. The Benny Goodman sextet was picked up jamming away on the steps of the Capitol building in Washington, D. C., while Joanie Sommers was spotlighted in a solid rendition of "Blues In The Night" on a nitery floor.

A production number, involving some nostalgic ghosts from Dixieland, was somewhat ponderous and didn't give Red Nichols' combo its most effective showcase. A bossa nova instrumental featured some camera trickery that put the cartoon character, Bullwinkle, into a dance duet with Damone, who's not exactly a Fred Astaire and didn't rate such a prolonged hoofing sequence. Count Basie orch brought the show to a close with a hardhitting, double-quick tempoed instrumental.

Damone delivered the plugs in pleasing style and otherwise registered with a congenial personality. Herm.

EYEWITNESS NEWS
With Bill Jorgensen, Jim Graner, Dick Goddard, Murray Seeger
Producer: Pat Trese
Director: Jim Schmidt
30 Mins., Mon.-Fri. 7 p.m.
KWY-TV, Cleveland

The long-awaited expansion of KYW-tv's evening newscast to 30 minutes from its previous abbreviated segment has materialized and promises to achieve many of the station's objectives. Following the highly-popular Huntley-Brinkley net show, the station's "primary purpose is coverage of news of Cleveland and Ohio." Its assembled cast of newsmen is capable on the basis of past performances, particularly as evidenced during the newspaper strike.

Its first venture, however, failed to reflect more than a mere extension of what could have been a normal newscast. Highlights of the debut were extensive coverage by sportsman Jim Graner of the Cleveland Browns opening session at camp. Graner, one of the top sportscasters in the area, overdid the interviews although his general wrapup was good. The news feature by Murray Seegar, one-time Plain Dealer state capital correspondent was a pictorial report in depth of the need for voter approval of the county's Metropolitan General Hospital On this type of news gathering tv is at its best and reflects maturity.

Meteorologist Dick Goddard, about mid-way in the show, did a weather analysis, but let the following day's forecast hold for a cliff-hanger return near the end. It would be better for the entire weather stanza be moved to the end position than the present hyphenated version.

Jorgensen carried the news program with highlights of the day, plus two features of his own. One, an interview with Ariane Tebbenjohanns, the blonde German self-proclaimed fiancee of Dr. Sam Sheppard who has moved to Cleveland to await the eventual release of the osteopath. The second was his observations of Prague when he stoped off during his recent European flight. These were the bits that afforded a chance of pace in heavy bustlings of a metropolitan community. For the remainder of the show, there seemed to be a distinct lack of good pictorial coverage, and the extensive variety of news that can make for fast-moving reportoral accounting.

Commercials, with Bond Clothes and Greyhound carrying the major portion, has adult treatment. Mark.

METROPOLITAN BROADCASTING TELEVISION, A DIVISION OF METROMEDIA, INC.

German TV-AM Com'l Spot 'Take' At $112,500,000

Frankfurt, July 30.

Anticipated earnings from the commercial spots on West Germany's radio outlets and two television networks will reach a new high of about 450,000,000 German marks this year — or about $112,500,000.

That is a considerable increase over the total of $83,250,000 that the entertainment media earned in 1962, of which about $71,500,000 came from television and the rest from radio.

In addition, the West German Federal Post Office will collect another 1,190,000,000 German marks (about $297,500,000) in monthly fees levied on the owners of the radio and television sets.

This means that the radio and television stations have about $400,000,000 to spend for their programming and production.

A recent study noted that the stations spend considerably more —about a third—than the British network BBC does for its programming.

In addition, there is a constant increase in the number of full-length films playing on German television screens, 93 in the first six months of 1962 and just 50 in the same period in 1961.

The country's current count is 7,900,000 television sets and 16,900,000 radios.

Calif. Educ'l TV U.S. Aid Weighed

San Francisco, July 30.

Federal officials met here Friday (26) to discuss possible Government aid to educational tv stations in the West.

Grants are to be made by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to establish new educational tv stations and improve existing ones.

San Mateo County, San Diego, Bakersfield, Sacramento, Redding, Tucson and Portland sites are under consideration.

College of San Mateo is scheduled to set up its station, Channel 14, in less than a year.

Program as authorized would offer $32,000,000 in grants of up to 50 to 75% of cost of local projects. So far, however, Congress has made available only $1,500,000.

Total grants in any one State won't exceed $1,000,000.

NTA Ordered to Make Accounting on 3 Series

An award rendered by American Arbitration Assn. requires National Telefilm Associates to account to Pyramid Productions for all amounts received from NTA distribution efforts respecting "China Smith," "Orient Express," and "International Police," covering the period 1953 to a current date.

Pyramid, which is now a subsid of Buckeye Corp., complained that the NTA reports on the three series were inaccurate and incomplete and that revenue allocations and accounting techniques deprived Pyramid of substantial revenues.

OBSERVATIONS FROM THE CHAIN GANG

in Congress, the Administration, and the Supreme Court that need to be known by citizens of a particular region? The story of a Titan missile contract award to the Martin Co. in Denver has little interest to the viewers and listeners in 49 other states, hence has little chance of surviving the network news editor's blue pencil. But it has great interest in Colorado, and the Time-Life Broadcast News Bureau is on hand to report it. Ditto for the fight for the Indiana dunes, the fate of San Diego's aircraft industry, the fortunes of Michigan's political leaders, the decisions affecting Minnesota's taconite deposits and a hundred other news stories lying just beneath the surface headliners that the network skims off each night.

When the Broadcast News Bureau of Time-Life is augmented by the skillful, specialized Time, Life and Fortune correspondents who work out of our Washington bureau, a formidable array of talent becomes available for meaningful broadcast reports to our five television and radio stations. Thus, the fact of Time-Life Broadcast's ownership of its limit of VHF television stations not only fills a gap in news service to audiences in five regions, it also adds dimensions to that news service that no other group could add.

There are as many different philosophies of group operation as there are groups operating. Some believe in leaving decisions to local managers, some in making them at headquarters. Some believe in group programming, some in strictly local buying. Some have gone into program production for syndication, some have not. All insist on public service for the cities in which they are licensed to operate, but their definitions of the elusive term vary widely.

At Time-Life Broadcast, we believe in strong local management with near-100% autonomy in making decisions that affect their local operations. We believe in a total broadcast service, encompassing all the facets of radio and television. We believe in stimulating and actively supporting creative programming at the local level, with especial emphasis on the use of remote pickups. We urge our management and staffs to participate actively in community affairs, and we support our managers in vigorous programs of editorializing on local issues. All of this is natural and right, because of the nature of broadcasting and the nature of Time Inc.

But because we are part of one of the great news organizations of the world, we further believe that Time-Life Broadcast stations have a duty above and beyond covering local news and serving their local institutions in the public interest. We feel it our responsibility to reach out beyond our signal areas for the information our audiences need to know.

Time Inc., for 40 years, has been dedicated to expanding the horizons of its audiences. Time The Weekly Newsmagazine pioneered in making the news of the world intelligible, comprehensive and readily available to its readers. Life, in 1936, took the beginnings of photo journalism and expanded them into a new form of communication. Fortune, Architectural Forum, House & Home and Sports Illustrated each staked out a specialized area of information and news and became the authoritative, engrossing leader in its field. The whole world of its subject matter is each magazine's oyster; the purpose is to inform, in the liveliest and most provocative way possible.

Active in broadcasting since 1924, when Time Inc. pioneered in radio programming, the company established its first beachhead in television-radio station operation is 1952, partnered with the late Wayne Coy in KOB-AM-TV, Albuquerque, the company's aims were no different: we gave number one priority in broadcasting, as in publishing, to informing our audiences. Today, 11 years later, we are in the same business in San Diego and Denver and Minneapolis and Indianapolis and Grand Rapids. And in Latin America, the Middle East and elsewhere.

We believe in bringing the world to our audiences in a way that transcends even our excellent network and wire service facilities. Thus, the Washington Bureau.

Thus, the "International Forum," a series of face-to-face meetings with leading statesmen and businessmen of the world in the communities we serve—so far in 1963, such VIPs as Sir Zafrulla Khan of Pakistan, President of the UN General Assembly; Ambassadors Sir Howard Beale of Australia, Gonzalo J. Facio of Costa Rica, Frederick H. Boland of Ireland, Sergio Gutierrez-Olivos of Chile, and Roberto T. Alemann of Argentina, the Hon. Grady S. Upton of the Inter-American Bank, John F. Gallagher of Sears Roebuck International, and many others.

Thus, our new project of assigning station news directors to significant television reporting from overseas, working in harness with Time and Life correspondents around the world. And thus, our support of the most exciting way of teaching French by television we've encountered, Dawn Addams' easy-to-take "En France" film series which starts in the fall on all our stations and in syndication to more than 25 others.

And thus, as this issue goes to press, the Time-Life Broadcast public service project on behalf of all licensees, to demonstrate the ability of broadcasters to act swiftly and boldly in the public interest: production of a series of "spot" appeals to individual conscience and reason, recorded for television and radio by national leaders from various fields, with the endorsement and participation of President Kennedy, available at no charge to all television and radio stations in the United States. It is hard to conceive of such a project being carried out, on a rush basis, by any single station.

We respectfully submit that these activities, and the many being carried on daily by our fellow group operators, do indeed inject a "third force" into the service television renders its audiences, and that our unique contribution lies in providing the spark and the savvy—to say nothing of the budget—for that service.

By JOHN T. MURPHY
(Pres., Crosley Broadcasting Corp.) .....

Recently a well-known business publication headlined an article on broadcasting entitled, "Smaller Networks: Champions of Local Programming."

We at Crosley Broadcasting agree with that title 100% and not only agree but have for many years made it a part of the programming philosophy of each of the five WLW Crosley stations.

Way back in the early days of radio WLW initiated and broadcast the first of the "Soap Operas," "The Who Dun Its," and many other live radio shows.

It was 21 years ago that the now nationally famous "Ruth Lyons 50-50 Club" was born in Cincinnati and broadcast over WLW Radio. Fifteen years ago this show made its first appearance on WLW Television. Now simulcast in living color over WLW-T Cincinnati, WLW-D Dayton, WLW-C Columbus and WLW-I Indianapolis, plus WLW-Radio, it today represents the most popular daytime local live television show in the country.

With this extremely successful experience under our belts, we have proceeded to expand and produce a comparable type of show for each of our stations.

Next to appear on the scene was "The Paul Dixon Show" broadcast over WLW-T Cincinnati. Running from 9 a.m. to 10:30 a.m. each weekday it too is colorcast, sponsor time is sold out, and its audience tickets gone for the next three years.

From there to the state capital and WLW-C Columbus. Now titled "The Dean Miller Show" it plays to a daily full house with excellent ratings and a goodly list of bluechip sponsors.

In Dayton, WLW-D, Jimmy McClain of Dr. IQ fame joined the Crosley parade and now is in his second successful year as m.c. of his morning audience participation show.

And finally, to be launched early this fall will be "The Don Melvoin Show" over WLW-I Indianapolis. Patterned after the tried and proven format of its brothers in entertainment we have complete confidence of its future success.

I cite these shows as evidence of our belief in local live programming. Not only have we found that they are economically feasible but I feel they fill a real need in providing a television service in areas other than canned film programming.

As a small network we are not forgetful of the excellent service provided us by NBC and ABC, two of the three big networks. Adding our local live "top name" programming to their nationally known programs in essence rounds out to an extremely well balanced radio, television entertainment fare.

But we do not regard our responsibility in broadcasting as solely entertainment. As we are all aware, we owe our communities, in addition to entertainment, information in many areas including news, weather, education, etc. As a group operation, we feel that here too we can be rated in the top echelon of the business.

We constantly pool the news gathering facilities of all five of our stations, so as to provide our listeners and viewers with the finest last minute local and regional news coverage. I feel sure that we are one of the few "small" networks in the country that provide a 300-mile radar weather service. This has proved to be invaluable not only to the average viewer but, additionally, to business people such as trucking firms, local police, farmers, buyers of weather vulnerable products and others whose very business existence can depend upon an advance knowledge of "what's the weather going to be."

And finally let's add to all the foregoing—the magic of color. Crosley Broadcasting could have, as many other broadcasting groups and/or individual stations did, taken the stand that we would wait until there were sufficient color sets sold that color would be a commercially profitable operation.

This did not happen—in fact, WLW-T was the first NBC affiliate to sign for and broadcast color programs. (I know, I signed it in 1954). In 1957 we originated our first local live color-cast and have enthusiastically promoted and increased color-television programming ever since.

The reason, in a way, is quite simple. We firmly believed in the beauty, the reality and the appeal full color television would have for the viewers of our stations. We also could not overlook the tremendous sales advantage that someday it would offer to our sponsors.

In a way, it meant the non-returnable investment of many, many hundreds of thousands of dollars in equipment, sets, promotion, etc. Yet, now, almost nine years later, we couldn't be happier that we made that initial decision.

Our viewers verified our belief that they wanted color television. Today Cincinnati is known as 'Colortown U.S.A.' with the highest per capita color set ownership in the U.S.A. and our four station tv area contains approximately 10% of all the color television sets in the country. Our sponsors?—Well the waiting list on most of our color shows rather verifies that belief also.

I guess, in a capsule way, this is Crosley Broadcasting Corp. today—a few of its beliefs and philosophies—42 years after WLW Radio made its first broadcast to the crystal sets of that era.

By BENNETT KORN
(Pres., Metropolitan Broadcasting Co.)

A group operation today represents the best possible configuration in the television world.

As programmers we enjoy a creative freedom not available to the networks. And compared to the single-station owner, we have the advantage of greater resources.

In most areas we can function quite flexibly, and this flexibility has become our most important asset. Operating both non-network and network-affiliates put us astride of two patterns of broadcasting.

Metromedia's television division, Metropolitan Broadcasting Television, reaches into seven vital markets. Our non-network stations are in the prime markets: New York (WNEW-TV) and Washington (WTTG), and now in Los Angeles where we have just acquired KTTV. The network-affiliated stations, all ABC, are in four important areas: Kansas City (KMBC-TV), Sacramento-Stockton (KOVR), Peoria (WTVH, a UHF facility) and Decatur (WTVP, also UHF).

These stations under a group operation may retain an autonomous posture while benefiting from the obvious cohesiveness of the corporate structure. This is behind our technique in programming and selling.

In programming, each of our managers, through constant contact with the community, feels the local pulse. This "community contact" alerts the manager to the needs of his audience. In New York we produce a continuing series of local-issue documentaries called "Community Dialogue." Our Kansas City station programmed a special appeal to raise subscription funds toward the establishment of a professional football team there. Through the efforts of WTTG, Washington was afforded the privilege of viewing a unique sign-language performance of a Shaw play presented by students of a local school for deaf mutes.

Because of our facility for producing outstanding programs, a viewer in any one of our markets has the opportunity of watching not only the locally-produced programming but of experiencing the output of our other production centers as well.

This new and signigcant possibility of using group resources has enabled us to expand quality programming tremendously. Today, the main production center is in New York. But with our newly acquired Los Angeles station we will have facilities that can tap the talent resources of that creative area. And soon to be completed is an entirely new operating plant in Washington. The advantages of our studios in the nation's capital are obvious. The highly-successful "Opinion in the Capital," in which leading governmental figures are interviewed is a forerunner of our anticipated Washington programming output.

In overall programming concept, we plan the non-network segment of our network-affiliated stations like our independents.

We have succeeded in gaining wide audiences by diversifying our programming and thereby attracting various segments of the market. We try to effect a balance between popular fare, programs that are culturally appealing, public affairs documentaries and instructive shows normally found only on educational television.

Group Flexibility

The off-network syndicated properties, feature films and children's programs are our basic entertainment fare. From these we gain our "regular" audience which can be counted upon for fairly consistent listening habits and numbers. The art of scheduling of these shows is critical. As a group operator, we are in a position to support a research organization capable of supplying expensive and accurate program analyses. Further advantages is gained by group buys of syndicated properties.

Our cultural programming is another example of group flexibility. It includes individually purchased properties such as our eminently successful "Age of Kings" series obtained from the BBC, or Standard Oil's "Festival of the Performing Arts" series, or the Boston Symphony concerts. Of course there are our own productions, the Metropolitan Broadcasting Television Specials. A recent effort, the comic satire "What's Going on Here?" pioneered an area never before attempted by television. These are the programs that create great excitement among television's more culturally attuned viewers.

The flow of cultural programs is continuous, and many more specials are on the way. Upcoming are "China and the Bomb" (a two-part examination of the newest nuclear threat) and "The Unbelievable Mind—Chan Canasta" (an entertaining look at the wierd world of psychic experiments).

Programs such as these could not reasonably be exploited by the networks because of their non-mass appeal. At the same time, they are beyond the means of a single-station operator.

Our public affairs programs attain a high degree of quality and viewers acceptance because as a group we are better equipped to enlist those talented and qualified individuals needed to create and participate in programs of this nature.

As a group operation we can also afford to underwrite and offer such non-commercial and educational shows as "Columbia Seminars in International Studies" to each of our markets.

We've examined the cart; now let's look at the horse.

As in the area of programming, each manager has wide latitude in selling his product. In the instance of common programming, one manager may be able to sell a given show to a single sponsor, whereas another may find participations within that same program the way to income. However, spot selling is the key to our success. And the key to selling effectively is our research group that expends nearly $500,000 each year on the many areas of our business.

Finally, we are a part of a larger, diversified corporate structure, Metromedia, which adds strength to our group operation.

Operation Countdown

cameras, I felt that we should establish an observation post and base of operations. I succeeded in renting the house closest to the Cape which also had an excellent view. Of course the owner thought I was going to use it as a vacation retreat for my wife, three daughters, and myself. When an army of telephone linemen and installers started to arrive with cables and phones, my next door neighbor announced that I was spying on the government and since I had to cross his land to reach my new-found vantage point he wasn't going to let me through to carry on this espionage. What followed was like a B movie melodrama. He barricaded the road with barbed wire, we cut it down; he dug a small ditch across the access road, we filled it in; he dug a hole big enough for an Olympic swimming pool in the middle of the road, we went to court and obtained an injunction to stop him—he sued me—the case was finally thrown out of court.

Coincidental with all these shenanigans, six members of the press corps (we were sworn to secrecy) made an agreement with the Air Force authorities to allow news media personnel on the Cape. It wasn't many months after that when we were informed that we would be allowed to bring live tv cameras on the Cape for coverage of this counrty's first attempt to hit the moon.

That "first" was rather rudimentary what with only two cameras over a mile and a half from the launch pad, and five men physically lifting one whole camera and tripod up to track the missile.

Most of the rest is television history. We still have a few battles to win such as color coverage and live release of capsule camera pictures, but we have come a long way from those days "On the Beach."

Susie just has to crack up when WCBS Radio's Bill Randle starts his comedy close-ups every weekday morning. Bill's 11:10 to Noon show was a revelation to Susie. Having passed through her rock 'n' roll stage—summer listening seemed to be a real drag until she discovered that WCBS

Radio is a million laughs all morning starting at six a.m. with Jack Sterling, followed at ten by Arthur Godfrey's gang and wrapped up with The Bill Randle Show. Later, at the beach, she'll listen to Yankee Baseball. By Susie's standards, WCBS Radio is a gas. Stuffy? Us?

All-American Syndie Champs

Herewith is a 12-market American Research Bureau survey, a key market sample, of the performance of syndicated product over a time span from Sept. 1962, through May, 1963. The charts are summaries per market of those syndicated programs which have appeared in the ARB Top 10 in the nine-month period.

The shows have been ranked by (1) "relative evaluation," which is the number of times a show appeared in the top 10 during the measured time span; (2) the average total area homes reached for t. : number of times a particular show appeared on the charts. The estimates of homes and ratings as well as market statistics for TV Homes and Metro Area TV Homes, have been derived from the ARB Local Market Reports. The Day and Time column features the time period which was most representative of the corresponding program.

The nine-month summary chart printed below caps a weekly American Research Bureau list in VARIETY of the Top 10 Syndicated Programs that have appeared in various television markets during their survey periods. These programs in the weekly list are ranked on the basis of average total area homes reached, as posted in the ARB Local Television Market Reports.

Recipe for a Sultry Summer Night—WNEW's 30th Anni Hoopla

By BILL GREELEY

WNEW's 30th anni celebration on a hot July night, Wednesday (23), fit snugly into N.Y.'s Madison Square Garden with a draw of around 15,000 (Garden's capacity is 18,000) and a range of talents, politicos, and sundry celebs ranging from the kicking coach of the New York pro football Giants to Spyros Skouras.

For the many show business tradesters on hand, 20th Fox chairman Skouras provided the prize quip of the night. An official of the Musicians Aid Society, which benefited from the event (with tickets scaled from $50 to $2), Skouras couldn't resist a plug for 20th's "Cleopatra," and asked the audience, "Did you see it?" There was mild applause. "Did you like it?" Milder applause. "Well, see it," said Skouras, "It cost me my job."

Frank Sinatra didn't show up. He was to be a surprise guest if he could possibly make it to this gala of the New York independent where he was once a staff vocalist.

Frank Sinatra Jr. did make it, and was a tremendous hit with the crowd in a carbon of the old man on three numbers. He sang with the "Tommy Dorsey Band" fronted by Sam Donahue, which also featured vet big band vocalist Helen Forrest and the Pied Pipers in nostalgia that struck a response from the middle-aged segment of the audience.

The Dorsey band was one of three big orchestras that was on the large, revolving circular stage during this amazingly well-managed presentation which ran from 8:15 to 1:22 a.m. The other big bands were lead by Si Zentner and Sy Oliver in slick instrumentals and vocal backings that were made even better by excellent lighting and accoustics.

There also was a smaller revolving stage for the combos, including the Dave Brubeck Quartet and the Dukes of Dixieland, who flew in from Las Vegas to blow up a two-number, two-beat storm.

WNEW's popular morning team, Klavan & Finch, also performed from the small stage, and wowed the audience particularly with their ape of the current folk craze. Clutching a beat up guitar, Finch jibed New York's highway-happy Robert Moses (who was previously introduced) who now heads the World's Fair planning organization, with this folk parody (to the tune of "Tom Dooley"):

Hang down your head, Bob Moses,
Hang down your head and cry,
Hang down your head, Bob Moses,
The World's Fair is going to die.

Pair was equally sharp with the home town in lyrics that proclaimed New York a Summer Festival (that interminable and ridiculous local promotion) if you dig the miserable heat, muggings in the park, race demonstrations, subway mopery, slums and the other more charming aspects of the city where 8,000,000 citizens live in peace and harmony."

Klavan & Finch also had the dubious honor of introducing the guest who prompted the only hissing and booing of the night. That was the City's cultural executive Robert W. Dowling, who appropriately doled out proclamations and city keys to the worthy. Poor fellow was competing against some of the top entertainers in the country, and he, in truth, took the razzing as a spokesman of Mayor Bob Wagner who was absent and whose name provoked the loudest catcalls.

WNEW deejays handled the emcee chores: William B. Williams, Bob Landers, Ted Brown, Marty O'Hara, Fred Robbins, Wally King. Former staffers who did some reminiscing included Gene Rayburn and Jack Lescoulie. Also, Martin Block of local "Make Believe Ballroom" fame, whose current employer, WOR, signed a release for his appearance.

WOR, though competition, could be empathetic to WNEW's Garden gala. The RKO station tossed a 35th anni for morning deejay John Gambling in the same location a few years back. Instead of hot and late, WOR's four-hour affair was early and cold (7 a.m. on a chilling winter's day). But like the WNEW event, the fans turned out by the thousands for the entertainment and several thousand free cups of coffee and doughnuts.

Don't ever underestimate the pulling power of radio. Not in New York, anyway.

35G Per Bob Hope Pic for WABC-TV

New highs for pix product in N. Y. market are being established in a new round of selling of selected cinematics.

It's understood that WABC-TV, N. Y., paid in the neighborhood of $35,000 per pic for first-run Bob Hope features. Allied Artists Television, distributing the Hope pix, has five first-runs and two reruns in the Hope package. AATV also has sold the Hope pix group to KNXT, Los Angeles, WBBM, Chicago; WCAU, Philadelphia; and WTOP, Washington.

'Dick Powell Theatre' Grabbing Its Own Little Prime Time Network

Four Star Distribution's off-web syndication package, "Dick Powell Theatre," will replace CBS-TV's new and first-run, "East Side, West Side," on KOLN-TV, Lincoln, Neb., when the new season starts.

The Lincoln station's knock-off of a first-run network offering is one of many such for the Powell drama anthology, says Four Star Distribution, which has surveyed stations on placement of the off-web package.

Station survey, says FSD, shows that 62.5% of the stations will be slotting the Powell show in prime time, including WPIX, New York; KCOP, Los Angeles; KCTO, Denver, and WHIO, Dayton.

Another 25% will program the series either on Saturday or Sunday at 11:15 p.m. in place of a late feature picture, including WNBQ, Chicago; WRCV, Philadelphia; WMAL, Washington; WMAR, Baltimore; and WDAF, Kansas City.

METROMEDIA NET AT 6-MONTH PEAK

Metromedia has reported a record net income for the first six months of 1963 of $1,838,228 for $1.03 per common share.

The figure compares with $1,021,655 for 57c per common share for the same period of 1962. Gross revenues for the fiscal year were up to $27,978,446 from $26,206,832 the year before.

For the second quarter of '63, net income totaled $1,134,945, equal to 63c per common share. Second quarter of 1962 net totaled $882,923 for 50c a share.

Britannica Sales

Trans-Lux Television's Encyclopedia Britannica Films Library has been bought on a longterm pacts by eight more stations.

The library of 800 titles covering a wide range of subject matter has been contracted for five years by WDBO, Orlando, Fla.; KMID, Midland, Tex.; WGAN, Portland, Me.; KOCO, Oklahoma City; and two stations of the Community Broadcasting Service outfit in Maine, WABI, Bangor, and WAGM, Presque Isle.

WTOP, Washington, has repacted for another five years, while WCAU, Philadelphia, which has been using the pix since '57, has extended the pact to 1965 for a total of eight years.

GROUP W MEANS NEW SOURCES OF PROGRAMMING

THE MIKE DOUGLAS SHOW

Local show goes Group. "The Mike Douglas Show" is a product of a Group W—Westinghouse Broadcasting Company—station. KYW-TV Cleveland. It is scheduled to be seen on all five Group W television stations.

A big success in Cleveland, "The Mike Douglas Show" brings a fresh personality into the medium; and daily hour-and-a-half programs of variety, laughter, and big name guests. It will be a source of pleasure to audiences in Boston, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, and San Francisco, as well as its own home town. It is even being made available to other stations outside of Group W throughout the country.

The Group, unlike the network or the individual station, has both local flexibility and creative and financial resources. "The Mike Douglas Show" is a case in point. It demonstrates the ability of a single station to contribute to the vitality of the Group. It also demonstrates the ability of Group W to use these resources and this flexibility to provide new and interesting sources of programming for the industry.

NBC, CBS Expanded News Shows Raising Havoc With Chi O&O's

Chicago, July 30.

The new 30-minute early evening newscasts that NBC-TV and CBS-TV are scheduling next fall have played havoc with their Chicago o&os, both of which will be expanding their own adjacent newscasts to a like length for a full hour of news in all. Apart from the question of format and the matter of revving up their staffs for the greater output of news, the Chi stations are faced with the time zone problem of having to program either the local or the network segment at 5:30 p.m., which is still the shank of commuter time.

There's been a great deal of shilly-shallying on the part of both WNBQ and WBBM-TV the past few weeks, with each holding off any definite announcements as to its plans until the other was heard from first. WNBQ finally broke the ice last week with a formal announcement, and while WBBM-TV still has not it's apparent from the station's tentative plans that it will be useing a similar strategy at 5:30 p.m. next fall.

It's virtual certainty that both will carry the network news first and follow at 6 p.m. with their own 30-minute local strips. Each will work with a basic three-man team, keeping the format flexible so that weather or sports might lead off the report if they should happen to be the major story of the day; and each will be sold on a spot basis, rather than to single or alternating sponsors. WBBM-TV, as per present plans, will sell only five spots in the show because the station editorial, which is not for sale, will occupy the last five minutes of its entry.

WNBQ has tapped Charles McCuen as newscaster and anchorman for the "Chicago Report," with Len O'Connor getting a 10-minute seg each edition for his news analysis and Harry Volkman a shorter spot for weather reports. Various staff reporters will also take part, principally in newsreel assignments.

WBBM-TV will go with the three-man team of Frank Reynolds, who'll give the hard news and weather and will anchor the outside reports; John Drury, who'll develop and deliver topical news features; and Bruce Roberts, who will deal exclusively in sports. The five-minute editorials at 6:25 will continue to be given by news director John Madigan.

WNBQ has created a separate news unit for the expanded 6 p.m. strip, with an exec producer, producer, director and two editors. NBC News has also established a Central Region news desk in Chi for the "Huntley-Brinkley Report" manned by Robert Mulholland, as senior editor. As before, the Chi area cut-ins on the network show will be done by Floyd Kalber.

KWK — Still a Chance

Washington, July 30.

Georgia TV-AM's Giant Promotion

Atlanta, July 30.

Georgia Department of Industry and Trade and 165 radio-television members of Georgia Assn. of Broadcasters have signed an agreement for a 12-month statewide radio-tv promotion. It is believed to be a "first" of this magnitude.

Via this pact GAB members will provide 20,000 public service announcements, programs and special events promoting tourism in Georgia.

Promotion project was announced jointly by Bill Hardman, tourist division chief of Department of I&T, and GAB President Raymond E. Carow, WALB-TV, Albany.

Carow said "we believe this is the biggest statewide tourist project ever conducted by broadcasters. We think it is the first 12-month-a-year statewide tourist campaign ever conducted by radio-tv."

Hardman said: "We are delighted with this opportunity to use the voices of radio-tv to boost tourist development in Georgia. The GAB promotion will include special radio and tv announcements, a four-color tourist map, a statewide radio-tv contest leading to the selection of Miss Georgia Hospitality, plus special events as they develop during the tourist year."

Broadcasters' tourist drive kicked off last week with release of special radio announcements, with tv announcements now in production.

Cleve. WEWS-TV's Music Festivals

Cleveland, July 30.

WEWS-TV will produce a series of hourlong music festivals featuring nationally-known stars and top local artists. Among those already pacted for shows are Duke Ellington, with Carmen McRae and Dizzy Gillespie in the opening stanza; the Dukes of Dixieland and the Buffalo Bills for the second show, while Peter Nero will headline the third show.

With Ellington, whose show was taped at Karamu following his stint at Musicarnival were Laura Engolia and Bobby Bryan, singers, and staff pianist Joe Howard. VARIETY-ARB SYNDICATION CHART

VARIETY's weekly tabulation based on ratings furnished by American Research Bureau, highlights the top 10 network shows on a local level and offers a rating study of the top 10 syndicated shows in the same particular markets. This week six different markets are covered.

Both the network and syndication study features the total area homes reached and the metro area ratings on each show. The total area homes reached reflects the audiences on the basis of the total market area examined. The metro area ratings are based on the metropolitan markets within the total area examined. Top 10 shows, both network and syndicated, are listed on the basis of their showing in the total area homes barometer.

Various branches of the industry, ranging from media buyers to local stations to syndicators will find the charts valuable.

Over the course of a year, ARB will tabulate a minimum of 247 markets. The results of that tabulation will be found weekly in VARIETY Coupled with the rating performance of the top 10 network shows, on the local level, the VARIETY-ARB charts are designed to reflect the rating tastes of virtually every market in the U.S.

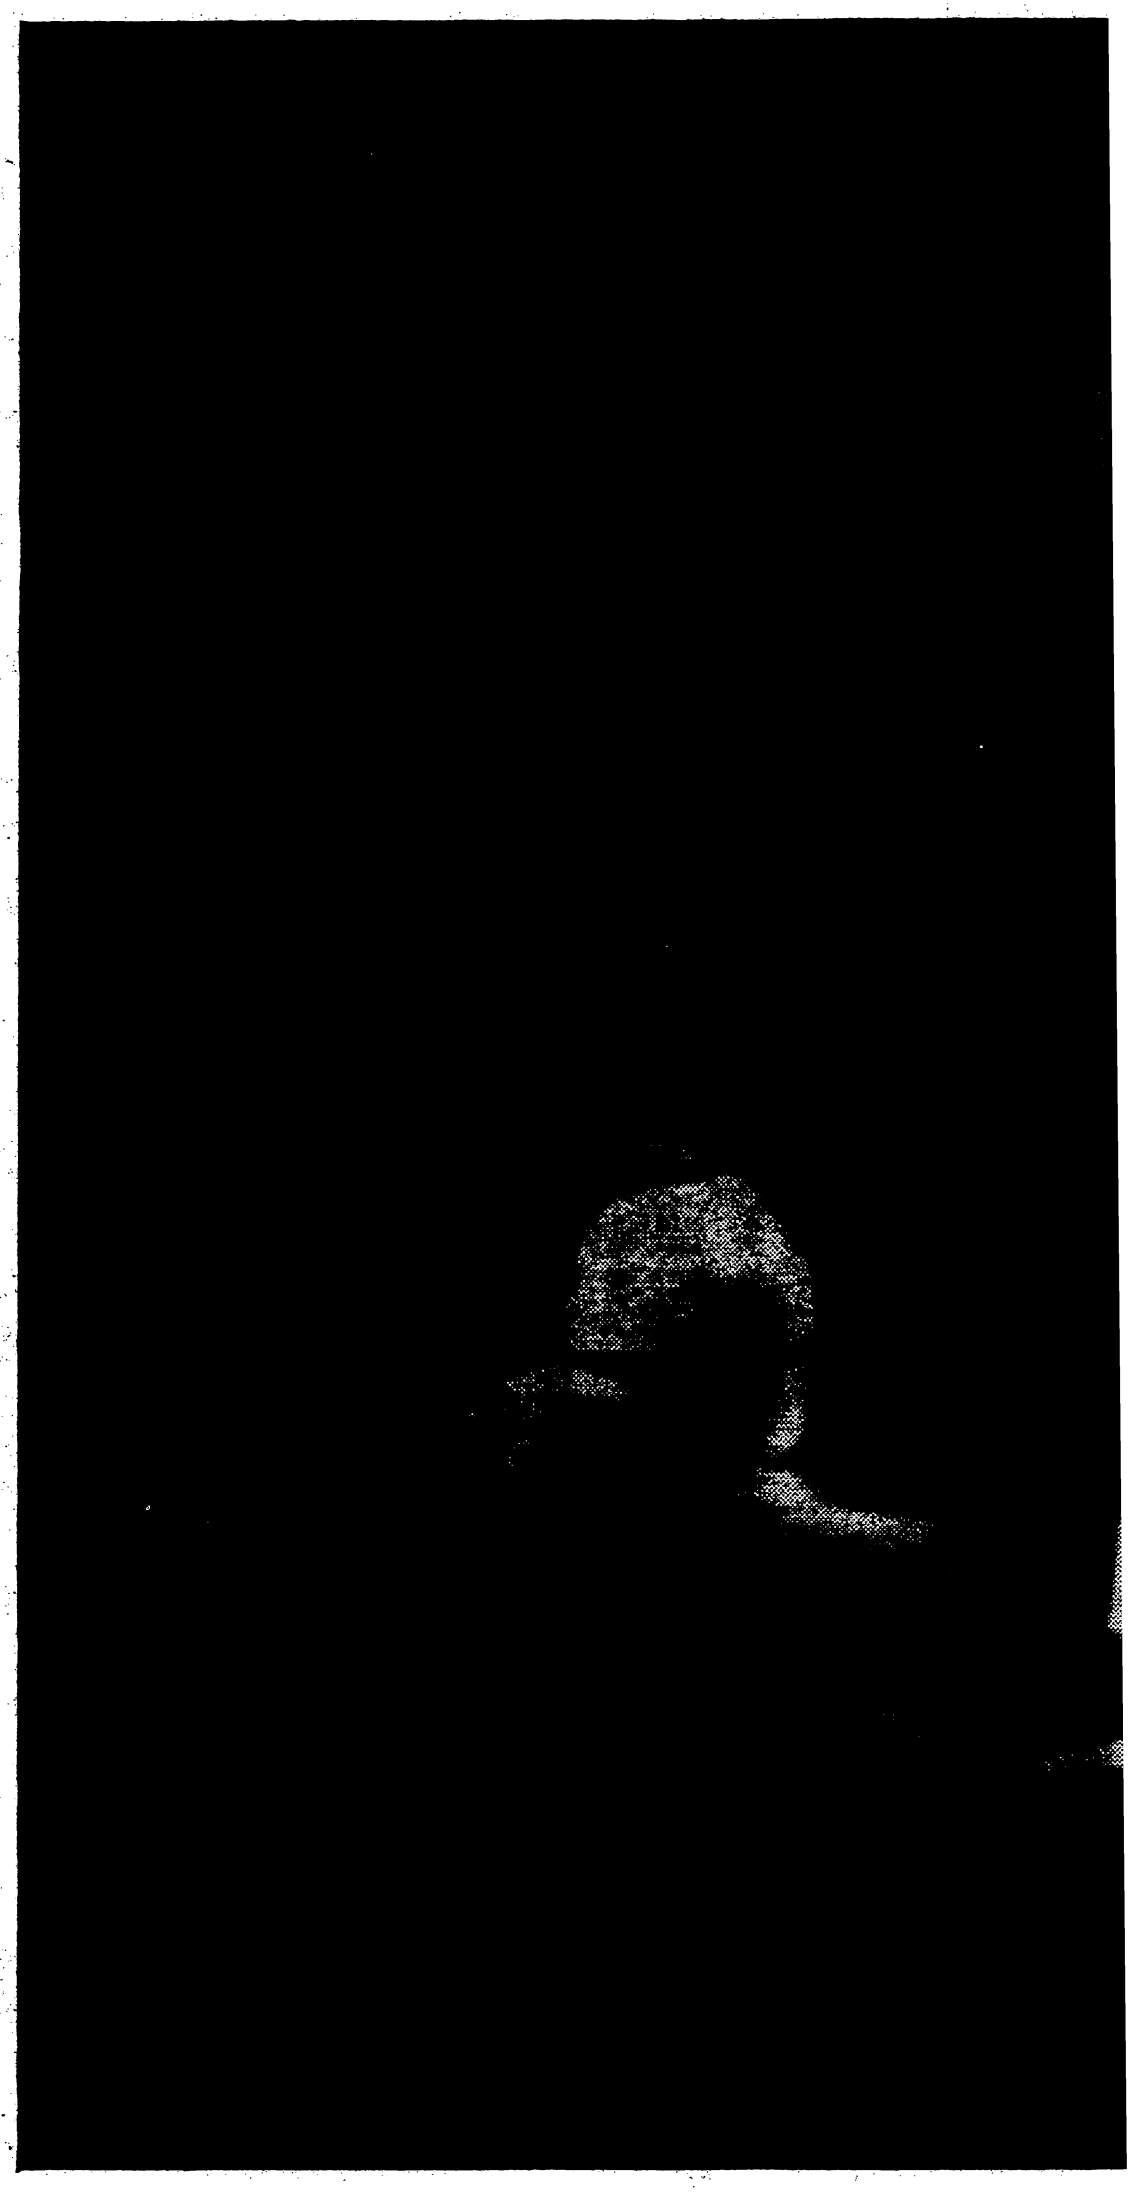
Photograph taken off a television monitor in New York of a scene in the Denver studio during the CBS Television Network broadcast of "Town Meeting of the World" via Telstar II. Seated at left, former President Dwight D. Eisenhower. Participating from the audience Professor Allen Brecht (standing) of Denver University, asking a question of former British Prime Minister Anthony Eden 5000 miles away in London--and getting an instantaneous response...



Big world, wasn't it?

On Wednesday, July 10, 1963, a 34½-inch metal ball whirling 7000 miles in outer space gave exciting reality to television's dream of enabling the peoples of the world to take part in a discussion of their common hopes and problems.

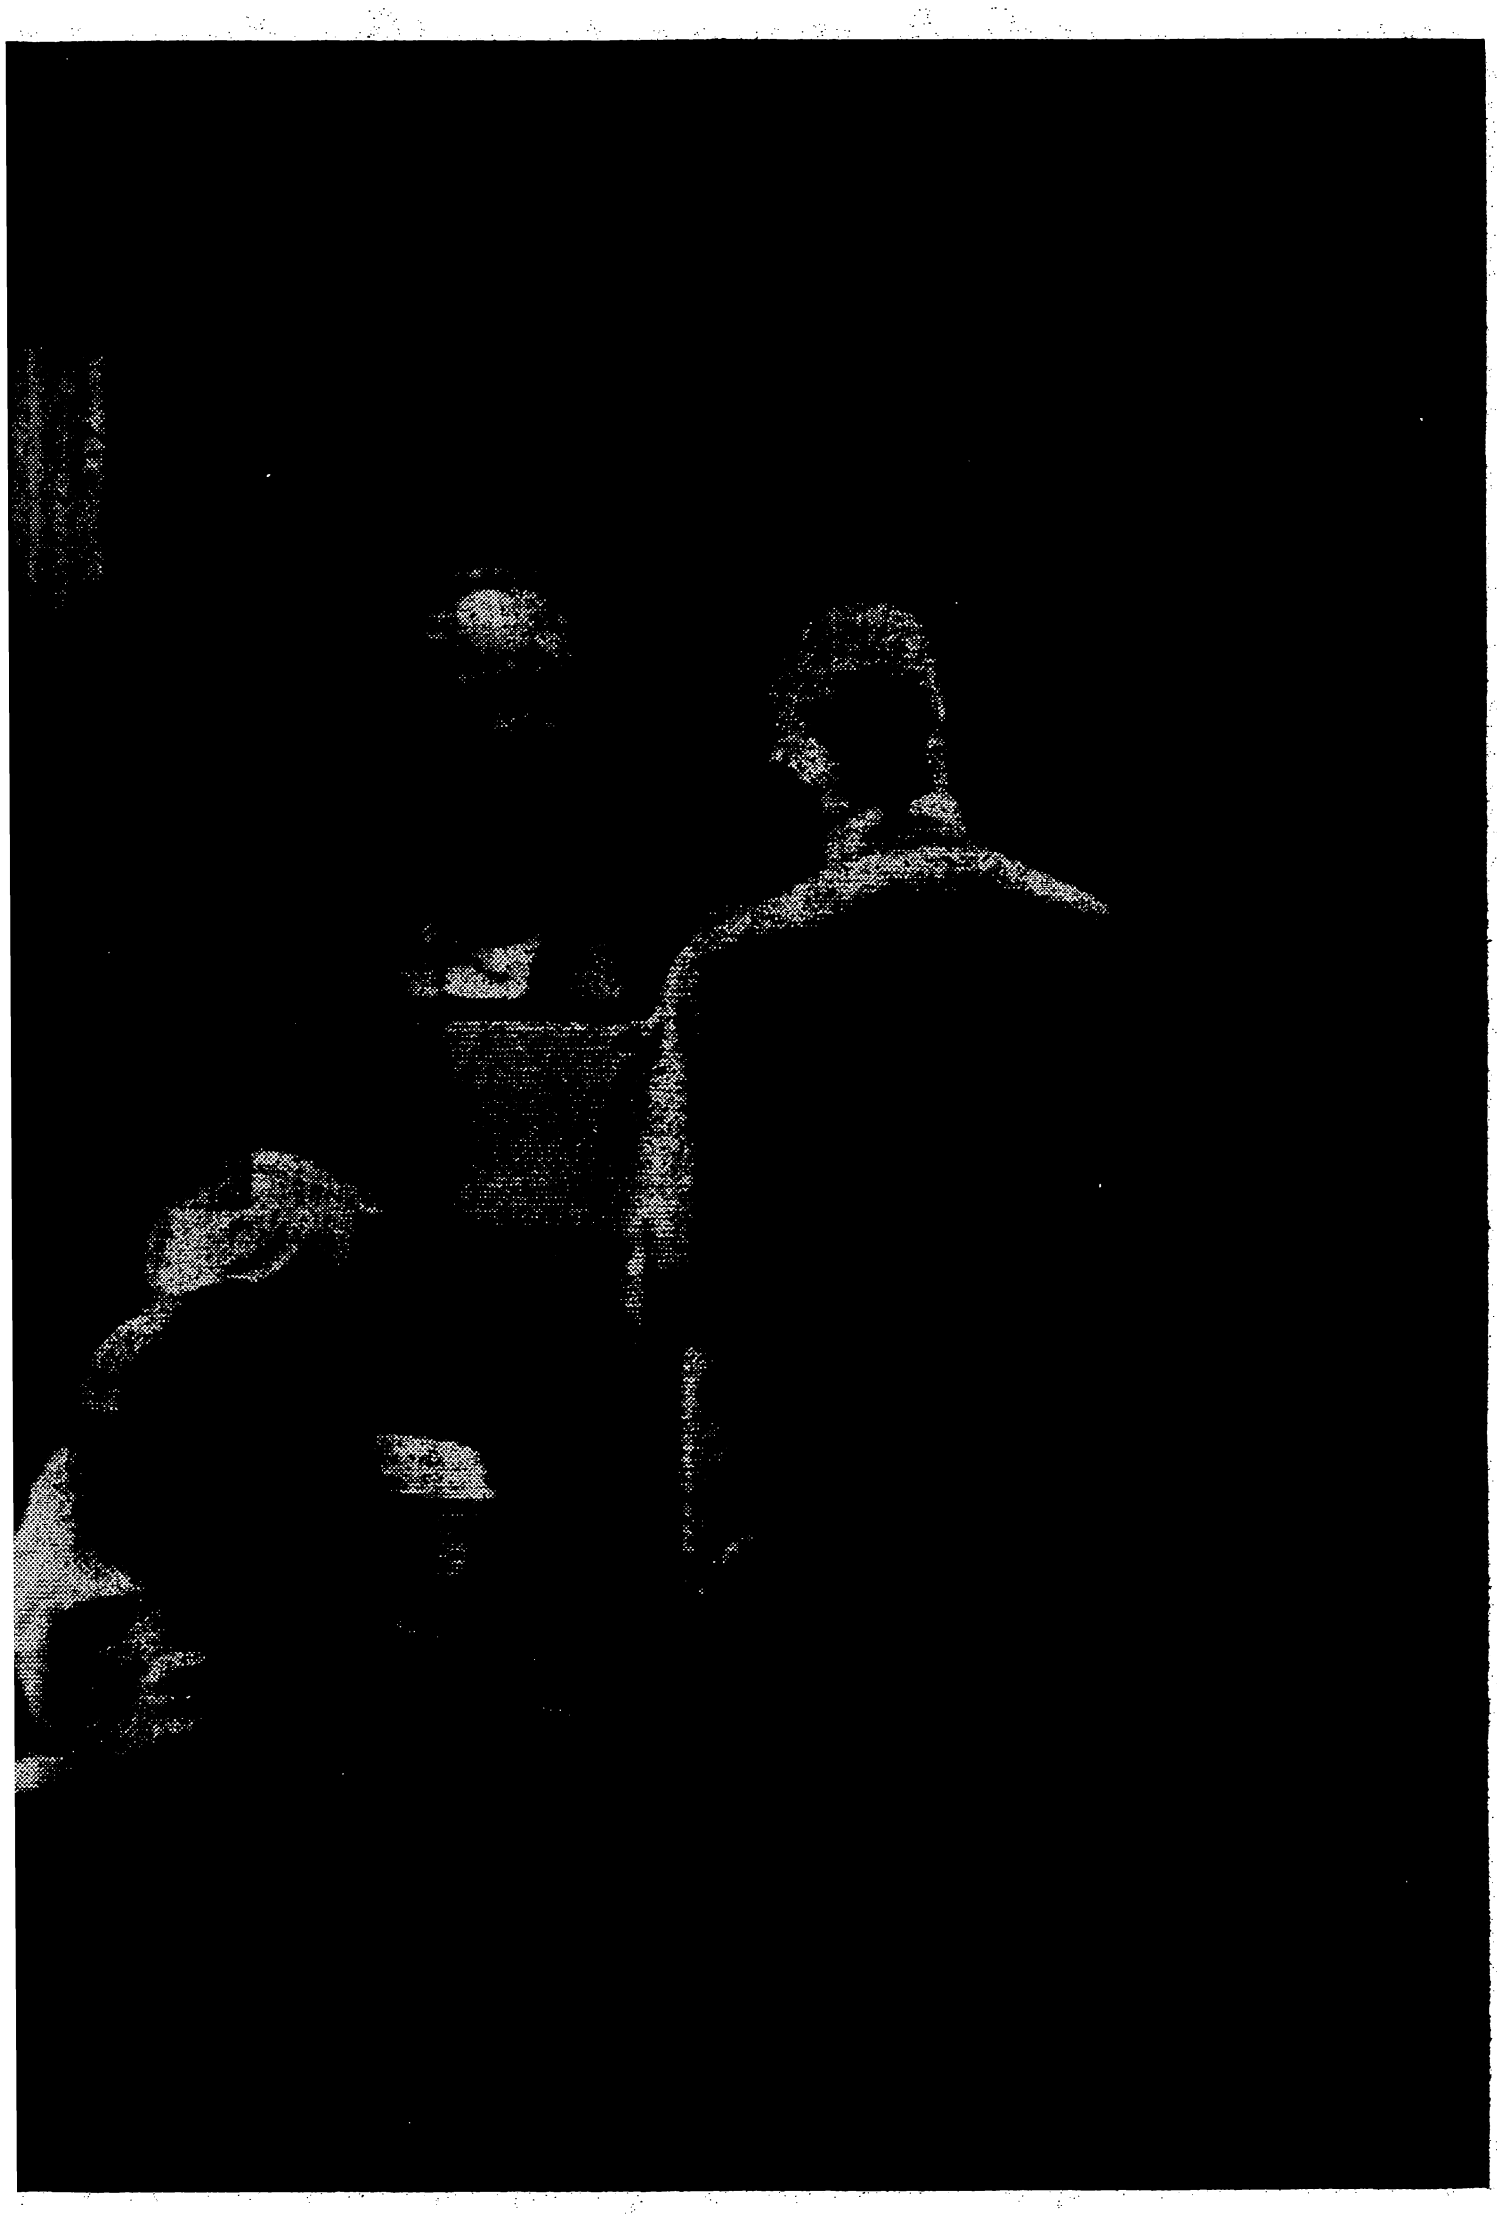
Bouncing off the surface of AT&T's communications satellite Telstar II, the words and images of four distantly-separated world statesmen and their fellow citizens were heard and seen by millions of Americans over the CBS Television Network.

This first broadcast of a "Town Meeting of the World," initially conceived and proposed by CBS last Fall, brought together former President Dwight D. Eisenhower in Denver; former British Prime Minister Anthony Eden in London; former West German Foreign Minister Heinrich Von Brentano in Bonn; and Jean Monnet, "father" of the Common Market in Brussels, with CBS News Correspondent Walter Cronkite as moderator. At its conclusion members of the studio audiences addressed questions to the four principal participants.

We are proud of having been able to bring to the American people this historic "meeting in space," made possible through the cooperation of the European Broadcasting Union, the British Broadcasting Corporation, the British government's ground station at Goonhilly Down, the American Telephone and Telegraph Company's ground station at Andover, Maine, Radio Television Brussels, and West Deutscher Rundfunk.

On the strength of its success, a series of similar intercontinental broadcasts will be presented quarterly by the CBS Television Network, starting in the Fall. These will embrace discussions of the arts and sciences, as well as international politics. As new satellite sending and receiving stations come into being it is our hope that, through this new sphere of influence, even more distant parts of the world may be united in mutual understanding and effort for the common good.

CBS NEWS



UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL
"CBS is to be highly congratulated for not merely utilizing Telstar on matters like new transmissions, but for leading in creative satellite broadcasting."

TIME MAGAZINE
"As a suggestion of what might be —future international colloquies drawing continents together— CBS's program could not have been more impressive. CBS swiftly announced plans to stage similar meetings four times a year."

DETROIT FREE PRESS
"CBS, which originated the idea and put the program together, as a salute to the anniversary of the first Telstar broadcast, can be proud of the pregram."

WASHINGTON POST
(Lead Editorial)
"The first use of Telstar for a 'Town Meeting of the World'... disclosed the exciting possibilities of this device for the formation of world opinion...possessed other virtues that recommend its frequent repetition in a world that needs to hear dispassionate and friendly discussion of the problems of greater Western unity."

LOS ANGELES TIMES
"Television, which often records history, made history Wednesday morning when CBS presented a 'Town Meeting of the World,' the first instantaneous hookup between nations utilizing the Telstar communications satellite."

HOLLYWOOD CITIZENS-NEWS
"It was a wonderful example of network television operating in the public interest on a global scale."

BOSTON TRAVELER
"'Town Meeting' was a landmark in television progress. It's gratifying to learn that CBS-TV plans another program of the same type in the near future."

ALBANY TIMES-UNION
"...this show represents a real communications breakthrough."

CHICAGO DAILY NEWS
"The CBS-TV 'Town Meeting of the World' was an overwhelming success filled with the magic of excitement at television history being made."

NEW YORK WORLD-TELEGRAM AND SUN
"When time ran out on the first 'Town Meeting of the World' the other night my impulse was to stamp my feet, beat my hands together and cry, 'More! More!'"

BALTIMORE SUN
"'Town Meeting of the World' was a smashing success despite the churlish obstruction placed in the way by the French Government. To begin with, it was a thrilling experience for those who watched the live spacecast via Telstar II on CBS-TV in midday; here was history in the making, regardless of what was said by the distinguished participants in the five-way discussion."

MONTREAL STAR
"...whatever the content, the program itself was historic. CBS deserves every kudos for doing it...and for repeating it in the evening."

CHICAGO'S AMERICAN
"...the telecast was a milestone in world communications, foreshadowing the day when world leaders may hold high-level diplomatic conferences via trans-Atlantic TV and when the man on the street anywhere can question directly leading statesmen on international problems."

NEW YORK JOURNAL-AMERICAN
"Telstar's tremendous potential— and the fear of that potential harbored in some quarters—was proven beyond question yesterday as CBS beamed its first 'Town Meeting of the World.'"

THE NEW YORK TIMES
"The reality of instantaneous international communications was warmly underscored early yesterday afternoon in the live telecast of the 'Town Meeting of the World' over the Columbia Broadcasting System..."

'Win the Symph' As WCCO Benefit

Minneapolis, July 30.

A "Win the Symphony" contest, gratuitously promoted by WCCO Radio, CBS affiliate here, to help the current Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra guarantors fund drive to raise $420,000 in gifts for next season's operation, is resulting in 30 of the famous organization's musicians playing next week for a local three-hour neighborhood street dance.

The dance with the orchestra members playing outdoors thusly will be a tribute to the husband-wife owners of a small neighborhood grocery store in recognition of the many "good deeds" they're continuously performing.

This contest, given much publicity by WCCO Radio, had its dialers sending in letters stating why they'd like to have the "symphonette" musicians services free, whether for a private ball, concert or any purpose whatsoever. The winner award was to go to the writer coming up with what a committee deemed to be the best utilization.

The adjudged winner was the letter signed by the particular neighborhood's 30 men and women explaining why and in what way they wished to honor "Ma and Pa Grocer."

Contest entrants were required to accompany their letters with guarantors fund donations and sufficient of these were received in amounts ranging from 10c to $100 to cover what the street dance will cost the radio station and guarantors fund committee.

Guarantors fund heads credit the contest with whipping up so much symphony orchestra interest at a time of year when interest in the organization usually is almost dead that the drive's success practically is assured.

Those making guarantor gifts or subscriptions need only to come across, when called upon, to the extent necessary if concert receipt and bequests' interest are insufficient to defray a season's operational cost.

CANADA CTV, CBC TO DIVVY UP GRID

Ottawa, July 30.

A new agreement between the CTV network and the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. television web for carrying Canadian professional football will get its first workout when the season preems Aug. 5. First game at Edmonton that date will start the pro ball season with its 68 games plus semi-finals and the classic Grey Cup closer. In the past, the two national networks have wrestled over air rights to the games and not until the 1962 Grey Cup game was there any agreement. The pact between CTV and CBC for sharing the games coverage in east and west will run until 1968.

Main points include: CBC airs Saturday games and such weekday games as CTV cannot handle. If there are two games on one day, the web with that day's priority gets first choice. CTV has exclusive tv rights for western semi-finals and first game of the eastern final, with CBC airing exclusively the eastern semi-finals and the first game of the western final. Remaining playoffs will be on both webs, including the Grey Cup game. Production of the Grey Cup will be handled by CTV. Webs will huddle on choice of gabbers. CTV and CBC may bid for rights to the games but whatever the result both webs will air the games. Webs also will cooperate in seeking and accepting bankrollers for the shows.

French-English Conflict in Canada Over Ottawa Nix

Montreal, July 30.

The wave of nationalist emotions sweeping through French-Canada may be one of the contributing factors in determining a new or clarified status for the Board of Broadcast Governors which, like the Federal Communications Commission in the United States, is charged with regulating all radio and tv.

Latest incident affecting the sensitive French-Canadians, whose leaders of the nationalist and "separatist"—setting up a Province of Quebec separate from the rest of Canada—movements have been pitching for an increasing use of French, was the disclosure in Parliament last week that a BBG recommendation for the granting of a private, French-language tv outlet in Ottawa, had been rejected by the Liberal Government.

Transport Minister McIlraith, who is the man responsible to Parliament for the nation's broadcasting policies, said that in rejecting the BBG recommendation, he was not attempting to "substitute myself for the BBG." He indicated, however, that the enforcement body's functions may well have to be clarified, if similar incidents are to be avoided in the future.

Local broadcasting circles feel, however, that the matter goes much deeper than merely clarifying the functions of the BBG and, actually, reflect a general concern with achieving a balance in Canada's complex cultural pattern as reflected in the French-English conflict.

It'll be recalled, for example, that Jack Tietolman, owner of local outlet CKVL, was turned down when he wanted to acquire station CFCF for the reported purpose of running an additional French outlet; it'll also be recalled that the Provincial Government of Quebec which, as the main proponent of French-Canada's aims and aspirations for strengthening the identification and independence of the Quebcois, has periodically indicated that it might very well consider the establishing of its own tv and radio net.

The question arises if, first, the BBG would be able to act in this situation to evaluate the relative importance of going along with the nationalist emotions in Quebec, and second, if the Federal Government would support the BBG in whatever it decides.

On the matter of the BBG general, there is no question that even the CBC which, until the establishment of the BBG some years ago was the forcer of the broadcasting regulations, has often voiced its disappointment with some of the decisions.

The CBC would like to have a much bigger voice in the conducting of its own affairs, particularly since the opening up of tv to private enterprise, has created a competitive situation which has found its income dropping year by year.

IA Locals Rebuff Walsh in Bid To 'Tape Up' Major Telefilmeries

Hollywood, July 30.

Unqualified opposition to IATSE international prexy Richard Walsh's current efforts to initiate a vidtape contract at the major telefilmeries has been expressed by two Hollywood IA locals, with the membership and boards of each going on record against such a pact and against Walsh seeking to negotiate it.

Opposition of the locals is based on their contention that their existing contracts with the majors cover tape, so that a new pact is unnecessary, also that the majors are seeking lower terms via a new pact.

Involved are IA cameramen's local 659, and IA Soundmen local 695. Walsh has contacted both of these locals, been rebuffed by each, spokesmen for the unions revealed.

IA cameramen's business agent Herb Aller said Walsh had appeared before the local's board last spring, urging a pact for tape. At that time, the membership took action empowering the board to take whatever action it deems necessary against Walsh and anyone else involved, in the event he proceeded to negotiate such a pact, Aller revealed. He said he is aware of Walsh's current talks with the majors, adding "we have no objection to his talking," but emphasized the union does not want him to negotiate. "We don't want anybody but the people doing the job negotiating. They know the situation here better than anybody else," he declared. "We have a contract, and everybody must stick to it," he added.

Walsh's Idea

Walsh, in his appearance before the board, urged a separate pact for vidtape, with lower rates such as those now applicable under network pacts, a pitch rejected by the board, reported Aller.

Soundmen business agent Thomas Carman also revealed that his board and the membership has taken the stand that tape is covered under its present pact with the majors, that there is no need for a new contract.

Carmen asserted the terms provided for in the network-type contract "would set us back 20 years." "Our present contract covers vidtape as well as film. It covers any phase of making pictures, whether on tape or whatever," he said. He expressed firm opposition to Walsh seeking a new tape pact for the majors, insisting the IA unions now have jurisdiction, that such a pact is sought only because it would provide "cheaper" rates.

Hollywood's telefilmeries will be able to make "enormous" savings by taping pilots instead of filming them, if discussions with Walsh anent a videotape pact are successful, said International Video Tape Productions prexy William Wallace.

Wallace pointed out film pilots are now "made for $50,000 to $125,000 and upwards, and often they don't get on the air. This way, they could tape a show's pilot as the sample, saving a lot of money. Then, if the pilot sells, it could be shot on film."

men . . . of all job classifications and income categories . . . are equally eager for knowledge and information.

Whether they run a farm, a machine shop, or a retail store, whether professional man, skilled worker or laborer, today's American man is an active and vocal citizen, interested in and informed about his neighborhood, his city, his state, his nation and his world.

Our programming helps meet the needs of these adults through its information and discussion format in prime hours, its range of broadcast editorials, and an innovation during this past year of which we are particularly proud . . . live broadcasts from the floor of the Missouri House of Representatives during debate. KMOX Radio pioneered the efforts to break down the traditional barriers to broadcasting in the Missouri House, and helped make Missouri one of 13 states in the nation to have permitted electronic media to broadcast live debate. Response to this new extension of the broadcast function in our state has been overwhelming, both from the public and from the legislators themselves.

I do not mean to suggest that I believe that the expansion of talk and information programming along the lines of KMOX Radio is the only factor in radio's renaissance. Information programming has contributed, without doubt, to the strength of the sound medium, and the increasing emphasis on news and information by stations throughout the country is evidence of the demand for this type of broadcasting.

However, radio has moved into its "Golden Age" in many other ways . . . through the new emphasis on drama, good music, and program service to special interest groups. Radio in most communities, large and small, is playing the role that daily and weekly newspapers filled in decades past. It is called on to rally communities in time of emergency, to win support for charitable activities, to inform of civic meetings, to get out the vote, to inspire interest in the public schools, to spotlight inefficiency or corruption in public office.

Today's radio stations are, for the most part, among the key influences in their communities. They help make the wheels run. America's towns, villages, cities and metropolises need radio as they have never needed it before. No other medium can move so fast, range so far, or devote as much time and energy to local affairs.

This dynamic concern with life on the local level is inevitably reflected in actions in the marketplace of advertising. When a station's influence is felt in civic affairs, those who earn their livings in that city are the first to know it, and the first to place their dollars where the response is. The growing percentage of local billing even for large-market stations is testimony to this fact of radio life.

National advertisers, too, are tapping this grassroots strength for their clients in increasing numbers. It is not unrealistic to project that many consumer products and services will be budgeting from 15 to 25% of their advertising funds to the medium that literally hits home.

Radio is changing. It is changing from a defensive medium struggling for budget supplements and scattering its shots, to a major voice, proud of its product, its impact on its audience and its sales effectiveness. Today's radio has found its "formula" . . . produce better programming for the community you serve, and you'll find your place in the sun.

Bill Henry

high paying job he probably could have gotten anyway, simply on straight ability as an unkown brain of Chicagoland, from whence he came and returned.

Henry is an admirer of Minow's, but there seems no reason to believe he is interested either in press attention, as such, or the same sort of middleground future. Henry, more likely, has a desire to make money in law or to make hay in politics. Willfully or not, his direction as FCC chairman will be so governed.

It makes considerable more sense to assume that Henry respected the strong hand Minow took in demanding that broadcasters come eyeball to eyeball, to use a Dean Rusk phrase, with the public interest. This, he must see, in contrast to such Eisenhower (in contrast with his allegiance to Kennedy) appointees as John C. Doerfer and George McConnaughey.

Federal law says broadcasters must comply with the public interest, but it is a trick combination of words which can be defined (and twisted) in extremes.

With the approach of August, FCC's month off, Henry is leaving on vacation.

He has not yet given positive evidence that he intends to be unreasonable with broadcasters. He has put a halo around sustaining time, but not yet with a finality which will drain significant profits. His FCC votes have been generally the same as might be expected from Minow.

But there is not yet a firm reason for broadcasters who carefully assess Henry to fear more than fear itself.

of some passages. Bill Owen capably mugged as his sidekick, and Renee Houston surged and spluttered adequately.

Michael Mills' production was stiff, and often misfired by placing its cameras where the significant action escaped them. But the main fault was that there was no reason to link the action with the cab-driving milieu, and the chance to explore a jaunty and unfamiliar mode of living was just not taken.

THE CITY

Producer: James Bredin
Writer: Paul Ferris
50 Mins., Wed., 9:45 p.m.
Associated TeleVision, from London

Stemming from a book about the business ramifications of the City of London published last year, author Paul Ferris capsuled the material into a well-turned essay, which was matched to some telling pictures in James Bredin's production. It was an ambling and ruminative affair, crammed with local color. It may have disappointed those in search of financial facts, but it satisfied as an account of a powerful region in which historical tradition jostles with modern money-making.

Ferris, who delivered his own script with urbanity, showed a square mile of gentlemen, operating in the Stock Exchange, Lloyd's of London, a merchant bank, and stockbroking offices. The piquancy was given by the contrast between the financial juggling and the picturesque survivals from an earlier age. Shining top hats were worn by some operators in their morning visits to offices. At the top of the pile, the Lord Mayor conducts an elaborate pageantry of ceremony and banqueting, and the program well conveyed the coffee-house atmosphere in which major bargains were struck.

The meaning of much of this share-dealing and price-watching must have been lost on outsiders, and Ferris might have scored more if he had tried to give more facts with his impressions. There were languid, and repetitious patches, but they were generally enlivened by cunning shots of the elegant buildings, of one of the 12 guilds that survive from the Middle Ages dispensing strawberries to old folk, and of black-suited City gents going about their business.

Producer James Bredin boldly did away with a musical soundtrack, except for one brief episode, and the experiment paid off. It allowed concentration on his pictorial images, and on Ferris's word-play. Foreigners would find it a quirky, but sound, guide to an odd, but influential, slice of life.

MORE FACES OF JIM

With Jimmy Edwards, June Whitfield, Ronnie Barker, Edwin Apps, Kenneth Fortescue, Brian Rawlinson, Peter Glaze, Kenneth Keve
Producer: Douglas Moodie
Writers: Frank Muir, Denis Norden
30 Mins., Fri., 8:45 p.m.
BBC-TV, from London

The bristling and breezy personality of Jimmy Edwards found a cosy home in the first "Faces of Jim," scripted by the Muir & Norden team long associated with him. Problem was to switch Edwards from the schoolmaster format of earlier skeins, and it was crisply and wittily achieved.

The current series attempts to debunk showbiz idioms, and the one caught, "A Matter of Spreadeagling," mocked the recent BBC-TV package of Shakespeare's Roman plays. Jimmy Edwards, in toga and skirt, was Hadrian the wall-builder, and the script was writen in thees and thous, making amusing puns and other verbal fancies out of the style. Thus, an aged messager entered panting, having run from Rome to Northern Britain with news. A romance between a British wench (June Whitfield) and a Roman officer (Ronnie Barker) guyed the conventions. And Edward bumbled agreeably throughout, making most of the lines in which he fell into modern vernacular in contrast with the blank-verse floridity.

But the segment never shook off the feeling that it was taking the easy way out. It was a facile and oldhat idea, and a stock ingredient of revue from Noel Coward to "Beyond the Fringe." Muir & Norden are agile word-jugglers, but to give this sort of thing a sharper impact something more original, less farcically conceived and performed, was needed.

Douglas Moodie's production tended to bludgeon points home, and was occasionally clumsy in execution. But it was held together, on a mild level, by Edwards's effervescence, with June Whitfield frothing nicely in support.

chancey undertaking. The domestic market only returns a small part of the capital investment, and wihout substantial overseas sales vidpic production is doomed to financial failure. Associated Television has had the edge on other companies, inasmuch as it has a wholly-owned subsid in Independent Television Corporation, but this company, too, has warned the Government that the levy on advertising must result in curtailment of production.

That is how the television scene shapes up at the present. The new Act, which comes into force in the summer of 1964, will run for 12 years, but it won't necessarily be rigid. There is scope to maneuver. The tax could be amended if the Government should consider that desirable or necessary, and commercial television could be given its second network and thus facilitate a complete country-wide realignment of broadcasting territories. It is believed that this will happen wihin a reasonable period.

'Harry's Girls'

"Harry's Girls" will probably shoot second 13-week cycle from Paris.

In a letter to British Equity, M-G has stated that it can see no reason why the series should be treated differently from any other produced in the UK and the producer has given the union a strong hint that the series will not be back.

This is in spite of a compromise agreement—inspired by the British producer associations of which Metro British is a member—under which Equity has agreed the series could be produced here. Latter agreement, while embracing the SAG residual payment structure, left actual application of the SAG overseas residual principle to an independent arbitrator. Pact is seen as something of a forerunner to an agreement Equity is currently seeking with the local producers concerning residuals for telepix.

But Metro Inc.'s attitude in instructing its London limb to tell Equity "Harry's Girls" deal was off derives, the union believes, from the producer's suspicion of the talent unions meeting in Toronto.

What happened there was that SAG indicated that it intended to press for artist residual rights for overseas showings. Equity gave assurance that it would not encourage "runaway" Yank product by allowing British performers to be hired at less than SAG rates where the product was obviously all-American.

THE GREAT WESTERNS ARE HOURS

One sure-fire way to beef up late-afternoon and early-evening television ratings is to program a Western series. And you'll find most of the great television Westerns are hours. Take Maverick, Sugarfoot, and Bronco, for examples. They're all going great guns on an off-network basis.

REACH 35% MORE HOMES

During February and March 1963, a total of 65 hours of these three Westerns were running each week in various markets between 5:30 and 7:30 P.M. weekdays. Compared to programs on the same stations, same time periods, a year ago, these 65 Western hours reached *35% more homes.

REACH MORE ADULTS, TOO

More important, the three Westerns reached 48% more men and 24% more women. Now, with the hour-long Cheyenne series ready for fall start, stations and advertisers have even greater flexibility in opportunities to reach more adults. Look into the great Westerns. You'll find most of them are hours... and they're also ours.

Sonderling's Pubservice Radio Swiper at John Birch Society

Will radio, with possibly less at stake, emerge again as the broadcast medium of editorial opinion and genuine commentary?

While a tv show recently killed a singing act's parody of the John Birch Society, the Sonderling radio stations have prepared a series of pubservice editorials on democracy, with some that directly attack the far-right organization.

The Sonderling editorials are of spot-commercial length and will be aired through the year with 15 or more repeats of each for ad-campaign impact. They are being written and voiced by Prof. Robert A. Scalapino, head of the political science department, Univ. of California at Berkeley, and carry the title, "Declarations for Democracy."

The "declarations" cover a wide range of questions about democracy, but several directly attack the fringe, both right and left.

Sample attack on the Birchites comes from one of the spots titled: "Do We Need A Dictator?" It says, in part: "The John Birch Society proclaims that it is a truly American organization whose primary purpose is to lead us in the fight against Communism. Its founder, Robert Welch, has set forth his basic ideas in 'The Blue Book.' This 'Blue Book' is a collection of lectures given by Welch at a secret meeting in December 1958 when the Birch Society was founded.

"How American is the John Birch Society? . . . Welch states that what is necessary if a group is going to combat Communism is 'some hardboiled, dictatorial and dynamic boss.' Only 'personal leadership,' he asserts, can save us . . .

"These are strange doctrines for a society that claims to be American. This nation has existed for nearly 200 years without dictators. Even in times of crisis, our people have always rejected those men on white horses who wanted to tell us what to read, what to think, and what to do. We would gain nothing if we threw democracy away to defeat Communism, as the John Birch Society would have us do. The answer to communism is not some kind of authoritarian or Fascist control. The answer to Communism is a better and fuller democracy for all of our people."

Sonderling prexy Egmont Sonderling says the idea of the saturation "democracy" campaign came out of his travels abroad, particularly in the Iron Curtain countries, where "I became aware of the fact we Americans do not have answers to many claims made by Communists for their system of government."

Sonderling stations and their prime coverage areas are WOPA-AM-FM, Chicago; WDIA, Memphis; KDIA, San Francisco; KFOX AM-FM, Los Angeles. Chi station is ethnic and the Memphis and Frisco outlets are Negro-programmed. LA coverage is country and western.

Pro-Negro Stand

the underground railroad. Cast for the episode includes Ruby Dee, Brock Peters, Ossie Davis, Ethel Waters, Mimi Dillard and Gloria Calomee.

The Robinson memo in the spring of '62 did not result in any major revolution of what the web offered in prime time tv drama, other than the previously mentioned shows, and occasional outings in other series. There was praise from National Assn. for the Advancement of the Colored People for a "Defenders," but the NAACP and more militant Negro groups condemned all the webs for following lily-white patterns, in most of their prime time show spectrum.

The fact remains that the whole range and depth of the Negro protest movement currently rocking the U. S. hasn't been examined to any extent on any of the tv network dramas.

According to a CBS programming exec, the school integration theme, being so mercurial, may be difficult drama, but said he, the theme is "not taboo for drama on our network." Only two years ago, producer Brodkin said he had not reached the stage of freedom allowing him to present a "Defenders" episode dealing with the Negro social upheaval, exemplified by the integration school fight.

Web programming exec acknowledged that the integration theme would be a sensitive issue to affils in the south, as is the casting of Negroes in "Defenders" and "Nurses." He added, though, he has heard of no southern affils cancelling "Defenders" or "Nurses" last season because of Negro casting, or an occasional theme dealing with the racial issue.

What will be the concrete results of the new Dann and Werner memos remains to be seen on the screen next season. For years now, Negro talent showcased in variety layouts has not represented any special problems. Negro talent is used freely in religioso programs.

Negro talent, though, has found a tough go of it in the escape vehicles of tv, ranging from situation comedies to game shows to mellers. In the more realistic dramas, it's been an uphill struggle for the Negro performers. That they can be utilized creatively and effectively even in a soft series such as a "Lassie" was proven by one episode last season. In the episode one of the workingmen who helped Lassie and Timmie out of a mess happened to be a Negro. It was a bit, but important role.

NBC's Werner in his letter spoke of the web's policy "of portraying all members of minority groups fairly and honestly, avoiding stereotypes, in a manner consistent with their relationship to the society as a whole and with the ralities of every-day life. While this policy applies to all racial minorities, obviously its principal reference—because they constitute such a sizeable minority—is to the casting and depiction of Negroes.

"Our policy and objectives in this area were discussed in some detail in meetings recently held on the West Coast between representatives of the NBC Program and Broadcast Standards Departments and the producers of all filmed NBC programs."

Werner went on to say that "Negroes are actually engaged in many occupations that are part of the background of story-telling, and accordingly there should be opportunities to include them in roles where it would be natural and realistic for a Negro to appear. This does not mean that any special effort should be made merely for its own sake to include members of racial minorities in programs that do not logically call for their presence. But it does mean that an effort should be made to include them in programs in which their presence contributes toward an honest and natural depiction of places, situations and events."

On the Coast, a series of telefilm meetings between NAACP and industry officials ended with the NAACP characterizing the upcoming situation as a "period of appraisal." The same characterization for all of tv in relationship to the Negro could be made in the East, and throughout the country.

'Open End' to Hit Road; O'seas Too

David Susskind's "Open End" series will be hitting the road during its 1963-64 run with originations scheduled for several U.S. cities as well as London and Paris. While maintaining the overall format of the five-year old show more or less intact, Susskind plans to showcase more offbeat theatrical ideas and personalities, along the lines of his presentation of "The Premise" and "Second City" this year.

Again to be syndicated by National Telefilm Associates, "Open End" was given a new lease on life by the agreement of WPIX to buy the show for the New York market. Unlike WNEW-TV, which cancelled the show before the end of the season, WPIX will have no partnership interest in the series. The conservative leanings of WPIX's parent company, the N.Y. Daily News, will have no bearing on Susskind's freewheeling adherence and advocacy of liberal causes on his show. Fred Thrower, WPIX general manager, has bought the show without any political strings attached.

NTA, which lined up 19 stations for 'Open End" last season, is now setting its sights on a lineup of 40 stations. Susskind himself has been actively engaged in finding a Washington, D.C., outlet in view of the series' concern with the state of the nation. He's also shooting for a deal that would give "Open End" exposure in England.

In addition to a heavier stress on entertainment shows, Susskind plans to increase the number of his one-man interviews. He's received commitments from Jack Benny, Garson Kanin, Truman Capote, and others, to appear solo on the show with him. In another variation, Susskind is trying to set more straight debates for "Open End," along the lines of the Gore Vidal-William Buckley cerebral rowdydow last season.

Wolper's Grace Kelly 'Two Worlds' Half-Hr.

Grace Kelly will have another network outing next season. Wolper Productions has set "Grace Kelly-Princess of Two Worlds" as a half-hour bio episode for its "Hollywood and the Stars" series on NBC-TV.

Last season, Grace Kelly, as Princess of Monaco, toured the tiny principality on CBS-TV in a special, packaged by MCA.

Raleigh — Betty Elliott has resigned as woman's editor of the Raleigh Times to go with WRAL-TV as director of women's activities. Mrs. Elliott, who joined the Times in 1952 as a reporter, is a former president of the North Carolina Press Women.

McCollough succeeds Arthur Simon, who died last month. Both McCollough and William S. Hedges, a former NBC veepee, were named to the board of directors of the organization.

The Univ. of Michigan Television Center's program "From Rebel to Reformer" received one of first place awards in tv from the 1963 American Exhibition of Educational Radio & Television Programs, sponsored by Ohio State U.

This was the only first place award received by an educational tv producer in the general, or non-systematic broadcasting categories. Competition included many large commercial stations as well as ETV stations.

"From Rebel to Reformer" is a documentary on the progress of the American woman from "second class citizenship" to her contemporary role as a social and political reformer.

The Hoyt-Kelly battery allows no dull moments during a broadcast. Both are heavy in baseball lingo and inside play comment. Hoyt's gallery of rooters includes many who pull for rainstops and other game delays so as to enjoy his recollections of playing days and humorous and human interest incidents with past stars, characters, umpires and owners of ball clubs.

Telecasts also are in capable hands. Frank McCormick, former star first baseman for the Reds, doing play by play for several seasons, is in tandem for the second year with Ed Kennedy, vet Cincy sportcaster. They are on the Cincinnati Baseball Club's payroll. Video of home games is by two RCA color cameras with zoom lenses with Ron Wilson as producer and Ronald Merle as studio assistant. Tinting is excellent.

Telecasts are preceded by field interviews of local and visiting players by Lou Smith, vet Cincy Enquirer sports editor, and in WLW-T studio on away games by Pat Harmon, Post and Times-Star sports chief.

Hoyt and Kelly cover all home and away games at scene of action, a relief for Hoyt who did his share of dramatizing via telegraphic descriptions in those years of costs cutting by sponsors on away games.

Besides keeping busy with play by play, the mikers also cram in line scores of other major league games, announcements of approaching railroad excursions, special nights and days, doubleheaders, fireworks displays, circus acts and reduced prices for senior citizens, free gate for twins and other gimmicks to boost attendance, plus commercials and station breaks.

SPECIAL REPORT
(The Casino Story)
With Dick John, Barbara Curtis
Producer: John
Writer, Director: P. J. O'Connell
10 Mins., Fri., 6:20 p.m.
WIIC, Pittsburgh

A special report, their 10 minute in depth feature spot on WIIC's hour-long "Dateline '63," dealt with the recent contest by the Casino Theatre in Pitt to find new feature performers.

Writer, director P. J. O'Connell made this serious tome and pointed up not only the poor state of burly b. o. but the pitiful attempts of inexperienced girls trying desperately to break into show biz. Producer Dick John was the narrator and he took his cameras into the theatre, on stage and back to the barren dressing rooms in a successful attempt to show both the problems of the industry and the would-be stripper in the dying burly field. Barbara Curtis, vet talking woman, was the only professional in the seg and was remarkably natural as she put the girls through their paces. Most heartwringing spectacle was a youngster twisting her young body around in horrible gyrations which made her as sexy as a piece of taffy.

On camera was winner Laurie Lane who said, "Some people regarding stripping as indecent and immoral but it can be art. My mother thought I was trying out for the chorus, but she didn't object to this. I like to dance like this, especially when you get paid."

At no time was levity introduced. The girls paraded around in net bras and panties and one was seen clutching her foundation garment as Miss Curtis explained to her that the customers wanted happy faces and no frowns. As it stands, the clip could be used in expanded form to rate a look from the networks.

ROMPER ROOM
With Coleene Eilers, others
Producer: Bert Klaster Enterprises
Director: Bob Allingham
30 Mins., Mon.-Fri., 11 a.m.
PARTICIPATING
KTAR-TV, Phoenix

A curious thing occurs daily at 11 a.m. in the periphery blanketed by KTAR-TV's 316,000 watts. The postpablum set abandon their toys and convene before their video sets to sit in rapt attention while Coleene Eilers and her six moppet guests calls her Romper Room to attention.

Justifiably, this program is highly endorsed by the Arizona Education Assn., the PTA but especially delighted are the sponsors lucky enough to latch on to the show who are enamored of her army of lilliputian shills who cruise the aisles of the local supermarkets hustling their parents to buy the products that "Miss Coleene talks about." Even with all these recommendations going for Miss Eilers one still would suspect that the highest appreciation comes from the harassed young mothers who are only too happy to turn their tots over to this engaging program so they might enjoy a 30-minute coffee break.

Miss Eilers, a femme Pied Piper with a down-south, tranqualizing cornpone demeanor, leads her charges through a dandy but constructive half-hour of calisthentics, marches, respect for flag and family, dates and numbers, animals and manners. She has a remarkably gentle rapport with her prekindergarten guests but God help the fractious, restless towhead who gets out of line. She can be as tough as a Marine DI as she calmly 86s the little offender off-camera into an oblivion of sorts and placidly continues with the proceedings. This wholesome fare is highly recommended for the youngsters.

air. FCC chairman E. William Henry also flatly opposed any attempt to regulate editorials by legislation, insisting that the FCC regulations were sufficient to prevent any abuses in this field.

Safeguards against cynical manipulation of broadcast facilities for the propagation of private opinions of station owners have already been institutionalized over the past decade in the so-called "fairness doctrine." Under this doctrine, broadcasters are obligated to offer time to spokesmen opposing the broadcaster's editorial stand. Another limitation, suggested by various Congression, to bar endorsements of political candidates two days before elections will also probably be accepted by the broadcasters, whether as a formal regulation or as a self-imposed rule of conduct.

However, the right to endorse candidates, which has emerged as the key bone of contention in the Washington hearings, is being insisted upon by the broadcasters. At last week's National Broadcast Editorial Conference in Athens, Ga., before many House members, Roger W. Turner, WMCA's director of news and public affairs, summed up the industry's attitude as follows: "On the air editorializing on issues between elections is commendable, but it also posed a duty to suggest solutions and the ultimate vehicle for most solutions in this country is the polling place on Election Day."

matic offerings, films and essay type programs. But even that has far to go, and the much discussed second one has even farther to go.

So the needed monetary backing has to be solved before station number two can really tee off. Meanwhile the RTF has been facing flash strikes again as workers demand better wages. The expensive spacious new radio quarters have opened and a good part of the tv staff is also ensconced there. But a tv city is to be built soon which means more money outlay. It is hard to see when the RTF can solve all its present problems to be able to then get the expanded personnel it will need for that coming tv station.

But at least it will definitely be here. Once it is actually on the air changes should be faster and inevitable to give it its true image. Jockeying by monied private tv packaging concerns should also pressure it into a more coherent, definite outlook and formula that it still does not dispaly. Above is the main aspect of the tv picture in France today.

How often have you seen Variety talk like this about a local TV series?

- "highly commendable . . . engrossing as well as timely, reflected much credit on KMSP-TV staffers . . .
- "skillfully handled in all respects . . . disseminated valuable information . . . a worthwhile 30 minutes . . .
- "provided much human interest in a commendable manner . . . profound and extremely interesting and attention riveting . . .
- "a meritorious presentation on par with more pretentious and costly TV networks' specials . . .
- "a milestone in TV reporting . . . a laudable effort, carried out with smashing impact."

All these comments were made about a local series on KMSP Channel 9—Pursuit. This locally produced program deals directly with important problems in the upper midwest area—and does it with gloves off. As one advertising man put it: "There isn't another local program in our area that's got so many people talking and thinking."

Pursuit is just one representative part of our regular local programming. Just one of many reasons why KMSP is the favorite station of thoughtful people in the upper midwest.

Isn't this the kind of open-minded climate where your products would get a good showing?

VERY SIMPLE. Manufacturer of this product gave his TV commercials the PLUS OF COLOR. Customers came—saw—recognized what they saw—and bought. Overnight, "Brand X" became one-of-a-kind, thanks to color.

Note: Your black-and-white commercials will be even better when filmed in color. Prints will come alive . . . shades and subtleties will stand out as never before.

Won't Even Fade Away...

■ In the days of booming film production in Hollywood, the studios produced hundreds of pictures a year. A surprising percentage was really good entertainment. A lot of television stations discovered this, too, when they bought those pre '48 libraries. In the next 12 months a good many contracts will be running out on the MGM pre '48 features. What to do about it?

■ Well, good old movies never die. They don't even fade. The public continues to have a "thing" about Hollywood. Networks and advertisers make hay with TV specials about Stars, Eras and Academy Awards. The many fine films from the Fifties (though more limited in number) continue to draw big audiences at most any hour. And prime-time pictures haven't dented the stay-up habits of late show fans. So stations shouldn't turn away from what can be a continuing program mainstay and money maker—that good pre '48 feature film.

■ Examples are easy to track in New York City with its daily ARB ratings. On WCBS-TV, top pre '48 MGM features played on the Early and Late Show racked up some pretty remarkable figures. Do you like 12.4, 7.0, 12.3? That's the dimensions of the ratings for the third, fifth, and seventh run of Boom Town. This in a period of 33 months. Or take the Hucksters, which premiered with 18.6 and was delivering a 10.6 exactly eight runs and four years later.

■ Redressing pre '48 pictures does wonders, too. Four films were "packaged" by WCBS-TV as Adventure Film Classics and sold to a toy client as pre-Christmas specials on Sunday afternoons last season. A similar idea, called Family Classics, broke viewing habits in Chicago and put WGN-TV in a prime rating position Friday evenings.

■ An offer of a detailed list of more such situations and results has been made by Dick Harper over the phone to many clients who are already renewing their pre '48 deals. He'll gladly send it to anyone else who drops a note to him at MGM-TV, 1540 Broadway, N.Y.C. Ask for "The Boom Town Bedtime Story."

Art Carney Fine on Tour

ART CARNEY spent only two weeks on the summer theater circuit, just long enough, he said, "to pay for my daughter's wedding." Although he was acting in a play of slight merit, he might have stayed a month or two—or ten. There is no end to the popularity of Carney, who pleases everyone all the time.

He has an instinct for comedy which is rare and deep-rooted. He is endowed by nature with an uncommon warmth which makes him personally attractive. On the stage, as in television, he is the people's choice and the critics,' too. He has everything.

Watching him at Dennis in "Time Out for Ginger," the observer had an opportunity to see just how good he is.

There are some funny scenes in Ronald Alexander's play, but not many, and the man Carney personated is, as written, too silly to be sympathetic—but not as Carney played him.

It is part of the art of Art that he can offer fools gladly, and make you see their humanity while laughing at their folly.

All comedy holds up to ridicule the foibles of foolish mankind, which is to say every last one of us.

The inferior comedians do it too broadly, presenting boobs at whom we jeer in a feeling of bogus superiority.

The great ones make us understand the weaknesses which beget folly and stir us to laughter through understanding.

The rare ones have the grace to know that all of us are fools much of the time, and the skill to suggest that the dolts they personate are close to us in nature—and perhaps we had better watch our own steps lest we fall into their follies.

ART CARNEY
Rare Comedian

Carney is one of the rare ones, exhibiting man's bumbling foolishness sharply but without malice.

His sense of timing has never been less than magnificent. He has a musician's ear for the right moment at which to speak a comical line and the right stress for it. He never blunders into a joke, but utters them all faultlessly and without any evidence of effort, as though being funny continuously for a period of two hours were as natural and easy as eating and sleeping.

You could describe him as a "natural" comedian. But there is no such thing, in fact as a natural comedian; every comic in any play, if he uses the author's lines and allows, as he must, for continual interchanges with other actors, is working consciously and artfully to present not himself but the character the author has created.

He may not even like the character, but he must understand him, express him as the author and the director indicate, and fit his own personality into the framework of the play. This is not "natural." It cannot be spontaneous. It demands study and disciplined skill.

In "Time Out for Ginger" the character Carney undertook is an ass. Howard Carol, as the playwrights call him, is vain, pompous and foolishly stubborn. In a speech to high schoolers, he has insisted that all girls should be given every opportunity to do anything they want to do.

When this causes public controversy, his only reaction is a preening display of peacock vanity.

When his teen-aged daughter takes him literally and insists on joining the boys' football squad, he pig-headedly fights for her. Then, without ever understanding that the boys are letting her play as a joke, celebrates her big moment of bogus glory as if he were entirely bereft of his senses.

ART CARNEY played this simpleton without dodging, which it to say, without trying to make him brighter than he is. He was immensely amusing whenever the lines permitted and in one big scene, in which Howard describes to his patient wife exactly how their daughter scored a touchdown, outrageously funny. But he invested him with a few fragments of dignity and sanity, so that instead of being repelled, or bored, by Howard, the playgoer was amused and pleased.

He did it in little, subtle ways. In intimate scenes with Phyllis Thaxter, who played his wife with dignity, he got into his manner and his tone of voice that Howard, for all his fatheadedness, loved his wife. There was one point in his favor, one quality for which you admired him.

He did it, too, in scenes with Howard's three daughters. What Howard says to the girls is not inspiring, but the warmly paternal way in which Carney said it and the fatherly manner in which he kissed them made it possible to feel some admiration for the man.

None of this is in the lines, though it may presumably be suggested in the stage directions. The actor, not the author, provided out of his own resources and his own skill these personal touches which made the idiotic character sympathetic.

Another actor, playing Howard Carol arrogantly, coldly, might well have got all the laughs. But the playgoer would have turned against him long before the third act began.

On the stage, the kind of folly that begins in human weakness can be amusing. But total foolishness coupled with arrogance, is not amusing, but frightening; it is the essential quality of dictators; big and little.

At the Cape Playhouse, in Dennis, and at Ogunquit, Me., Art Carney brightened a few days and nights for playgoers who saw him. For the rest of the summer, we must get along without his talent, but we will remember his performance with admiration.

tial of their product. One leading producer told us recently every script is read and reread to make certain it contains no words or phrases which may have entirely different meanings in other countries.

Hollywood is not waiting for second-hand news on what's happening in the rapidly expanding television market abroad. It has its own global traveling salesmen constantly encircling the world, to visit other countries, to ascertain their program needs and problems, and convey the word back home to the men who turn out their product. That's why MCA-TV veepee Berle Adams is always busy on such junkets, as is his counterpart at Desilu, Richard Dinsmore, the general manager-veepee of Desilu Sales, syndication arm of Desilu.

TV may still be a small screen, but it's not a small world, and no one is more aware of that today than the Hollywood producer or production chief in tv. Because of international trade restrictions and barriers such as quotas put up by many nations, tv still has a long ways to go before it will get rich in the foreign market. Nonetheless these various barriers are gradually being eliminated; more tv markets are continually opening up abroad, and the future on the global horizon is unlimited, say those best qualified to know.

TV companies who once confined their policies to the rather rigid policy of shooting a teletfilm within its budget, are now keeping a close eye on the turbulent South American political situation, or the next network emerging in Germany. That's because with their still shiny new global spectacles, they realize until the South American situation is stabilized, there won't be any coin forthcoming from those south-of-the-border nations; until a new network comes into being in Germany (and it is next year), they won't be selling much more film there, and so on and on.

Today, a tv exec who confines his outlook to the narrow confines of simply preparing X series for next season, isn't apt to be in business for long. This, incidentally, explains more than anything else the abrupt downgrade in the fortunes of a number af Hollywood telefilmeries this past year.

BBC-TV Enterprises In Sales to 100 Countries

London, July 30.

BBC Television Enterprises, the Corporation's three-year-old sales limb, has now shifted product to more than 100 countries.

Under the guiding wing of Ronald Waldman, the department's chief, BBCTE has sold something like 5,500,000 feet of film throughout the world, in the last year.

According to BBC, biggest customers are Australia and New Zealand.

Houston — Ron Schmidt, program director of KODA-FM for five years, has left the station to join a new corporation which plans to buy and operate two FM outlets—one here and one in San Francisco. The group is currently negotiating to purchase KARO-FM here.

of a videotape crown Coach cruiser, used with telling effect in taping President Kennedy's visit to Mexico in June, 1962, and to San Jose, Costa Rico early this year. This unit has been used to videotape commercials and also by ABC to bring the Water Ski tournament to the "Wide World of Sports" program on that network. Added interest has been shown by U.S. ad agencies in using this for taping commercials in exotic locales in Mexico and Central America.

From January 1962 Teleprogramas, a subsidiary in charge of marketing the Telesistema product abroad stepped up its overseas sales in such diverse places as Puerto Rico, Dominican Republic, Caracas, all Central American Republics, Peru, Ecuador, Columbia, and Buenos Aires, and Chile. Programs were offered at a startlingly low introductory rate of $25 (U.S.) per half-hour tape and cost of handling and shipment, with price to go up later. When the price went up cancellations came in from practically all South American markets, who had further complicated the picture by being in arrears in their payments. Getting circuits to operate was another problem. For example in Puerto Rico, the station manager kept the tapes in storage for periods up to a year, while waiting for a sponsor to buy. Since that time, March, 1963, this has been remedied with more specific contract clauses and effective policing systems, a Teleprogramas spokesman stated. The price structure remains unsolved, however.

Biggest foreign outlet for the Mexican videotaped product is the Spanish International Broadcasting Co., a U.S. corporation. Principal stockholders are: Frank Fouce Jr., Rene Anselmo, Don Emilio Azcarraga, and Emilio Azcarraga M., Edward Noble, president of Young & Rubicam & Noble of Mexico was an original stockholder and officer in the company, but he sold out his interests in January if this year. Spanish International is UHF and currently has two owned and operated stations, Channel 41 in San Antonio, and Channel 34 in Los Angeles. Each station takes over 70 programs per week of the Telesistema product. Programming includes bullfights, boxing, wrestling, specials, musicals, and soap operas.

Telesistema is also negotiating for purchase of stations in Honduras, Costa Rico and Nicaragua.

Rating systems are much in the manner of U.S. systems. Belden, Palmolive and International Research are the three systems in widest use here. According to their figures here are the most popular programs: (1) Estudio Raleigh (cigaret) on Channel 2, 58%; (2) "Dr. Kildare," Channel 2, 51%; (3) La Hora Orange Crush, Channel 2, 49%; (4) Sonrisas Colgate, Channel 2, 47%; (5) Comicos y Canciones, Channel 2, 46%; (6) La Hira Celanese, Channel 2, 45%; (7) "Bonanza," Channel 5, 43%; (8) "Untouchables," Channel 2, 42%; (9) Pasos Triunfales, Channel 2, 41%; (10) Nueva Cita Musical, Channel 2, 40%. Seven of these programs are live.

Television draws its talent from other entertainment media, and in turn feeds it as well. On the technical level personel are obtained from Columbia College Panaemricano, and from engineering and technical courses in other schools as Politecnico; and the University. Administrative talent is drawn from ad agencies, and wherever available.

Creative talent, contrary to many opinions, is not cultivated. It is easier to steal an idea or adapt it to tv than to pay a writer, according to a tv executive who refuses to be named.

BILL'S BIG BIZ BOSS!

Vice President and General Manager of WISN-TV, Milwaukee, William "Bill" Goodnow is our man on the job!

As General Manager, Bill has expanded Promotion, News, Programming and Sales Departments while instituting the new department of Merchandising. He has appointed four new department heads in this reorganization.

Bill was behind the move which brought WISN-TV to the top position in the Milwaukee market when it was an ABC affiliate and then spearheaded the effort that brought the CBS affiliation to Channel 12 on April 1, 1961.

This switch to CBS, in conjunction with the proper balance of local programming has proved tremendously successful . . . as is evidenced by Channel 12's steady rise to its current favorable position in the Milwaukee market, which in turn has caused an accelerated feeling of public appreciation and acceptance of WISN-TV.

Bill is a man both respected in the community and admired for his foresight within broadcasting circles . . . an administrator looked up to by his fellow workers for his ability and fairness in judging and handling people. This ability coupled with his overall broadcasting awareness, is the key to the station's continuing success.

Besides these achievements, Bill has been active in the Milwaukee Boy's Club, Muscular Dystrophy Drives, The March of Dimes, Community Chest, National Foundation and the new Milwaukee Symphony Orchestra, of which he is Vice President.

Bill's broadcast background includes roles as television and radio salesman, General Sales Manager, WCAN AM TV, Local Sales Manager, WXIX-TV, then a CBS O&O, and Vice President and General Manager of WISN-TV since September of 1958.

A busy man this Bill, and a BIG BIZ BOSS of the very best kind.

into their taxed income by giving the public information and news, and now also cutting into their take from advertising.

They are demanding that commercials be removed from the television outlets, and that the tax situation be equalized. Right now the Federal Association of German Publishers is raising its protests with the German Parliament.

And who are the federal statesmen not to get involved in the controversy? Television has become something of a political football as well. Recently a top television producer, Gert von Paczensky, was fired from his job turning out the news documentary titled "Panorama." It was asserted that he was a "left intellectual" and his programs were "too provocative." (He has already been hired by one of the top weekly news magazines as an editor).

But the Christian Democrats and Social Democrats in the federal parliament brought up the question of just how much power is wielded by him and by another leading television documentary maker, Jurgen Neven-du Mont, who turned out that controversial show about Breslau as it is today. It's claimed by the two leading political parties that such producers have too much freedom and too little censorship (that is, in showing what the political parties would like the public to see and believe).

Paczensky, it's charged by the politicians, was "unfair" in his interviews concerning the Katanga crisis, the airplane death of Hammerskjoeld, discussions about Algeria and the "Spiegel" crisis of the weekly news magazine, and in shows about East German politics.

So he's gotten the ax from the television scene.

But even with the viewers and all the others scrapping, it's sure that German television is going to get bigger and possibly even better.

And what's that about this being a television and radio issue?

Folks are so busy squabbling about the German television that they hardly note that the German radio is right there in the big bright success picture. Current count is 16,900,000 sets (about one for every three), and an income from commercials of about $14,000,000 last year.

They're still in secure solid business—and no one seems to be making trouble for them. Aren't they lucky?

fenders," Dick Van Dyke, "Dick Powell Theatre," "Perry Mason" and, just recently, "McHale's Navy" score ratings of 30 and over. At the same time commercial tv buys including "Empire (retitled "Big G" here), "Bob Hope Show," "Alfred Hitchcock Hour," "Checkmate," "Cheyenne" and "77 Sunset Strip" do similar for the independents. The 30-plus rating feat for an area as keenly contested as London is by no means insignificant.

On other and more open parts of the commercial web, American shows do even better against BBC competition. Sample of the standout ratings scored is a 56 by "Hawaiian Eye" which is put out on Mondays by Tyne-Tees-TV. "Bus Stop" on Scottish-TV often scores around a 45 against a sector on the competitor's drama output while "The Roaring 20s" on TWW also racks up ratings in the high forties.

Further shows from U.S. sources that are currently going the rounds like a "Sam Benedict," a "Have Gun, Will Travel," a "Comedy Hour," a "Bourbon Street Parade," and a "New Breed" all reckon to score above the magic 30 rating level against assorted opposition.

Illustrative of how UK programmers are saddling the "cornerstoning" power of certain material from U.S. vidfilmeries is the move by Granada to slot five American comedy shows in the 6:05 pm berth Monday to Friday. Success of this vital pre-prime time stratagem is now proved. "The Hathaways" on Mondays is pulling ratings of 25 against BBC's midweek newscasts slot. Even better are "Life With Father" on Tuesdays (32); "The Jetsons" on Wednesdays (35); "Tom Ewell Show" on Thursdays (29) and "Fasten Your Safety Belts" on Fridays (38).

Such pre-peak hour ratings give the station an across the board clean sweep into prime time.

cussion of the issues raised by news coverage, moderated by Ed Barrett, dean of Columbia's School of Journalism. Among the participants on the panel will be CBS News prexy Dick Salant, two southern editors, one of whom has been outspokenly critical of network coverage of racial issues, and a northern newspaper editor.

Reason other media of journalism were not included was that a broader discussion encompassing mags, books, etc., was considered unweildy. Program will mark Salant's first tv network debut and he will interrupt a vacation to make the broadcast.

Sherman's 'Nut,' Bennett's 'Ask,' Fontaine's 'Crazy,' Ive's 'Easy,' Cole's 'Summer' Top New LPs

ALLAN SHERMAN: "MY SON, THE NUT" (Warner Bros.). There are few disk parodists around who come close to Allan Sherman's sustaining power. This is his third package since breaking through late last year with his folk-singing burlesque and it, too, is of smash proportions. Included are wacky takeoffs of "You Came A Long Way From St. Louis," "C'Est Si Bon," "Heartaches," "Rag Mop," and "You're Getting To Be A Habit With Me," among others. The Sherman lyric antics hit suburbia, tv commercials, medics, the Playboy bunnies, automation and assorted other targets. Lou Busch arranged and conducted and also helped in updating some p.d. material. Perhaps the most spinnable of a generally funny repertoire is "Hello Muddah, Hello Fadduh," which is already scoring in the singles market and should serve as an attractive trailer for the whole package.

TONY BENNETT: "THIS IS ALL I ASK" (Columbia). With Gordon Jenkins' current ballad click, "This Is All I Ask," as the starting point, Tony Bennett sustains an effective romantic mood throughout a top-drawer repertoire that's sure to give this package a strong sales spread and lotsa programming time. Bennett's vocal mood gets added musical highlights through maestro. Ralph Burns' definitive downbeat. Among sides that rate programming pullouts are "True Blue Lou," "Tricks" (which has Chico Hamilton on drums), "Young and Foolish" and "Autumn In Rome."

"FRANK FONTAINE SINGS LIKE CRAZY" (ABC-Paramount). Following up his successful first vocal LP for ABC-Paramount, Frank Fontaine is now out with another straight singing effort, again concentrating on a familiar songalog in a slow tempo groove. Sid Feller and Bill Stegmeyer have arranged the tunes while the orchestra for the session is under the baton of Hugo Winterhalter. They give an excellent assist on projecting Fontaine's straightfoward, upcomplicated singing style which displays the LP's evergreens in simple and generally effective fashion. With the same promotional lift from tv partner Jackie Gleason, this set could duplicate the success of its prototype.

BURL IVES: "SINGIN' EASY" (Decca). The material for this delightful package has been culled by Burl Ives from the works of such Nashvilians as Hank Cochran, Bill Anderson, John D. Loudermilk, Harlan Howard, Boudleaux and Felice Bryant and Marijohn Wilkin, and such Tin Pan Alleyites as Hoagy Carmichael and Gordon Jenkins. The wide-ranged song hopper gives the set a good programming variety while Ives' consistantly easy and meaningful style provides them all with high spinning potential. Gordon Jenkins' "This Is All I Ask," done in recitation fashion, is a gripping tugger ballad. "It Comes And It Goes," but Ives also manages to put some fun into the grooves as with 'Home James," "Saskatoon, Saskatchewan," and "My Chicken Ran 'Way To The Bush."

NAT KING COLE: "THOSE LAZY-HAZY-CRAZY DAYS OF SUMMER" (Capitol). As sure as there will always be a summer each year, it seems that there will always be new albums by Nat King Cole. In this latest waxing, arranged and conducted by Ralph Carmichael, the singer has turned out a happy hot weather package of venerable tunes often backed by a chorus and bouncy arrangements which feature such instruments as banjo, clipped-tempo drums, etc. withal, it's a fun session which Cole imbues with a light, bright touch that puts the familiar material across in a fresh and pleasant fashion. The LP should garner lotsa attention from programmers and customers alike.

ROY HAMILTON: "WARM SOUL" (MGM). After a long hitch on the Epic label, Roy Hamilton debuts on MGM with a simple yet forceful ballad style that's worked so well for him in the past. Marty Manning's conducting-arranging sets the muscial mood which gives Hamilton good opportunities to display his warmly effective vocal stuff. 'It's Just A Matter Of Time," "The Same One", and "Guess Who" are some of the newer items that take hold, while "A Sunday Kind Of Love," "The Masquerade Is Over," "It's Too Soon To Know" and "Crying In The Chapel" are some of the oldies that should get new turntable movement because of Hamilton's handling.

DAKOTA STATON: "FROM DAKOTA WITH LOVE" (United Artists). For Dakota Staton's first LP excursion under United Artists' banner (she was a longtime Capitol pactee), disk producer George Wein has lined up a topflight assortment of sidemen to wing her in. They do it with potent musical power, and her vocalistics don't let them down, either. Helping her on the musical end are pianist-arranger Norman Simmons with Sonny Wesley on bass, Grady Tate on drums and saxophonists Billy Root and Dan Turner. Other instrumentalists come in occasionally and Miss Staton works with 'em all for standout results. Among the classics which take a new spinning hold in Miss Staton's hands are "I Let A Song Go Out Of My Heart," "Massachusetts," 'Supper Time," "Sleepy Time Down South" and "Between 18th & 19th On Chestnut Street."

BUD & TRAVIS: "NATURALLY" (Liberty). Frank Loesser and Harold Arlen & Truman Capote have been put into the folk bag by Bud & Travis, and surprising enough, their works fit. Loesser is represented with "Summertime Love" from "Greenwillow" and "Joey, Joey, Joey" from "The Most Happy Fellow" and the Arlen-Capote contribution is "I Never Have Seen Snow" from "House of Flowers." The duo brings proper folk touches to these Broadway originals and gives the package a good palaver peg for the programmers. Rest of the material is more orthodox folk stuff, and good, too, especially "Ah Nora, War Is Over," "Guadalajara," "Red Clay Country" and "In The Hills of Shiloh."

BENT FABRIC: "THE HAPPY PUPPY" (Atco). Bent Fabric's instrumental menagerie began a couple of years ago with "Alley Cat" and he's continuing his highly seasoned piano flavorings with "The Happy Puppy," another delightful item which titles this package. His "Alley Cat" style is also evidenced in "Chicken Feed." His bright and breezy pianistics also do a lot to add programming possibility for such oldies as "C'Est Si Bon," "Love Is Just Around The Corner," "That Certain Party" as well as the European click, "Zero Zero."

FRANKIE AVALON: "CLEOPATRA PLUS 13 OTHER GREAT HITS" (Chancellor). Frankie Avalon's "Cleopatra" bears no resemblance to the one created on films by 20th Century-Fox, but it shouldn't matter at all to his young fans. It's a song salute to an ideal femme. Just like his "Venus" click, and that's what counts when it comes to juve appreciation. His "13 Other Great Hits" may not be as "great" as the album title implies but they do have some okay sounds to meet Coke set requirements. The "Sleeping Beauty" ballad is especially food for turntable play and the programmers will probably find good response to "True, True Love," "Who Else But You," "The Summer of '61" and "Welcome Home."

"ALL-STAR HOOTENANNY" (Riverside). Cashing in on the stronger-than-ever folk craze, Riverside Records has compiled a plater of selections by some top-rated folkniks which offers a nice selection of material and performances in this genre. Included are Bob Gibson, Sonny Terry, Oscar Brand, Cynthia Gooding, the Staple Singers (of gospel music fame), Odetta, Billy Faier, Memphis Slim, John Lee Hooker and others. Their performances and material all register on this compendium which should fare well on the folknik market. The performances have the nice ethnic feel many of the folk lovers dig. In addition, the collection has been put together into an attractive package that should get some action.

Top Singles Of The Week

(The 'Best Bets' of This Week's 100-Plus Releases)

ROGER WILLIAMS . . . . . LOOK AGAIN
(Kapp) . . . . . Danke Schoen

Roger Wiliams' "Look Again" (United Artists-Fairlane), from the "Irma La Douce" score, is a lilting melodic entry dished up very attractively here in a choral and pianistic slice. "Danke Schoen" (Roosevelt†), a German import which has been racking up a stack of disks, gets another winning workout here.*

ROBERT GOULET . . . . . BELIEVE IN ME
(Columbia) . . . . . How Very Special You Are

Robert Goulet's "Believe In Me" (Dymor) gives this fine singer a big class ballad to dig into and he delivers it with a potent commercial attack. "How Very Special You Are" (Chesnick*) is another well-written number tastefully handled.*

JIMMY HAYES-SOUL SURFERS . . . DOWN TO THE BEACH
(Imperial) . . . . . Summer Surfin'

Jimmy Hayes & The Soul Surfers' "Down To The Beach" (Travis†) registers as a strong contender in the surfing idiom with its driving beat and an elemental lyric which this combo projects colorfully. "Summer Surfin'" (Travis†) is more of the same; but in a sweeter ballad mood.

LUCKY STARR . . . . . MULE SKINNER BLUES
(Dot) . . . . . I've Been Everywhere

Lucky Starr's "Mule Skinner Blues" (Peer International†) clicks as a bright country-flavored slice delivered with some fanciful vocal flourishes by this performer. "I've Been Everywhere" (Hill & Range†) is a fine piece of country material dished up in double-quick tongue-twisting style.

BERNA-DEAN . . . . . SLEEPNESS NIGHTS
(Imperial) . . . . . Hello

Berna-Dean's "Sleepless Nights" (Travis†) showcases this striking blues stylist in an arresting ballad which could catch on with the hipper elements among the jean set. "Hello" (Travis†) is a more routine conception.

DAMITA JO . . . . . MELANCHOLY BABY
(Mercury) . . . . . In The Dark

Damita Jo's "Melancholy Baby" (Vogel-Shapiro, Bernstein) turns up this oldie in a hard rocking slice that makes it barely recognizable, but it has the kind of bounce which the juves want. "In The Dark" (Duchess*) is a fine blues entry that this songstress projects with respect for the jazz tradition.*

* * *

GARNET MIMMS-ENCHANTERS . . . . . CRY BABY
(United Artists) . . . . . Don't Change Your Heart

Garnet Mimms & The Enchanters' "Cry Baby" (Rittenhouse-Mellin†) registers as a rocking ballad with a good lyric and an unusual sound which should garner plenty of spins. "Don't Change Your Heart" (Rittenhouse†) is a slow-tempoed tune that gives this lead singer a good chance to show off his wide-ranging pipes.

BILLY DUKE . . . . . ECHOES
(Capitol) . . . . . Best Man

Billy Duke's "Echoes" (Damian) comes across as a high pleasing entry with a polished sound suitable for all levels of programming. "Best Man" (Quarter*) is a fair entry with a cliched lyric idea.*

DICK LORY . . . . . THERE'S GONNA BE A FIGHT
(Liberty) . . . . . Crazy Arms

Dick Lory's "There's Gonna Be A Fight" (Metric†) comes up with an original idea for the Coke set who'll appreciate the sentiment and the clever arrangement. "Crazy Arms" (Champion-Pamer†) is another rocking item which packs a hefty punch via this singer's stylish delivery.

LINDA HOPKINS . . . . . LITTLE BY LITTLE (Brunswick) . . . . . Lonely People Do Foolish Things

Linda Hopkins' "Little By Little" (Savoy-Hill & Range†) comes across as a rousing, rollicking number belted in powerful style by this blues songstress. "Lonely People Do Foolish Things" (Valencia) changes pace with a restrained torch ballad, also packing a strong punch.*

PATSY CLINE . . . . . FADED LOVE
(Decca) . . . . . Blue Moon of Kentucky

Patsy Cline's "Faded Love" (Bob Wills†) gives the late country songstress a good ballad with a familiar type of lyric which gets fresh values out of a simple, effective delivery. "Blue Moon of Kentucky" (Peer International†) is a routine idea with doubtful pop chances.

BARBARA LEWIS . . . . . STRAIGHTEN UP YOUR HEART
(Atlantic) . . . . . If You Love Her

Barbara Lewis' "Straighten Up Your Heart" (McLaughlin†) is a standout ballad slice by a fine young songstress with a distinctive style which is right down the contemporary groove. "If You Love Her" (McLaughlin†) is another arresting ballad entry with good chances.

EILEEN BARTON . . . . . THE EARTH STOOD STILL
(20th Century-Fox) . . . . . Patty Cake-Patty Cake

Eileen Barton's "The Earth Stood Still" (Hollyhill) shapes up as an offbeat ballad with a lyric that'll draw the teenagers via this unusual arrangement. It gives this songstress a chance to come back into the disk sweepstakes. "Patty-Patty Cake" (Hollyhill*) reverts to the novelty groove which this songstress handles very well.*

THE BELLSHANNY MEN
BILLY DON'T PLAY THE BANJO
(Contempo) . . . . . Hi Ro Je Rum

The Bellshanny Men's "Billy Don't Play The Banjo" (Cherrybell) introduces a new folksinging quintet with a tragic folk saga which could catch on big. "Hi Ro Je Rum" (Genl*) is a bright up-tempo version of a familiar traditional number.* — Herm.

DISKERIES' BIG TUNER STAKE

Music Dealers Buoyant at NAMM Meet Despite Chide on Sales Policies

Chicago, July 30.

Music merchandisers left last week's July 20-25 annual National Assn. of Music Merchants confab in a buoyant mood despite a scolding in re their retailing methods by ad exec E. B. Weiss and an admonotion from a Federal Communications Commissioner that UHF is just around the video corner and will require special distribution and servicing. Attendance at the parley was 130,000, up 32% from last year.

What made the music seller particularly happy was an exchange of information that brought out that home music instruments are fast replacing Scrabble and Mah Jong as leisure-time lures for Americans.

Bongo drum sales are booming, the folk music trend is boosting guitar sales to their highest levels, and electric organs are heading for another smash year and will probably account for the largest single dollar segment in the industry. (Nearly twice as many pianos were sold last year than organs, but the organs average about three times the price of a piano.)

Major Improvements

Not a great many radically new instruments were shown at the convention, but there were major technical improvements in nearly all fields. Among the new items at the show were a miniaturized transistor radio so small that it can fit into a vest pocket, a tape recorder (Roberts Electronics) which can play hi-fi music at the slow speed of 1-7-8 inches per second, and a metronome which beats time in three different rhythms at the same time.

Perhaps more than any previous year, a sizeable share of the show was devoted to imports, particularly Japan, Germany, Holland, and Switzerland.

Guest speaker Weiss, a frequent and vociferous critic of outmoded selling methods, gave cold comfort to the music men despite the positive profit prospects. He said that a poll of those who attended the convention showed that 90% came to see the new merchandise and only 10% gave new merchandising methods as their reason for coming.

"In an age in which cultural progress is in a stage of explosive growth," he emphasized, "you continue to live, think and function within the brassy, irresponsible traditions of Tin Pan Alley."

Urges Industry 'Czar'

He advocated a "total industry" concept, with a "czar" at the top and a top-level association that would bring unity, grand strategy and statesmanship to the industry. He asserted that the supreme council shoud expand the role that business corpoations play as music angels in civic symphony orchestras, cultural centres, community orchestras, amateur bands and musicales.

Weiss also urged that the music

Cameo-Parkway 6-Mos. Net Ending June 30 Dips To $422,640, Down 20%

Cameo-Parkway Records' sales dropped 33% and earnings declined 20% for the sixmonth period ending June 30, 1963. The label declared its fourth quarterly divident last week of 10c per share to stockholders of record Aug. 15, payable Sept. 10.

According to Bernie Lowe, C-P president, sales and earnings fell because 1962 was an unusually good year for the company due to the popularity of Twist records. The Twist disks accounted for 52% of Cameo's sales during the first six months of '62, as compared to only 4% in '63.

Sales for '63 were $2,588,062. The '62 figure was $3,896,341. Net profit for '63 was $422,640 compared with $530,431 of the previous year. Earnings per share for '63 were 70c and for '62, 88c.

'Heart in Frisco' Album Nabs Bennett Gold Disk

Tony Bennet has copped a gold record award for his LP, "I Left My Heart In San Francisco." A gold record, as certified by the Record Industry Assn. of America, marks a sales rackup of $1,000,000.

The LP was released by Columbia Records in July, 1962. The title song of the album was initially released as a single and copped two Grammy awards from the National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences (NARAS). Presentations were made to Bennett for "Record of the Year" and "Best Solo Vocal Performance—Male."

Juke Exemption Repealer Facing Battle in House

Washington, July 30.

The jukebox exemption repealer bill has been cleared by the House Judiciary Committee and now goes to the House floor where in the words of one of its backers it faces "one hell of a battle."

Meeting in closed session, the Judiciary Committee approved the bill by a 19-13 vote which cut across party lines. A motion to send the bill back to the Copyright Subcommittee was defeated by voice vote.

Reversing predictions and history, the full committee adopted the subcommittee's recommendation to pass the repealer bill of Rep. Emanuel Celler (D.-N.Y.) The measure exempts owners of businesses where jukes are installed from infringement penalties.

The subcommittee in June unexpectedly approved repealing the 1909 exemption, its decision apparently hinging on the turnabout of its chairman Rep. Edwin Willis (D.-La.) who had earlier backed compromise legislation.

The House battle will in large part hinges on Willis' ability and willingness to lineup fellow Southerners for the legislation. To date Willis hasn't been overly enthusiastic for repeal, regarding it instead as the easiest way out of the juke imbroglio.

Joining Willis in the House fight will be Celler, responsible for lining up Democrats, and Rep. John Lindsay (R.-N.Y.), who will attempt to garner Republican support for the measure.

BERNIE SOLOMON BUYS COUNTERPOINT DISKERY

Bernard C. Solomon has taken over Counterpoint Records, a Coast label. In revamping the Counterpoint operation, he has acquired the complete catalog of the Esoteric label and plans to be closely associated with Everest Records, which he also owns.

His initial plans are for 14 new classical releases on the Counterpoint label which will contain the same type of material as has appeared under the Counterpoint banner in the past.

Included in the new releases will be the Sistine Choir of the Vatican with Sacred Religious Music, French contemporary music with Milhaud and Poulenc conducting some of their own works, a baroque music concert featuring works by Vivaldi, Marcello and Quantz and premiere releases of certain works by Mozart, Telemann, Haydn and Bartok.

In addition, Counterpoint has added the Dessoff Choirs of New York and the Vocal Arts Ensemble to its roster.

$2,097,000 RIDING ON 8 MUSICALS

By MIKE GROSS

Although two of Columbia Records' top diskers, Barbra Streisand and Steve Lawrence, are set for starring assignments in Broadway legituners this coming season, the label will only have one of them in the groove for the original cast album workover. It has Lawrence in "What Makes Sammy Run?" but it has lost Miss Streisand to Capitol Records for "Funny Girl."

Miss Streisand, who signed with Columbia last year had an "out" clause for the original cast album of "Funny Girl," which was in the preparation stage then. She hit the disk bigtime with her first LP for Col and her followup album is scheduled for release in September.

Capitol moved in on "Funny Girl" with an investment in the show. Although Cap's stake was not revealed, it's understood that the show's producers, David Merrick and Ray Stark, were looking for half the angeling from a diskery which would bring Capitol's ante to at least $200,000.

(Some five diskeries, either on their own or through associated companies, will have $2,097,000 riding on eight musicals projected over the upcoming season.)

"Funny Girl," which is based on the early life of Fanny Brice, has a score by Jule Styne and Bob Merrill. The newly-formed Chappell-Styne firm will publish the score. Book for the tuner is by Isobel Lennart, and Bob Fosse will handle the direction and choreography. The show is scheduled to preem in New York on Feb. 13 at the Winter Garden.

Contractual Conflicts

Contractual conflicts are not new to the cast album field. Probably the most notable was the case of RCA Victor vs. Decca on Irving Berlin's "Call Me Madam." Victor had the original cast rights to the tuner but Decca kept the binds on its pactee, Ethel Merman, who was the show's star. Result was that Victor came out with an "original Broadway cast album" sans Miss Merman (Dinah Shore sang Miss Merman's songs in the package) and Decca issued its own "Madam" package featuring the star.

Sometimes the diskeries cooperate with each other as in the case of "Destry Rides Again." The tuner starred Andy Griffith, under contract to Capitol, and Decca had the original cast album rights. Cap gave Griffith a release to cut the "Destry" package under the Decca banner.

And, sometimes the diskeries don't cooperate—as in the case of "Oh Captain." The original cast album rights to the tuner belonged to Columbia Records but Abbe Lane, featured in the show, was under contract to Victor. Victor refused to release Miss Lane for the package, so Col cut the original cast album set without her and used Eileen Rodgers to sing Miss Lane's songs.

Put 150 G into "Sammy"

Col's acquisition of the cast album rights to "What Makes Sammy Run?" also comes through an investment in the production. The diskery has put up $150,000. Also joining in the financing of "Sammy" is Music Publishers Holding Corp., Warner Bros. music publishing combine, with a $50,000 investment. MPHC will publish the score which was written by Ervin Drake. The Budd and Stuart Schulberg adaptation will be directed by Arthur Storch, and Matt Mattox will be the choreographer. Joe Cates is producing, with Robert Weiner as coproducer.

Another Warner Bros investment on Broadway this season will be the $25,000 allotment to bring in "Spoon River Anthology." The money was put up by Pepamar Music Corp., a firm jointly owned by Warner Bros. and Peter, Paul & Mary, folk singing group on the Warner Bros. label. Columbia will do the cast set and Peter, Paul & Mary are expected to record

'La Hora' Ticks Off First Prize at Spanish Tunefest

Madrid, July 30.

"La Hora" (The Hour), described by lyric writer Miguel Portoles and composer Selles, as a slow rock, was awarded the 100,000 peseta ($1,700) first prize at the Fifth Spanish Song Festival in Benidorm. Jurors picked "La Hora Tiene dos Caras" (Two-Faced Moon), "Cuando y Donde" (When and How?), the Twist tune "Chavala" (Baby Girl) and "Suename" (Dream of Me) for runner-up awards.

Main song interpretation prize went to Alberto, who presented "La Hora." Fina Galicia, Rafael Mendoza and Rosalia also won trophies for song delivery. The annual three-day event, sponsored by the R.E.M. radio chain, was staged this year in the Benidorm Bull Ring. Attendance rose from 12,000 on the opening night to 20,000 for closing-night presentations at which the audience designated tune and croon victors.

Eydie-Steve-Ken's 20th Diskery Tie As Indie Prods.

GLG Productions, firm owned by Eydie Gorme, Steve Lawrence and Kenneth Greengrass, has set an indie disk production deal with 20th Century-Fox Records. The agreement also calls for Lawrence to produce an album and singles. The singer is currently tied to Columbia Records but the indie disk production deal won't affect his performer status there.

The first GLG property to go into the 20th hopper is the soundtrack album of the Embassy pic, "Light Fantastic." The score for the pic was written by Joe Liebman, exec veepee at Macy's-Bamberger's, and is being published by GLG's Mayana Music, an ASCAP affil. Pic is scheduled for release in September.

Also on GLG's agenda for the 20th label are singles by Ron Murphy; a baseball album by ex-ballplayer-sportscaster Joe Garagiola, and an LP by Mayo Muir, who recently bowed on the United Artists label in a hootenanny LP with The Highwaymen.

On GLG's real estate end, the firm is readying for the opening of its Kings Alley Hotel in St. Croix, Virgin Islands, which is set for Aug. 15.

Meantime, Miss Gorme and Lawrence are continuing their performing activities. They open today (Wed.) at the Sands in Las Vegas.

RETIRED BEN SELVIN BUSIER THAN EVER

In retirement, Ben Selvin reports that he's busier than ever. He's just taken over as sole selling agency and U. S. distributor for the Chappell Recorded Music Library and set up Ben Selvin Music Ltd. in London with Chappell. He's also continuing as consultant to Top O' The Fair at the N. Y. World's Fair and with his real estate activities in Long Island and Pennsylvania.

Selvin, who hit RCA Victor's retirement age of 65 last April, left the company after a 10-year hitch with its custom record division. He had been in the music/record business over 58 years as violinist, bandleader, radio director, professional manager and recording manager.

His music/record biz career was marked in the Congressional Record on April 2 when Congressman Stevan B. Derounian read Selvin's bio into the Record.

Orch Leaders of Greater N. Y. Bids For Harmony with AFM & Local 802

The Orchestra Leaders of Greater N. Y. is waving an olive branch in front of the American Federation of Musicians and Local 802 as a step to avoid a new legal onslaught in the fall. The orch association has sent out a 17-point document to the officers of 683 AFM locals across the country asking for a "peace conference" in lieu of court action.

The document points out that the high cost of litigation could be avoided if the union officers and attorneys "sit down with us to discuss ways and means to make law suits unnecessary by correcting intra-union abuses, by the union to the sound policy of collective bargaining concerning wages, working conditions and all the related problems of the musical industry."

The association warns that if there is no peace move there will be additional court challenges. The group also asserts that this time the AFM and New York's Local 802, in particular, will be attacked by the bandleaders for alleged price fixing, restraining competition by conspiracy and otherwise violating Federal antitrust statutes.

So far the union has been taking a court beating on the issues. Among them are: 1) The illegality of the 802 single engagement plan; 2) the illegality of the 10% traveling surcharge; 3) the illegality of 802's 1½% tax; 4) the status of leaders as actual employers; 5) the fraudulent character of 802's "Form B Contract"; 6) the illegality of 802's expulsion of sideman Milton Farowitz for publicity assailing the now-illegal taxes in a circular; and 7) the illegality of interference by the AFM and 802 with the engagement of orch leader Angie Bond by the Metropole Cafe (N. Y.).

According to the document, all the orchestra leaders want is "to be recognized as employers, to have the union agree to barga collectively with them, to have established contracts, and to have the AFM and its affiliates call off the harassment and economic boycott that have been aimed at all orchestra leaders in recent years."

Because many local union officials are on vacation now, the orchestra leaders have agreed to extend their deadline for replies another 10 days or two weeks before ordering their attorney to proceed with the antitrust actions and other court cases.

BG's Impresario Debut Toots Up $15,000 for His Hometown, Stamford, Ct.

Stamford, Conn., July 30.

"Benny Goodman Presents," marking BG's debut as impresario-performer, went into the books last week a top combination of showmanship, musicianship and hometown citizenship.

With the Stamford Museum and Nature Center as beneficiary, Stamford squire Goodman set up a series of four concerts at 970-seat Rippowam High School presenting a succession of guest names appearing on a reciprocal basis—Isaac Stern, Rudolf Serkin and his pianist son Peter, Morton Gould, the Berkshire Quartet, Dave Brubeck Quartet, harpist Marcel Grandjany, trumpeter Bobby Hackett and soprano Benita Valente.

With a $4.50 top for single concerts, the gross—two of the attractions required extra seating on the stage—topped $15,000, which is shared by the museum and the non-profit Rockrimmon Festival Foundation.

Goodman, who says he arranged the concerts as a way of focusing the area's interest in good music, stated he's so pleased with the initial experience that he's looking forward to an encore.

some of the "Spoon River" songs on the WB label.

"Spoon River," a play adapted from Edgar Lee Masters' book, has folk songs by Naomi Caryl Hirschorn and Charles Aidman. Latter also adapted the book, is the show's director and a member of the cast. Cates and Weiner are producing this one, too.

Col's $150,000 "Sammy" investment is its second angeling fling of the season. The other is a $375,000 stake (with a provision for a 20% overcall) in Meredith Willson's "Here's Love." Tuner, an adaptation of the 20th-Fox pic, "Miracle On 34th Street," began its out-of-town tryout Monday (29). The Broadway bow is scheduled for Oct. 3 at the Shubert Theatre. The principals include Janis Paige, Craig Stevens, Laurence Naismith and Fred Gwynne. Stuart Ostrow is producer-director; Michael Kidd is the choreographer.

CBS' 297 G 'Supper'

Another original Broadway cast album in the Columbia hopper this season will be "The Girl Who Came To Supper," a musicalization of "The Sleeping Prince" by Noel Coward (score) and Harry Kurnitz (book). Col is getting the album rights by virtue of $297,000 investment (in the $450,000 budget) by its parent company, CBS. It's recalled that Columbia got the cast rights to "My Fair Lady," which turned out to be 3,500,000-plus LP seller, through CBS' investment in the production.

"Supper" is being produced by Herman Levin, who also produced "Lady." In the leads are Jose Ferrer and Florence Henderson. The show goes into rehearsal Aug. 13.

RCA Victor, meantime, is already at work on three musical properties for the coming season. They are the Mary Martin starrer, "Jennie," with a score by Howard Dietz & Arthur Schwartz; Rick Besoyan's "The Student Gypsy" and "One Hundred Ten In The Shade," the musicalization of 'The Rainmaker" with a score by Tom Jones & Harvey Schmidt. Andy Wiswell, who recently joined Victor's artists & repertoire staff, is in Boston this week to lay the groundwork for the grooving of "Jennie."

ABC-Paramount is also in the original cast album sweepstakes this season with three legituners. They are "A Girl To Remember," "The Ghost Goes West" and "Mrs. A." The three tuners are going to ABC-Par through a $1,000,000 investment by its parent company, American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, in On-Stage Productions, the Lester Osterman-Jule Styne firm.

"Zenda," the Alfred Drake starrer which opens in L.A. Aug. 5, is still up for grabs. It's expected to be on the road 15 weeks before its Broadway bow so the diskeries are taking a wait-and-see attitude. The tuner is an adaptation of "The Prisoner of Zenda" with music by Vernon Duke and lyrics by Martin Charnin, Sid Kuller and Leonard Adelson. Also open for a diskery takeover is the musicalization of "The Matchmaker" by Jerry Herman and Michael Stewart. It's scheduled for an out-of-town tryout in late fall.

Music Dealers

industry takes a positive hand in establishing music instruction standards, in stimulating research in electronic music, and in leading television from the "abyss of the moronic" to its "grand cultural destiny." He also recommended industry scholarships to talented young musicians, and said that the area of senior citizens was virtually untapped as a market.

Finally, he said, the small independent music merchant will inevitably be squeezed out by the chains and manufacturer - owned outlets. He recommended that the indie stores band together in co-ops. "The independent retailer in mass-consumed lines must become a giant retailer," he stressed. "He can acquire that stature only by surrendering most of his status as an independent."

Eldred S. Byerly of Peoria, Ill., was elected president for the coming year, F. D. Streep Jr. of Orlando, Fla., was named veepee, Charles M. Faulhaber of Madison, Wisc., was tapped for secretary, and Robert J. McDowell of St. Louis was elected treasurer.

CHI TOOTERS' RACIAL DISCORD

Montreal's 3d Annual Jazz Fest Rolls Aug. 12 With Solid B.O. Take

Montreal, July 30.

Jazz purists will have a field day here Aug. 12-15 with a series of concerts featuring combos from the U. S., Europe and Montreal. Series' formal name is the Third Annual Jazz Festival, which is part of the Montreal Festivals, now in its 28th season and running almost the entire month of August. All performances will be at Loew's Theatre, and indications point to a solid boxoffice.

Fest will kick off Monday, Aug. 12, with Art Blakey & the Jazz Messengers. There'll be two performances at 6:15 and 9:15 p.m. Tuesday, with the Rene Thomas Trio and the Blakey group in the early concert and Lee Gagnon's orch with vocalist Carmen McRae in the later concert.

Wednesday will feature the Rene Thomas Trio and the Duke Ellington Orch at 6:15, with Ellington repeating in the 9:15 spot. Thursday's early show will have the Nick Ayoub Quintet and the J. J. Johnson Quartet, and at 9:15 there'll be the Pierre Leduc Trio, Coleman Hawkins and the Martial Solal Trio.

Most significant about this jazz fest is not only the manner in which it has become a fave of Montreal's cultural milieu, but perhaps more important that the membership of the planning committee is made up of top-level members of outfits like the Canadian Broadcasting Corp., who often have been accused of thinking more in terms of longhair than crewcut.

No question now that jazz in its relatively "pure" form has become part of the "in" culture for that milieu of avant garde which feels that modern music—progressive or otherwise—is a necessary part of a program such as that organized by the more conservative Montreal Festivals Society whose sense of experimentation had previously been disciplined by the fear of b.o. flops.

However, now that the Society's Film Festival has proved itself, and in the previous two years, the jazz fest ditto, it looks now that the musical modernists will have no difficulty in selling this kind of attraction in the years to come.

Nat King Cole, on Scot 1-Nighter Tour, Would Ride That 'Freedom Bus'

Glasgow, July 30.

Nat King Cole, on a two-show one-nighter at the 3,000-seat Odeon Theatre here, praised the Hollywood actors' plan for a "freedom bus" into America's Deep South.

Emphasizing he would be willing to join such a bus, the singer said: "I have read about the plan by Marlon Brando and several other Hollywood personalities to take a bus into the South to help break the segregation prejudice.

"I am prepared to do my bit. Brando is a guy who is going out for what he believes and, obviously, for what I believe."

Singer, accompanied by the Ted Heath orch, gave two 85-minute performances, and scored with his polished repertoire, being joined at end of second-house act by fans from the audience.

Promoter of the 10-city concert tour, Vic Lewis, said: "I have been very disappointed by the Glasgow response. I didn't realize this was the Glasgow Fair holidays. Out of a possible two-show audience of 6,000, we have only got 4,000, and I have lost more than $3,000 on the visit."

Resort's Curfew After PP&M Riot

Old Orchard Beach, Me. July 30.

The town fathers slapped a 10 p.m. curfew for beach parties at this resort town after a hootenanny which saw more than 500 young enthusiasts create a small riot here July 20.

It all started following a sellout performance by Peter, Paul & Mary at the Palace Ballroom. When their last show was completed most of the audience flowed out onto the nearby beach for the impromptu festival. Nearby residents called the police and the exhuberant folksingophiles were hustled off.

NAT'L CONCERT MANS ITS GOTHAM RAMPARTS

National Concert & Artists Corp. and its Civic Concerts Service are not united in a Manhattan office. This completes the decision to abandon the impossible idea of using Evanston, Illinois as headquarters for a concert service.

NCAC had been sliding in recent years, under and after Luben Vichy, the Met singer who became its owner for a time. He in turn sold to Summy-Birchard, a music and text book publishing house headed by David K. Sengstack.

Fran Fitzpatrick White is now general manager of the NCAC in N.Y., Jule Foster is Director of Civic. Muriel Francis, who long held the N.Y. fort alone as artists manager, continues in that role with Walter Price as aide.

Field Personnel includes Roy Williams as Chief Concert Consultant, Benita Shields, Ruth Riggs and Janet Sprout.

Navajos' Oil Wampum Building 350G Aud

Albuquerque, July 30.

Officials of the Navajo Indian tribe last weekend broke ground in Shiprock, Ariz., on a giant community center, which will feature concert auditorium, bowling alley and swimming pool, among other things.

Navajo Tribe, located in the four corners area of New Mexico, Arizona, Utah and Colorado, has become wealthy following discovery of oil on the reservation in recent years.

This has resulted in the Navajos acquiring more of the white man's culture. In recent seasons, tribe officials booked such names as Liberace, Mahalia Jackson and Guy Lombardo in their old community centre.

New facility will be built in phases. First portion, to cost $350,000, will include the auditorium seating 3,100 persons. Construction has already started.

NEGRO LOCAL 208 WON'T INTEGRATE

By MORRY ROTH

Chicago, July 30.

Racial integration of the two Chi musicians locals, which appeared to be a certainty three months ago, has mired down in bog of counter-accusations, with vested financial interests the primary problem and some implications of black nationalism on the part of Negro Local 208.

In a reversal of the usual pattern, it is Local 208 that is dragging its heels, and the big (and predominantly white) Local 10 that is pressing for a merger. Barney Richards, Local 10 prexy since the first of the year, is, to risk a pun, finding that the issues in segregation are not all black and white.

(Chicago is the only one of the three major music centres with separate union locals: New York has been integrated for several decades and Los Angeles for more than 10 years.)

The issue first came into sharp focus about three months ago when 100 members of Local 208 dramatically marched down to Local 10 headquarters and were enrolled in that formerly all-white local. Since then another 50 have joined the original 100.

The partial integration took place three months after Richards took over the prexyship of Local 10 following the 30-year reign of James C. Petrillo. Richards, who lived much of his life in a racially mixed neighborhood, and who, as a working musician, played with mixed combos, strongly believes in the merger of the two locals—for the sake of practicality if for no other reason. Petrillo had no strong feelings on the matter and was willing to let the 60-year separate-but-equal status of the two locals stand.

Dual Membership

Harry Gray, head of the Negro local, made no comment when bandleader Red Saunders spearheaded the integration by leading the parade down to Local 10 for enrollment. All of the 150 who signed with Local 10 have also maintained their membership in the Negro local.

At that time Saunders advised his group to keep their Local 208 cards and to pay dues to both locals. He advocated this, he said, so that the changees could continue to keep working iwthin the Negro body for further integration and also so that they might not lose any jobs that might come through Local 208.

Richards says that he phoned Gray shortly thereafter and asked for a conference, which took several weeks to arrange. When they finally met, Gray said that he was afraid that the Negro local's officers, professional staff and treasury would be "eaten up" by Local 10.

The Negro local has 1,300 members, 12 officers and office workers, about $350,000 in its treasury and a 31-apartment income building on Chicago's south side. Local 10 has about 30 employees, 11,000 members on its rolls, and, with some $5,000,000 in its treasury, is believed to be the richest union local in the country.

A week ago, Gray sent notices to all members of his local that it was "against the law" to belong to both locals and that dues would not be accepted from musicians known to have signed with Local 10. Richards called the national office of the American Federation of Musicians and got a letter from it that no such rule exists.

Futile Meetings

Richards and Gray met again at the national AFM convention in Miami in the spring, at which time members of the national executive board urged them to work things out. The meetings came to no avail. According to Richards, since the Miami meeting Local 208 has increasingly discriminated against the Negro musicians who joined Local 10 by passing out the

United Recordings Spinning Up Peak Volume Despite 'Low Overhead Boys'

By JOE X. PRICE

Hollywood, July 30.

"What's all this talk about our not collecting bills?" fumed Toni Parri, secretary-treasurer of United Recordings in Hollywood. He was referring to rumor flying for several weeks certain diskeries are not squaring off with United for use of facilities.

"This is ridiculous," Parri declared. "In the first place we maintain control of the masters. Do you think we'd allow these alleged record companies to get possession of their masters so that they could release their product at their convenience if they were into us for money?"

Citing a 60% dollar volume increase for 1963 over 1962, Parri attributes the rise chiefly to the new Las Vegas studio United opened June 15. "Business is great!" he contends. "We're having the best year in our history."

The Las Vegas division of United Recordings is a one studio operation. It can accommodate up to 40 musicians and is equipped with three echo chambers. Branch studio has facilities for editing as well as recording and can put out one, two, three and four-track balls of wax.

Vegas Plant Thriving

"It took off much faster than we'd anticipated," Parri added. "We started building the Vegas operation on May 5, and six weeks later, it opened. We've already had to send reinforcements up there —two extra engineers, Dave Rogers and Bowen David."

Some of the more luminous lacquer lights that have already utilized the new Las Vegas facility have been Paul Anka, Liberace, the De Castro Sisters and, skedded to cut this week, Johnny Mathis.

"We feel the Las Vegas market has tremendous potential because of the amount of talent there," Parri avers. But even without the Vegas operation, he figures there would have been "about a 15% dollar volume increase over 1962, anyway; business is good."

Comparing the Hollywood recording picture against that of New York, Parri asserts "the one thing we lag behind in here as against New York is the lack of national advertising agencies. Most recording for the national accounts is done in New York.

"However, as far as the record business in general is concerned, I think we can fairly well match what they put out in New York. Don't forget, out here you have Capitol, Dot and Liberty to name a few. These are fast growing companies which don't do a thing out of New York. Actually, the only majors that we haven't done any recording for are Columbia and RCA.

14 Philly Batoners Form Central Booking Combine With Key City Branches

Philadelphia, July 30.

Music Associates Inc., a combine of 14 Philadelphia area bandsmen, has been formed by maestroes Bobby Roberts and Jay Jerome, two of the town's vet batoneers. Group will specialize in music for parties and functions, but plans to expand into field of act and revues.

Marty Portnoy is a partner in the organization, which is setting up branches in Pittsburgh, Baltimore and Washington. In addition to Roberts, Jerome and Portnoy, orch leaders include Eddie De Luca, Jackie Gold, Stu Harris, Buddy Herman, Lou King, Ronnie Lewis, Len Martin, Joe Scott, Eddie Shaw, Eddie Silk and Mel Star.

"The idea is to give the area one big central source of music and entertainment. We're going into the party business with both feet," Roberts explained. "But while the bookings will be handled through one office, each band retains its own trade name and identity as a competitor with the others."

jobs to others. The Negro local has a sort of "hiring hall" method of distributing jobs that come through its office. Local 10 sends a directory of its members to anyone who inquires.

What Richards considers the most blatant violation of union precepts occurred when the Graemere Hotel on the south side defaulted on the payment of $1,600 to Local 10 musicians who played in the nitery in that hotel. Richards registered a complaint with the AFM national board, but a few weeks later the hotel signed a contract with Local 208.

At this point Richards says that he is stymied. "I don't believe the colored musicians should be punished by Local 208 for doing what they think is right in joining our local," he asserts. Richards also says that he would be willing to submit to arbitration on all issues by a "mutually acceptable" outside arbitrator.

There's little doubt that the integration of the two locals would benefit the Negro players. For instance, Chi radio and television stations tend to call Local 10 because the white local has a greater pool of players. On the other hand, the Negro local has tight control over most of the south side jazz spots, and their hiring system permits them to hand out the jobs as they see fit.

Inside Stuff—Music

Columbia Records is adding to its language course series with a set which instructs Spanish-speaking people in English. The 12-record 7-inch LP package is called "Pasaporte Al Ingles." Recorded under the supervision of Dr. Howard Harvey, Professor of French Literature at Rochester U., the set contains 24 complete lessons and a 52-page booklet with complete lesson texts. Also included is a 768 page pocket size bi-lingual dictionary. Already in Col's language series are "Passport To French," "Passport To Spanish," "Passport To German," "Passport To Italian" and "Passport To Russian."

Martin Kalmanoff, whose musical version of 'The Fourposter" called "No Bed Of Roses" is now touring the strawhat circuit, just had one of his pop tunes, "Brandy Is My True Love's Name," recorded by Gene Pitney for the Musicor label. The song was written in collaboration with Atra Baer, N. Y. Journal-American staffer and daughter of humorist Arthur (Bugs) Baer. She was married to Kalmanoff at one time.

The development of background music for motion pictures—from the piano accompaniments for the "chase" episodes of silent films to today's elaborate orchestrations—will be presented at the U. of Rochester's "Arrangers' Holiday" concert Thursday (1) at the Eastman Theatre there. The pic portion of the concert will feature Dr. Allen I. McHose, associate director of the Eastman School, as pianist for a theatre of the silent film period. Dr. McHose, who was a film house pianist during his college days, will be accompanied by an orch in providing appropriate musical background for a Chaplin-type "chase" scene. The "stalk" sequences featured in westerns and "whodunits" of every cinematic era also will be illustrated, both on screen and in the orchestra pit. The orchestrations will show the development of mood music for such scenes.

The first step by the Youmans Co. to commemorate the 65th anni of the late Vincent Youmans' birth will be the LP release of "Like Time On My Hands—A Tribute To Vincent Youmans" by 20th Century-Fox Records. Robert Lissauef, veepee-general manager of the Youmans Music Co., produced the record which features pianist-singer Til Diederle and her instrumental group. The album will be shipped to distributors on Aug. 20, ready for the Sept. 27 birthday anni, the focal point of the special commemorative tribute. Youmans was forced to retire from his songwriting career, which spanned only 12-13 years, when he became ill with tuberculosis, of which he died in 1946 at the age of 47.

The Tahitian Tamoure, newest in the series of native dance rhythms which incorporates an American jazz beat, is slated for a national dance-school buildup this fall. The Albert Butler School of Dancing of N. Y. presented the Tamoure at the National Convention of Dance Masters of America's meet in Miami Beach last Friday (26). The Albert Butler School is also featuring the dance in its normal school for dance teachers which runs through July and August. Butler is past president of the N. Y. Chapter of the Dance Masters and is now chairman of the Ballroom Division.

Reprise, and Fred Astaire's new company, Ava Records—they do most of their recording here," Parri stated. "Now Louis Prima's starting one, too—Prima Records; he wants to use United. We even do some of Warner Bros.' stuff."

Biggest problem in the industry which nobody has found a way to solve is the "low overhead boys" who rent garages, barns, anything cheap enough to convert into a recording studio.

They hurt the big operations in two ways: (1) location recording (where equipment is sent out to clubs, arenas, etc.) and (2) in the mastering process. They can offer cutrate prices because the salaries they pay are negligible. Although the customer gets lowgrade results, in many instances quality is of no consequence, in mastering.

Only way to solve it, according to Parri, would be through the union—make them enforce rules. The small operators can get scab engineers or hire their brother-in-law for practically nothing. "Labor cost is the biggest single expenditure for all operating studios."

Plans for two other studios are now in the works for United—Nashville and New York. "We haven't decided which will be opened first—probably the Nashville one this year and the New York studio in '64."

Ultimately United Recordings envisions a branch operation in every major recording centre across the country. "Some people are of the opinion that tape will eventually replace the disk," Parri reflected. "But we couldn't care less. Initial recording will always require the studio, regardless of the end medium. Also, with the expanding domestic and foreign markets, we simply can't lose."

It took Al Martino 11 years and a disk comeback to make the Copa grade, but he should be no stranger to the place from now on. Martino clicked originally on disks with "Here In My Heart" on the indie BBS label in the early 1950s but managerial mishaps gave his career a zig-zag pattern both here and abroad.

He's back in the groove again, currently riding on two Capitol Records' clicks, "I Love You Because" and "Painted, Tainted Rose," and there's no reason now why he shouldn't ride high on records and in-person dates for some time to come.

Even though he's still able to capture a juke audience, Martino is no teenage exclusive. He's a mature performer with a solid vocal base and an easy, likable manner on the floor. Clubs that draw the adult spender will find Martino an attractive lure.

He's a belter with a sense of vocal dramatics and fine taste for repertoire. In his 45-minute Copa set he fills a songbag full of big ballads, Italian-styled melodies and country-patterned songs for mitt-rewarding results. The songs are all memorable, but the reprise of his first disclick seems to be remembered best. Joe Mele's Copa orch (with Martino's own piano accompanist Gene Kutch) help the turn greatly.

Forbes & Villa offer a wacky 20-minute turn that plays up lowdown comedics for occasional scores. Don Forbes is the straight man and Joey Villa the clown and they complement each other in a manner familiar to setups of this sort. They push their antic behaviour hard and belabor many points, but they do provide some zest for the tablers to enjoy.

The production numbers, with Faye Dean & Ralph Young handling the vocal leads, are held over as are the Joseph Mele and Frank Marti crews for the dansapation. Gros.

Desert Inn, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, July 23.

Andy Williams, Ford & Hines, Don Arden Dancers (12), Carlton Hayes Orch (21); produced by Frank Sennes; presented by Wilbur Clark; $4 minimum.

Andy Williams' new session here is probably his best to date—the pipes are superb, and he has a generous sprinkling of gags (concocted by Harry Crane) for punctuation. ("Lots of famous stars now working on the Strip — Liberace at the Riviera, Shelley Berman at the Sahara, Jack Carter at the Flamingo, and next week the Sands is bringing in Profumo, Christine, and Mandy.")

If Williams decides to chop some of his songs, he might be wise to start with "Heart In San Francisco"—his rendition is fine, but the song has been sung to oblivion in Las Vegas. Most welcome are the rest of the numbers, including "Falling In Love With Love," "You Are My Sunshine," "Days Of Wine and Roses," "Never On Sunday" (sung in Greek), and "You Don't Want My Love," among others. Strong assistance comes from 88er-conductor Dave Grusin, fronting the Carlton Hayes orch (21), and Williams' drummer, Larry Rosen.

The riotous comedy act of Phil Ford & Mimi Hines holds over for the next two weeks prior to the McGuire Sisters' opening, as does a colorful Donn Arden production number about baseball. Duke.

Mister Kelly's, Chi

Chicago, July 22.

Woody Allen, Nancy Wilson, John Frigo Trio; $2.50 cover.

Woody Allen is a bespectacled, intense young comic out of New York with a shock of red hair and a gift for characterizing the Troubled Young Man in the Age of Anxiety. In the contemporary trend of describing performers in medical terms, Allen is not a "sick" comic, but one who has been sick and gotten better.

Although little known in Chi except for his tv exposure on the Jack Paar and "Tonight" shows, Allen opened to a solidly packed and responsive audience.

His turn is primarily autobiographical, or mock-autobiography. The saga of his psycho-development is hip, occasionally agitated, sometimes pensive, and often has humorously deadpan seriousness of the Explainers in the cartoons of Jules Pfeiffer. Although he could hardly be called derivative of other New School comics, he shares with Mort Sahl and Lenny Bruce the physical twitches and contortions which they use to punctuate their stories and to express their anixety.

Nancy Wilson is an inventive thrush with a distinctive style and a thoughtful, personal songalog. She has a mobile and potent voice that permits her to handle her tunes with bell-like simplicity or to weave them in complex jazz patterns. She is also an attractive young woman, with an engaging stage demeanor.

Miss Wilson's repertoire is composed primarily of artfully arranged pop ballads. She scored particularly well with a poignant rendition of "Days of Wine and Roses," an ironic treatment of "Guess Who I Saw Today?", and a powerful rendering of "He's Not The Man For Me." She is also effective in her bright handling of such uptunes as "Getting To Know You" and "Loads of Lovely Love."

Shecky Greene and Tobi Reynolds open Aug. 12 for two weeks. Mor.

Sahara, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, July 23.

Shelley Berman, Mills Bros. (3), Dale Harris, Inga Neilson, "Most American Girls In the World" (14), Louis Basil Orch (12); produced by Stan Irwin; presented by Milton Prell; $4 minimum.

Shelley Berman admits when he first comes onstage that it's extremely tough to follow the Mills Bros. and the ovation given them by most audiences ("I hope you don't resent me for coming out." "I can't tell you how happy I am to follow an act which stops the show!") but as he did last year with them here, he zooms to pleasant authority almost immediately.

Berman's humor, which appeals strongly to the hippies, the embryonic hippies, and even a vast portion of the squares, probably clicks as big as it does because it is self-identifiable. He revives some of his tv and record bits, adding much new material, and all of it is stamped with special Berman intelligent hilarity.

The Mills Bros., always a solid fave here, don't stray from the familiar format, and would be in trouble if they did. Such oldies as "Be My Life's Companion, "Till Then," "Glow Worm," "Paper Doll," "You Always Hurt The One You Love," "Basin Street," "Lazy River," and "Bye Bye Blackbird" (many with a spontaneous singalong from the audience) keep this act in the permanent Big Time.

A new Moro-Landis production number called "A Merry Can Can," featuring singers Dale Harris and Inga Neilsen, plus the 14 "Most American Girls In The World" is the curtain raiser.

Louis Basil's smooth crew of music makers (12) backs the Stan Irwin production, in until Aug. 20 when Kay Starr returns. Duke.

Ye Little Club, L. A.

Los Angeles, July 24.

Marilyn Burroughs, Paul Suter, Jack Smalley; two-drink minimum.

The ability to select and mold material to complement and project her own personality distinguishes Marilyn Burroughs from the average vocalist. It is what is known as style—a commodity this up-and-coming songstress has plenty of. She's in for a week with options at Marshall Edson's diminutive showplace. The options seem a cinch to be exercised.

Whether Miss Burroughs is wailing a soulful "Got It Bad And That Ain't Good" or tearing off a Lena Horney "I Love To Love," she manages to superimpose her own identity over the lyric. The pretty and expressive wife of Hi-Lo anchor man Clark Burroughs is endowed with a keen sense of showmanship and is tastefully discriminate in her choice of material.

Her arrangements are unusually clever, and the Hi-Lo touch in spots leads one to suspect that Burroughs may have had something to do with them.

Sex is at the root of Miss (we should say Mrs.) Burroughs' approach. It oozes out of her small, soft, simple tones and asserts itself in every striking dramatic gesture of her arms, which she employs to constant advantage. Highlights of her set, in addition to those already noted, are "You'd Be Surprised," "I See Your Face Before Me" and medleys hinged on the subjects of love and luck.

Paul Suter and Jack Smalley contribute their usual stalwart support at the 88 and bass, respectively. Tube.

NELSON EDDY

Winds his 7th run at Eddys', Kansas City, this week and goes to Palmer House, Chicago for 6th time. Atlanta Journal said: "His act includes patter, comedy and shapely, talented partner, GALE SHERWOOD, who matches him tone for tone . . . He has never sung better."

A. P. A. Inc. handles.

500 Club, A. C.

Atlantic City, July 25.

Jayne Mansfield, Mickey Hargitay, Allan Drake, Wallace Bros., Joey Stevens, Johnny Civera Orch (6); $3 cover, $5 weekends.

Jayne Mansfield brings a nice change of pace to the 500 Club for she and hubby Mickey Hargitay have an act which is refreshingly different in that the actress passes most of the 40 minutes mixing with the tablers. She works with a mike which has enough cord to reach nearly any part of the 700-seat room as she sings tunes in English, French and Italian.

Strikingly gowned in a tight fitting black crepe sheath, a long cape over her shoulders, she loses little time in reaching the payees after a brief introduction by Hargitay.

Her piled platinum hairdo adding to her stature, she comes on with "I'm Just Plain Jayne" and leaves the stage to visit a dozen tables in all sections. While roaming about, she warbles such oldies as "I Love You," "Too Marvelous," "Only Girl," and "River Seine," each before a different group.

Hargitay takes over to contrib a few gags and Twist with a payee while his mate changes into an ensemble of Russian sable stole over a tight fitting black gown. She includes Twist on stage with front tablers including visitor comic Joe E. Ross of "Car 54," who is headlining on Steel Pier with Frankie Avalon, before bowing off.

Miss Mansfield's songs, done in a folksy style, are well received. Customers particularly dig her tour of the tables.

Also on bill is comic Allan Drake whose spoofs at teensters and their elders, among others, keep patrons happy; the Wallace Bros., clever dancers who have appeared here many times; and emcee Joey Stevens. All are well backed by Johnny Civera orch. Walk.

Sparks, Nugget

Sparks, Nev., July 25.

Sergio Franchi, Edgar Bergen, George Arnold Singers & Dancers (18), Foster Edwards Orch (12); $2 minimum, second show.

It's the saloon set's fortune that Sergio Franchi has branched from his operatic and concert roles to work niteries—and in this western debut at John Ascuaga's Sparks Nugget he shows a talent seldom matched on a Nevada nightclub stage. Albeit his club exposure has been limited, he's highly knowledgeable in the ways of selling a song—and has that powerful true vocal control to overshadow any shortcomings in the area of show biz savvy.

Despite this local debut status there's evidence he's familiar to many from his RCA Victor waxings, his video guestints. A full house showed for his initial bow and gave him an endorsement impressive for any headliner who's ever played this room. And Franchi responded generously.

The catalog, as to be expected, is heavy on the Italiano titles, but singer uses his bilingual abilities for interpretative vocaling so all will get the lyric story. Ruggedly handsome, Franchi has wisely selected his repertoire to suit all tastes, cover all areas. And he's highly proficient in all situations.

Opening with "Funiculi, Funicula," he segues into a dramatic rendition of "Eyes of a Woman In Love," "Shalom," and "As Long as She Needs Me," the latter also filled with soul and emotion. With guitar in hand (he's also proficient here), he essays "I Mustn't Say I Love You" (bilingually), "Wish You Love." "Fool" is overdone on the nitery stages in these parts, but Franchi gives the title a new sound, new dimension. Same is true for "I Wish You Love." A couple of novelty bits are included, with such as "Chicago" in Italian. Natch, there's "Arrivederci Roma" and "Volare."

Formal training, familiarity with the opera is much in evidence throughout the tenor's 40-minute stint. The powerful pipes reach the extreme corners of the room with no effort—he could do it sans mike. In all ranges he's assured and confident, even on the falsetto toppings. Stage demeanor is pleasing to both femmes and the males, with no obvious play toward either sex. But it's the pure talent, the magnificent voice that prompts the excitable tabler reaction.

Edgar Bergen, a regular and a favorite in this area, again is proving a winner as straight man for Charley McCarthy, Mortimer Snerd and Effie Klinker, and his dancing mannequin partner Podene Puffington. Material has universal appeal, and Bergen continues as artist on throwing the lines. Some of the stuff is dated, but still gets good response coming from the woodenheads.

In this outing Bergen departs the ventriloquist role for highly effective monolog, with recorded backing, of elderly smalltown gentleman sitting on front porch reflecting on the past. Backing is complete with sounds of croaking frogs, buggies rolling by, rain dropping through roof into metal bucket on floor. Routine is full of nostalgia and Bergen handles it to perfection.

George Arnold Singers and Dancers show their mettle in two productions—one on a circus theme, the other following a showboat idea. The Foster Edwards Orch gives the usual expert backstopping to entire show.

George Burns, Dorothy Provine skedded for Aug. 8. Long.

Shamrock, Houston

Houston, July 26.

Florian ZaBach, Jo Ann Miller, Shep Fields Orch (10); no cover or minimum.

Personable Florian ZaBach and his violin draw heftiest palming heard in some time at Shamrock Hilton's International Club. Violinist, best known for his "Hot Canary" and "Holiday For Strings," also performs a classic, ballads, show tunes, Austrian gypsy number and hillbilly tune, which should fit about every taste.

Surprisingly, best received perhaps is "Verceuse" by Godart from opera "Jocylyn." There is also top palming for gypsy tune "Sarba," for which ZaBach did own arrangements, and his slick version of "Love Makes The World Go 'Round." He's aided and abetted by own echo chamber mike.

Other top numbers include "Till There Was You," "Let Me Call You Sweetheart" and the hillybilly-type tune, "Orange Blossom Special." K. Bert Sloan is at 88s in duet for "Verceuse," and the Ze-Bach-Sloan combo is great.

Jo Ann Miller, formerly one of Dorothy Shay's "kinfolks," makes impression as single thrush, has just right mixture of song and light patter. She's shapely, and pipes show to good advantage, especially in "As Long As He Needs Me." Even if some of material seems borrowed, you might Shay, femme is an excellent performer.

Shep Fields Orch, which will disband after this engagement, does fine backing job and draws plaudits from both performers.

Show plays two weeks. Skip.

Establishment, London

London, July 25.

"So Much to Remember," starring Fenella Fielding; with Tristram Jellinek, Jeffrey Gardiner and John Standing. Staged by William Chappell; book and lyrics, Johnny Whyte and Miss Fielding; music, Stanley Myers. $4.50 minimum.

The Establishment Club, now operating for some 21 months, is gradually moving away from the sharp, satirical policy with which it was so effectively launched. The permanent company, in residence for the first year or so, is now in the U.S. And in recent months the club has been trying its luck with solo artists, few of whom have achieved any notable success.

Now it is presenting a 65-minute revue starring Fenella Fielding, one of the hottest local attractions. But this is another case where the talent is far superior to its material. In this particular instance, however, the star has her share of the responsibility as coauthor of the book and lyrics with Johnny Whyte.

In tracing the career of a girl who came from the London slums, was spotted by Italia Conti (who ran one of London's best known training establishments for juve artists) to become a Gaiety Girl and an international celebrity, the revue also traces the history of that era. There's frequent name dropping of such political personalities as Lloyd George, Asquith and Hitler, and show biz greats like Ziegfeld, Cole Poter, Noel Coward and Ivor Novello.

One of the more effective running gags is the suggestion that possibly the girl from the slums had unintentionally influenced the course of history. Maybe if she had not snubbed the Fuehrer, World War II would never have happened; and in the same vein, her throwaway line "just one of those things," clearly inspired Cole Porter.

Though there is an attempt at a continuing narrative, many of the sketches are tame in content, and there is an overabundance of sheer contrivance. Out of more than a dozen items, one of the best is Miss Fielding's delivery of "Pretty Little Paper Doily Girl" (with an eye on D'Oyly Carte); another, her interpretation of the title role in "King Lear"; and the recording of her first disk for the Edison Bell Talking Machine Co.

Miss Fielding has a magnetic stage quality, yet she has to struggle to come across to the small club audience. She has three admirable male supports in John Standing, Tristram Jellinek and Jeffrey Gardiner, but there is (in contradiction to the title) little to remember about Stanley Myers' music. William Chappell has staged the revue energetically, and avoided embarrassing time lags between the sketches. Myro.

The Losers, L. A.

Los Angeles, July 24.

Bobby Short, Eric Miller, Roy Roten, Ed Gaston; two drink minimum.

Even off form, Bobby Short is an engaging, stimulating performer, as demonstrated in the way he managed opening night Tuesday (23) to override an often uncooperatively hoarse set of pipes and launch what figures to be a profitable four-week stand at this bistro.

Short, who of course warbles to his own keyboard accompaniment, transmits to his audience an enthusiasm for his work as few others do. His penchant for the obscure, unorthodox ditty is another rewarding facet of his act. And he is endowed with an unusually keen sense of performing drama.

For example, instead of starting at the conventional beginning of a tune, he will often bring fresh vitality to a tired old standard by commencing with a dramatic phrase from the middle—such as "Bye Bye Blackbird," which he begins with "No one here can love or understand me."

Other oldies done with verve by Short are "Most Beautiful Girl In The World," "Let There Be Love" and "I Like The Likes Of You." Highlights of his turn are a suggestive "Do Do Do What You Done Done Done," rousing "Love Is On The Air Tonight," a rollicking revival of Bessie Smith's blues classic, "Gimme A Pig Foot," and, as th icing on the cake, a wildly wicked treatment on Arlen-Harburg waltz, "Lydia—The Tattooed Lady."

Short is capably accompanied by bassist Roy Roten and drummer Ew Gaston. Singer Eric Miller works between shows. Tube.

Fold of Olympia Revue Again Accents Paris Vauderies' Summer Problems

Paris, July 30.

The Olympia Music Hall revue, built around femme mimic Coccinelle who became a bona fide woman after an operation and married, folded this week after a six-week run. It appears that developing a show around an unusual personality does not have the pull of yesteryear.

At first it loked like Olympia prexy Bruno Coquatrix had a show with all the earmarks of a hit. Coccinelle, known to many American and German tourists had made a name during the heyday of the males-as-females boite, the Carrousel. It was believed that the headliner's following would generate lotsa business.

In addition, the revue had okay production numbers, acts and mounting as well as a rock and roll group for younger theatre-goers.

Coccinelle displayed okay showmanship, or is it showwomanship? However, her singing voice was too throatly despite the hormones, while the femcee and emcee qualities were good. Early weeks had good attendance but when it fell off it was decided to close the show. Only Josephine Baker was able to succeed in a vaude revue sumer filler at this house about three years ago.

Vaude theatres are doing from excellent to well during the season with top song headliners and supporting acts but obviously cannot make it during the summer. Rather than shutter and lose income from jazz concerts and radio stands, Coquatri tried to keep open with revues.

Olympia will go unlit till the September start of two-a-day unless a filler is found. Most other houses shuttered after also trying revues, such as the Bobino and Alhambra, while the ABC continues with a small-scale revue.

It is felt that tourists and provincials will not patronize stripping and mimicry at Vaude houses if they flock to boites where it seems more naughty and daring. And the big-scale production shows like the Folies-Bergere, Casino De Paris and the Lido are just too powerful as draws to allow the others to compete. And it is thought that most tourists see one, or at most, two shows of this kind while in Paris.

NAT'L GENERAL SPREAD TO CONCERT BUSINESS

National General Corp.'s subsid Theatre-Vision Color Corp. has taken in Concerts Inc., coast talent buyer in the concert field, and established it as a division. Lou Robin and Allen Tinkley, toppers of the concert-producing firm, have joined NGC, diversified 225-theatre circuit operator, and will continue to enlarge the activities of Theatre-Vision which is currently developing programming for closed circuit colorcasting in theatres.

In addition to acquiring the Concerts Inc. name and key personnel, National General has also picked up all rights and contracts to present in concerts such performers as Sammy Davis Jr., Dave Brubeck, the Smothers Bros., Bobby Hackett, Peter, Paul & Mary and others on a non-exclusive basis.

These artists and many others will figure in the eventual programming plans being set by NGC. Additionally, the new division will continue to promote concert dates and programs independent of the toll setup. Robin and Tinkley will plan concerts primarily in the pop field. They'll also arrange and package shows for organizations, colleges and such.

RUBIN HEADS CONCERT FOR ASHLEY-STEINER

Ed Rubin is the head of the new concert department at the Ashley-Steiner-Famous Artists Agency in Manhattan. He decamped General Amusement Corp. last Friday and assumed the new role on Monday (29).

Concerts is part of the over-all variety management division of A-S-FA under Harry Romm.

Ohio Bellydancer Asks 100G for 'Lost' Wiggle

Akron, O., July 30.

Juliana Houser, a local bellydancer, has filed $100,000 suit in Summit County Common Pleas Court here against Bender-Loudon Motor Freight Inc. She charges that an auto accident on June 28, 1962, impaired her wiggling ability.

A truck operated by the defendant firm, struck her automobile in the rear, Miss Houser alleges. She claims she was a professional in the Arabian bellydancer field, and since the accident has been unable to fulfill some nightclub commitments, and her ability to dance has been impaired.

More Hotels Will Boom Tahoe, Sez William Harrah

No Red Carpet for Lenny Bruce At Edinburgh's Int'l Drama Conference

Edinburgh, July 30.

No great efforts will be made by the organizers of the International Drama Conference to persuade Lenny Bruce, the American "sick" comedian, to attend.

Hints of this were given here when John Calder, organizer of the conference, referred indirectly to a report that Michael Clark Hutchison, Member of Parliament for South Edinburgh, had tabled a question in the British House of Commons about Bruce's entry to Britain. He said he had gathered there were "a number of objections" to the comedian's attending the conferenee.

The London Home Office had said that Bruce is still subject to a deportation order.

More than 100 authors and drama personalities have already promised to attend the confab here during the final week of the Edinburgh Festival.

Playwrights who have accepted invites include Peter Ustinov, Arnold Wesker, Harold Pinter and Wolf Mankowitz (U.K.); Arthur Miller and Tennessee Williams (U.S.); Eugene Ionesco (France), whose play, "The Ceremony" will be staged here during the Festival; and Martin Walser (Germany), whose play, "The Rabbit Race," will be at the Assembly Hall. Also expected are Sir Laurence Olivier, Orson Welles, Sam Wanamaker, Joan Littlewood and Helena Welbel, widow of Bertolt Brecht.

"If there is very strong feeling against Lenny Bruce coming into Britain, it would probably be bad for the conference if he did come," said Calder. "At any rate, no strong efforts are going to be made to bring him if there is this feeling against it."

According to Calder, Bruce (who has been nixed entry to the U.K. on previous occasions on the ground that he is "an undesirable person") is himself anxious to come.

Aim of the international literary get-together is to acquaint the public with ideas behind contemporary theatre and let them see what the creative artists are trying to do.

Parts of the conference are to be broadcast by the BBC on tv and radio, and a Eurovision linkup is possible.

Britain Continues Ban

London, July 30.

Lenny Bruce, who made two abortive attempts to come to London earlier this year for a cabaret engagement at the Establishment Club in Soho, has been told that he will not be permitted to attend the Edinburgh festival in August.

This was stated in the House of Commons last week by Home Secretary Henry Brooke, who indicated he was not thinking of revoking his order barring Bruce from entering the country.

Jayne Mansfield's Physical Fitness Pointers Wow A.C. In Busy Week for Flacks

Atlantic City, July 30.

It could have been Jayne Mansfield week in this resort. Not even Dean Martin & Jerry Lewis in the old days, Frank Sinatra and Sammy Davis Jr., of the present era, were accorded the reception the actress got last week as she appeared with hubby Mickey Hargitay in the 500 Club.

She made the front page of the only daily, The Atlantic City Press, on Tuesday and Wednesday (23-24) while the Wednesday edition also carried a nice three-column shot of her atop its second section. Her act was even reviewed, something unusual, in the Press amusement page.

Miss Mansfield started mixing with the public early Monday, and kept it up, helped by the 10th annual Atlantic City swim around Absecon Island, a 25-mile grind which took place Tuesday. She was a guest of the resort Junior Chamber of Commerce Monday and didn't say much, she didn't have to. She spoke to the biggest group ever to attend a Jaycee luncheon on physical fitness backed by Hargitay.

Her big day was Tuesday. The Jaycees have been conducting a physical fitness program on the beach in mid-city. An announcement that Miss Mansfield would give some pointers brought thousands to this area where she appeared in a neck high loose fitting blouse and ankle-length slacks to offer a short series of fitness routines with Hargitay.

Seymour (Pinky) Kravitz, Jaycee president and for several past seasons manager of the Gondola Room at Luigi's, arranged the Jaycee events. After Herman Willemse had won the marathon swim, he was greeted by the actress with a kiss and his trophy.

Herb Freeman, operator of the 500 Club, watched business climb because of the widespread publicity.

VEGAS CLUB IN DAYTON BOWS WITH STAN RUBIN

Dayton, O., July 30.

Stan Rubin opened the new Vegas club here with his Tigertown Five, marking the first time in eight years he has accepted anything longer than a one-night stand.

This is the former Racquet club, which closed more than a year ago after having served with name talent ranging from Dick Haymes to Jonathan Winters. Club is now operated by Buddy DeLong and managed by Charles Whitney.

CNE Preps Aug. Grandstand Show, Goulet Headliner

Toronto, July 30.

With Robert Goulet as headliner, all acts at the Canada National Exhibition evening grandstand show have been inked by producer Jack Arthur. Rehearsals commenced yesterday (Monday) and display ads started last week. The CNE will run through Aug. 16-31.

Goulet gets in Aug. 14 and there will be no chance for Arthur to include the star's nightly song stint in the production numbers, with CNE opening Aug. 16. Arthur therefore will give him some 30 minutes in the second half.

With 16 days of rehearsal to whip the show into shape, Arthur will have two lavish production numbers with a cast of 300 including 52 line girls for the "Canadadettes" precision routines, 20 choralists and 24 mixed dancers. Howard Cable will baton the 60-man orch.

This year's show will have a slight touch of political satire. However, Arthur emphasized "with some 22,000 people nightly in the grandstand, some 65% in family groups and many small towns, we're not catering to a sophisticated crowd." Goulet's sexier songs, as featured in nitery circles will be blue-pencilled.

The production numbers, opening and closing the show, are a South American routine and a minstrel sequence (whitefaced). Marking the 90th anniversary of the Mounties formation, 32 riders will be introduced by Don Parrish and 20 male singers.

The evening potential is some $38,000 or $532,000 for the 14 nights, Sundays excluded. Prices to the grandstand show are $4.50 top. Rate includes admission to the grounds any time or day of the evening performance, this permitting a saving of 75c into the Fair.

Another show features "The Three Stooges Meet the Gorilla" (Nurbu), with performances running through Aug. 19-31, with the Ellis McClintock band of 30 musicians and admish of $1.50 top.

Weston's Concert Fling

Hollywood, July 30.

Dick Weston, operator of the Troubadour, here, is branching into the concert field. He is booking an Oct. 12 concert at the Civic Aud., Santa Monica, with the Clancy Bros. & Tommy Makem and has Josh White set for Nov. 16.

Weston's Troubadour has pacted Miriam Makeba and Peter Evans for Aug. 1; Journeymen, Aug. 27; Rooftop Singers, Sept. 24, and Sabicas, Oct. 29.

Mpls. 'Aqua' Wins On 'Bare Chests' (Male)

Mineapolis, July 30.

Charles St. Denis, prominent local retired attorney, last yeek publicly threatened to start injunction proceedings to restrain Al Sheehan's seven male "Aqua Follies" divers from continuing to perform barechested during the big stage-water show. Their doing so he pointed out, violated a park board ordinance.

The locally produced "Aqua Follies" always has been one of the admission-charging principal attractions of this city's Aquatennial, an annual summer festival.

St. Denis explained it wasn't because he objected to shirtless male divers or swimmers that he contemplated the court suit—in fact, he's all in favor of them. He said he hoped that a court action would set wheels in motion leading to repeal of an ordinance that he considers "ridiculous."

Ordinance in question prohibits shirtless attire anywhere in the municipal park system except at public beaches—of which there are many in the local city limits. The statute has been n the books for many years, but park police didn't start enforcing it until just before the current "Aqua Follies" opened.

However, instead of carrying out his court threat, St. Denis decided he'd appeal to the park board to repeal the ordinance post haste. His threat didn't displease "Aqua Follies" producer Sheehan at all. It landed valuable front page newspaper, television and radio publicity for his show—as well as for St. Denis.

Harrah

hotel addition within the next two months. At the same time, he noted that the Del Webb organization, which operates the Sahara and The Mint, in Las Vegas, will also build a new inn in Lake Tahoe.

Harrah said that new hostels will provide an incentive for visitors to stay longer. Harrah's presently has a big show as has Frank Sinatra's Cal-Neva Lodge. Latter, however, operates only during the summer. At the same time, Harrah stated, new hotels will bring in a wider variety of visitors. Currently, there is only one high rise hotel in the Tahoe area. Most lodgings are presently supplied by motels.

Harrah doesn't see too many hotels built at Lake Tahoe because of the scarcity of land in large enough parcels. The town is built out largely on the California side and not too many plots are for sale on the Nevada side. He also asserted that any increases to his new hotel will come in 500-room multiples. He declared that it costs virtually as much to run a 500-room hostel as it does one of lesser size.

As far as the talent situation in Tahoe is concerned, Harrah said the new hospices will provide more competition for names in the area, but at present he doesn't believe that the current salary structure will be affected. He has been the sole year-round user of names in Tahoe and there are still-sufficient headliners to supply another spot and possibly two in the Tahoe region.

Harrah pointed out that he has established a top price and he has seen to it that it's not violated "even for as much as a $5 bill." He declined to mention his top, since not all names that he buys get it.

Some Whites Have 'Guilt Complex,' When There's No Need, Sez Dot Dandridge

Cleveland, July 30.

Some white people "are acquiring a guilt complex" when there is no need, Dorothy Dandridge told the Program PM guest panel when interviewed Tuesday (23) during her comments about the Negro problem today.

"Furthermore," she added, "there's no need for this guilt complex, by white people, to come to the foreground in the entertainment field. The question has been getting jobs and roles, and there appears some changes are being made."

She maintained that she has felt no prejudice in the entertainment field, and it was noted she was the first of her color to sing at the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria, N.Y.; that she played the lead in "Carmen Jones" and was nominated, as a lead performer for the Academy—another first.

Asked about Negroes in the current imbroglio, she declared "How can you be a Negro and not go along." But she did concede that active participation in the marches, etc., "depended on the individual."

She was in town for a week-long engagement on the Mike Douglas KYW-TV show and did the 55-minute guestar with Harv Morgan and newsmen on Press Club Celebrity Night.

Birmingham Conks Out on Aud Rental to AGVA Freedom Salute—Use Negro College Field Instead

American Guild of Variety Artists' press handout heralding next Monday's (Aug. 5) "AGVA's Salute to Freedom '63" in Birmingham states that the show "was originally scheduled to play in the Municipal Auditorium. But the City officials decided, after agreeing to the rental, to paint the hall on the date of the show. The variety acts will now perform on a makeshift stage on one end of a football field belonging to Miles College, a Negro school, in Birmingham. The audience, which may be over 10,000 Negroes and whites paying $5 and $6 a ticket, will be asked to bring their own folding chairs and umbrellas in event of rain."

The press release states, "All proceeds will go to the coordinating committee combating segregation in America. They are the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, the Congress of Racial Equality, the NAACP, the Urban League, the Student Non-Violating (sic!) Coordinating Committee, and the Negro American Labor Council. The moneys may be used by the Coordinating Committee for the projected 'March on Washington'."

Performers and musicians will fly to Birmingham in two chartered planes. The one from New York will be paid for by theatrical unions including AGVA; other costs, including lights, p.a. system, tickets, advertising etc., will be underwritten by Gotham philanthropist Maurice Uchitel.

AGVA prez Joey Adams will produce and emcee a show which will include Johnny Mathis, Ray Charles (who is paying his own transportation to fly in from California), The Shirelles, Lillo, Harry Golden, Joe Louis, Al Bernie, Nina Simone, Clyde McPhatter and others. Reuben Philipps and his Apollo Theatre (Harlem) integrated orchestra will backstop the vaude benefit which is expected to net $50,000. It is heralded as the first integrated variety show to play before a nonsegregated audience in the history of Birmingham.

H-B TV Characters In Link With New $20-Mil San Diego Amus. Park

Hollywood, July 30.

Yogi Bear and other television cartoon characters of Hanna-Barbara Productions will go to live in Story Book Park, proposed $20,000,000 amusement centre to be constructed in San Diego County on a 40-acre site about 15 miles south of San Diego and four miles north of the Mexican border.

William Hanna and Joseph Barbera have granted a license to park full use of all their tv characters affect H-B's merchandising program, already amounting to over $100,000,000 annually. Characters also include Huckleberry Hound, the Flintstones, Touche Turtle, the Jetsons and Quick Draw McDraw.

Story Book Park, according to exec veepee Charles H. Kopeland, former chairman of Washington, D. C., Metropolitan Area Development Council, has a July 4, 1964 opening date.

Slate $1,500,000 K.C. 'Entertainment Square'

Kansas City, July 30.

Forecast that a decrepit neighborhood on the western edge of the downtown area will be revitalized into a bright and lively "entertainment square" was made here last week when a group of Kansas City investors revealed it has acquired much of the land for the project. The New West Land Corp. has about $500,000 worth of property, most of it within an area of substandard housing, earmarked for the development which would raise a block-square oasis of restaurants, jazz mills, theatre and assorted other culture adjacent to the downtown hotel and business centre.

Eventually the project will run to $1,500,000, and will need public financing to accomplish it, according to David V. Selders, spokesman for the group which met last week to disclose the plans. The area would be known as "Quality Hill Square," with a timetable calling for a Fall 1964 debut. New West Land already is publicly financed with about 300 investors.

Honolulu Spot's Names

Honolulu, July 30.

New Hutch's Supper Club, off to a boffo start with Billy Daniels as initial headliner, has inked several other Mainland names.

Dick Contino takes over from Aug. 16 through Sept. 12. Subsequent headliners include Rusty Draper and Jack Ross.

Combo Tix May Hypo N.Y. Fair's Show Biz Area

The industrial exhibitors of the upcoming New York World's Fair will help plug the show biz enterprises in the Fair through wholesale distribution of strip tickets entitling the holder to a Fair admission as well as various combinations of amusements to which admission is charged.

Louis d'Almeida, a former actor and publicist for City Investment Corp., has formed an outfit which is selling combination tickets to the fair at cutrates. Most of the wholesale buying, according to d'Almeida, will be by industrial firms exhibiting at the Flushing event. Package tickets are being sold in various combinations from $3.95 to $100.

D'Almeida declares that it's been the experience at most fairs that the long lines of persons waiting to get into some of the larger free shows will cause other fairgoers to patronize performances where admission is charged. Moreover, a man attending with his family ultimately must go into the show biz areas for the major entertainment. A trip to a restaurant is also called for if only to prevent him and his kin from being afflicted with world's fair feet.

The package book will also have meals under an arrangement with the Brass Rail restaurants. According to d'Almeida, 90% of the concessionaires have gone in with the package plan. Because of the discounts in wholesale buying, d'Almeida says that the face value of the items offered in the package deal will be more than the book's selling price.

Some combinations will provide a fair guide being published by Time, Life Inc. which retails at $1.

Amateur Peeler Contest Strips Pitt Burley's B.O. Deck for Boff 6G Action

Pittsburgh, July 30.

The Casino Theatre, local burley house, had its biggest week in six years last week when an "Amateur Exotic Contest" was added to the regular show.

Owners Alvin and Maurice Bortz hired promoter Ray Becker to put on the event. He came up with 10 contestants, two of whom won the contest and will be featured on the Bryant & Engel circuit this fall.

The contest started off dismally as Pitt papers refused to go along with the word "Striptease," and "Exotic" was finally used to mollify the ad departments. Charley Danver, Post-Gazette columnist, gave the promotion a few lines and WIIC and WTAE came through with a few film clips that showed the girls' faces.

However, word of mouth and classified ads finally brought in the contestants and interest grew with the area's burley patrons. (At the conclusion of the contest WIIC did a story in depth on the contest and allowed its cameras to rove. See special TV Review).

Biz was big from the first night. On Friday and Saturday nights, the balcony was cleaned out for use for the first time in years with standing room three deep on the first floor Fri.-Sat. nights, the house came through with a gross of approximately $6,000.

Pat Wymore's 'Sister' Act With Gisele MacKenzie

Hollywood, July 30.

Gisele MacKenzie and Pat Wymore are going to do a sister act, but not together; Pat will fill out an engagement which Gisele will start but won't be able to complete.

Former, slated to star in "Gypsy" at Melodyland starting Aug. 13, will play role for five performances only, then must fly east for a rehearsal call for Sid Caesar teleseries on which she'll be a reglar. Miss Wymore takes over same role the following night—Sunday—for balance of two-week run.

Set Aug. 12 Hearing On AGVA Motion to Dismiss Penny's Action Vs. Union

Los Angeles, July 30.

American Guild of Variety Artists' motion for dismissal of past prexy Penny Singleton's $75,000 suit against the union has been continued tentatively to Aug. 12, with Federal Judge William Mathes now slated to conduct the hearing.

Actress, who has been a thorn in side of the administration since she was deposed as prexy, brought suit after a three-man AGVA trial board had found her guilty on two charges of behavior allegedly against the best interests of national body and suspended her June 6 from union for 10 years.

Miss Singleton, who asks $50,000 general and $25,000 punitive damages in action against union and four other defendants for alleged illegal conduct, also wants an injunction to restrain enforcement of 10-year suspension. She also charges bias and prejudice on part of trial board which found her guilty.

Other defendants include Johnny Francis, complaining witness against actress; Vincent Silk, trial board chairman; Sid Marion, trial board member; and Irvin Mazzei, western regional director for AGVA.

Dear Joe:
I want you to know that your appearance on Steel Pier this week has created a great deal of interest and your wonderful act has been excellent box office. When we booked you we were mostly interested in your TV name as "Officer Toody" star of "Car 54 Where Are You". However, it was a pleasant surprise to see that you are doing a wonderful act that has pleased our audiences from six to sixty tremendously.
We will be glad to look forward to a return engagement sometime in the future and can recommend your act very highly.

Living Room, N.Y.

Matt & Ginny Dennis, Dave Frye, the Bob Ferro Trio; $4.50 minimum.

Songwriter-singer-pianist Matt Dennis, teamed with his songstress-wife Ginny Dennis, are headlining the bill at Gotham's eastside intimery, the Living Room, where they are turning in a lively and entertaining set each evening. Also on the card are comedian Dave Frye and the Bob Ferro Trio, which also backs the Dennises.

The Dennis duo has designed their act in such a way as to give each the solo spotlight from time to time. Format also has them working together for the opening, closing and to bridge the solo changes. Together they sometimes exude excessive personal rapport between one another, their supposed ad lib side comments often are too cute and not particularly amusing to anyone but them.

But when they get down to singing or, in the case of Dennis, playing the 88 as well, they are fine. The male partner takes to the ivories on two occasions to essay a collection of tunes such as "Dancing on the Ceiling," "Mountain Greenery," "Everything Happens to Me," "Angel Eyes" and others. He presents these items with a freshness that makes 'em sound new. His mate swings out on "The More I See You," ballads with "Call Me Irresponsible" and wails "The Sweetest Sounds" in savvy style, packing lotsa personality into her work.

Their comic drunk routine on "Days of Wine and Roses" registers oke and they combine nicely on "Hooray For Love." It all adds up to a slick turn, which needs only some toning down on the personal bits to click completely in the Living Room's intimate setting.

Comedian Dave Frye hits his top form when doing impressions of Hollywood personalities in a variety of situations. These are well-done both vocally and physically, he being of the school of impressionists that also contort their faces to resemble their subjects.

However, other material of a topical nature falters quite often and registers mildly for the most part. His delivery is well-developed, but the young comic could stand stronger material to go with it. Coming off about the best in this groove is a social phone call between John F. Kennedy and Nikita Khrushchev.

The Bob Ferro Trio is a solid unit which does a solo turn at the start of each show. A hipster element prevails in the group's tooting for brisk effect and they back the Dennises in fine style. Kali.

Palmer House, Chi

Chicago, July 21.

Dick Gregory, Dolores Leigh, Ben Arden Orc; $2.50-$3 cover.

Apprehension on the part of the Palmer House management and friends of Dick Gregory concerning the effects of his political activity on his show biz career were dispelled approximately two minutes after he stepped out on the stage of the posh Empire Room to an enthusiastic reception.

This is not to say that Gregory has in any way moderated his stand on the crucial issue of race relations. However, he is very aware that the best way of establishing the truth is by showing the comic absurdity of falsehoods, and his wry observations onstage often have more impact than the more heated assertions of his compatriots.

While he sometimes diverges into such areas as party politics and television, the mainstream of Gregory's turn is still racial. Of a reported first Negro astronaut, he says: "It's a miracle—from the back of the bus to the front of the moon." Speaking from experience, he states: "Alabama is a nice place to picket, but I wouldn't want to live there."

On the political scene, he affirms that he is glad that Gov. Nelson Rockefeler got his divorce before he became president else his wife might have gotten custody of the country. Or, in an aside: "There's no such thing as a Young Republican." The audience was with him all the way, and he exited to a big hand.

Gregory couldn't have had a better opening act than Dolores Leigh, a comely and knowledgeable songstress. In her Chi debut, Miss Leigh acquits herself as a poised thrush with an astute sense of song and an intelligent, forthright and dramatic delivery.

Included in her turn are a bright version of "Lucky Day," an appealingly plaintive rendition of "Love Letters," a sultry handling of "Man That Got Away," "Take Me Along," and a clicko medley of oldies.

Nelson Eddy & Gale Sherwood and George Tapps & Co. open Aug. 3 for two weeks. Mor.

Edgewater Beach, Chi

Chicago, July 23.

Geezinslaw Bros., Lurlean Hunter, Edgewater Beach Guys (5), Don Davis Orch; $1.50-$2.50 cover.

The Polynesian Village has a well-balanced and breezy summer show in the Geezinslaw Bros. and Chi chirp Lurlean Hunter. The "desertbilly" quartet from Texas provides a cheerful romp as they rip up a repertoire of country & western and pop ballads, while Miss Hunter is a poised and polished vocalistic gem.

The respective appearances of the Geezinslaw Bros. alone is enough to keep the tablers tittering throughout the show. In the area of kooky looks, Mickey Rumsey (who plays a washtub and broom "bass") is a standing sight gag. Aa vacuous-faced behemoth, he upstages the others simply by staring vacantly at the audience.

Sammy Allred, the leader of the group, tells a few time-honored gags, plays the mandolin and generally has the appearance of a Texas fertilizer salesman. Dewayne Smith plays the guitar, and pairs with Allred for most of the singing. Fiddler Johnny Deison has an expressionless weather-beaten face and looks as though he just stepped off the plow.

There's amiable satire in their cornfed approach to "Sally Was A Good Old Girl" and an original song tribute to Bille Sol Estes. They also score with a mangled version of "Til There Was You" and a c&w edition of "Puff, The Magic Dragon."

Chi show bizites have long puzzled over the career of Lurlean Hunter, long acclaimed as the finest pop and jazz singer in the Windy City. Whatever the cause may be, Miss Hunter has only rarely been booked into the big rooms here and elsewhere despite an almost fanatical group of Chi devotees which follows here from club to club. It is not unusual for performers in other clubs and members of the nitery press to catch Miss Hunter after their regular chores.

This is not to say that Miss Hunter is an "inside" or highly stylized singer. Her velvety handling of "I Left My Heart In San Francisco" is dramatic and pungent and also explores the finer nuances in both the lyrics and melody. In "I Get A Kick Out of You" she passes up the more obvious punched-out punctuation for a whimsical and dry approach, and the same applies to "The Lady Is A Tramp." She also injects the same meaningfulness in such ballads as "Easy To Love" and "I Wish You Love."

The Guys & Dolls have little to do in this show, but set the stage nicely with bright versions of "Another Opening" and "Gee, But It's Good To Be Here."

Next is Monique Van Vooren Aug. 20 for three weeks. Mor.

Duvernay, Hull

Hull, Que., July 24.

Claudette Jarry; Brian Brown Trio; $1 cover.

Canary Claudette Jarry is a native of Montreal, however most of her piping has been done in the U.S., with New York as headquarters. Current stint shows need of staging savvy but she claims she's in the process of building an act for niteries.

Chirper's pipes are clicko and her hot-weather audience provided nice mitting. Songs are handled in English, French, Spanish and Italian. But the stanza unrolls as a recital rather than an act. Miss Jarry also plays some accordion.

Brian Brown Trio, house combo, has Champ Champagne subbing for Brown at the 88s during leader's vacation.

Miss Jarry is in until Aug. 3. Gorm.

Slate Bros., L. A.

Los Angeles, July 17.

Jennie Smith, Dave Barry; $1.50 cover, two-drink minimum.

Tuesday's (16) opening for singer Jennie Smith and comedian Dave Barry coincided with start of a four-day observation of the Slate Bros.' sixth anniversary. This meant that the pair, during period, has to share playing time with unbilled, if not unknown, drop-in guests.

Small wonder, then considering the time period devoted to offerings of these "guests," that Miss Smith or Barry, for a few days, will be able to do little more than provide a sampling of their wares.

Miss Smith, since her Victor recording days, has changed her hair color but not the color of her voice, which retains its warm, vibrant tones. Regular appearances on the Steve Alen Show have provided the public with a good idea of her ability. When she has realized the importance of appropriate facial expression to match the mood of a song, she'll improve even more.

Barry, whose forte is comment on American mores (with its endless source of supply), has a style that is keen and delightfully biting. Some lines have the beginning wrinkle of age but most are observant and refreshingly candid. Robe.

Chateau Madrid, Mont'l

Montreal, July 18.

Raquel & Domingo Alvarado, Fernando; no cover or minimum.

This is a smart, intimate operation with the main selling points being authentic Spanish atmosphere and entertainment. Latter reflects a modest budget with maximum projection values guaranteed to get top customer reaction.

Spot is also well located in the French-Canadian sector of town where tourists are bound to wander. And when they walk in for reasons of curiosity, if no other—particularly if they've done the European bit — they'll imagine they're back in Majorca—the entertainment, environment and edibles are that bona fide.

Current layout has three performers but they might as well be more, so ingeniously is the show paced. It's all Spanish, of course, with not a trace of Americana in evidence to please the travelling trade.

Domingo Alvarado is the singer, finger snapper and handclapper, working with Raquel, a tall, severely-coiffed senorita who, in the true Spanish tradition keeps her face dead serious as she pitches her dramatic flamencos to whip up emotional customer reaction.

Providing the accomps is Fernando on the guitar, also doing a group of solos which gets solid reaction.

Alvarado is the mainstay of the show, running approximately 30 minutes, with a voice that has a sob quality. He does ballads and some light stuff. Working in a combo with the dancer and guitar, he winds up in a smash finale.

Chateau Madrid could use some promotion to sell itself with the local nitery set, since the seed has already been planted for a most successful operation Only test is whether they can keep it as authentic as it is now. Policy is three shows nightly. Laza.

French Qtr., Houston

Houston, July 26.

Tommy Dorsey Orch with Helen Forrest, the Pied Pipers, Frank Sinatra Jr; $2.50 entertainment charge.

Boniface Larry Grayson tries something new with this booking, and it appears he will score on all counts. Show has moved out of Continental Houston Motor Hotel's somewhat intimate French Quarter room into the more spacious ballroom, and public is also admitted to this show, which plays eight days. Because of Texas' liquor laws, non-members are seated on one side of the ballroom and must bring their own bottle.

Nostalgia flows even more than the liquor at opening, as the Dorsey band (16), now directed by Sam Donahue, still features the mellow trombone sound, although at times it appears more brassy than the original.

Miss Forrest draws hefty palming a few rebel—and soggy—yells for such tunes as "You Made Me Love You," "I Cried For You," "I Had The Strangest Dream," and "September Song."

Pied Pipers still have that top harmony, best Illustrated by "Chicago" and "Dream," and work well with Frank Sinatra Jr. in "I'll Never Smile Again."

Young Sinatra is a balladier like his father and has his same ease before a mike. He has adopted a few of pere's mannerisms, and a few more years may also give him some of spark and charm that put senior at top. As is, he's pleasant-voiced young man who isn't hurt at all by his name. Best tune appears to be "Too Close For Comfort."

Band regulars, thrush Jeannie Thomas and trombonist Larry O'Brien, take solo turns at mike, both perform well. Ziggy Elman was ill and failed to make scheduled appearance.

Show appears headed for near-capacity engagement, will play eight days. It was timed at 67 minutes. Skip.

Club Village, Dallas

Dallas, July 17.

The Smart Set (4), Howard Stafford Quartet; private club, no cover or minimum.

In their Texas debut, the Smart Set clicks easily with an intimate, jet paced revue that adds up to 30 minutes of solid entertainment, auguring good biz for a fortnight.

The fresh foursome — Sharon Chmel and Jean White, well stacked lookers, with handsome Dave Rossow and Ronnie Del—blend voices on "Get Me to the Church on Time" and "Let's Take a Walk Around the Block" as openers.

Youngsters evidence stage savvy with their dancing and singing, with the femmes, via four costume changes, revealing lotsa epidermis is a nostalgic Roaring '20s seg and a nifty western-flavored hoedown routine, all for good results with flawless teamwork and precision. Risible bits include takeoffs of tv commercials, JFK and the Gleason-Fontaine duo.

Clinching closer is an aud singsong, with the femmes table strolling, via four w.k. ballads of bygone days, climaxed by the Smart Set's zingy windup with "Varsity Drag" to lusty mitting.

Howard Stafford combo neatly cuts the intricate show score and loads the floor with leather pushers.

Show plays two frames, with Don Brooks due July 30. Bark.

Sutmiller's, Dayton

Dayton, O., July 23.

Lee Caron, Jack & Sally Jenkins, Danny Martin, Orch; no cover or minimum.

Lee Caron, the tall Texan, is reunited with Jack and Sally Jenkins in a pleasant combination of clean comedy and good show tunes present by an attractive young couple.

Caron has changed his material very little in the past year, devoting it primarily to amusing stories about Texas and such subjects as politics, religion and sex. And he laces these with a few gentle but amusing jabs at the customers and a tune or two on a pleasing instrument that is a cross between a violin and a horn.

The Jenkins have a click way with a song, with the male side of this husband and wife team proving most delightful on "Music Man" numbers and "What Kind of Fool Am I?" This lad should be a real comer because he has the looks and the personality to match a real voice. Plat.

Black Knight, Toronto

Toronto, July 16.

Betty Weir, Ralph Frazer Quartet; no cover.

Betty Weir is one of the best singers to appear in the six-months' history of the Black Knight Room of the Royal York Hotel, Toronto. That is the consensus of habitual customers, who frequent this 120-capacity room.

The brunet contralto has a powerful voice, with an alternate ballad-style or bouncy numbers. From her springy opening of "Life is Just a Bowl of Cherries" to her "Got a Lot of Living to Do," she turns on a Jule Styne medley, a special "My Man's Gone" and a finale begoff of a Jolson medley.

Miss Weir has just returned from Africa—under the Lew and Leslie Grande aegis—with appearances in Johannesburg, Nairobi and Pretoria.

On basis of her first date at the Black Knight, Betty Weir is a hit in any entertainment medium. McStay.

Hideaway Club, L. A.

Los Angeles, July 16.

Roy Hamilton, Ray Jones, Peri Lee & the Hideaway All-Stars (3); $1.50 admission, two-drink minimum.

Encouraged by five-week booking of Joe Williams which filled room nightly, management of this tongue-in-cheek-named jazzatorium is contiuing policy of names for longer stays. Although Roy Hamilton played spot about a year ago, his opening Monday (15) for three weeks looked like "Hamilton's here and the Hideaway has him!"

A big-voiced singer who has built a steady following with his disclicks for Epic and, currently, MGM, Hamilton still skittles back and forth between the slick stylings of Billy Eckstine and the clarion call of Joe Williams.

An uninhibited vocalist who unabashedly picks numbers spotlighted by other singers, he turns it on with "Straighten Up and Fly Right" and doesn't let his audience go until his winding "Only The Lonely Know."

Supporting is accompanist Ray Jones, with occasional assists from Peri Lee & the Hideaway All-Stars. Latter trio provides almost continual non-intimate entr'acte music between the three nightly shows.

Spot is open seven nights a week. Robe.

Playboy, Phoenix

Phoenix, July 19.

Coronados (3), Bill Roberts, Sam Scafidi Orch (3); $2.50 cover in Penthouse.

For this two-week stand the customary Playboy three-act bill policy has been pared to two. But with the chanting of the classy Coronados toplining and jester Bill Roberts settling the mob down—nobody's complaining.

The Coronados, three Navajos out of Albuquerque, unspin a 35-minute turn calculated to please any taste. Anchored by George, with frere Stephan and George's dainty little bride Gingerlita in support, this attractive trio showcases a slick session of multilingual chants including Spanish, Italian and German.

But their exit, a throbbing Yiddish medley, creates enough handthumping to win the act a legitimate begoff in this plush 12th floor crows-nest.

Roberts, a bright young comic, displays an acute sense of timing and enough crisp, bright chatter to file this yockster into the "very potential" slot. Especially well palmed were his sensitive carbons of Gary Cooper and Will Rogers.

The Coronados' complex folio is a tough gig to cut, but Sam Scafidi directing from the bass, with Keith Greko at the upright and Pucci Franciosi on skins, come through with nary a note out of place. O'Haf.

Barclay Hotel, Toronto

Toronto, July 23.

"Casbah Revue," with Frankie Rapp, Diane Davis, Iowanna, Nazet, Larisso, Percy Curtis Orch (7); $1 cover.

After some six months' hiatus, the Oasis Room has returned with "Casbah Revue," a bevy of belly-dancers. These include a pair of blonds and a brunet of varying heights and seem to be what the customers want, judging from opener at the Barclay Hotel's 450-seater.

Larissa, Nazet and Iowanna are the three bellydancers, all revealingly unclad. They are on some 10-13 minutes each but will have to cut the repetition to bring their routines into the 60-minute format. Revue ran 80 minutes when caught.

Frankie Rapp, who acts as emcee throughout, also contribs some mother-in-law jokes and Italian dialect stories. A funny fellow, he has no trouble amusing the patrons.

Diane Davis, a diminutive blond in an off-shoulder evening gown, warbles her change-of-pace songs, ranging from "Just in Time," "Lonesome Road" and "Volaré," but seems misplaced.

Percy Curtis Orch gives staunch support to the bellydancers' besides playing for customers' terp seshes. McStay.

'Holiday' Skater's Mishap

Knoxville, July 30.

Ray Balmer, a featured skater in four "Holiday On Ice" production numbers, injured an ankle and was taken out of rehearsals at Knoxville Civic Coliseum.

Mrs. Ruth Tyson, executive producer, said he'll be okay for the Aug. 14 world premiere.

Racial 'Protest' Songs

"sing of dignity and equality . . . songs that speak out against any limitation upon the mind or body of man." She had been urged by the African National Congress not to appear in South Africa, that her strongest contribution to any degree of weakening the apartheid scheme would be to refuse to have anything to do with it. However, she said, "I felt that no matter how much I ignored it, it wouldn't go away."

The breakup came when she learned that her sponsors could be imprisoned and even executed for promoting her appearance if she didn't eliminate some of her "controversial" material. Songs which she had intended to sing on her South African tour included "Cry, The Beloved Country" and "Lost In The Stars" (both by Kurt Weill and Maxwell Anderson), Jewish resistance songs, and a poem by Langston Hughes, Negro author.

The tour, which was to have begun today (Wed.) and included three performances in Johannesburg and appearances in Cape Town, Pretoria, Durban, Warmbaths, Boksburg and Port Elizabeth, in addition to other cities and towns, had been arranged six months ago by the Grade Organization Ltd. in London, and sponsored by the Jewish National Fund in Johannesburg.

As a result of the cancellation, she'll continue to costar with Will Holt in "The World Of Kurt Weill In Song" at the One Sheridan Square Theatre in New York's Greenwich Village.

Miss Bumbry, who got top soloist billing, was virtually an unknown when she sang the Venus role in Tannhauser two years ago, an assignment that brought her to international attention. The fourth solo role in the Beethoven symphony went to Gundula Janowitz of the Vienna Opera.

D'Almeida says that the books are being sold in minimum $5,000 lots to the various concerns. One of the major buyers, he said, is Top Value Stamps, which is charging its customers two books for every combination ticket. RCA, he added, has also committed itself to a wholesale batch.

New Acts

DAVID ATKINSON

Songs
27 Mins.
Caucus Room, Detroit

David Atkinson, who has appeared in a couple of Broadway musicals, many off-Broadway productions and has been appearing for eight months in musical and dramatic roles with Detroit's professional repertory company at Vanguard Playhouse, has now molded his talent around a good nitery turn.

Atkinson has a good quality, well-trained baritone which can reach into the tenor range when required. He is ruggedly handsome and projects a friendly, slightly impish personality which the femmes in the audience obviously find attractive and the men can live with.

He comes on by circling the posh Back Room of Les Gruber's Caucus Club sans mike with "Rhymes Have I." His full, rich voice is almost overpowering in the intimate setting. When he reaches the mike, the listener has a compulsion to grip the table expecting to be blasted right out of his seat, but he modulates and all is well.

Atkinson, as would be expected with his background, is completely at ease before an audience and has the added virtue of being able to put his audience at ease. He puts a little too much body movement into "Something's Got to Give," but then settles down nicely to concentrate on singing with such songs as "Most Beautiful Girl in the World," "La Ronde," "Fool Am I?" "Try to Remember," "Maria," "Impossible She," and "Where Is the Life That Late I Led?"

Atkinson is a good singer with a pleasing personality and plenty of savvy gained in many types of stage productions. He's a natural for starring or feature roles in musical comedy, the better nitery circuits, tv, films, summer theatre

DENNIS BELL

Songs
15 Mins.
Silver Slipper, Las Vegas

Impresario Eddie Fox has introduced another singer to Las Vegas who has strong potential. Dennis Bell, who looks to be in his late teens or early 20s, is a handsome youngster, personable, a good song stylist, and he gives the proper interpretation of a lyric. What he lacks in volume is made up for by savvy song-selling. A little more experience is sure to smooth the few non-pro mannerisms detected in the youth.

Bell's well-balanced songalog includes "All Right With Me," "Fool Am I?" "Luck Be A Lady" and "Rockabye."

PEPPI MORREALE'S TRIO

Songs, Dance Music
40 Mins.
Dick Ridgely's Water Mill, L.I., N.Y.

Peppi Morreale, a bright, brisk, bundle of energy, who was originally signed for a five-week stint at Dick Ridgely's popular steakhouse in Water Mill, on Long Island's Montauk Highway, has scored so resoundingly that veteran drummer-owner-host Ridgely has pacted the crowd-pleasing peppy Peppi for another five weeks through Labor Day. Morreale, who is taking a sabbatical from his chores as Carol Channing's musical director which he has held for the past two years, is a triple-threat entertainer, leading his trio on piano, belting out jazz-tinged vocals (many with overtones of Louis Prima) and serving up "Twist a la The Hamptons" which makes even the hungriest diner get up and move his dorsal muscles.

Before joining the Channing camp, Morreale was a Las Vegas fave and pays proper tribute to it in a medley of tunes dedicated to "Strip Lane," touring the Vegas spots and winding up at The Sands where he held down the Lounge for two years pre-Channing. Now with time off since his boss has gone dramatic with "The Millionairess" on the summer circuit, Morreale is really swinging in The Hamptons.

The group makes their own arrangements and especially notable are bassist Al Ferrari's instrumental and vocal on "Bill Bailey" and drummer Steve Elmer's solo on "Caravan." The trio, playing together for the first time, also play it soft and sweet at the early dinner hour sessions with swinging classical renditions from "Butterfly," "Tosca," "Boheme," etc. Middle nite hours are devoted to the Broadway shows and with no effort at all, the combo easily segue into a resounding twist that packs the postage stamp dance floor at this real jumping spot where the action is just a stone's throw from staid Southampton. Dowagers, debs, natives, transients, the jet set, et. al, respond whether Peppi is doing a Prima or turning out an upbeat version of "Lot of Living To Do" or "Believe In You." The trio completely compliment organist-pianist virtuoso Bud Smith and veteran Paul Whiteman-ABC drummer Ridgely

Doro.

BEN SHERWIN

Songs
25 Mins.
Rendezvous Room, L.A.

Ben Sherwin comes into the nitery spotlight with a well prepared act, polished delivery and a completely professional projection that indicates the youthful looking singer had had solid experience. Showcase room should prove highly beneficial for Sherwin, who is ready to work just about any club in the country.

There is, however, the unfortunate element within Sherwin's work that, despite its above-average attraction, will very likely limit him to popularity as topliner in small clubs or strong second bill for major rooms. He is very much like an old style all around entertainment vaude performer, a hard-sell, song-and-dance man who knows all the tricks and how to implement them but doesn't quite have the special indefinable quality that shoots a performer to the top.

Sherwin, however, certainly has the capacity to satisfy audiences. He has a smooth, communicative patter that immediately establishes warm rapport, a pleasing personality and finally trained voice. Whether on nicely balladed "Heart in San Francisco" or more stylized, tightly clipped "Volare" and "Broadway Melodies" medley, both with good special material, he comes through with show biz finesse. "Mack the Knife" is a particularly striking entry, showing definite staging and careful movement, which will be better when it loosens slightly. Arrangements are good throughout.

ROLF BERNS

Motorcycle loopings
15 Mins.
Mauer Kermis, Vienna

With a globular cage of not more than 12 feet in diameter and two motorcyclists speeding inside, another peak is reached in this special branch of daring stunts. Rolf Berns, a young Styrian artist, does the loopings, while his partner moves along horizontally. By a fraction of an inch they thus pass each other twice per loop. Their daredeviltry thrills and their nonchalance amaze.

Berns', as well as his partners' routine openers, go beyond the standard fair and circus acts. They recently toured Yugoslavia and Italy and, after this Vienna date, head for Switzerland.

Berns is highly recommendable for U.S., be it as circus number or for amusement parks.

Maas.

RITA WEILL

Songs
25 Mins.
Ash Grove, L.A.

Following striking notice at the recent Monterey Folk Festival, Rita Weill segues from her usual secretarial duties at Ed Pearl's local coffee-and-wine nitery to top the house bill—and it is a good choice.

Miss Weill is among the more authentic ethnic singers who have worked the popular folk club. She sings in a clear, light, lyrically lovely voice completely a capella, her innate musicianship and lyric sensitivity giving the material full musical value.

Few of the songs, a collecton of short historical tunes showing the variety of substance in folklore, are well-known, but most are effective. She is obviously well aware of what she wants to say and easily achieves her goal.

Everything's not all right about "Jennie," a nervous item and nervous performances for the most part. Show is in rough shape and needs rigorous polishing, rewriting, fitting and cutting if it's to jell. Mary Martin stands out as the bright spot in a sea of conflicting plots, subplots and mechanical effects without one big, big song number. Yet, when she's onstage her elusive magic makes the role of "Jennie" sizzle, but there's not enough backing her up at present.

Ingredients of the musical based on life of Laurette Taylor winds from comedy to pathos with a weak ending. It's full of mechanical effects and spectacular production numbers which don't quite come off as yet. It's a play within a play as Miss Martin stars as a "queen of melodrama" of such opuses as "King of the White Slavers" and "Omar and the Captive Virgin," with fabulous onstage effects, fires, waterfalls and torture wheel in portrayal of the 1904 meller stock era.

Some songs were cut opening night and new ones will undoubtedly be added as the show settles down. Miss Martin sings 10 songs with every note sure and true, some from amazing situations like lying tilted down on a torture wheel. She garnered the biggest salvo with a comedy "Harem Girl" ditty. Songs run gamut of novelty, love and nostalgia with Miss Martin doing equal justice to all. Best of the lot offered seemed to be "High Is Better Than Low," "On Other Hand," "Before I Kiss the World Goodbye," "I Still Look at You That Way," "Waiting for the Evening Train."

In its present form the show plays like an oldfashioned musical and not all of a piece.

Ethel Shutta, as Jennie's doughty mother, and Jack De Lon as the stage manager, liven up the proceedings with songs and lines. Miss Shutta is delightful and touching in role seeking to keep Jennie's marriage intact. She brings an affectingly aware quality of mom who cares and make it so. Dennis O'Keefe, as the wild, reckless, boozing hubby, brings vigor to the role and does an OK acting job, but was evidently suffering from laryngitis. Robin Bailey as the playwright, third member of the triangle, registers heavily. Storyline involves Jennie, hubby and two moppets, boy and girl, who have cute lines and come in for song to them by Miss Martin.

She's the melodrama queen trouping all around country, but not in New York when the splitup comes, Jennie goes home to mother in N.Y., auditions for a part in a Broadway show, gets one line, "dinner is served," and meets and falls for the playwright. Following mixups, she goes back with hubby who has bought a church in Seattle which they make into theatre. Following disastrous opening and fire there, shown on stage mechanically, the curtain comes down on the drunken husband and sobbing wife. She has renounced the playwright forever and finally discovers the Freudian complex of her daughter's fixation that she's "not wanted." The kids, Connie Scott and Brian Chapin, also turn in good performances.

In present form "Jennie" is hodgepodge and Miss Martin's splendid acting and singing is the only thing that jacks it up. George Jenkins' sets are ingenious, imaginative spectacles, but Vincent Donahue's direction needs lots of speeding up. As of now the show is tedious on the audience.

Matt Mattox's choreography is snappy, but limited. Irene Shaffaff's costumes are fine, reflecting frills and flounces of the vintage period. Lighting by Jean Rosenthal is fine and plenty tricky for terrific scene effects. There was reportedly some trouble with the waterfall and other scenic effects which will have to be ironed out.

Lots of work may put this heavy production on the right track. Some of opening night jitters could be blamed on the high heat and humidity, although the airconditioned Colonial was very comfortable.

It would seem the writers will have to decide whether they're presenting a musical comedy or what. Right now they've got something that's a hodgepodge. It had a run-through Friday night without an audience and its first performance before people Saturday night was a politico benefit. With Miss Martin's outstanding ability in all departments, especially her uncanny power to make her role believable—while the others are like cardboard characters for the most part—there's hope. Guy.

Here's Love

Detroit, July 30.

Stuart Ostrow presentation of musical comedy in two acts, with book, music and lyrics by Meredith Willson, based on the film, "Miracle on 34th Street," story by Valentine Davies and screenplay by George Seaton. Staged by Stuart Ostrow; musical staging, Michael Kidd; settings, William and Jean Eckart; costumes, Alvin Colt; lighting, Tharon Musser; musical direction and vocal arrangements, Elliot Lawrence; orchestrations, Don Walker; dance arrangements, Peter Howard. Opened July 29, '63, at the Fisher Theatre, Detroit.

"Here's Love," Meredith Willson's new musical about the spirit of Christmas, seems headed for success on the basis of its world preem performance tonight at the Fisher Theatre.

Ironically, however, its chances for success hinge mainly on elements which Willson inherited from other creative artists. Willson's music and lyrics, plus casting errors, are the principal obstacles to achievement of his third hit, following "The Music Man" and "Unsinkable Molly Brown."

This Stuart Ostrow production is a very uneven show—long on book, short on score; good acting, poor singing; imaginative dancing, incongruous costuming; beautiful sets, inconsistent lighting.

The book is based on the successful film, "Miracle on 34th Street," about a Macy's Santa Claus imbued with the true Christmas spirit who refers customers to Gimbel's or other stores when the wanted gift is not available at Macy's. It's an excellent plot, wholesome, humorous and colorful, and Willson is deeply indebted to Valentine Davies, who wrote the original story, and to George Seaton, who did the screenplay. There is no question that the closely adapted book, also credited to Willson, is the mainstay of this musical.

An evaluation of Willson's score is extremely difficult because of the poor voices chosen to make it audible. On first hearing, his music and lyrics are disappointing. There is a lackluster quality about them that may, however, be the fault of the performers, not the composer. The title song, "Here's Love," seems to have the best chance of catching on, while "My Wish," "Love, Come Take Me Again," and "That Man Over There," may have possibilities when sung by someone not in this cast.

It would seem logical to expect that talented singers with acting ability would have the lead roles in a musical. Instead, performers without outstanding singing voices were employed and this is a major flaw. The stars are Janis Paige, Craig Stevens and Laurence Naismith.

Miss Paige, who appeared in "Pajama Game" and has been a nitery circuit songstress, is an enigma here. The songs she is given seem incompatible with her voice and her personality. She vacillates between what seems an unnaturally high register and a medium register, and she is inaudible too much of the time. Instead of belting a song as she did in "Pajama Game," the voice she uses here is high, thin and ineffective. Elliot Lawrence may be partially to blame here as the man responsible for musical direction and vocal arrangements. As an actress, she does well with the role of a man-hating divorcee, with a young daughter, who is making her own way as a department store executive.

Craig Stevens, the "Peter Gunn" of tv, simply cannot sing. His offkey efforts in the "My Wish" duet with Valerie Lee, is a pain in the ear and spoils what could have been a tender moment. Stevens, however, comes across strongly as an ex-Marine-turned-lawyer who convincingly breaks down Miss Page's defenses against men. He looks a little and acts a little like Cary Grant.

Laurence Naismith, as Mr. Kris Kringle, is Santa Claus in sight and spirit. His is the best acting job of the evening, followed by Stevens, young Miss Lee, who plays Miss Paige's daughter, and Miss Paige. Naismith, however, struggles with his musical chores by resorting to inventive facial and body movements while talking the lyrics.

Fred Gwynne, the "Muldoon" of tv's "Car 54, Where Are You?" plays much the same slap-happy character, and earns a few laughs. Paul Reed is fine as R. H. Macy. Cliff Hall is just right as Judge Martin Group, and David Doyle turns in a sparkling performance as a neurotic pyschologist. All others are well-cast and it can only be wished that the same care and perception used in their selection had been employed at the top.

Michael Kidd, credited with the musical staging, and Peter Howard, who did the music arrangements, have combined their talents effectively. Ostrow, as director, keeps the pace fast and sharp, aided by the necessity of making 25 scene changes.

The costuming of Miss Paige is glaringly inept, making her appear heavy, unattractive and ill-at-ease. Two of her suits have pouch-like pockets which add bulk to her midsection. In contrast to her costumes, Alvin Colt has designed stunning clothes for other members of the cast.

William and Jean Eckart's 22 sets are both attractive and appropriate, utilizing drops, turntables and slides. But their elaborateness may prove a handicap in a smaller, less well-equipped theatre than the Fisher. All of the Fisher's 60 hanging lines were used for the first time since this magnificently equipped theatre was opened three years ago.

The lighting by Tharon Musser requires eight extra switchboards, the effectiveness of which is not apparent. Musser's lighting was uneven, some of it due, no doubt, to opening night miscues.

The initial performance ran a half-hour overtime. One of the easiest and wisest cuts would be the opening scene of the second act in which adults try to act like children. The scene is unpleasant to watch and impossible for the performers to execute. A general tightening of other scenes should cut the show to standard length.

"Here's Love," probably will be shaped into a reasonable bet for Broadway and the road—after being cut down to size for the typical hinterland theatres—and as a retread film with music. The fact remains, however, that Willson's music adds little to an already successful show about Santa Claus and the true Christmas spirit. Tew.

John Gay's "The Beggar's Opera" was the first major smashhit in the history of the British theatre. It ran 63 nights in 1728, when it first appeared. Such a run, though minimal by modern standards, was unprecedented at the time.

It is improbable that this Royal Shakespeare production, now in repertory, will reach an equivalent audience. It is lavish, spendthrift, handsomely mounted and provocatively cast, but the essence of Gay's original has been lost in the trappings.

The production claims to be the first to employ actors throughout, instead of singers who can do justice to the host of haunting melodies scattered through the text. There is a good reason for this decision. Ditties like "Lillibulero" do not respond to the full operatic treatment, and the barbed and satirical shafts of the dialog go limp unless delivered by trained actors.

The idea does not work out in practice, however. The showerbath voices of the cast grope for the notes, and show seems under an impossible strain. Thus the charm of the tunes is largely lost in audience anxiety about whether they are going to be safely warbled. And this is a disadvantage to enjoyment.

The production also challenges comparison with Benjamin Britten's famous modern realization of the piece for his English Opera Group, which is staffed by singers. Raymond Leppard uses a small combo of flute, bassoon, trumpet, horn, two guitars, and percussion, and extracts amusing arrangements from this odd assortment of blowers and pluckers.

But they are, on the whole, too precious, murdering the vocal lines and distracting from the well-judged lyrics. Of course, they also distract from the poverty of the singers, and this is sometimes a blessing in disguise. But it is difficult to hear the words in at least three-quarters of the numbers.

Gay's idea was an opera written by and for the dregs of London society, awaiting transportation for petty crimes. They perform it to distract themselves before the transport ship sails, and the tale it tells carries a satirical punch about the political and aristocratic knavery of their day.

Peter Wood's direction emphasizes this witty intention, pausing over the lines that refer to mistresses and crooked dealings in other places. He also underscores the differences between the tattered beggars and their guards, who punctuate the performance by striding meaningfully across the stage and stilling the proceedings.

But, in other respects, his production is too stylised scrappy to provide continuity. As all the action of highwayman Capt. Macheath's adventures takes place in the single set of a ship's hold, changes of scene are indicated by shoving packing-cases around. This, too, is tricky and intrusive, and does not clearly pinpoint the action.

The players, as indicated, fumble uncertainly. Derek Godfrey lacks the scapegrace abandon necessary to Macheath and doesn't provide a focus of interest. There is a suggestion of contrast in the casting of Virginia McKenna as Lucy Lockit and Dorothy Tutin as Polly Peachum, Macheath's competitive wives. Miss Tutin has fetching moments of comedy as the over-doting one, but Miss McKenna is too shrill when she should be pert and volatile, and has embarrassing difficulty with her octaves.

Ronald Radd, as the wily Peachum, is subdued and hardly the centre of involved plotting, but Tony Church is okay as the spidery Lockit. Patience Collier clicks in a lively scene as a madam, and the rest of the company deploys itself with fabricated zest.

Pauline Grant's dance routines are lively, and the show takes fire is one of them with Macheath in company with a crowd of his favorite prosties. Costumes by Leslie Hurry are variable, with Miss McKenna getting the roughest treatment.

Sean Kenny has devised an excellent set, which folds inwards at the climax to show a ship in convincing motion to the Antipodes, all the cast aboard. This makes a rousing climax to an effort in which many talents have been employed to an uncertain purpose. Otta.

Cambridge Circus

London, July 11.

Michael White presentation (by arrangement with the Cambridge Arts Theatre Trust) of a two-act (24 scenes) revue. Staged by Humphrey Barclay; decor, Stephen Mullin. Features Anthony Buffery, Tim Brooke-Taylor, John Cleese, David Hatch, Jo Kendall, Bill Oddie, Chris Stuart-Clark. Opened July 10, '63, at the New Arts Theatre, London; $2.05 top.

The annual West End appearance of the Cambridge Arts revue is awaited with interest among talent spotters. It was such a show that brought to attention Jonathan Miller, one of the original author-stars of "Beyond the Fringe," for instance.

Inevitably, the present production must be compared with "Beyond the Fringe," and the present cast with Jonathan Miller et. al. By that comparison it comes out second on both counts. But on its own merits, the show is amusing, occasionally hilarious, more zany than bitingly satirical, but adding up to a smile-raising evening of assorted sketches and gags which could switch to a more lucrative section of the West End.

Of the competent cast, whose work gets applause by the yard, perhaps the most versatile is Tim Brooke-Taylor, with sparkling portrayals and impressions. The standout scene in a program that starts mildly but rises to yock heights in places is the final courtroom jigaround. Other highlights include a knockout modern videonews treatment of Biblical items featuring John Cleese and David Hatch, and a pastorly chat from Chris Stuart-Clark.

Music and songs by Hugh MacDonald and Bill Oddie provide swinging numbers, often with rib tickling lyrics spoiled only by the fact they nearly all lean on recent rock hits. Stephen Mullins' direction keeps the show palatably varied and under his influence the cast use the stage well. Watt.

In for a limited engagement of eight weeks, this Japanese revue has reached the West End from Tel-Aviv and, after its London sesh, is set for America, where it played a curtailed tour previously. SHUBERT ALLEY'S 50TH ANNI

Jack Cassidy-Alan Arkin Tie

Ethel Colby, drama critic for the N.Y. Journal of Commerce, has asked VARIETY to change one of her votes in its annual poll of Broadway's firststring legit critics. As reported in last week's issue, she voted for Daniel Massey, of "She Loves Me," as the best actor in a supporting part. She now requests that her vote be changed to Jack Cassidy, who's featured in the musical.

Mrs. Colby explains that according to the show's producers, Massey is the tuner's leading man and ineligible for consideration in the supporting actor category. (He's the production's only male star.) By switching to Cassidy, Mrs. Colby gives the latter three votes in the best supporting category. That places him in tie position with Alan Arkin ("Enter Laughing"), who was listed as the leader in the supporting actor category with a total of three votes.

Arkin, although now starred in "Laughing," was featured when the comedy opened on Broadway. He's also the show's male lead, but received no votes in that category. Besides being the choice of three critics as best supporting actor, Arkin also got three votes as most promising new actor, despite a prior Broadway appearance the previous season in the revue, "From the Second City."

However, it's not unusual for the same performer to show up in the VARIETY poll in more than one category. The survey is conducted by mail and this year critics were subsequently contacted only when a selection on a return pertained to a production from the previous season.

An actor or actress debuting on Broadway in a starring or supporting role could be selected by some critics for best leading or supporting performance and by others as most promising. There are also performers who, although given star billing, are not the leads and consequently nab votes as supporting players. Above-the-title stars cited in this year's poll for supporting performances — Massey excluded — were George Grizzard ("Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?"). Dennis King and Paul Rogers ("Photo Finish"). Edward Woodward ("Rattle of a Simple Man"). Barbara Baxley ("She Loves Me") and Mildred Dunnock ("The Milk Train Doesn't Stop Here Anymore").

In this year's poll, a few British headliners were designated most promising new actor and most promising new actress. Among them was Woodward, who also got a vote as best male lead in a straight play, besides getting the nod from one critic in the supporting actor category, as mentioned above. Georgia Brown, who's costarring in "Oliver" in the role she originated on the West End, got two votes as best femme lead in a musical and one vote as most promising new actress.

The liberal interpretation given by some of the critics to the "most promising" category is evidenced by Mrs. Colby's selection for that list of veteran film actress Maureen O'Sullivan, who's making her Broadway debut as one of the stars in "Never Too Late."

THEATRE FIRM TO BALLYHOO SEASON

The Shubert theatre organization will mark its 50th year of operation on Broadway with a commemorative golden anniversary ceremony Oct. 2 in Shubert Alley. A flock of show business celebs will be on hand for the event and invitations are being extended to President John F. Kennedy, Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller and Mayor Robert F. Wagner.

The chain of Shubert legit houses in Manhattan, numbering 18, including one operated by the firm in partnership with Irving Berlin, was launched Oct. 2, 1913, with the opening of the Shubert Theatre. Playwright Howard M. Teichmann, an exec with the Shubert firm, will chairman the ceremony, which will include the installation of a plaque in the wall of the Sam S. Shubert Theatre.

Details of the anniversary celebration were divulged at a press conference held in N.Y. yesterday afternoon (Tues.). Besides the anni activity, to include a special issue tieup with Playbill (the official program for Broadway legit), the Shubert office is involved in numerous projects designed to revitalize the theatre. Already in progress, under the direction of Lawrence Shubert Lawrence Jr., who took over supervision of the Shubert operation following the death last November of John Shubert, is a program of front-and-back reconditioning of some of the firm's houses.

A deal has also been worked out by the Shubert office with legit pressagent Barry Hyams for the sale of tickets to travel agencies throughout the country at boxoffice prices. The project, which encompasses some 3,300 agencies, will use teletype facilities for the ticket transactions. It's being handled through Joel M. Abels,

'Little Me' to Play Coast CLO Dates In Bid to Recoup $147,776 Deficit

"Little Me," which ended a 33-week Broadway run last June 29, is scheduled to play Civic Light Opera Assn. time next year in San Francisco and Los Angeles. The musical, with Sid Caesar repeating his Main Stem starring assignment, will begin a hinterland hop either Jan. 20 at the Shubert Theatre, Boston, or Feb. 3 at the O'Keefe Centre, Toronto.

The Canadian booking is to be followed by dates in Rochester, Cleveland, Washington and St. Louis. The Cy Feuer-Ernest H. Martin production is then skedded to move to Frisco for an April 13 or 20 opening at the Curran Theatre. The booking, which is to run eight weeks, is to be followed by a seven-week engagement at the Philharmonic Auditorium in L.A.

Donald Loze, general manager for Feuer & Martin, is visiting the Coast to discus the "Little Me" dates with CLO boss Edwin Lester. Loze is also hitting L.A. to gander the Feuer-Martin touring edition of the Broadway click, "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying," currently at the Philharmonic there.

Backers of "Little Me" were notified in a June 28 letter from Martin that the production had cash and bonds totaling approximately $75,000 which, he said, would be sufficient to finance a national tour. A June 1 audit of the tuner accompanied the letter. It revealed a deficit, as of that date, of $147,776. Royalty waivers and special theatre terms for the five weeks ending June 1 resulted in the show breaking even on all but one of the frames, on which there was an operating loss of $567.

In the letter, Martin stated the tuner was expected to about break-even on the final four weeks of its run with the royalty waivers and special theatre terms in effect. He and Feuer, incidentally, also own the Lunt-Fontanne Theatre, where "Little Me" was berthed.

On the basis of business for the last four weeks of the musical's run, the deficit, as anticipated by Martin, is figured to have undergone little change from the June 1 figure of $147,776. That, however, doesn't take into account expenses connected with closing the show. The June 1 deficit is based on $206,867 having been recouped on a production cost of $354,643.

Martin's letter to the backers also stated that he and Feuer were reviewing a plan whereby proceeds from the licensing of stock and amateur performances starting next summer may be used to help recoup the production cost of the show. The partnership agreement excludes the backers from participation in revenue from those fields.

"Little Me," with book by Neil Simon, Lyrics by Carolyn Leigh and music by Cy Coleman, is based on the Patrick Dennis novel of the same title.

Bushmen Singer-Dancers May Do Australian Tour

Melbourne, July 30.

A tour by aboriginal singers and dancers may be made in the southern states of Australia, sponsored by the Australian Elizabethan Theatre Trust. Stefan Haag, director of the Trust, witnessed a foot-pounding display of corroboree dancing in the Town Hall in Darwin during the Eisteddfod performance there.

He said that all the dancers were excellent, although inhibited and unrehearsed, and would have to be trained to perform at a given moment and not in their own time. He is convinced, however, that the difficulties could be overcome and the group would be a successful draw.

Vilar Exits TNP; Wilson Succeeds

Paris, July 30.

Jean Vilar, due to withdraw as head of the state-subsidized Theatre National Populaire in September, has revealed that he will then go to Israel for a series of readings of French authors to be followed by staging stints, both theatrical and operatic, in Italy and Germany.

In September he will direct Verdi's opera "Jerusalem," not done since 1847, to be offered Sept.22 at he Festival of Perugia and in December at the Venice Theatre in Venice. He will stage Verdi's "Macbeth" at Milan's La Scala next January, and then do an unspecified stint at the West Berlin Opera in February.

Subsequently, he will be the first western director to work with the late Betrold Brecht's Berliner Ensemble Co. in East Berlin, where he will do Le Sage's "Turcaret."

Vilar says the TNP played to over 5,193,895 paying patrons during his 12-year directorship, while he did 56 plays. This year was one of the best, with an average of 2,336 people at each show at the over 3,000-seat Palais De Chaillot, for an average of 89.2% capacity.

Vilar explains that he decided to quit because of personal reasons and a need to do other things and fulfill long-standing promises. He also intimated, but did not elaborate, on a divergence of views with the government as to how to run a nationalized theatre. It has been said Vilar's choice of plays was sometimes frowned on by federal reps. But Culutre Minister Andre Malraux has said Vilar will probably continue in some national legit category later on.

Vilar does not intend working in Paris till after a year of new TNP head Georges Wilson's tenure. Wilson was an actor-director at the TNP for several years before being selected to replace Vilar. Wilson will have a 350-seat house at the Palais De Chaillot for experimental pieces.

London 'On Town' Was N.Y. Venture; Had $78,400 Ante

A limited partnership with a capitalization of $78,400 was established in New York by Oliver Smith and Roger L. Stevens for the recent unsuccessful London production of "On the Town." The musical, which closed July 13 at the Prince of Wales Theatre after a West End run of 56 performances, is figured to have dropped most, or all, of its investment.

The tuner, which opened in 1944 on Broadway for a click run of 463-performances, had not been presented in London until this season. Smith, a set designer who was also coproducer of the original Main Stem presentation of "Town," and Stevens, a New York producer, presented the musical on the West End with H. M. Tennent Ltd., by arrangement with Bernard Delfont.

Stevens is credited in the limited partnership as being repsonsible for an investment of $44,548 in the London venture. Whether he put up that money on his own or in partnership with one or more other backers is not disclosed. Other investors included Columbia Records, $14,000; lyricist-librettist-producer Alan Jay Lerner, $5,000; composer-lyricist-producer Richard Rodgers, $2,500; Smith, $2,500 and Louis Dreyfus, head of the London music publishing firm, Chappell Ltd., $2,500.

The backers were to have had a 33⅓% share in any profits. "Town," with music by Leonard Bernstein and lyrics by Betty Comden and Adolph Green, was an enlargement of the Jerome Robbins ballet, "Fancy Free," for which Bernstein composed the music. Robbins staged the musical numbers and dances for the original Broadway production, which was directed by George Abbott. For the London presentation, Joe Layton was stager-choreographer.

Earl Wrightson began a two-week engagement last night (Tues.) as the lead in "The Vagabond King" at the Melody Top, Milwaukee.

Unexplained Fire Razes Kiamesha (N.Y.) House

Kiamesha Lake, N.Y., July 30.

The 75-year-old Kiamesha Playhouse, a key stock theatre in the Catskill Mountain area, was destroyed by fire recently. It had been dark about a year, but was used recently as a dancehall.

The cause of the blaze was unknown. No one was in the one-story wooden building at the time. Leonard Swerdloff owned the property.

Mrs. Boda Out Of Columbus Legit

Columbus, July 30.

After 52 years the Boda family is giving up the management of the Hartman Theatre here. Mrs. Lydia Wilson Boda is also retiring in September as Columbus subscription manager of the Theatre Guild-American Theatre Society, whose shows have appeared at he Hartman since she began their bookings 23 years ago.

The future of the Hartmans will not be decided for at least 30 days, according to Robert J. G. Morton, vice-president and trust officer of the City National Bank & Trust Co., trustee for the Hartman Building which contains the theatre. The building and theatre were built by the late Dr. Samuel B. Hartman, patent medicine manufacturer. It opened Nov. 13, 1911, with "The Pink Lady."

At one time the Boda theatre empire included houses in Toledo, Dayton, Indianapolis and Springfield, in addition to Columbus. Mrs. Boda has operated the Hartman since the death of her husband, Robert F. Boda, in 1958. The latter's father, Lee M. Boda started the family's legit career as operator of the Southern theatre here in 1896. Mrs. Boda's future plans are indefinite.

If the Hartman fades from the Columbus scene, it will leave this city without a legit theatre. Veterans Memorial, a 4,000-seat auditorium, is a possibility for legit bookings. The Kenley Players have a summer stock season currently at the county-operated house.

SAROYAN'S AUTOBIOG ON 55TH BIRTHDAY

"Not Dying" by William Saroyan (Harcourt, Brace & World; $4.95) is designed to be released upon the author's 55th birthday, Aug. 31, and is a self-styled "autobiographical interlude."

Much of the book consists of interviews, real and imaginary, between Saroyan and actual or fancied reporters. Title stems from writer's contention in one of these exchanges that he attributes his "old age" to "not dying."

As usual, with Saroyanesque introspections, space is given to his reflections on writing, love, people, his memories of the now-famous Armenian-American childhood in Fresno, friends, the theatre and "the human comedy."

Book is at its best when Saroyan is sharing a Paris summer with his teenage son and daughter. Youngsters emerge freshly, arrestingly. Writer also submits winning passages on some of his Hollywood days, especially concerning Stanley Rose's memorable Boulevard bookshop and some of that establishment's colorful characters.

Of famous people, Saroyan registers recollections of Chaplin that come off less well than his memories of the incredible late Joe Gould, Greenwich Village's quaint "Professor Seagull," who spent years working on an "Oral History" of our time. Except for fragmentary publication in a periodical, tome was never printed; most of it entirely lost and remembered only by persons who knew Gould. Saroyan deftly creates warm memories of his late friend, drama critic George Jean Nathan.

Weaker paragraphs accrue when author gratuitously and sometimes almost with an air of pomposity, dwells upon analyses of himself and his writing. The best of Saroyan needs no explanation, and echoes of the best are in this volume.

Sell Civic Playhouse, L.A.; Will Continue as Legiter

Los Angeles, July 30.

The Civic Playhouse, once one of the Players' Ring triumverate until acquired by Theodore J. Ticktin several years ago, has been purchased by Cy Warner, who is also partnered with Nick Mayo and Randolph Hale in the Valley Music Theatre project. Warner will continue to lease the house on a new five-year deal to producers Stan Seiden and Zev Buffman, who have had it for the last two years.

Plans call for a $90,000 renovation job to turn part of the property into a live recording studio to headquarter Warner's Capricorn Records. The new owner has already discussed a space rental deal with Jimmy Rodgers, who records for Dot.

Helen Bonfils Had 44% Of 130G Loss on 'Beast'

Helen G. Bonfils, of the Denver newspaper family, put up 44% of the backing for last season's unsuccessful Broadway production of "The Beast In Me." Miss Bonfils is partnered with Haila Stoddard and Donald R. Seawell in Bonard Productions, which presented the revue at the Plymouth Theatre, N.Y., where it closed last May after three previews and four regular performances.

The production, which is figured to have dropped most, or all, of its investment, was capitalized at $130,000 of which Miss Bonfil's share was $57,200. Columbia Records had a $20,800 interest in the venture and Miss Stoddard was also a backer with an investment of $6,175. "Beast," an adaptation by James Costigan of James Thurber's "Fables for Our Time," has lyrics by Costigan and music by Don Elliottt.

Don't Look Now, But . . .

Minneapolis, July 30.

With the Tyrone Guthrie Theatre here serving repertory with prominent Broadway direction and casting, the Theatre Guild-American Theatre Society is off on a somewhat new advertising tack for its 1963-64 local annual season, starting next Sept. 9 with "Beyond the Fringe" as the first of the subscription series of six attractions.

Big newspaper ads, designed to garner subscribers, emphasize "There's Nothing Like a Broadway Show." Legit buffs figure that this means touring fare's superiority over what the Guthrie Theatre affords. It obviously is designed to offset whatever adverse effect on TG-ATS subscriptions that may result from Guthrie Theatre competish. The copy also carires the slogan, "Best Attractions of Broadway's Leading Producers."

As far as the Guthrie Theatre effect is concerned, an advantage for the touring roadshows coming to town is that the Guthrie seasons extend only for 20 weeks from April into September. Thus, most of the time the TG-ATS attractions, playing here in the fall and winter, will be sans competition.

Inside Stuff—Legit

United States has granted the National Cultural Center board three more years to collect enough money to make the Center a reality. By voice vote, the Senate approved a bill to extend the Center's original authorization from Sept. 2, 1963 to Sept. 2, 1966 and to add 15 more members to the present 15-man board of trustees. A similar bill of Rep. Charles Buckley (D-N.Y.) awaits house action.

Stock Review

She Didn't Say Yes

Sidney Gordon, in association with Harold Prince & Howard Erskine, production of comedy in three acts by Lonnie Coleman. Staged by Harold Prince; setting, Larry Reehling. Stars Joan Caulfield, Peggy Cass; features Joan Hackett, William Redfield. Opened July 22, '63, at the Falmouth Playhouse, Coonamessett, Mass.; $4.40 top.

Tony	Alan Manson
Lorraine	Pearl Singer
Polly	Joan Hackett
Joyce	Peggy Cass
Otis	William Redfield
George	Joe Ponazecki
Angela	Joan Caulfield
Thelma	Grace Garney
Alfred	Edwin Cooper
Dan	Jordan Charney

Lonnie Coleman's new comedy, "She Didn't Say Yes," in a test run at Sidney Gordon's Falmouth Playhouse, deals amusingly with varying morality in the publishing business, incompatibility in marriage, and the rivalry between a gamin-like girl of somewhat elfin personality and her eminent, beautiful, selfish sister.

The play, starring Joan Caulfield as the older sister, a tough newspaper woman, and featuring Joan Hackett as the insecure younger sister, has enough comic situation and dialog to overcome its clumsy dramaturgy. The chief defect of the piece is its somewhat incredible plot. But also, some of the characterization is inconsistent.

The action in a Greenwich Village duplex apartment (nicely planned by designer Larry Reehling) concerns the frenetic shenanigans which occur when the newspaper woman descends on her younger sister. The latter's husband, a stuffed shirt editor with his eye cocked on the vice-presidency of a publishing firm, falls for the seductress and is taken in by a novel she has written.

Miss Caulfield is attractive and stunningly groomed as the domineering personality who has always made her younger sister feel insecure and inadequate, but the role is unsympathetic, and the actress is not yet playing it with the requisite authority.

As the younger sister, Miss Hackett is contrastingly winning. Slim and youthfully pretty, with tellingly mobile features and a penchant for mimicry, she delivers a three-dimensional and genuinely funny portrayal. As the stuffy husband who never lets his ideals get in the way of personal advancement, William Redfield does what he can with the unprepossessing role.

Peggy Cass offers one of her patented performances as an acid-tongued but good-hearted extrovert whose comments on the ways of the world and the situations of the play are among Coleman's best and funniest lines. Alan Manson, as a producer who wants Miss Hackett to return to work for him, adds a note of pleasant lunacy. Among minor roles, Pearl Singer is fitfully amusing as a stock, Hazel-type maid, and Joe Ponazecki is virile and forceful as a writer of Westerns.

"She Didn't Say Yes" looks promising for stock and possibly films. Subject to substantial improvement, the comedy may have a chance. Dias.

'PLUME' MADE $14,702 POST-CLOSING PROFIT

The Broadway partnership of "La Plume de Ma Tante" picked up $14,702 in sundry income during the year following the end of the French revue's New York-road run. The additional revenue, for the period from June 15, 1962, to last June 30, boosted the net profit on the import to $545,478 on a $150,000 investment.

As of a June 15, '62 audit, the David Merrick-Joseph Kipness presentation of Jack Hylton's production had distributed profits of $525,000 and had a balance of $5,776 available for future distribution. The profit divvy has now climbed to $540,000 with the distribution of another $15,000. A balance of $5,478 is being held in reserve pending the outcome of N.Y. State tax investigation.

The $540,000 profit divvy, split equally between the management and the backers gives the latter a 180% return on their investment. The revue, first presented in Paris and then London, was written and devised by Robert Dhery who also starred in it on Broadway.

Better relations between its box-office personnel and the public is another aim of the Shubert org. The firm, which has an information booth in Shubert Alley, also hopes to set up a similar service at the N. Y. World's Fair and a deal is in the works with a major department store for the establishment in its suburban branches of booths where information on legit shows may be obtained and tickets purchased.

The telephone company has been approached regarding the possibility of having the firm's office number changed so that it can be reached by dialing SHUBERT. An attractive mail order herald, listing 16 upcoming bookings at Shubert theatre in N. Y., has been sent out by the firm to a priority list of 50,000.

Because of the Oct. 2 ceremony, the Booth Theatre, which is at one end of Shubert Alley (the Shubert Theatre is at the other end) will postpone its scheduled matinee that day of "Spoon River Anthology" to the following afternoon. The Shubert Theatre will not be on a regular performance schedule at that time, with "Here's Love" due to open at the house the following night, Oct. 3.

The Booth, incidentally, opened Oct. 16, 1913.

Concert Review

Midsummer Music Festival, N.Y.

What promises to be a high-quality brace of six concerts by the Cantata Singers (70) and Festival orchestra (30) at Philharmonic Hall July 24 to Aug. 4 stepped off to a most agreeable start with the rarely heard Mozart opera "La Clemenza di Tito" done in concert form. Any other presentation would be as ridiculous as the Metastasio libretto, and, the florid, involved narration, "specially written for this performance by Day Thorpe" added half-a-dozen unplanned laughs.

But the Mozart score is among his most noble and glorious and the singing deserved the storms of applause it evoked. Beverly Wolff took top honors in the most demanding role of the evening. She has range, musicianship and looks (no requisite, since she played a man's part, as did Betty Allen, both in the Mozart tradition). Miss Allen's rich, flexible vocal equipment also won the admiration of an audience which was surprisingly close to capacity for so July an evening. Martina Arroyo sang the pivotal role of Vitellia and won a reception only second to Miss Wolff. Margaret Kalil, David Lloyd, in the title role, and David Clatworthy were excellent and the cast was well rehearsed and at ease. To William Murphy went the thankless task of narrating details of what must be the silliest plot in the history of opera.

Paul Callaway, from Washington, was guest conductor and he led cast, orchestra and chorus through the difficult score almost like a steeplechase jockey riding a hazardous course.

Acoustically, Philharmonic Hall sounded vastly better, at least in several different positions on the orchestra floor, than during the regular season. The "cloud" reflectors have been drawn higher, spaces between filled in, and the results are sharply discernible.

Shubert Alley Shorts

Brooks Atkinson had an interesting piece on Shakespeare in a recent addition of his "Critic at Large" column in the N.Y. Times. As the paper's emeritus drama critic, he's at his best on theatre subjects . . . Trescott Ripley is touring the strawhat circuit in the Walter Slezak package of "Romanoff and Juliet". . ."The way to act is to act. I hate time-wasters in acting or anything else," said Dorothy Stickney, star recently of "The Glass Menagerie" at the theatre editor of the Harford Times.

WELLS RICHARDSON

Wells Richardson has never won any prizes for acting. He's never received a Derwent Award—nor a Tony—nor an Emmy—nor an Obie.

Of course he did stop a long-run Broadway hit show cold with an exit ovation some 25 times in a 9-line bit, to everybody's astonishment (most of all his).

And it must be admitted that the Main Stem's biggest and toughest critic, after 10 days' thought, did raise him to feature-billing status in a Sunday article. And, too, Daniel Blum ran his biography for 4 years next to that of Ralph Richardson. But—no prizes.

N.Y. Times' 6-Month Net

Consolidated net income from operations of the N.Y. Times Co. for the second quarter of 1963 amounted to $1,758,000. This reduced the operations loss of $4,431,000 incurred during the first quarter to the conclusion of the strike on April 1 to an operating loss of $2,673,000 for the six months ended June 30, 1963. The operating profit in the first half of 1962 was $743,000.

Estimated consolidated net loss for the six months ended June 30, 1963, was $2,086,000, compared with a consolidated net income of $1,386,000 in the same period in 1962. Net income from dividends from Spruce Falls Power & Paper Co., which produces newsprint and pulp, amounted to $587,000 in 1963 compared with $643,000 in 1962.

Quarterly dividends on the common stock which had been suspended during the strike in the first quarter were resumed with the payment on June 19 at the regular quarterly rate of $1.25. Regular quarterly dividends on the preferred stock at the permanent annual rate of 5½% were also paid.

Phoenix's Press War

An old fashioned range war has erupted between two of the three fledgling newspapers due to bow on the Phoenix scene this fall. The protagonists in this curious donnybrook are the Arizona Journal and the proposed Evening American.

Robert Morrison, publisher of the Journal, has had his advertising and circulation people canvassing this valley preparatory to an August reopening. Evan Mecham, who plans to start printing his Evening American Sept. 1, was dickering with and consummated a pact with R. Hoe & Co., New York agents for Aller Inc., the Copenhagen (Denmark) firm which developed the offset, web-fed press technique. Mecham carted to a warehouse the 10 Aller-Hoe Lithomaster presses that Morrison was leasing from Hoe.

The fiscally beleagered Journal, from its Feb. 14, '62 inception date, has encountered headaches. The paper never remotely reached its guaranteed 50,000 circulation. Herbert Finn, attorney for 103 unpaid employees in editorial, composing and sundry, reports only $16,000 has been paid into the $67,000 pool still owed the staff by the Journal.

Since the seizure of the Journal's assets last Jan. 23 on a delinquent withholding tax beef by the IRD, Morrison has been working feverishly to protect the interests of the paper's 10,000-plus local stockholders.

Books and the RR Strike

Book publishers have been feverishly shipping advance orders from book depots the past two weeks in fear of what the railroad strike could do to them.

The featherbedding and new work rules' issues have been deferred another month or so, but the publishers, who rely on the choochoos for their long hauls to retailers and consumers — under the "educational materials" reduced book mailing rate—are still taking no chances.

Lowell Thomas at 78

Lowell Thomas has been impinging on show business all his life—first as a lecture platform performer, later and for 33 years a sponsored radio newscaster on NBC, then rather sensationally as a founder and first personality of Cinerama. Now 78, this early "discoverer" of T. H. Lawrence of Arabia and of Hidden, now Doubly Hidden, Tibet, has joined with his son Lowell Jr. in selecting and editing "More Great True Adventures" for Hawthorn ($5.95).

Excerpts render a broad perspective on adventurous episodes of the remote and recent past. Included is the description by Sir Henry Morton Stanley himself of his famous "Doctor Livingstone, I presume?" greeting in deep jungle. How Charlotte Corday coolly planned the murder of the bloody Marat and then stoically went to her own execution comes from Thomas Carlyle. There's the Norman Conquest of England (actually a pushover), a woman's experience as Sioux captive, the pathetic death of Lord Byron in a wretched Greek village surrounded by thieving Greek "patroits."

The modern examples, on the whole less interesting possibly because more familiar, climax with Astronaut John Glenn. Land.

East German Book Faves

Most popular book in the Commie-controlled East Germany is, oddly enough, Alexander Dumas' "The Three Musketeers," a new study released in Frankfurt indicates.

Mark Twain's "Travels Through Europe" comes second, and a surprise third is the more modern "Room at the Top," by British author John Braine.

Alfred Doeblin's "Berlin-Alexander Place" is next. Only in the fifth slot is a work by an East German author, Lothar Kusche, with his book, "Cheese and Holes."

North's Memoir

Sterling North, general editor of North Star Books (Houghton Mifflin), who was for many years literary editor of the New York Post and then N.Y. World-Telegram & Sun, has published his 27th book, this one marked as his first autobiographical work.

"Rascal: A Memoir of a Better Era" (Dutton) is about the author-poet-editor's early years in Wisconsin through college days and years as a reporter and literary editor in Chicago.

CHATTER

From Spain, Doris (Mrs. Thurston) Macauley (ex-UP in China, etc.) relays that comedian-torero Cantinflas will be best man next Nov. 24 for Paco Camino. Latter is probably "el numero uno" of Spain's matadors. Bride-to-be, Norma Gaona, is the daughter of Mexico's first bullfighter. Wedding will be in Mexico City.

Mrs. Sanna Lurie has joined Harper's Bazaar as a fashion editor, as announced by Nancy White, editor-in-chief. Mrs. Lurie, who began her fashion career as a junior editor at Vogue, was fashion director of Saks Fifth Avenue and, after that, joined BBDO as account executive on Revlon. After living in Italy for a couple of years, Mrs. Lurie returned to the U.S. and Goodson & Todman as fashion coordinator for all television programming.

Mrs. Catherine Van Epps (Kay) Harrington, women's editor of Albany Knickerbocker News, reappointed by Gov. Rockefeller to the advisory Woman's Council of N. Y. State Commerce Dept. Post is unsalaried.

William James Coners 3d, publisher of the Buffalo Courier-Express, reappointed by Gov. Rockefeller as a member of the board of the State University of New York at Buffalo.

Three books by Frances and Richard Lockridge were completed before Mrs. Lockridge's death in February; all are scheduled for publication by Lippincott. "The Distant Clue" will be published in September; the other two mystery-adventures will be issued in 1964.

Robert Cunningham the new editor at Hawthorn Books succeeding Julian Cloag who has resigned to devote full time to writing. His first novel, "Our Mother's House," published last May by Simon & Schuster, will be filmed by 20th-Fox. Cunningham was director of Catholic education department with Follett Pub. Co., Chicago, and previously an editor of Maryknoll Publications. Hawthorn, a Prentice-Hall subsidiary, specializes in religious books.

Roy Cummings, 60, former sportwriter (Call-Bulletin) and p.r. man, July 19 in Frisco. Wife, Hazel, former C-B staffer and fashion expert, Survives.

Publisher Sam Newhouse's nephew, Richard Edward Diamond, who is associate publisher of The Staten Island Advance (a Newhouse paper) married Alic Wilzin Blach in Birmingham July 27.

Holiday In Japan

its full stretch. But as a kind of song-and-dance "Teahouse of the August Moon offering, it provides some distinct credits.

Firstclass costumes are set against modest but equally colorful backcloths. Other assets are a sharply satirical quickfire cartoonist, Tappei Minami, and a superb legerdemain act put on by the Shokyokusai family acting as water divviners, producing streams of aqua from the most unlikely places and in the most unlikely manner.

Some of the girls look as if they have never been nearer Japan than California, but, they have an appealing doll-like piquancy. Except, perhaps, for a Japanese version of the Andrews Sisters which whips the audience straight into a honky tonk. Further credits are the savage dances by the males, macabre and malignant, and highly compelling.

Among the debits are the girls' costumes that, while easy on the eye, render them fairly immobile for terping. The music is harsh to the Western ear and the lyrics, of course, are in Japanese and this can be frustrating. A slight concession is that, at the finale, they render "Londonderry Air" and "London Bridge is Falling Down" in Oriental English.

Staged with brisk skill, this is an evening that more than holds its own as an offbeat entertainment but occasionally lapses into yawns because of the lingo non-communication and because its framework is limited. Rich.

David Hooks has withdrawn temporarily from the casts of "The American Dream" and "The Zoo Story," which comprise the Edward Albee double-bill at the Cherry Lane Theatre, N. Y., to direct "The Queen and the Rebels" for presentation at Antioch College, Yellow Springs, O. John C. Becher has resumed his original role in "Dream," which Hooks had been playing, and Wyman Pendleton has taken over for Hooks in "Zoo."

Up for revival at Bernard Miles' Mermaid Theatre, having had a run there three years ago with Miles in the lead role, this somewhat controversial piece about the struggle of a "man of reason" against political and other forces opposed to him, now has Joss Ackland in the lead. The choice is wise.

Thesp plays the role in emphasized terms, emerging as some sort of fanatic, but one with whom the audience can have great sympathy. At the same time, he is instinctively frightening. He is brash, vulgar, and, in his passion for scientific research, inhuman. Nevertheless, his vile temper and bitingly malicious wit make for a central characterisation able to sustain a play of three hours.

From the performance viewpoint the play is Ackland's. He has the best lines, and is so robust, that supporting artists are faced with a hard task to match his fire and zest. Nevertheless, Brecht's play is ably acted by all concerned, is adroitly but rather barely staged by Miles and Josephine Wilson (the Carnival scene is cut for reasons of time).

Sterling support from such artists as Olaf Pooley, as the inhuman Cardinal Inquisitor, mainly instrumental in the downfall of Galileo's self-respect as a scientist; Brian Phelan, who is admirable as Andrea, Galileo's dedicated but betrayed disciple, and Peter Bayliss, as the liberal Pope with strong mathematical leanings, jell to make the production one of some magnitude.

The ostensibly simple format of the drama which is a neat and complete tale on the surface, seethes under the surface with half emerged ironies and clashings of principles. Brecht raises here many questions that he leaves unsolved. But Ackland's gutsy blast of a performance in the lead, particularly in the latter stages, carries all before it. Watt.

Legit Followups

The Blacks

(Studebaker, Chicago)

Chicago, July 17.

Whatever else it may be, Jean Genet's "The Blacks" is topical. Whether by coincidence or design, Edgewater Impresario Arthur Morse has had it mounted for a Chicago presentation at a time when the race issue is broiling and when partisans seem to be devouring everything printed or spoken on the subject. On that basis alone, it stands to have a fairly successful engagement, if not a notably long one, at the Studebaker.

For a harsh and bewildering play that is not calculated to win friends in either race, Genet's "lyrical massacre" of the whites has been given every advantage of staging by Gene Frankel. The production is rhythmic in its movement, handsome to the eye, fascinating in its grotesqueness and full of gestures and sounds that have a way of making clear what the author's words do not.

There may be some theatre patrons able to get their money's worth from the audio-visual experience on the stage alone, and they will probably be enchanted with Frankel's tour-de-force in this proscenium setting draped with the symbolic hangman's rope. His contribution is major.

The cast is well picked, and perhaps because nearly all of them had at one time or another played their roles in the New York or London companies, they give a polished performance. Louis Gosset is outstanding as the atavistic tribal leader, Lincoln Kilpatrick impressive as the male who thinks with his flesh and Nichelle Nichols eloquent with her hips. Roxie Roker etches a strong cartoon of the white queen under a mask, and Ethel Ayler, Helen Martin and Clebert Form all perform fluently and with style.

"The Blacks" will intrigue the literary puzzle-solvers, but it is likely to offend more persons than it pleases. Some will hate it for what is comprehensible, others for what is incomprehensible.

Where Angels Fear To Tread

(St. Martin's, London)

Elizabeth Hart's stage version of the E. M. Forster novel has made a smooth transfer from the limited capacity New Arts Theatre club to the equally minute St. Martin's Theatre in West End. It looks destined for a pleasant, if not sensational run.

The tryout has given the director, Glen Byam Shaw, and the cast the chance of bringing depth to the production and, according to those who have seen both editions, it has gained in stature. The play, somewhat uncommon these days, has form, style and a well defined story. It concerns, briefly, the clash between an early 1900s English family who go to Italy to "rescue" a child born to a deceased daughter who married a worthless Italian. Problems arise when they find that the Italian has no desire to give up the child.

Michael Denison, Keith Baxter, Dulcie Gray, Nan Munro and Violet Farebrother repeat their excellent performances, with particularly effective and spirited work from Baxter, Miss Gray and Miss Munro. Denison tends to underplay rather more than even the ineffectual young man that he portrays demands. But, overall, the cast is excellent. Rich.

Christine & Mandy

an exhibition of his drawings of famous people, including Royalty, which were selling briskly until the show was closed down on somewhat mysterious grounds.

A disk released by Ember Records called "Christine," with lyrics by Leslie Bricusse, and sung by a Miss X (who turns out to be Joyce Blair,) has been banned by the BBC as "not suitable for broadcasting." It has also been given the thumbs down sign by Radio Luxembourg, a considerable shock, since Lux spokesman admitted that he couldn't remember when the station banned a disk. This is a considerable chastise ment for the "enterprise" of Ember Records, since it means it cannot even buy air time to promote the disk.

Nick Luard, who runs the Establishment Club, and John Nasht jumped in early on the film bandwagon and declared that they were going to make a film of "The Christine Keeler Story." This will have to be made abroad, since neither Equity nor the Variety Artistes Federation will give the Keeler character standing as an "actress."

Fast Bucks

Meanwhile, Mandy Rice-Davies, 19, another key witness, who has proudly identified herself as "a second Lady Hamilton," has also smelt the greasepaint bait. She has one line, and a kiss with Ian Carmichael, in a film called "Hide and Seek." Miss Rice-Davies makes her film debut under the name of Mandy Morray, but nobody will fail to recognize this much lensed friend of all.

Miss Keeler outpriced herself on a suggested tv interview with Television West Wales News of the World publication, which had her life story, turned down Granada-TV to put her in its "World In Action" program. Granada, however, snaffled Miss Rice-Davies for "Scene At 6:30" which goes out in the North. It was the newspapers, however, and not television, which culled a classic remark from Miss Rice-Davies, who has edged her way up from being a bit player to a star. She said: "I don't know how Miss Keeler will react to me playing myself in her film."

Plans to star Miss Keeler as a solo act in a night club spot fell through when the rest of the performers threatened to walk out. She is, of course, a fruitful source of yoks in several cabaret acts, with Shani Wallis, at the Pigalle, putting over what is probably the wittiest ditty.

Reginald Swinson, secretary of VAF, comments: "In night clubs, Miss Keeler and Miss Rice-Davies are now getting the same treatment from artists that is accorded to any well known figures. But no more so."

In a London tavern a middle aged man possibly put the whole thing in perspective when he was heard to say: "Keeler . . . now, that's a familiar name. Didn't she marry some chap named Jolson." Most of the younger tipplers had, of course, never heard of Rudy Keeler of the U.S.A.

At the Classic Cinema in London, was showing a re-issue of "No Love For Johnnie, a film in which Peter Finch plays a politician whose career is ruined through a romantic indiscretion. But a Classic Cinema spokesman insisted that the booking was purely coincidental and, "anyway, business has been only moderate." It is difficult to assess what the interest would have been in a double feature program of "No Love For Johnnie" with the postwar British film, "Mandy."

Meanwhile, the sordid Old Bailey drama has dragged on.

And in taverns people are saying "Have you heard the story about . . . ?" These girls are likely to fade fast and be shocked by their sliding price scales.

a marvelous turnout for a day contest.

In the face of these competitive realities it was the best boxoffice week in many months, at Minnesota amusement theatres. For example, in Minneapolis the third "Cleopatra" (20th) week take at $3.50 top was around $25,000, a gain over the preceding stanza. It was the 18th stanza for the non-MAC attraction "How West Was Won" (MGM) here and the gross zoomed to just under $20,000, one of the very best weeks to date during the long smash run.

Also, in all but one of the Minneapolis loop non-roadshow firstrun theatres there prevailed the top level adults' after 5 p.m. $1.50 admission.

Everywhere in the territory "Longest Day" (20th) is doing excellent, even breaking boxoffice records in a number of instances. Other big grossers in the Twin Cities last week where they were holdovers, and elsewhere where they were playing, included "Come Blow Your Horn" (Par), "Irma La Douce" (UA), "Captain Sinbad" (MGM), "Spencer's Mountain" (WB) and "Lawrence of Arabia" (Col).
